Current Problems Facing Public Education

By Francis G. Lankford

Dr. Lankford is Associate Professor of Education at Sweet Briar's neighboring Institution,
The University of Virginia

Public education in this country has grown rapidly, but this progress has not been all smooth sailing. Always there have been problems to face and to solve. Those that now face public education are probably not more serious nor more difficult than those that have been met and solved in the past. The fact that they are current is the thing that demands our attention.

First. Among these current problems is that of providing an education for a vastly increased number of children. The rapidly increased birth rate of the 40's has increased our child population by millions. In Virginia, for example, a recent school legislative commission's studies include estimates that by 1953 there will be enrolled in our schools over 200,000 more children than at any time prior to 1947. The United States Bureau of the Census estimates that by 1953 there will be almost 50 per cent more children of first grade age in the population of the United States than there were in 1948. The big wave of increased enrollments has already hit the primary grades. In Virginia, both Richmond and Norfolk are operating two shifts a day in the primary grades, and other localities in the state are expecting to do likewise next session. By 1959, the increased enrollments will reach the high schools.

What educational opportunities are we going to provide for these children who were born while their parents were fighting the most terrible war of all time? Will we crowd the 7 million more children who will be enrolled in the elementary and secondary schools of the United States by 1955 into existing buildings and thereby increase further the large classes now taught in our public schools? Or are we firmly to resolve to sacrifice if necessary to guarantee to these children of our own land adequate educational opportunities?

Second. There are the associated problems of recruiting and educating the teachers that will be needed for our schools. The commission on teacher education and professional standards of the National Education Association estimates that for the 10-year period from 1949-50 through 1958-59 there will be needed in the United States 1,289,342 new teachers in the public and private elementary and secondary schools. These will be needed to replace experienced teachers as they die, retire, or leave the classroom for other reasons; to provide one additional teacher for every 30 additional pupils to be enrolled; to replace teachers who hold emergency (sub-standard) licenses; and to reduce the size of classes to a nationwide average of 25 pupils.

Unless many more of our capable young men and women choose teaching as a profession this problem will not be satisfactorily solved. If we fill our classrooms increasingly with poorly prepared and incompetent teachers, the result we can expect is obvious. Much is being done to interest more of our able young people to enter teaching. Increased salaries will help. But most students of the problem feel that much needs to be done to restore the prestige which the teaching profession once enjoyed.

Third. The problem of equalizing educational opportunities has always existed. Currently, it is being emphasized by the recent Federal Court rulings on Negro education and the debate on the bills now before the Congress to provide Federal financial aid to public education. Virginians may have had merely a sample of what is ahead on the problem of equalizing educational opportunities between Negroes and whites. One superintendent and school board have been cited for contempt for failure to carry out the orders of the Federal judge to equalize opportunities. The sentence has been postponed to give the officials a final chance to carry out the court's order. In another Virginia county, the school officials have been charged with contempt and preliminary hearings have been held. The court postponed further trial for a year, with the agreement of the Negro representatives, to give the school officials time to hold a bond election for school buildings.

Of course, there have also been the court cases over admission of Negroes to white universities. These have made the headlines throughout the country in the past few months. In some of these cases it has become fairly clear that the ultimate goal is the abolition of segregated schools at all levels. Competent observers feel that some segregation of the races will disappear in the near future—probably on common carriers first. They also feel that segregation in our schools and colleges will be the last to go. Regardless of how one may feel on the question of whether or not segregation should exist in our schools, the situation creates a real problem. If segregation is to continue, and equalization must be provided, huge sums of money are needed for buildings, equipment and other costs. If segregation disappears, others, but none less serious problems, face those who administer our public schools.

The difficulty of equalizing educational opportunities by regions is also one we cannot pass by. President Truman's State of the Union and Budget messages to the 81st Congress in January brought this fact to the fore. "While the ten states with the highest per capita incomes are spending about $177 annually for the education of each school child, the ten states with the lowest per capita income are spending only $64." That this is a problem for the nation is obvious. Children born and educated in the states with meager educational opportunities are in large numbers migrating to other sections of the country. Yet, the struggle for Federal aid to education which has been argued chiefly on this point of unequal educational opportunity by regions has been long. Even now, when it seems likely that Congress will provide Federal aid to public education, there are many friends of public schools who seriously and sincerely think that Federal aid will bring new ills quite as serious as the old ones it will cure.

Fourth. There is the ever present problem of improving the quality of education provided in our schools. I imagine you are saying in your mind as you read of this problem, "At last we have come to the crux of the matter." And I would agree with you. But, let us look at this problem realistically and as objectively as we can and ask what do we need to do to solve it?

- (1) We must recognize that the public schools enroll children from all levels—social, economic, and intellectual—of our population. Furthermore, compulsory attendance laws do not give public schools any choice in this matter. Public education, therefore, has to be designed for children who have tremendously varying capacities for education. This must be done so that attention to the needs of or group—even the largest—does not result in neglect of another.
- (2) We must decide what constitutes general and what special education. What is the content of the education that every child in America needs and what may be left to specialized curricula designed to meet the different needs of various groups? There are also the corallary questions. How should our education be organized to meet these two needs? How should the time be divided between the two?
- (3) We must devise and put in operation a program of guidance. At whatever point our schools start specialized education, children are compelled to make choices, and these are choices which affect their entire lives. These choices should be made with as few mistakes as possible. Competent assistance should be available to the children as they make these choices.
- (4) We must improve classroom teaching. Here I shall run the danger of being judged dogmatic, prejudiced, and even boastful. Yet I firmly believe that we have a substantial amount of experimentally verified knowledge of what is good teaching procedure which if applied in the classrooms of our schools would bring about vast improvements. The great difficulty, of course, is to get this improved "know-how" into operation.

These and others are the conditions we must meet as we improve the quality of education in our schools. They are not easy conditions, but they can be met.

And now, I must leave to my readers the development of the following problems facing public education. Space limitations only permit me to list these few additional ones.

Fifth. There is the problem of financing a program of effective public education. This problem is made more difficult by the fact that, in order to pay for a war, our economic resources are already being taxed beyond anything we have ever known.

Sixth. There is the problem of adding to our educational job the responsibility for developing world citizenship at a time when contrasting ideologies are sharply dividing the world. President Conant's new book, Education in a Divided World, brings this problem to the front.

Seventh. There is the problem in many states of improving an antiquated administrative organization of public education. There are still counties with one superintendent and 75 or more school boards. These school boards may have control of not more than one small school per board. The report of a recent national study of school district reorganization needs has clearly pointed the way to improvements.

At this point, my readers may well ask, "But what can we do about these problems? After all are they our problems? Aren't they rather the concerns of our school officials?" I believe even a second thought will convince us that problems of the public schools are of direct and immediate concern to us all. It is perfectly true that what the public wants the schools to be they will be. No school official can move faster in making improvements in our public schools than the public who supports the schools will approve. It is, therefore, our responsibility, first, to inform ourselves on the nature and extent of the problems facing public education today. Small discussion groups are suggested with a leader who will bring to the discussion some pertinent facts. Local school officials, state departments of education and university schools of education will help supply these facts. The United States Office of Education and the National Education Association are also sources of dependable information on almost any question related to public education.

A Day With The Fletchers in Vermont

by M. DEE LONG, Professor of English

Note: For many years Miss Long has been enthusiastically collecting data regarding the founders of Sweet Briar and the early years of the college. This visit with the Fletchers took place at the end of her subbatical leave last year which she spent mostly in Cambridge studying at the Widener Library.

NE day last summer as I was touring in Vermont, I fulfilled a long-standing desire to go to Ludlow and sec where Elijah Fletcher, the father of Sweet Briar's founder, Mrs. Indiana Williams, lived before he came to Virginia in the early part of the nineteenth century. Ludlow is about twenty-five miles southeast of Rutland, and near enough to Plymouth for Calvin Coolidge, when a boy, to ride over horseback for groceries and "Moxie."

At Ludlow now live the descendants of Stoughton A. Fletcher, the youngest of the family of fifteen children to which Elijah belonged. In the town is a Fletcher Memorial Library, given by Allen M. Fletcher, the son of Stoughton, appropriately commemorating the life of a successful and generous citizen. The library not only serves the town well but sends small traveling libraries to district schools. The building is an attractive red brick structure with limestone trimmings. The front is a free adaptation of the Winchester School, Winchester, England. Over the entrance and also in the stone mantel of the east reading-room is carved the Fletcher coat of arms. It had a familiar look to me, though anyone used to the Sweet Briar seal would naturally miss the crossing with the coat of arms of Lord Jeffrey Amherst.

BIRTHPLACE OF ELIJAH FLETCHER

From Ludlow I went to the farm two miles away, toward Proctorsville, where Elijah Fletcher was born and lived. I who go up and down a road at Sweet Briar named for this Elijah (not for the prophet, as one resident supposed) got a thrill out of being at his birthplace. It was like arriving at a spring that is the source of a long, winding stream. The rambling two-story white frame house, part of which was built by Jesse, the father of Elijah, in 1783, is still in good condition, but has been somewhat modernized. Though no descendant of the Fletcher family has lived there for many a year, this home-place is still owned and managed by members of the family. A summer school in arts and crafts, sponsored by the Society of Vermont

Craftsmen, is held there annually. In the gift shop were woven rugs and mats, pottery (made in the old sugar house on the hillside) decorated trays, and other artistic home products. The barn nearby, I was told, had been used as a summer theatre and a gathering place for forums. It was considerably more commodious than another Fletcher auditorium that we all know, in which P. and P. use ingenuity and imagination to create space.

A short distance beyond the Elijah Fletcher farm lies "Chuckle Hill," the whimsically named estate of the late Allen M. Fletcher. Here live his two sisters, charming clderly ladies, to whose hospitality I can testify! The 17-room handsome stone residence is of English Cotswold design. Interior panellings, mouldings, and ceilings are very artistic, particularly in the large central living hall. Here, too, is a wide throated fireplace built of stone from Caen, Normandy's finest quarry. The spacious library, the oak panelled music room, and the oval-shaped dining room with a cluster of windows looking out upon a rock garden were a delight to the eyes.

Of all I did that day I liked best sitting in the cosy den with Miss Fannie Fletcher and her sister, Mrs. Mary Charlton, gleaning historical information about the family, and telling them news of Sweet Briar College, that Virginia daughter of the Vermont family. I delved into a book of Fletcher genealogy and was impressed with the number of governors, lieutenant governors, jurists, doctors, educators, and successful business men that have belonged to this distinguished family.

We talked of Calvin Fletcher who went out to Indianapolis at the time his brother Elijah came to Virginia. I had once met a grandson of Calvin's at Indianapolis. To him I was already indebted for much information about that branch of the family and about the high school named for Calvin Fletcher. It was at this school a few years ago that the students wrote and presented a play centered on Calvin's life as a frontiersman. Perhaps a drama class at Sweet Briar will some day produce a play about Elijah's colorful life and stage it as a Founders' Day play.

The peak of my visit came when my hostesses brought out a letter carefully cherished in the family, and rightly so, for it is dated 1632 and was written by the wife of the first Fletcher, Robert, who came to New England with the Pilgrims of 1630. The letter was written to her sister back in Scrooby, England, and it seems to me is worthy to be placed with the famous Winthrop letters in the picture that it gives of Colonial life. It was once published in England by the English-Speaking Union, which had their copy from Sir Arthur Shipley, master of Christ's College, Cambridge. I am indebted to the ladies of "Chuckle Hill" for a copy to be preserved in Sweet Briar College archives. 1 include it here for the pleasure it will give history-conscious alumnae—and not for anything would I tamper with the original spelling and form.

"To Miss Ruth Fletcher,

"Scrooby, England.

"Most Dearly Beloved Sister: Governor Winthrop has informed us that ye 'Lyon' will soon sett sail for England, so I will give him this letter to Richard Gardner, who will bring it to you when he comes to Scrooby-that you may know how we are faring in this New Land. While we have endured many hardships, no one repents that he has come hither or desires to goe back, for we count it happiness enough that we are free to enjoy God & Jesus Christ. We will shortly have a church in a settlement near here-which is called Boston & there will soon be many others for all do exult in ye escape from oppression & are happy to continue heare. You cannot think how full of courage these Pilgrims be. With ye help of the neighbors Robert has built a fine house of one roome at which I do think you would smile-for it is made of logs with mud mortar betweento keep ye cold without. Ye glass was so deare that ye window is of oiled paper-which doeth very well for light -and we will be very comfortable. I cannot think how Beef or Veal or Mutton would taste, but we find ye Deare meat very good & sometimes we have wild turkey & with fishe & eels we have Plenty of meat.

"Robert uses the Skins of ye Deare for jackets & breeches & they doe very well. At first I could not eat ye bread made from the maise—but now I find it very good. Ye only mill for grinding it is at Water towne-where Robert had to carry it. Ye maise is quite white and floury when parched in the ccals. It makes a very wholsome porridge. Ye savage Squanto-whom you saw in England was ye first to show our men how to tend & dress it .-- and it makes very good food. Then we have berries of divers kinds & beanes & have planted some punkins. There is a sugar tree here which yields a juice when ye tree is wounded & this juice boiled downe makes a very good sweet. Since our candles gave out we have burned ye knots of a Pine tree. By reason of ye Pitche & Turpentine they give a light as clear as a Torch. A most strange thing did happen to me in the spring which did give me a greate fright. You must know that our house is ate ye edge of ye Forest. Well, one day I hearde a noise on ye roofe & looking up ye chimney I saw two big eyes & a fur nose. Filled with feare I seized Joshua from ye cradle & sprang into ye big Cheste & none too soone-for there came down ye chimney-for ye fire was almost out-a big Beaste like unto a Lion. He walked about sniffling here & there & finally after a very long time it seemed to me—he climbed back up ye chimney. I declare to you he was a most unwelcome visitor.

"Next Thursday—Mr. Winthrop has appointed for a day of Thanksgiving on account of ye good news that ye privy council of the King has passed favorable measures toward ye Colonies. We intend to goe to service at ye Boston settlement. There was a Thanksgiving Day ye first yeare we came—in February, when after Mr. Winthrop had given his last handful of meale to a poore man—no one had anything worth the speaking of & it seemed as if we must all die of ye cold & no food—a Ship came into the harbor at Charlestown—laden with provisions—and was that not good cause for Thanksgiving—I believe this will soon grow into a custom of keeping days of thankfulness to God for away out here we feel how much we have to depend upon His good providence—& we do praise Him that he has brought us safely through so many hard ways. Do you know how Governor Bradford, ye first yeare after coming to Plimouth, appointed a day of Thanksgiving in November-and had a fine dinner of game and Deare Meat and fruit and many other delicacies and had for guests ye Indian Chief Massasoit and his warriors. He had been guided by God across ye greate Oceane & had been supplied. O but I think that was a time of reale rejoicing for those pilgrims who with so many good things & had been befriended by ye savages. I heard also that they set apart another daysome time afterwards to give thanks-when after a long drought-which had made all nature to languish & they were in sore straights—a plentious rain brought forth a fruitful harvest to their no small comfort and rejoicing. Robert made ye journey to Plymouth which is more than 12 leagues from here—hoping to find where ye body of our dear brother Moses is laid—But as you know ye place was made into a field—so that ye savages may not know how many had died—and he could not find the spot—but it mattereth not where ye body lieth when ye soul is with God. He sleeps by the side of James Chilton & his wife & Mary Brewster & many others you used to know. Mary Chilton has grown into a fine woman—is happily wedded & has three children, Elder Brewster is in good health—but his haire is white like the snow. Love & Wrestling Brewster are both married—and are fine men.

LIVING HALL AT CHUCKLE HILL

"Some say that many in this Plantation do discover too much pride—but I think a woman should always look faire to her lord—So I pray that you will—if the chance cometh—send me my taffeta skirt & Roberts Ruffles & cape, that we could not bring. You see that I have writ a long letter for there is much to tell about this New Strange Land. I pray God we may be preserved & in ye enjoyment of this sweet libertie we will not forget Him. Robert bids nie to present his love—& William who is now a tall lad—kisses your hand. Praying for your health & happiness in this world & everlasting peace in ye world to come—

"Yours with best love

"LYDIA BATES FLETCHER,

"Concord in ye Plantation of Massachusetts, June 1, 1632."

SCIENCE AND THE LIBERAL ARTS

A report of the science group to Sucet Briar's faculty, December 1948.

EDITOR'S NOTI: Certain questions, like how do you fit into the curriculum? what do you think of surrey courses? have been asked of the various departments at Sweet Briar. We hope to be able to print more of these interesting reports in subsequent issues of the News.

Group Requirement in Science is as follows:

GROUP H

12 hours, of which 6 hours shall be in a laboratory science. Botany, Chemistry, Health Education Mathematics, Physics, Psychology, Zoology.

The people engaged in teaching science at Sweet Briar seem to be in general agreement as to the place science should occupy in the curriculum. We feel that the current "requirements for graduation" in the science area should be adequate for the science contribution to a liberal arts education, though we realize that there are imperfections in our methods of instruction, and that we have to change our teaching methods and the content of our courses from year to year as we realize more fully our challenge in the curriculum and as we face new developments in our respective fields.

A science department in a small liberal arts college for women is seldom faced with the temptation met in a university, the temptation to offer a specialized and concentrated aspect of its field to the elementary student. The general practice in our kind of college is to offer as an elementary course a survey of the field, along with some of the history of the field and its contribution to man and his society. The aim is to introduce the student to the material proper to the field, the methods which have been used in studying this material, the philosophy of the field, and some of the areas which are proper not only to this field but to others.

Since the various sciences have so much in common there are certain fundamental aspects of science which any student should appreciate, regardless of which one she elects. She will, for instance, realize that in a science she studies her physical and or biological environment, whether it be the material of this environment and its possible changes, the physical forces operating in this environment, or her biological contemporaries and predecessors. She will realize that the scientific method involves observation, experimentation, reasoning, attention to detail, attention to qualitative and quantitative differences and similarities, the relation of the generalization to the example, etc. For various reasons -temperament, previous studies, special curiosity-some students will choose one science and some another, and this is as it should be. A student can best gain an understanding of the meaning of science in her college career through the study of one or two of them. A course which lumps several sciences in our opinion teaches more about the facts of science and scientific achievement, but leaves the student with a sketchy impression of the essence of science. If the philosophy of the liberal arts curriculum is that a student should learn various categories of things to think about and various ways of thinking about them, then she should learn not only what the scientist thinks about, but how he thinks, how he carries on his investigation, what problems and pitfalls he may meet, and the kind of reward he hopes for.

There are further and more specific reasons for our feeling that it would be inadvisable to substitute a general science course for either of the two years required in Group II. In order for a student to make an idea her own and to get insight into a general principle, a certain degree of maturation is necessary—a maturation which takes place over a period of time with a degree of saturation in the subject and for which a short exposure would be inadequate. Part of the maturation process involves becoming familiar with the vocabulary of the science. The training in the correct use of technical terms is essential for clear expression and clear thinking. Our knowledge has expanded at such a rate that it would be impossible for a student to get a working use of the technical vocabulary of several sciences in one year.

It should be pointed out, also, that it takes sustained effort to develop a critical sense in any field. In the case of a science the ability to make and to appreciate generalizations and to realize the importance of exceptions is developed through detailed laboratory experimentation with its successes and failures. Through sustained effort the student is better able to realize the work necessary to establish generalizations-precision, patience, heartache, drudgery. She should be able to learn that all that gets into print, particularly the popular press, is not true, that at best the knowledge in her field is tentative. This should help to balance the impressions given by some of the flashy material in contemporary press. Through a more thorough acquaintance with a field she should learn that what seem to be opposing points of view at surface sight can sometimes actually be reconciled. Given enough time in a field the student can develop a good technique in observation, and in manipulation which is a necessary tool to make observation mean anything. She also develops in this way a critical attitude toward the method of obtaining data, and an understanding of intellectual honesty and integrity.

We think, also, that there is a basic unity among the sciences because of the kind of questions they ask, the methods they employ and the subject matter which they treat and which overlaps among them. There are certain unanswerable questions which the student must meet on gaining familiarity with a science-such questions as: Where did the universe come from? What is it? How did it get here? Why is it here? Where is it going? What is man's relation to it? How much will man ever understand it? The student must have more than a superficial knowledge in a field to come face to face with one of these questions. The methods of the sciences are similar and regardless of which she chooses the student must become familiar with these methods. The content of the sciences so overlaps that there is a kind of cohesion and interdependence seldom met in other areas of thought. Through knowledge of one the student must inevitably learn something of the nature of the others. Thus we find that mathematics contributes to all the sciences and is a basis for them all. It gives them a method of measurement and a symbolic notation to express generalizations. On the other hand mathematics uses problems from the other sciences to make its concepts concrete and intelligible where they might be confusingly abstract. Physics uses mathematics in analyzing the forces of nature, and chemistry for understanding the material of nature. In a like way chemistry must depend on mathematics and physics for understanding the qualities and quantities of materials it deals with and the structure of these materials. It is also intimately linked with biology through the great field of organic chemistry. Biology rests absolutely on physics and chemistry for understanding those processes which can be understood in mechanistic terms, such dynamic processes as photosynthesis, respiration, digestion, and metabolism. Psychology, like biology, depends on physics and chemistry for understanding the nature of a nervous impulse, the reaction to hormones, etc. And it necessarily depends on biology for its understanding of such things as the anatomy of the nervous system, the similarities between man and other biological organisms. It uses mathematics extensively in its statistical study of groups, its measurements of differences between individuals, etc.

The sciences not only have an underlying interdependency, but they make definite contributions to the social sciences. In recent history the experimental methods devised principally by physics and chemistry have been applied in biological and psychological studies. They are now being applied in the social studies—in such problems as causes of migration, causes and results of over population, of famine, of good as against poor environmental condi-

Alumnae Candidates for the Board of Overseers, Sweet Briar College 1949-1955

THE bylaws of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association provide for the choice and election of alumnae candidates for the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar College. The Alumnae Council submits the names of two nominees. Ballots will be mailed from the Alumnae Office. The elected candidate will be the nominee of the Alumnae Association for the Board, and her name will be in turn submitted to the Board of Overseers for election. She will succeed Elsetta Gilebrist Barnes, '27, whose term expires in June, 1949.

In reaching their decision members of the Council were guided by factors judged important in an alumna member of the Board of Overseers. An alumna member because of her background knowledge of Sweet Briar as a student, can bring much that is valuable to the Board. Her interest in Sweet Briar should have been apparent since her college days and she should have shown since a genuine desire to know her college thoroughly and the work her fellow alumnae are doing; she should be willing to study and understand the college's aims and policies so that she is able to make a real contribution to Board discussions. If she can also interpret the college to the public and from her comparatively greater leisure than that of business men, give her time and her talents to such interpretation and its consequent responses, she will indeed be giving real service. It is a job more than it is an honor, though it is that too. The term of office is six years and in that time an alumna member can grow increasingly valuable to the Board and to the College,

A Sweet Briar Family in India

By MARTHA Jones BETTS, '35

TO TELL you what has happened to us since leaving the skyline of New York behind the nineteenth of February seems a tremendous undertaking. Perhaps the laziness of the East has already descended upon me! I shall try to overcome it, however, for I have so much to share with you about our "great venture."

We sailed later than we'd expected since the children came down with mumps and chickenpox in the midst of our packing. I'm just as glad we got them over with, though, and we were able to get a Dutch freight direct to Colombo as we'd hoped. It was a good trip in spite of several rough days on the Atlantic. The Red Sea, which can be unbearably hot, was just pleasantly warm and we had lovely days on deck and balmy evenings when we took to star gazing as the stars are even brighter in this part of the world and it was fun to pick out the Southern Cross. Port Said was our only stop, aside from unloading freight in the outer harbor at Suez, and we arrived in Colombo after a month's voyage. We stayed there a couple of days before coming on to India as the children had a touch of grippe, but they perked up in time for us to see a bit of Colombo, which is quite a lovely city, and to drive out along the sandy beaches and see the gorgeous flowers and luxurious growth of the island. We hope we'll be able to see more another time.

The trip from Colombo to Vellore is a story in itself. One has to forget all about the comforts of travel at home when you travel here! We were fortunate in having a compartment to ourselves, however, and although we were nearly shaken to pieces and were covered with layers and layers of dirt we arrived in Vellore the twenty-third of March. How can I describe to you our feelings as the train drew to a stop and we knew that after traveling half way around the world we were actually here!

We arrived when the worst of the heat was just getting under way and many people had already left for vacations in the hills. Letters had been sent to us at the boat urging me and the children to go directly to Kodaikanal, where a house had been rented for us, but I was anxious for Reeve and me to start our new life here together and we wanted to see just how bad the heat was. Much to our surprise and disappointment we learned that our house wasn't yet finished so we spent the first six weeks at the Carman's before going to Kodai for our vacation.

I wish I could really describe to you what it is to drive through the town. The monsoon failed last year so everything has been drier than dry. Sometimes there's quite a large river here, at least there's a long bridge across a wide riverbed which is only sand now, except for the deep holes that dhobies dig to get water to wash your clothes. Heat shimmers in the air and dust is everywhere. The streets are crowded with people who pay no heed to automobile horns for, as I've learned, their dharma (destiny) has been decided by the Gods so why should they bother with horns—if they're to be run over they can't help it and if it isn't in their dharma then they won't be anyhow! Carts drawn hy bullocks with their own sense of time amble along between water buffaloes, the homeliest of beasts, poor knock-kneed donkeys and cows with every rib showing, pie dogs who live on only what they can scavenge, sweating ricshaw pullers, and over all is the blare of monotonous Indian music from some radio and a combination of odors which defy description. Everything is carried on the head, mostly those of women, and betel nut juice is expectorated on every side. Dung is picked up by women and children wherever it's found and sometimes they don't wait for it to fall! Children under ten go naked for the most part; they're considered neuter up to that age, although some of the older boys wear small g-strings and girls dresses with nothing underneath. Babies are carried astride their mother's hip and I'm told the corridors of the out-patient department at the hospital have to be washed every few hours as a result. It's hard to see so much dirt and filth, disease and backwardness-the terrible, pathetic way so many people have to live. What can be said for "the brotherhood of man" when so few countries in the world have reached a level of decent living in the ages that have passed!

Inflation here is something terrific and it's hard to see how many of the people are able to work on the meager diet they live on. Rice which used to be 3 annas (6c) a measure (7½ cups) is now Re. 1-8-9 or more (47c or so)! The average person rarely has meat or eggs but lives on rice, some fruit and vegetables. We've heard of some villages where it's even necessary for the people to drink the water the rice is cooked in for nourishment! Bow-legged people are the general rule. Anemia is found in all the poor people and makes Reeve's type surgery a greater risk than at home.

While speaking of Reeve's work—it's coming along much faster than he'd anticipated. The problem has not been in finding the patients or educating them to accepting thoracic surgery as we'd expected, but rather that the hospital standards are not up to the level he'd thought. However, the various difficulties will no doubt straighten out in time and certainly there's no disputing the terrific need for thoracic surgery and the training of doctors to carry on that work. It all just takes endless patience and I've been surprised at the amount Reeve has. The slowness and inefficiency of the East is well exemplified in the hospital. People have only one speed of movement; blood for transfusions is difficult to get-even relatives of the patient are reluctant to give; the day for operating has to be "auspicious"; and once a patient who'd been brought here from eighty miles away disappeared in his hospital johnny just before the operation was scheduled!

The hospital is full of incongruities. There is some surprisingly good equipment and yet some simple necessities such as adhesive tape are short. There is no screening so crows and other birds fly through the wards at will, the crows particularly being a great nuisance as they take food away from the children and even until lockers to get at things. Monkeys and squirrels come in, too, the latter even eating through Reeve's lunch box and helping himself to a sandwich. Monkeys take off most anything they can carry and last week one even got in bed with a patient! The worst story is something that certainly doesn't happen often but will make you gasp—rats nibbled the flesh off the ends of two leprosy patients' toes one night and since lepers have no sense of feel they didn't know what was going on as they slept! At least some, and often all, of a patient's family come with him to the hospital. They sleep on the floor and under the beds so a ward is a very strange sight. It's been found impossible to have a common kitchen since many of the Indians will eat only food that's prepared in a certain way, so the relatives take care of the patient's nieals.

Reeve finds quite a difference in teaching these students as compared with those at home. They're a much younger group as their high school course is two years less than ours and most of them have had only two years of college. Added to their immaturity is the Indian girl's characteristic of shyness. He has an awful time trying to get them to answer questions—gets coyness and giggles instead. Twelve men students were taken in this year and they seem a promising group. Reeve isn't very interested in teaching thoracic surgery to undergraduates, of course, but will get a post-graduate course going as soon as his service is running smoothly enough.

The last week of April the children and I went on to Kodai, Reeve following in a week. Kodai lived up to and even surpassed all we had heard of its beauty. After traveling in the dust and dry heat of the plains it seemed almost incredible that we should come upon a mountain rising 7,000 feet, the air becoming cooler each bend we turn in the road and fresh greenness of all the trees and plants acting as a tonic. Once at the top we found a lovely but small lake, which, although man-made is most natural in shape. There are many roads dipping up and down along the mountain with houses tucked in here and there, each with a lovely lawn, flowers and trim English hedge. It's cool early mornings and evenings but pleasantly warm during the day. It's a very social place with amateur plays and many coffee parties in the morning, teas, and dinners in the evening. Hiking and camping out for several days or even longer is the grand passion, but, in spite of the custom of taking coolies to do all the pack carrying, the latter doesn't appeal to Reeve for he doesn't see the sense of going to so much trouble to be uncomfortable. He's probably right but I'd like to try it once! We did get to take a few of the shorter hikes out to points on the mountainside and to lovely waterfalls which the children enjoyed. They had quite a siege of bad coughs and temperatures which made us want to stay close to home when they were feeling badly. When they weren't sick the twins went to kindergarten and Peps to first grade, and we were busy with Tamil lessons five mornings a week. The gasoline ration had been cut in half so we couldn't use the car while we were up there, but had to learn to stretch our legs-two miles of up and down for our Tamil lesson and back again; a mile-and-a-half to a dinner; two-and-a-half to the movie-we really developed leg muscle!

We all came back to Vellore together June 5th, although the children and I could have stayed longer. We were anxious to get settled in our home though, and the afternoon rains at Kodai made us willing to face the heat here. Good fortune had been with us for shortly before we went to Kodai we were told we could have the McGilvray house instead of the small duplex we'd so dreaded living in, provided we would take official guests in our downstairs bedroom. This is the largest single family house here and we've certainly appreciated having it.

We had a confused and busy time getting settled as the house was still full of the McGilvray's things. Mr. McGilvray came down from Kodai two weeks later and he'd pack in the afternoons while I unpacked with a vengeance in the mornings. I at last came to the end of our thirty-ninth box with clothes for the future sorted and repacked, and then started in making curtains. We had our home to ourselves by the first of July and really it was a nice feeling after living out of trunks and suitcases and with other people for so long.

The house looks quite impressive from the outside but is very different in interior finishings than those at home. We have a large living-dining room 34' x 16' and a guest room and bath downstairs. Upstairs there're only two bed-100ms, both about 16' square and each with its bath, but there is a screened sleeping porch over the garage, which we reach by a connecting porch. The walls are plaster tinted deep cream, woodwork dark green, the floors concrete mixed with coarse sand so they look dirty no matter how often I have them washed. We're fortunate in having sanitary plumbing which we no longer take for granted but really appreciate since we had the other type at the Carman's and at Kodai. There's a real, honest-to-goodness bathtub in the guest room bath but we have "curb showers" upstairs which are actually nicer in warm weather. "curb" doesn't keep all the water from going out on the rest of the floor, but drying is no problem in this kind of climate. There are no pipes to carry off drain water from the shower or the basin but it runs along a trough in the floor to a hole in the side wall. The sun is our heating system for the water. The pipes from the water tank are on top of the ground with the result that on a warm afternoon when you'd like a cool shower the water is so hot that often you can't get under it and in the evening when it's cooler and you'd like a warm shower the water is so cold that you have to be very brave to get under! Still, water is a very precious commodity over here and you have to be thankful for it, hot or cold.

I know you're curious to hear about our staff of servants and they're indeed a story unto themselves. When we arrived from Kodai the McGilvray's staff was asleep on the front verandah to be on hand to greet us, so, with our ayah, we had five servants in all. In spite of the number, however, the house wasn't properly cleaned and it took me three days to get anyone to clean the bathrooms. They wanted to get in someone else of the suitable caste to do it and I refused to hire anyone else! I have made some changes and now am managing with four (not counting the dhobie), three of whom are Christians, who, of course, will do more different kinds of work than the Hindus. They speak very little English and when they do they put the words together in such a fashion that I understand about a tenth of what they say. The ayah is the best one at it so I use her as an interpreter, but what patience it takes to relay everything through her! Although I have a cook-butler, houseboy, ayah, and gardener, I spend an amazing amount of time seeing that the work is carried on as it should be. There are times when their inefficiency is so annoying that I'd like to pack the whole bunch off and do everything inyself. But then, when it's hot as blazes I grow rather thankful that I don't have to cook the dinner!

Their ideas of cleanliness are most lacking. I used to be a fairly timid soul but I'm growing quite ferocious in laying down the law as to how things should be done. I found the kitchen helper the McGilvrays had had for two years with the raisins we were to have in a cold slaw in the dust pan, picking them over and then putting them in a bowl! Dish towels are used for whatever need comes to hand and then for the dishes, no matter how black they've become! The story is endless but I think I've made some progress, although tomorrow I will no doubt retract my statement!

My kitchen utensils and especially the electric mixer had everyone with eyes agog. I'm sure they'd never seen so many "gadgets," as the English call them. But my lovely, shiny aluminum pots and pans don't look so lovely now after being used on the Indian stove. This consists of a burner-type arrangement or a hole for the saucepan to sit in with the fire made directly underneath each hole. They use a sizeable piece of wood and as it burns just shove it further in-much simpler than cutting the wood smaller! An oven is a small, round earthen contraption with a place underneath for a small fire and then they put burning charcoal on top! If they want a larger oven they use a large tin! And yet it's amazing what they can accomplish with such crude equipment. There is a quality of uncertainty about it, as you can imagine, and we now know that water can be burned and that although smoked turkey may be a delicacy back home that smoked meat loaf or beans aren't!

I should really tell you more about our surroundings.

MARTHA AND THE CHILDREN

We live at College Hill, four miles outside the town of Vellore, which you may remember has a population of about 100,000. We're in the country, so to speak, and awfully glad to be there. The College with its various buildings and Big and Small faculty bungalows is up the road from us on the opposite side. On our side of the road there is the duplex in one direction and the Gaults (Australians) in a similar but smaller house than ours in the other. In every direction are rocky hills which don't meet our standard of beauty at all but which I'm beginning to appreciate as time goes on. They are lovely in the early morning or late afternoon and evening when the shadows fall upon them. Otherwise the land is flat and desert-like with tall papaya trees breaking the landscape. Anything will grow with care and constant watering so the College grounds are quite nice and there's a good start in the yard (I should say compound) here. There are many flowering shrubs, trees and vines and I'm enjoying improving the yard with the gardener's help.

The children are completely happy in their new surroundings and have been quite well in spite of occasional tummy upsets. We've had these, too, and understand they're a part of your adjustment to India! They're as husky as ever and browner than they've ever been before.

12 Alumnae News

The animals that wander about are a constant source of delight to them and often in the afternoon the ayah takes them down the road to see the monkeys who live there. They're picking up some Tamil from the servants and will probably learn how to speak it sooner than Reeve and I do! I started the Calvert System First Grade the first of July with Pep and try to keep the twins going on kindergarten-type things at the same time so my mornings are well filled!

There's a fair amount of social life consisting of College activities we must attend and dinner parties. We belong to the staff Tennis Club but Reeve hasn't been getting home in time for us to play except on Saturday afternoons. The staff of the hospital and College is made up of British, American, Australian, Canadian, Scotch, and Welsh, besides the Indian members, so we feel very international. However, we do miss our friends back home and the various pleasures of the American life.

Manson Scholars All — A Continuation

by Bonnie Wood Stookey, '34

As we pointed out in the February news many of the responses to our letter to Manson scholars were too meaningful to be condensed.

TFEEL incapable of expressing what my years at Sweet Briar meant to me. Any words I could muster would be entirely inadequate to show my appreciation for the wonderful years of awakening intellectually that Sweet Briar afforded me. I think now that good grades in high school probably were pretty much the end in themselves rather than the means to an end, so that the pleasure and excitement of exploring a field of knowledge came in college.

There are three things that I believe I brought away from Sweet Briar which are sources of pleasure to me and still influence my daily life. They are three purely personal things, and the three are entirely unrelated. They are:

One, a deepened sense of the value of a spiritual awareness. I believe I acquired this from many different things—active participation in the church service as a member of the choir for four years, exposure to the preaching of some of the finest ministers in this country, the examples of suchfine but entirely modest philanthropists as "Ma" Blackwell, Mrs. Dew, and Miss Donna Wills and others, and the consistently spiritual emphasis and reverent attitude Miss Glass displayed to us. I came from a religious home, but I feel that the principles and attitudes fostered at home were encouraged and augmented immeasurably in those important, impressionable years at Sweet Briar.

Two, Miss Crawford managed to impress upon me the importance of synthesizing rather than analyzing, of sizing up a situation and trying to see the whole matter. I say "trying" for I am still only "trying."

Three, I learned a real appreciation of fine music from Mr. Finch, and this without taking any courses in music. Unfortunately, my schedule left me no hours for courses in music or art. From the excellent training Mr. Finch gave in choral singing in the choir and glee club and the snatches of musical information he gave in his brief talks during rehearsals, I acquired a real taste for music that I think I would not have had otherwise. This has given me so much pleasure ever since I graduated that it shows me the great value of a good person to direct extra-curricular activities. This interest led me to join the Dessoff Choirs when I was living in New York City, to attend all the big New York Churches with their fine choirs, to attend as many musical performances as possible, vocal, operatic, and orchestral.

As I read this over I find I make myself out a cross between a mental giant, a saint and a musical authority. I de not mean to sound like that, especially since I am not close to any of those things. I am a very ordinary housewife and mother, resentful that I spent so much time learning to enjoy studying and reading and now have so little time to do either. I try to be conscious of my social obligations, but there again, lack of time makes my performance fall far short of my ambitions and intentions. I work one day a week at the county hospital and wish I could manage to be away from home more because I know how much help is needed. When my children reach school age I hope to be more useful.

As I remember it, I shared the Manson Memorial Scholarship with Eleanor Alcott Bromley, also in the class of 1934. I was sorry never to have known Mr. Manson, but I think we students of my vintage saw a reflection of his spirit in Mr. and Mrs. Dew and had a chance to hear about him from them and on occasional visits from Dr. Carl Grammer and Dr. Mary Benedict.

It is an impressive experience to attend a very old college, but I feel grateful for having gone to Sweet Briar at a stage in her history when some of the actual founders were still living to describe the beginnings of the dream and to imbue us with the pioneering spirit with which they were fired.

Alumnae Assist In Graduate Study Week

By MARY Moore PANCAKE

ROUP conferences, conducted by recent recipients of graduate degrees in various fields of academic endeavor, were arranged as part of the program for Graduate Study Week, which began at Sweet Briar on February 7. The majority of the discussion leaders were Sweet Briar graduates who have taken advanced degrees, and in addition several members of the college faculty and from those of neighboring institutions participated.

In the fine arts Miss Ann Marshall of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mrs. John Victor Pearson of Lexington, Virginia, were leaders. Miss Marshall, a graduate of Sweet Briar in 1947 and daughter of Mrs. Edward C. Marshall, acting president of the Alumnae Association, has done a year's graduate work at the Cincinnati Art Academy where she is now teaching. Mrs. Pearson, the former Mary Jeffrey Welles, '39, received her master of fine arts degree from the Yale University. She has studied music in New Haven and at Sweet Briar with G. Noble Gilpin, in addition to choir work in New York, and served with the American Red Cross in England during the war. Mrs. Pearson has recently been appointed an assistant in music at Sweet Briar for the second semester of the current session.

Miss Eleanor Ringer, also a member of the Sweet Briar faculty and a graduate in 1942, presented the field of drama, and Mrs. Seavy Highsmith, Jr., of Fayetteville, N. C., the former Ann Dawson, '40, discussed graduate work in English. Miss Ringer received her M.A. from the University of North Carolina in 1948, Mrs. Highsmith from the same university in 1942. During the past summer Miss Ringer appeared in leading roles in dramatic productions at the University of Virginia Summer theatre, joining the Sweet Briar faculty in September. Mrs. Highsmith was for several years a teacher of English in the North Carolina school system.

Graduate work in French was the subject of Mrs. James A. Glascock, Jr., of Richmond, formerly Adelaide Boze, '40. After receiving her M.A. from Columbia University in 1941, Mrs. Glascock taught at Fairfax Hall Junior College in Waynesboro, St. Catherine's School and Collegiate School in Richmond, at the latter as head of the French Department. She is president of the Richmond branch of the American Association of University Women.

Science was represented in the discussion by Miss Jane Luke, '48, of Covington, who is a student in the medical school of the University of Virginia. The field of mathematics was outlined by Dr. Mary Ann Lee of the Sweet Briar faculty, a graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, who received her doctor's degree from Cornell University last year.

Dr. Carol Tanner, a graduate of Sweet Briar in 1943 who received her M.A. from the University of Virginia in 1944 and her Ph.D in 1948, spoke concerning graduate work in history. Her master's thesis was a biography of John Page of Rosewell and her dissertation on the life of Joseph C. Cabell. Dr. Tanner, who twice held a senior Du Pont Fellowship and also a research Du Pont Fellowship at the University of Virginia, is doing further research in the library there.

In the field of psychology the speaker was Mrs. W. Frederick Stohlmann of Princeton, N. J. (Martha Lou Lemmon, '34). After receiving her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Cornell University, where she held the Sage Scholarship for two years, Mrs. Stohlmann taught at Colorado College and from 1944 to 1946 was in the foreign service with the Department of State in Washington and Rome. Her husband is a member of the faculty at Princeton University.

Miss Elizabeth Lyding, instructor in Greek and Latin, Milan E. Hapala, instructor in government and Dr. L. G. Crocker, associate professor in the Romance Language Department at Sweet Briar, took part in the discussions. Miss Lyding holds her M.A. from Byrn Mawr College and Mr. Hapala from the University of Nebraska. Dr. Crocker has an M.A. degree from New York University and a Ph.D. from the University of California.

Miss Emma Lou Benignus, M.A., University of Wisconsin, and Miss Hilda Hertz, M.A., Duke University, from the Randolph-Macon Women's College faculty discussed religion and sociology respectively. Warwick R. West of Lynchburg College faculty, who has done graduate work at the University of Virginia, spoke on biology.

The New Sweet Brian Book Club

by Julia Easley, '49

(Reprinted from The Sweet Briar News)

Alumnae may order any of these books directly from the Students Book Shop, Sweet Briar, by April 15.

THE Sweet Briar College community now is enjoying for the first time a Sweet Briar Book Club, a variation of the ordinary reading club.

The club is under the sponsorship of the book shop committee, and faculty, staff and students have received invitations to join.

The purpose of the club is two-fold: To augment individual interest, naturally inspired in college communities, in reading and appreciating the excellent in literature; and to foster "fellowship in reading." Including a substantial number of members of the community, the club is acting as a new bond in increasing community-mindedness, an ideal practiced with outstanding success at Sweet Briar.

In plan the "Sweet Briar Book of the Month" Club offers its members a wide choice, with one book of general interest featured each school month and four alternative choices, each at a discount of 10 per cent. The only pledge is to purchase four books a year, the cost of which would probably not exceed $12.

The final selections (five in all) for each month are chosen by a board of judges appointed by the book shop committee but a part any member of the community may play is that of recommending books she would like to see on the list of selections.

MARCH LIST

I. The Universe and Dr. Einstein, by Lincoln Barnett. $2.50. Recommended by Dr. Crocker. No educated person should be without some idea of the revolution in scientific thinking that has taken place in the twentieth century. Here we have the latest thinking on the nature of the universe and scientific method, and an assessment of the possibilities of finding out still more. Barnett's treatment is lucid and dramatic, without ever being condescending. It will stimulate you to think—that is guaranteed—and perhaps to rebel. But at any rate, here is the latest of man's heroic attempts to solve the greatest of all mysteries.

- II. Bread and Wine, by Ignazio Silone. Translated by Gwenda David and Eric Mosbacher. $0.25. Recommended by Miss Umbreit. This is one of the finest novels I have read in years. It concerns Italian peasants under fascism. At the time of writing the author was legally an outlaw.
- III. The Portable Blake, edited by Alfred Kazin. $2.00. Recommended by Dr. Nelson. A generous selection of the best work of the enchanting anarchist poet and artist, one of the most original poetic minds of all time. Mr. Kazin's Introduction, though "tendentious," is a good modern appraisal of the eighteenth century visionary, revolutionary, and mythmaker, to whom the Imagination was "the real man." Here are the magical verses, the revealing letters, the mysterious
- "Prophetic Books," along with a miscellary of criticisms, epigrams, "visions," and engravings.
- IV. France: Paris and the Provinces, by Roger Roumagnac. $4.50. Recommended by Dr. Sanford. Interesting and readable descriptions of Paris and all sections of France, with a great variety of illustrations and pictorial maps. Indispensable for those who are going to France soon: tantalizing reading for their friends. Miss Belcher vouches for the value of the sections on gastronomy, which she used last summer.
- V. Translations from the Chinese, by Arthur Waley. $6.00. Recommended by Dr. Crocker. Oriental Poetry, "the ecstasy of a moment," an overwhelming emotion inspired by nature or some simple joy of life, is beautifully translated and presented in this handsome volume.

Cornell Professor To Head 1949-1950 Junior Year In France Group

F OR the year 1949-50 Dr. Blanchard Livingstone Rideout of Cornell University has been appointed professor-in-charge of the Junior Year in France group sponsored by Sweet Briar College, according to an announcement made by Dr. Joseph E. Barker, director of the plan and chairman of the Romance Languages Department at Sweet Briar. At the same time Dr. Barker made known that Dr. Mary Lane Charles, professor of French at Western College for Women, Oxford, Ohio, would become assistant professor-in-charge for next year. They will assume their duties in September.

Dr. Rideout, who succeeds Dr. Theodore Andersson, associate professor of French and director of undergraduate studies at Yale University, will be on leave for the year from Cornell where he is assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, chairman of the Committee on Admissions, and since 1942 has been associate professor of the Romance Languages and Literatures. From 1943 to 1946 Dr. Rideout was director of the Navy Training Program at Cornell. Born in Johannesburg, South Africa, he received his secondary education in the public schools of Everett, Massachusetts, and was graduated magna cum laude in 1927 from Harvard University where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Dr. Rideout has been a student in summer sessions of the French and Spanish Schools of Middlebury College and received his A.M. from Harvard in 1930 and his Ph.D. from Cornell in 1936.

Beginning his teaching experience as instructor in French and Spanish at the University of Vermont, Dr. Rideout served successively as instructor in the Romance Languages and tutor in the Division of Modern Languages at Harvard, as tutor in the Division of Modern Languages at Radcliffe College and instructor in French at the University of Rochester. His tenure at Cornell began in 1933 when he became an instructor in Romance Languages and Literatures.

Dr. Charles will take over the duties now held by Dr. Marion Monaco, who is spending this year in Paris on leave from Connecticut College for Women. Holding her A.B. from Earlham College, her A.M. and Ph.D. from Bryn Mawr College, where she was a fellow in Romance Languages, Dr. Charles attended Lycees of St. Germain-en-Laye and Versailles and has done summer study in France, at Zimmern School, Geneva, the University of Chicago, and at Middlebury College's Italian School. Her teaching experience has been gained at Hollins College, the Sorbonne, Earlham College and Wilmington College where she was head of the Modern Languages Department and later Dcan of Women. She taught English at Refugee Hostel of the American Friends Service in 1940-41 and has been professor of French at Western College since 1946.

The Junior Year in France program was taken over by Sweet Briar in January, 1948, as a continuation of the Foreign Study Plan suspended at that time by the University of Delaware. Open to men and women students from colleges and universities listed by the Association of American Universities, the group this year numbers 67 students representing 32 colleges and universities.

Hunting Fossils in a Model "T"

by Florence Dowden Wood, '21

Mrs. Wood is one of Sweet Briar's most distinguished graduates. Following her graduation from college, she was the holder of three honorary fellowships at Yale, from which institution she received her Ph.D. in 1925. She has taught at several universities and has numerous publications to her credit.

66 HOW do you know where to dig?" This is the universal and spontaneous question about collecting fossils. The answer, a disappointing one, is that you don't. "Then how do you go about finding them?" The answer to this and many other questions solved themselves in a unique way when I found myself wed to a vertebrate paleontologist. At the beginning I was strictly a laboratory biologist, and like everyone else, in awe of the glamor of that magic word "expedition," with its implications of adventure and discovery. When the actuality of an expedition confronted me in 1928, I was as green a tenderfoot as ever crossed the plains, having only a wide-eyed willingness to compensate for the levelling effects of ignorance. Ten expeditions have failed to dampen that initial excitement and enthusiasm, but it is the excitement of knowing how and where, and the hope of what next. Glamor, in its popular sense, is left at home.

For a paleontologist, "getting out in the field" is as vital and necessary for development as is the use of rare source material to the historian. So not long after my marriage we planned a trip to the most famous of our mammal localities. Our party was to include, besides myself, my husband, Horace E. Wood, II, now Professor of Biology at the Newark Colleges, Rutgers University, and Research Associate, American Museum of Natural History, and his younger brother, Albert, a neophyte paleonotologist, of the Amherst College faculty. It is no recent revelation that faculty salaries are low, but with a small grant from New York University, Horace and I pieced out the makings of an expedition with savings from our own salaries from the same institution. A necessary preliminary was the assembling of original scientific literature and maps, dealing with the area we expected to cover, which included South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming and part of Utah and Colorado. Hours of spare time were spent in libraries and map rooms, in the borrowing or buying many references, in obtaining numerous photostats, and making photographic copies of maps and abstracts of rare documents. Our heaviest piece of baggage held this accumulation of literature and maps. Horace then planned a meticulous itinerary, computing each last mile against every available minute. Personal baggage was limited to one suitcase each, but there were collecting bags for all, big roomy affairs to go over the shoulder, with lots of space for the tools of the trade. These were: crooked awls, small paint brushes, a small chisel and light hammer, dilute shellac and cheese cloth cut in assorted squares, and very important, labels to fill out for every specimen. There also were geologists picks and hammers, a spade and plaster of Paris. Our bedding, the good old cow puncher type, consisted of a thick sleeping bag with a blanket and a big waterproof tarpaulin (known locally as tarp or tarpolean). When all this duffle was injected under pressure into our car, the three passengers were almost superflous, but we managed somehow. In the face of skepticism, we set out that first day of June in 1928, smartly equipped in a used model "T" Ford, named Bessie, who sometimes faltered but never gave up.

"It very seldom rains where we are going," Horace explained. But as a matter of record, in the seventeen days it took us to reach pay dirt, it rained thirteen of these, that is to say, every day we were on the move. Bessie was of side certain vintage, minus the side curtains, and we got the full benefit of every downpour, always hoping the wind would be on the other fellow's side. Two Princeton men could enliven the existence of a Sweet Briar girl even twenty years ago, so the three of us unconsciously rolled out mile after mile westward at a brisk twenty-eight miles per hour.

We knew we were close to our initial stopping place, and excitement ran high when Horace pointed off to the north announcing, "There's the Wall!" A thin line of cream colored hills could be seen on the horizon through the shimmering moisture rising in the warming atmosphere. As we drew nearer, the grass grew sparser, and the land was not so flat, but was cut up into low grass covered plateaus, with barren sides and valleys. Then almost without warning the Big Badlands burst upon us. Their form was that of candy mountains and fairy palaces in warm delicate coloring, pastel shades of pink, rose, cream, buff, delicate green and creamy chocolate, glistening clean and bright in sparkling sunshine, occasionally muted by a floating cloud. The effect is sobering and awe inspiring. We were at Cedar Pass, near Interior, looking at Vampire Peak, which against a fiery sunset resembles nothing so much as an inky Satan with partly furled wings. Until 1934, and the Public Works Administration's development of highways, Cedar Pass and two other spots were the only points at which one could cross the Wall, even on horseback, so we went as far as Bessie could take us, ate lunch, and then made an assortment of photographs to try to capture the bewitching landscape. These turned out to be very interesting, but were disappointingly formidable. It wasn't for fifteen years that I was able to bring home satisfying photographs of this country in true color, rugged and nearly impassable for all its sparkling beauty. The old French courreurs du bois knew what they were talking about when they named the country, "Mauvaises Terres a traverser," but in no sense did they mean that the country was wicked or menacing as is so often the popular belief. For a time a proposal was set in motion to change the name to "wonderlands" in the mistaken idea that the name Badlands would discourage tourist trade. Fortunately, the old French name of Badlands has stuck, and the whole area is set aside as a national monument, which has its drawbacks for the fossil hunter. We had to tear ourselves away from this fascinating spot and go on to Scenic, where we were to get mail and supplies. Scenic is a town beloved of every fossil hunter in the United States, its population of less than one hundred and fifty when I first knew it, supported three stores with modest offerings, without frills or luxuries. An outraged merchant subdued me for asking for a box with the eggs. He had a point in thinking I was unreasonable in wanting a carton with eggs retailing at eight cents a dozen! I was only thinking of the omelette I'd have in Bessie after the first good bump on the road. Scenic has a hotel. It is labelled simply on its pinkish yellow side, "HOTEL," and in smaller letters below, "CLEAN BEDS," from which it has been known to us all as the "Hotel Clean Beds." Its false front presents an imposing surface to the railroad, and its knife edge to the main street. I suspect it has housed as great a proportion of dignitaries and scientists of note in relation to its capacity as any hostelry in the United States.

We filled our canteens and two five-gallon canvas water bags from a big iron drum at a service station. At that time all Scenic's drinking water was hauled four miles by wagon from a spring. We slung the two water bags from either side of the radiator cap, to overload Bessie's already aching back, and headed south to a point three miles distant where Horace promised we could find fossils. We left the graded dirt road for a trail pointing southwest and crossed a broad flat, heading in the direction of Sheep Mountain. The flat was dotted with sodden areas, and very shortly we came to a puddle which spread over the entire road. I felt there was no use trying to go through it so veered to the left in stupid security that I could travel over wet vegetaion with ease. I had not gone ten feet in the grassy mud when I found myself mired, our several wheels digging in like so many badgers. Horace got out of the car, and was barely able to keep his balance in the slippery morass. The only solution to our predicament was a three-mile hike back to Scenic for a team or truck to pull us out, a sorry introduction to our bonanza.

The Big Badlands were once the channel and flood plain of a huge drainage system of the White River, and it was here that the animals lived and died 30,000,000 years ago, their bones being trapped in the sand and clay and silt and volcanic dust that was carried in such quantities by the running water, and was dropped as it flowed along when the liquid became overburdened. The badlands exist because rain is sporadic, never enough to support much in the way of cultivated crops or covering grass, and if it should come, as on these days in June, it fell with such force as to rake the earth free of seedlings and their parent plants, tearing back the sides of the badlands, peeling off another layer, and exposing another fossil crop to daylight unseen for so many eons.

Before long it was clear that the badlands were made up of layers, the layers being constant in a given area, with their own peculiar color and angle of erosion. We were told that the most fossiliferous zone was about where we were standing, and was a light dusty rose color, 6 to 8 feet in thickness. We then started looking and walking, each taking a specified area, like an Easter egg hunt, only infinitely more exciting. Bones, broken turtle bones, which to this day repel me, lay everywhere, and before long we were finding rust colored mammal teeth, saturated with the discoloring minerals which preserve them. The hardest parts of an animal are most likely to be preserved, also feet, the most numerous. Fortunately for the scientist, these are the parts that tell the most about the animal; how he are and what, and what he had to take him to his meals, and how fast he could get away from the thing that thought he, in turn, would make a good meal. In no time I found a lower jaw sticking out of the clay, which proved to be that of a rhinoceros, Horace's particular field of interest. Horace then set to work to show us how a specimen should be taken up. First it was carefully uncovered with a crooked awl to loosen the clay, and brushed clean with a paint brush. It was then coated with thin shellac and allowed to dry. A fossil, contrary to the suggestion of the word, is more often fragile and penetrated with myriads of cracks and fractures, which, unless strengthened before removal from the ground, will break and crumble as it dries out. When the shellac dried, Horace loosened the ground around the bone to see if there was a skull attached or nearby. There was only the jaw, but it was a fairly good specimen, with teeth intact. After loosening it ever so carefully, Horace turned it over and shellaced all sides. He then wrote a label, giving full particulars as to the place it was found, when and by whom. When it was tied up with its label in a cheesecloth square, it was then ready for wrapping in layer upon layer of newspaper, much as one packs china for shipping. There is a trick which paleontologists have of wrapping and folding the paper in such a manner as to finish with all ends tucked in so that they stay as securely as if tied. Later, we found a fine skull with lower jaws of a sheep-like animal whose abundance, with the turtles, gave the name to the layer we were working, the turtle-Oreodon zone. This time Horace worked out the skull, uncovering the top and sides, shellacing each area carefully as it was freed of clay, and decided that now was the time to use plaster. He got out a sheet of rice paper, a gossamer-thin fibrous tissue, which he laid over the bone and shellaced in place. Meanwhile, he prepared plaster of Paris in a rubber cup, such as the dentist uses in his lab, and stirred a thin solution which he poured over the rice paper, for this paper keeps the plaster from sticking to the specimen. He cut some strips of burlap, soaked them in plaster, and laid them over and around the skull, pressing the mass together firmly. While this was drying and hardening, we went on looking, for this was a wonderful spot. We found the foot of an Oreodon, a small thing with four slender toes, the tooth of a small sabretoothed cat, and jaws of Mesohippus, the three-toed horse. There were rabbit and squirrel jaws galore, which Albert was to immortalize years later in his study of the White River rabbits and rodents. There were ankle bones, ribs, remnants of joints and other hard parts of all the things that lived so many millions of years ago. All in all, life was worthwhile. Pretty soon, Horace went back to the skull, loosened it from its pedestal, turned it over, and repeated the shellac and plaster process on the bottom side. When it was labelled, it was wrapped and put away.

We stayed at this spot three days, until we had worked out the "pocket" and had prospected sufficiently to find that the specimens were localized and that other likely places were barren. We went south a few miles to an area below the layers we had just worked, where the ground was grayish chocolate and the hillocks, or buttes, were rounded like haystacks, unlike the sharply angular badlands we left. We found teeth and jaws of a big lumbering brute, a titanothere, a sort of third cousin to the horse-tapir-rhinoceros assemblage, and extinct since the age that laid the very mud we stood on. This triumvirate group of odd-toed mammals filled the plains 30,000,000 years ago in numbers and variety comparable to the antelope of present day Africa. Their original common ancestor was fox-size 65,-000,000 years ago, small and fleet, with four toes on the front feet, three behind, something like the living tapir, but a far cry from Gallant Fox or the boorish rhino of the zoo. Of these, the rhinos, which seldom looked like rhinos, branched out in their family tree, from the original greatgreat-grandpa into a varied family group. There were those that swam and ate like hippos. Others, even more extreme, swam with short stocky legs, propelling a huge barrel-like torso, and who, on land, must have had to walk tip-toe to keep from scraping their bellies. There were swift greyhound shapes, others of moderate, yearling calf-size, like those of my first jaw. Only occasionally was it the style to wear horns. Then they might be placed singly on the skull, or two in line, or paired, on the end of the snout. All these wonderful creatures, and hundreds of other kinds, lived and died on the plains of the eastern Rocky Mountain slopes. They could and did live elsewhere, but the conditions of preservation are not so good, nor is the likelihood of finding them great in arable land.

We rode further south around the base of Sheep Mountain, the top of which was accessible only on horseback at that time, and saw the whole expanse of the White River Badlands sequence, from grayish rounded base up the steep slopes of the middle, which bore the turtle-Orcodon zone, and the top creamy layers, castellated and abruptly perpendicular. Here was a beautiful demonstration of great grandma Geology's bureau drawers, with the garments of her oldest ancestors in the bottom, her own in the middle, and those of her great grandchildren in the top. Only instead of saving Empire dresses, hoop skirts and pantaloons, she put away fashions in teeth and feet. And when we pull out garments of great aunt Nellie's grandchildren from our own bureau, we can assume from the fashion of these particular clothes that great aunt Nellie must have worn mutton leg sleeves, even though nothing of hers has survived in that particular bureau. The absence of aunt Nellie's apparel is not an indication that she went about clad in a sheet, but tells us to look in a bureau in some other household. This is exactly what the geologist does when he suspects the existence of a missing link. Dozens of forms have been predicted, and having been searched for, are found almost made to order, so far has the study of evolution progressed. New animals are being found every year by every expedition spending a reasonable time in the field. The great geologic chest-on-chest of Sheep Mountain has tucked away in its drawers treasures of past animal life in successive stages of development, including the titanotheres and oreodonts, now extinct, horses, tapirs, rhinos in their various forms, sabre-toothed cats and other carnivores, camels, and gazelle-like hoofed mammals, birds and eggs, and, of course, lowly turtles in abundance, rabbits and rodents, insectivores and a host of other things laid away to be opened by the rains. This greatest of all fossil mammal cemeteries, the Big Badlands, was discovered just over a hundred years ago. The richness and extent of the deposits are such that all other mammal localities recede by comparison.

Our first summer's field work yielded new species and new data, as did each of the nine succeeding expeditions. We eventually acquired a travelling companion in the form of a small son, who made his first expedition at two years. I have made several hundred photographs every summer in the field, hunting for a formula, in a sense, by which beds may be identified in terms of grays and erosonial forms. In 1941, a lucky grant from the National Academy of Science enabled us to begin a collection of color photographs, now numbering some 2,000. It is now possible to compare for the first time places of suspected identical age through the means of Kodachrome transparencies. In this way local absence of identifying fossils is to some extent compensated for with a photograph in exact natural color, enabling the geogolist to trace the extent of a given fossil bed (again the bureau drawer) by its color and characteristics of erosion, even to adjoining states.

It would require the space of a thick volume to do justice to all the localities we visited that first summer in the field, describing other collecting techniques, and the peculiar interest and characteristic of each place. And so, regretfully, further adventures that befell us and our laboring Bessie must remain untold.

Virginia Alumnae, teachers, school administrators, P.-T. A. and A.A.U.W. chapter presidents, have been issued invitations to a conference on Secondary Education. to be held at Sweet Briar on Saturday, April 9.

Leading educators will conduct round tables on the aims of secondary education, sources and means of financing it, and the role of secondary schools in informal community education

NOTE: Rather than merely printing names of deceased alumnae, we will ask a classmate to write a personal message.

JILL BENDER, DECEMBER 29, 1948

Those who knew Jill Bender casually, thought of her as a rollicking, friendly athlete. Those who knew her better knew her to be a rollicking, friendly, athletic person with interests and abilities of considerable ramification.

Coming to Sweet Briar in her sophomore year from Connecticut College for Women she was readily assimilated into the Class of 1934. In fact, it is surprising to note that, with credits lost in the transfer, the Dean's Office did not give official recognition to her membership in that class until her senior year, by which time she was Vice-President of the class, Head of Riding for the school, center half-back on the varsity hockey team, a winner of events in Lake Day, a special reporter on the Sweet Briar News, and had as many friends as anyone in Sweet Briar.

The horoscope cast for her in the 1934 issue of the Briar Patch shows how well her characteristics had revealed themselves during her abbreviated Sweet Briar career. It read: "People born under this sign are of robust physical nature. They are alert, restless, and energetic and enjoy the struggle and stress of achieving a goal. Outdoor sports appeal to them greatly, and they spend most of their spare time in this way. They love the water and are fond of travel and adventure. Cool, calm, and self-possessed, they are naturally fitted to become good doctors and skillful surgeons."

Jill's life was indeed full of travel and adventure, and at the same time of achievement. After her graduation from Sweet Briar, she taught for one year in a Day School in Albany. It was an impressive sight to see a roomful of six-year-old boys whose play she was supervising. A lion-tamer's job looked easy by comparison, but Jill was a tower of calm strength who laughed and rough-housed with the little boys, and had them well under control all the time.

After that year she studied occupational therapy in Boston, then worked with children in New York City for two years or more, chiefly at Bellevue Hospital. She made various sorties from New York to visit friends, and when she left her position in New York she made a holiday voyage to Hawaii. Sailings for home were postponed six times in the press of invitations and side-trips which multiplied themselves; one of the unscheduled events was corraling cattle in a round-up on the Parker Ranch.

Jill resisted an offer of a good position in occupational therapy in the Islands and went instead for a short course in Baltimore to prepare herself to work with spastic cases. However, the war began about that time and, like many another, Jill changed her career. She went to work in a munitions plant near Newark. She worked on the assembly line, became a supervisor and at the time she left to join the Red Cross she was a time-and-motion engineer in the plant.

For eighteen months Jill was in England in a General Hospital near Leominster, using her occupational therapy training as a recreational worker for the Red Cross. After VE Day she was transferred to Honolulu but was there only a short time before the war ended and she returned to New York City. There she engaged in rehabilitation work for the state up to the time she became ill.

Jill recovered sufficiently from two major operations to work part-time as a secretary in a doctor's office in New York. Although she was aware of the gravity of her illness she was, as her mother writes, "always an inspiration for hope. With all the horrors she had seen and gone through and with her tragic sickness, she would bob up and be the life of every party she went to." The ability to bob up was ever Jill's quality; the surface she showed was bubbly, but not frothy. She seemed an indestructible person and, curiously enough, news of her death convinces us that she is.

Class Secretary: Josephine Murray (Mrs. J. Whitman Joslin) 200 West Madison Avenue, Johnstown, New York.

How I wish I could send in a letter as interesting and newsy as those of Bessie Grammer Torrey. Her notes always delight me for I knew all of the girls in that class, I certainly would like to learn her technique for gathering the news. My difficulty, I believe, is that the girls I knew best and with whom I have corresponded throughout the years are not in the 1911 list,

One 1911 graduate, a very good friend of mine, Esther Keller Brown, wrote me a note on her Christmas card. She is still living in her home city of Muncie, Indiana, and teaches Latin in the High School there. She makes frequent trips to Chili, South America, where her only daughter married and lives. Last summer, however, Esther spent in California.

Anne Ten Eyek Baker who lives here in Johnstown is an executive, carrying on a business established by her father which manufactures accessories used in the glove industry. Our county is the hoose of the glove industry. Her son, Henry, who was graduated from Yale last June, has joined the business with her.

My life is very uneventful. The high spot this year was becoming a graodmother. My precious granddaughter, Jamie Wadsworth Wirene, lives just out of Schenectady twenty-five miles from me and I am looking for excuses most of the time to drive over and see her. I am always dreaming about coming back to Sweet Briar and hope that dream may become true before long. My next re-union will be the fortieth!

Class Secretary: Elizabeth Grammer (Mrs. Donald F. Torrey) Apt. 203-A, Alden Park Maoor, Philadelphia 44, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Sue Hardte (Mrs. William T. Bell) 40 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

Most of the information in this letter comes from the questionnaire returned to Sue Slaughter last spring. I believe Mary Clark Rogers helped to assemble this file, also Bessie Franke Balls wrote a note on her questionnaire. She is happy in Berkeley, California, where she has become active in the Woman's City Club and College Woman's Club. She lives on a hill with a gorgeous view of San Francisco and Golden Gate and East Bay Bridges. Their house has a patio enclosed with a wall which is covered with flowering vines, lantanas, pale pink camelias, and inside the garden is full of ferns and a wealth of flowering shrubs and evergreens. It sounds so inviting I'd like to hop right out to see it and Bess, too. Their son, Kent, is a doctor and was married to a Philadelphia girl over a year ago.

Bernice Richardson Campbell has a grown daughter and son. She is active in the Woman's Club, Girl Scouts, and church work, and has held offices in those organizations. She attends Sweet Briar meetings in Boston and has often met Sarah Arnold, x '15.

Margaret Ribble is a doctor practising phychiatry in New York City. Her adopted daughter, Peggy, is now married.

Ruth Drew Knight, x '12, of Asheville, North Carolina, has lost both her husband and her son and is very much alone. Fortunately she has a grandson who is a joy and comfort. Last year she visited in Jacksonville, Florida, and Miami, where she tormerly lived. She makes her home with an uncle and his 22-year-old daughter.

Mary Clifton Tabb George entertained Sue Slaughter and Marian Peele in her home in New Orleans a year ago en route to Mexico. Clytie Carroll Allen was also there. Eleanor Franke Crawford, '32, and Bonnie Mathews Wisdom, '28, live near Mary Clifton. She writes that working in Louisiana elections and the church auxiliary are her particular interests. I've just received a chatty letter from Sue Slaughter. She and her mother are visiting Sue's brother, Charlie, at The Princess Anne Country Club and having a lovely, restful, comfortable and pleasant time. Sue is finishing her second year as president of an interracial group of working women to better race relations. She feels that in the four years of their existence they've made real progress in the Norfolk community. She tells me of a great, great honor which has come to our "Miss Guion." You know she is an honorary member of our class. One hundred years ago the first woman received a medical degree in the United States and this year 17 women physicians in the United States and Europe received the Elizabeth Blackwell citation for their contribution to medicine. In Geneva 12 women were so honored in a colorful ceremony opened by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. In New York the honor was awarded 5 women by Mrs. Franke A. Vanderlip, president of the Board of Trustees of New York Infirmary. Dr. Connie Guion was cited for her work in internal medicine. Dr. Guion is chief of the Medical Clinic out-patient department of New York Hospital and professor of clinical medicine at Cornell Medical School. She made first year chemistry understandable to me-even ioteresting.

At the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in December I sat next to Dr. Harley and had a nice talk. She is vital and interesting. This winter she is spending with her cousin, Marjory Johnson Good, in West Chester, Pennsylvania. Henrietta Washburn and Frances Pennypacker of our era were there also.

There is to be a joint concert of the Sweet Briar and Haverford College Glee Clubs on March 26 at Haverford College. It is our Club project this spring.

1 suppose most of you saw in the February News the notice of Margaret Dalton Kirk's death. I'm so grieved and shocked. She and her daughter, Louise Kirk Headley, '41, were at Sweet Briar together last June. I saw her last at Sweet Briar in June 1938. I remember her with great affection and feel deep sympathy for her husband and Louise.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Fund Agent: Anne Schutte (Mrs. Leroy H. Nolt) 1301 Homestead Lane, Lancaster, Pa.

I have no news for you at this time but thought you might be interested in learning that the Sweet Briar Glee Club is having a joint concert with the Haverford Glee Club at Haverford College on March 26. The Philadelphia chapter of the Sweet Briar Alumnæ Association is selling tickets for it.

My young nephew, James C. Davis, son of Mary Pennypacker Davis, who is a freshman at Princeton, has made the staff of the Daily Princetonian. His brother, William Faber Davis, Jr., is a junior at Princeton.

I'll remind you to send in your Alumnæ Fund contribution if you haven't before now and also send in your news so we'll be able to increase our column in the next issue.

1916 REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Zalinda Brown (Mrs. Galloway C. Harrison) 5201 East 43rd Street, Seattle 5, Washington.

My news for the magazine is very slim indeed this time!

I have only two items to pass oo to you... I had a Christmas card from Buenos Aires from Connie Russell Chamberlain; and I am very proud over a new granddaughter.

I hope you haven't forgotten that this is Reunion Year for us and that you're planning to attend. Think of all the old acquaintances that will be received, of friends you'd like to see whom you may not have seen for years, and the old times to be talked over. Mark it down on your calendar and start making plans to "re-une."

I'll also remind you to contribute to the Alumnæ Fund if you haven't already done so, and please send in your news to me so that we can have a real class letter next time!

1921

Class Secretary: FLORENCE WOELFEL, 2620 Lakeview Avenue, Chicago, Illinois Fund Agent: GERTRUDE ANDERSON, 221 East Sandusky Street, Findlay, Ohio.

If January didn't hop out of my 1949 calendar, I'm sure part of February played a capricious trick on me, as tomorrow is the deadline for our April news—am sure you won't mind an abbreviated interpretation this time after my five columns in the February ALUMNAE NEWS. I know you must have literally choked or are gasping for breath if you managed to last it through, and I promise never to give you such a big dose again.

Josephine Abara MacMillan writes her daughter was graduated from the University and is at home this year—I can imagine the gay time she is having in a college town. Laura Thompson MacMillan also lives in Chapel Hill and has her boys there in the University after returning from the service. Awfully glad you missed me at our reunion but 1951 should bring us all together for an important one.

No apologies for late replies, Kathryn, because I loved having your thank you note and news coming after the holidays. I think all 1921 grandmothers should have "Honorable Mention" so congratulations to you, Kitty Davis Baynum. Her daughter, just 21, and husband, living on the campus of Lehigh University while he completes his studies, have a little son. They have their own tiny apartment and he carries on a campus men's haberdashery during his spare time. Isn't this an interesting little family and how proud you must be. Kitty's son, Bob, also going to Lehigh, will enter Princeton Theological to prepare for the ministry. Grier, Jr., now 141/2 years, will enter Prep School next Fall. How exciting, you and your mother are going to Bermuda for a holidayit is one of the spots I have put on my "dream itinerary" as everyone says it is a delightful place to go. Was disappointed you weren't at the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in New York as I looked forward to seeing you, but I have put your phone number in my New York file and will call you the next time I am there.

Madelon Shidler Olney, I would adore meeting you for luncheon whenever you are in Chicago. I know you must come in frequently and it would be such fun to see you and have a visit. Madelon's daughter, Lynn, is in her third year at Abbot Academy in Andover, Massachusetts. She has an unusually beautiful voice and is planning to study in New York after Junior College.

For lack of news from the Class (I purposely didn't send you reminders this time as I want lots for the June issue) I'll tell you a little of my work with Dana Perfumes, as so many have asked me about my job.

Fortunately, I have been associated with one of the leading manufacturers in the cosmetic industry-a genius in advertising, packaging ideas, the selecting of names (Kissproof Lipstick was his first success) all so important preliminary to the promotion and actual selling of a cosmetic. I commenced (almost on a dare—and it is my first and only job) as his secretary, but over a period of years I have worked in almost all departments, with the exception of National Advertising, which is handled personally by my boss and the advertising agency. Never has there been a dull moment and I have loved every bit of its rush and excitement. At one time, I did the buying and at that time we had several lines, which we later sold. During another period when our business was primarily with Syndicate Stores, we opened a manufacturing and distributing set-up in Canada and England so part of my job, incorporated with the buying, was to handle all shipments of materials to the plants in these countries—that dates back to pre-war days so I'll skip over to 1949 and ask you to pardon my poor continuity.

Although we have recently acquired two new cosmetics, my time is almost entirely spent with Dana Perfumes, which means Tabu, Platine, 20 Carats, and Emir. My work now is in the Sales Department handling Sales Promotions, Co-operative Newspaper Advertising, Sales Correspondence, in addition to having some of the responsibility of working with our 15 salesmen.

Tieing in with promotions is our Sampling and publicity at Fashion Shows through department store or charity events. If any of you have any pet charities for which you would like sample vials of any of our four perfumes, I'd be only too delighted to send them to you. They're really pretty cute as place cards or favors—just let me know how many and which perfume.

With all of this I manage to keep pretty busy but this past year I have added Sweet Briar activities which I have enjoyed very much. We are trying to build up the interest and organize Chicago as an active group. I gave a cocktail party and our "New girls" breakfast was a grand success which received fine publicity. We are planning an April meeting and Adele Fies Loeb is Entertainment Chairman.

If any of you are in Chicago, do call memy office number is Whitehall 4-6140 listed under Dana Perfumes on Michigan Avenue—ny lunch hour is anytime.

In the meantime, please write me a bit of news—I have promised Edith to carry on so you can't let me down—and I do need help!

1924 REUNION YEAR

Fund Agent: Mary S. Rich (Mrs. Robert E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17, Maryland.

First of all I know we all thank Kay Klumph McGuire for her years of digging up the news and passing it on to us. She is the busiest person I've ever seen and certainly deserves a vacation from this. So please help me out, and keep writing me all that goes on with you and yours. It has been grand hearing from so many of you this time, and it really has made me feel very "collegiate"—perhaps just getting in trim for reunion.

Well, on with the news! Frances Nash Orand has two daughters in college, one a freshman at Sweet Briar, I'm glad to say.

Rebecca Snyder Garrison is fine, but very busy with her three sons, age eighteen, thirteen, and nine. I know what you mean, Rebecca—I have three myself.

Martie Lobingier Lusk plans to return for reunion in June, and says there may be a caravan from Pittsburgh. Celia Marshall Miller has a daughter at Barnard, and a son away at school. Her husband is an artist, and knowing her artistic talent, I'm sure their home, "Glen Cottage," must be most interesting.

Esther Jack Arnold has a boy, seven, and a girl, five.

Clara King Maxwell writes that her older son is at Clemson College, South Carolina. and her younger one wants to go to the University of North Carolina next year.

Betty Guy Tranter was ill with a virus bug, very persistent, but recovered the day before Christmas. She has a son, six.

Mary Sturgis gave up her job in Norfolk last fall, and is home in Onancock, Virginia, with her mother.

I had a wonderful letter full of news, from Mary Rich Robertson. She and her son, Bobby, age seven, spent two wonderful weeks last summer with Katherine Slaughter Thornton in Culpeper, Virginia. Katherine's son is about Bobby's age, and the two boys hit it off beautifully. Mary sounds very busy! She is chairman of a Woman's Auxiliary at church, secretary of a Child Study group, Class Agent for the S. B. Alumnæ Fund, Chairman of the Red Cross drive in her neighborhood, and did Community Chest work last fall. She says she must learn to say "no" sometime.

Barrie Greason Cooper and her husband have built a darling house right beside her parent's home. Barrie's father passed away last spring. Our deepest sympathics, Barrie.

I have been very fortunate in seeing Eleanor Harned Arp often, as her daughter, Mary, was in Chevy Chase Junior College for two years, and "El" got down here a couple of times a year. Now, "El's" being on the council brings her to Sweet Briar three times a year, and she stops here on the way. Hope she stays on the council a long time.

Elsie Wood Von Maur is still as busy as ever. She is very active on the Symphony Board and many other things. Her three children are all away at school. Alice at the University of New Mexico, "Chuck," at Colgate, and Dick, Jr., at Vermont Academy.

Dodie Von Maur Crampton's husband was elected judge on the Illinois Supreme Court last summer. Congratulations, Dodie and Bud!

Byrd Fiery Bomar was in Cleveland at Christmas time, I hear, looking fine. Her Nancy hopes to go to Sweet Briar next year.

Flo Westgate Kraffert's daughter has just announced her engagement to Dr. Francis R. Russo of New York City. He graduated from Columbia University Medical School, and is assistant resident physician at Long Island College Hospital. Flo and Benny are at Southern Pines for the winter. Their daughter must be very smart. She graduated from Bryn Mawr last June, and is now doing medical research work at the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine.

I had a very welcome letter from Peg Nelson Lloyd a few days ago. She was in Atlantic City visiting her mother for two weeks. Her daughter is a junior at Penn Hall, and hopes to go to Sweet Brair sometime. Peg sees Dot Meyers Rixey often.

Dot's son graduated from Kenyon last June, and she has a daughter in college. Peg hopes to get to reunion, and wonders if there will be enough crutches to go around.

I was so glad to hear from Muriel Mac-Cleod Searby, whom I had been wondering about. Her letter was so interesting and I do hope things work out for you, Muriel. Her daughter, Lucy, age seventeen, graduates from Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr in June, so Muriel may not be able to get back to reunion. She says she is in terrible throes for next year-with college all set. Lucy wants to go to Queen's College in London for a year, and take the international course. It seemed a little impractical, but now a charming woman, who was a delegate to the United Nations, (and a conservative) wants her to live with her in London. If Lucy goes, Muriel wants to follow after Christmas, but hates to leave her twin boys so far away. They are at McDonogh School just outside of Baltimore, but next year they are separating-one going to Andover and the other to Exeter. Muriel saw Mary Marshall Hobson in Baltimore. Now Mary has moved to Jamaica, Long Island, and Muriel to York, Pennsylvania. Also had a letter from "Bene" Studley Kirkpatrick. She sounds just as she used to. She says, "Yes, I'm grey, but darned if I feel much older than when I was in Virginia." For a good many years, she and her husband spent the winters in California and finally decided to settle there. They have built a small house in Altadena and look out upon the world's most beautiful mountains (Quote). The awful freeze this winter ruined everything they had labored over. We are so sorry to hear that, "Bene." The day the letter was written there had just been the first Sweet Briar Club meeting. They are going to get organized, and do all they can to interest California girls to go to Sweet Briar, and says that although no one had been in the same class with anyone else, it was a thrill to get together.

I get back to Cleveland now and then, so see Kay Klumph McGuire often. She looks simply wonderful, and she and Fritz certainly lead an interesting and busy life. They had a wonderful trip to Mexico in the fall,—took twenty-two reels of colored film, everything from a bullfight in Mexico City, to sail fishing at Acapulo. Kay caught two, and loved it. Their charming daughter, Maeve, age twelve, made her television debut at Christmas, as one of the little Cratchetts in "The Christmas Carol." She certainly is following in her mother's footsteps. "Rory," their four-year-old son, is one of the most entrancing children I have ever seen.

Saw Eleanor Harned Arp and "Shiney" Bodine Mountcastle on their way to Council in February. It was the first time I had seen "Shiney" since we graduated, but I would have known her anywhere. She hasn't changed a bit.

I do hope you are all planning on reunion in June. It will be here before we know it, so make your plans and let's all land there with a bang! I swore I wouldn't on this ancient occasion, but now that it's here, I feel young as a breeze!

Thanks again for all the letters and please keep writing!

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA LEF TAYLOR (Mrs. George F. Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

If I could hang a May Basket on each of your doors, I would fill it with a nosegay of Memories. A host of golden daffodills—a Sweet Briar rose—a bunch of blue forgetme-nots, plucked from the warm red earth of Virginia and all tied with ribbons from the May Pole. Yes! I think we each would love to sit again in the Boxwood Circle on a lovely May morning.

Ellen Newell Bryan wrote a most interesting card from her Peachtree address in Atlanta. Though she says living on Peachtree is not as storybook as it sounds, it is practical with her three children going in all directions. She says there is nothing newsworthy at the moment at "Bryans Burlesque." She and her sister, Ann Lane Newell Whatley, ex 28, attended the Sweet Briar Day lunchon in Atlanta and were much impressed with the present generation of our Alma Mater. Ann Lane has lived in Presque Island, Maine, for ten years. Ellen, I'm certainly sorry you missed the Girl Scout National Board meeting held in Denver. Remember, if you ever get this way, the latch string is always waiting for you. Thanks so much for the newsy card.

Rebecca Ashcraft (Mrs. Don Warren), ex 26, now of Memphis, Tennessee, was here visiting her father. Her son, Claude Mc-Ginnis, Jr., is a Sophomore at Georgia Tech.

This time I have the thrilling announcement of two new grandmothers for the class of '26. Annette Brown King writes a granddaughter, Terry Anne Grassman, joined their family circle on June 20, 1948. Bill, the King's son-in-law, became riding teacher at Francis Shiner College, Mt. Carroll, Illinois, as of February 1, 1949. The Kings miss having their grandchildren in Madison. Annette reports the weather 0° the day she is writing and a freshly new snow. (I know the feeling!) Annette hopes for a three weeks' rest at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, from her busy life. The King household is just full of pep, and is much involved in church work, square dancing and her husband's Association work. Annette certainly sounds like the gay, young modern grandmother. Congratulations!

Sara McKinney Groner writes her oldest daughter, Barbara, Mrs. E. Sheldon Spice, Jr., of Providence, Rhode Island, has a date with The Stork in April. We all know how thrilled you must be, Sara. She writes that her own three daughters are all grown and it has been a deep disappointment that none of them have chosen Sweet Briar, but the two oldest took specialized courses, Barbara graduating in Landscape Architecture, Sally finishing Occupational Therapy in Boston. Her youngest, Vaughan, is now majoring in Government at Connecticut College. The Groner children sound a most fascinating and interesting group.

To we of the west, the winter weather

' has been a vital part of our conversation. Frances McCamish McNeil writes on February I, from San Antonio that they are just recovering from a five-inch snow storm, which is very unusual in sunny San Antonio, which, I might add, is a perfectly fascinating city. Frances writes her family are almost grown. Her eldest son, Albert, Jr., gets a degree from Texas A. and M. in June, and is now studying Law at Texas University. Her daughter, Sara, 16 years old, is a junior in High School, and the family are now busy reading college catalogues. Frances' "Baby Boy" is twelve and in Junior High and a very lively boy, writes his mother. Frances says she has her hands full, but manages to do P.T.A. work, church activities, along with being the chief cook. She has an ex-cellent Mexican maid for the "hard" labor and feels blessed by the gods. She ends her note by saying life has been very good to her, and it sounds like she has a full and wonderful life. Frances, do hope you can make that trip to Colorado-we think it a beautiful state and be sure and ring me up.

Speaking of the weather's whims this year, Margaret White Knobloch writes from Erie, Pennsylvania, the state one thinks of as a bit snowy, that they have had a beautiful winter with one sunny day after anothermild temperatures, and almost no snow. Sounds like sunny California's weather has moved east. M. E. W.'s life is a full and interesting one. Her husband's mother has been very ill this winter, but is happy to report that she is much better now, M. E. W. has been doing a grand job watching over her. Margaret writes they had their annual week-end in Ithaca, for the Cornell-Harvard home-coming game. She and Ellis spent some time in Rock Island, which is still very close to Margaret's heart, and they had a most gay time there. She writes that she is studying piano and is very active in The Visiting Nurse Association. M. E. W., Hank and I are still looking forward to seeing you and Ellis in Denver this winter.

My sincerest thanks to Dot Bailey Hughes who is always so generous of her busy time and answers my cards. Her son, Kenny, is a freshman at Indiana, Bailey a junior in High School and Joe is in his last year in Junior High. Dot says it keeps Ma and Pa busy stepping over boys of all shapes and sizes, as there is always a gang there. It sounds like a wonderful household with loads of good living in it. She says Peggy and Jimmy Mc-Clements and their three luscious daughters (quote the Hughes boys) stopped there for a day on their way home from the Eaton's Ranch last summer. I wonder if that is The Eaton Ranch near Sheridan, Wyoming? We simply love The Eatons and their ranch, don't you, Peggy? That is our Western Dude Ranch in the most perfect way. I know what a glorious time the Hughes and the McClements must have had together.

Dorothy Hamilton Davis had a most unfertunate robbery in that they stole all her lovely jewelry. Dot did have a lucky break, though, that she didn't run into the prowlers upon her return home. She writes that Baltimore had a most successful Sweet Briar Day luncheon, with 31 gals present. She is expecting a visit from Dorothy McKee Abney and her two children on their return from a trip to Washington.

Dorothy Keller Iliff was in and had lunch with me the other day. The Iliffs are all excited about their planned trip to Washington, New York, and other eastern points in April. Dot had a grand visit from her mother during the Christmas holidays. Mrs. Keller took Suzy, Dot's little girl, home with her and Dot and Seward will pick her up on their return trip.

When you are spring house cleaning your desk, may I enter a plea for my post card, which you are about to toss into the wastebasket. Take time out and write me a few lines on it. Everyone likes to hear about everyone else. Many thanks!

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

This month's class letter was written by Io Snowdon Durham.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH FORSYTH, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham 5, Alabama.

Before we go any further everybody stand and give a loud cheer for Marg Cramer Crane, who has done such a masterful job gathering news for us for the last several years. I'll have to admit I've had a real thrill reading even a post card from those of you who were good enough to answer. Nobody will admit that anything newsworthy ever happens to them, but look . . . This came (reprinted in its entirety)

"Announcing the arrival of WILLIAM FOSTER BACKUS on January 30, 1949

MR. AND MRS. FOSTER E. BACKUS."

Our Pewee!

And Wilburn Hampton Rogers says, "Van, Van, Jr., and I are just recovering from an automobile wreck, so you can imagine how little news I have. We were en route to the Ole Mississippi-Tennessee game on November 13. Van has been in a cast since then." hope he's out by now. You may not have news, Wilburn, but I bet you've been busy!

Lib Wood McMullan's oldest daughter is at Stuart Hall. Lib is drumming up trade for our 25th reunion and also had some nice things to say about Lib Mathews Wallace.

Martha Ambrose Nunnally is teaching school again . . . First grade at Bethel Grove . . . Her children are 16 and 14, and I think she's mighty brave to take on a pack of somebody else's too.

Virginia Stephenson was hoping to have dinner with Nar Warren Taylor in Milwaukee. Her job, which she doesn't elaborate on, takes her all over Wisconsin. She also finds time for professional organizations, church guild and a discussion group.

Elizabeth Cates Wall is planning to open her house in New Canaan this spring. Wish she'd been there last summer while we were in Greenwich. She adds that Rebecca Manning Cutler has bought what sounds like a wonderful house in Greenwich, on the Sound. Don't let the word get out about all those bedrooms, Rebecca, or you might find yourself with a reunion on your hands.

Sarah Von Schilling Stanley claims her life in the country is uneventful. She seems to spend as much time behind the wheel of an automobile as I do . . . but at least she doesn't have to cope with ice and snow drifts and chains and 10 below zero. I suppose if I live long enough I'll get used to it.

Julia Reynolds Dreisbach and her husband plan to drive their Georgie, who is a S. B. sophomore, back to school after spring vacation, and take their Jerry, a high school senior, on to do the sights in Washington afterward. Would surely like to get my hat and go with them.

Elizabeth Cox Johnson needs to be quoted verbatim. "At the moment I have absolutely nothing stimulating to report. I have undertaken to edit a program on Kentucky Homes and Gardens which we invite all of you to see in May (you didn't say where or when) and I'm producing 'Sleeping Beauty' for our Children's Theatre. I have never edited or produced anything before. Don't you think I'm crazy?" No, ma'am . . . and I know both of your new ventures will be great successes, too.

Eleanor Ervin Bullock thinks the news about Pewee deserves an issue all to itself. She was hoping Evelyn Anderson Tull would stop by Spring Hill on her way to Florida, and said that they kept well entertained with their two sons' love lives.

Elise Morley Fink's card came from Chandler, Arizona, where they were seeking sun and had found nothing but cold and rain. They were going on to Pasadena and surely by the time they got there the "unusual" weather was over.

Betty Bachman Hardcastle, bless her, wrote a real letter. She has decided to take a Sabbatical year from all her Civic chores and catch up on the neglected home front. Her oldest, Ken 3rd, is a sophomore at the Mc-Callie School in Chattanooga. Said she had talked to Martha Bachman McCoy on the 'phone while there, and that young Ken reports that Martha's Sally is a knockout. No reason why she shouldn't be. Betty also was much impressed with Miss Lucas, who spellbound the Nashville Alumnæ last spring.

A note from Marg Cramer Crane says they're taking off March 4 for the West Indies with two couples of tried and true friends. Sounds dreamy. She adds that Pewee's boy weighed in at 9 pounds and 7 ounces. Leave it to Pewee to do things in 1 big way!

Emilie Halsell Marston recently had a gay sounding luncheon with Dot McKee Abney, who was in Baltimore with her 18-year-old son, a Franklin and Marshall student, and her 14-year-old daughter. Others at the feast were Dot Hamilton Davis, Mary Rich Robertson, and Delma Chambers Glazier. She says they had lots of S. B. talk and fun, as well as serious conversation about world conditions and the future of colleges. (Miss Lucas, please take note).

One of my non S. B. spies has recently seen Elva Quisenberry Marks in Montgomery, and reports her in the pink.

Mary Opie Meade Bailey hasn't seen anyone but Ruth Aunspaugh Daniels all fall, in spite of all the Carolina games she knows many of you must have attended. She says that Jane Riddle Thornton's husband was seriously injured this fall, but is improving now. You're certainly excused for not writing, Jane. Opic has a 9-year-old boy that she admits is quite nice.

Jane Gilmer Guthery was full of news. Most exciting item . . . Claire Hanner Arnold and Wiley have just adopted an adorable little boy as companion to their daughter, 7, and all concerned are mighty happy. And we are all happy for you, Claire.

Alice Warren Fielder had been in Charlotte on a business trip with her husband and brought on a rash of 27 dinner parties and gab fests. They all had planned to go to Raleigh to see Ruth Aunspaugh Daniels, but Ruth's father had a heart attack. Jane hears he is now much better. She also said that Sally Jameson had been quite ill and had lost her voice, but is on the mend. You're excused, too, Sal, but not for long.

Kitty Wilson Garnett seems to have retained her youthful energy mighty well . . . In addition to keeping up with her own family, she's teaching math in Senior High School, and teaching herself to type. What a program!

From not so sunny California, Catherine Johnson Brehme reports running a private ambulance service for her children's ears and asthma, and, no time for much else except talking about the weather.

Ruth Lowrance Street's wonderful letter made me mighty homesick for Chattanooga. She and her daughter, Frances, who is a freshman at Sweet Briar, entertained the Chattanooga alumnæ at a Silver Tea in their lovely new home, on S. B. Day. There were 36 on hand, and I wish I could have made it 37. There are now 50 S. B. alumnæ in Chat-

Tav Hazlewood Whitaker lives across the road from the Streets, and keeps mighty busy with her good works and her five grandchildren. Ruth sees Mary Shelton Clark often, and of course, her sister, Bess Lowrance Hill. Her son, Gordon, Jr., 8, is just recovering from an emergency appendectomy. The Streets expect to be at Sweet Briar often during the next four years, and can't miss being at our 25th reunion because Frances will be graduating that year. Nice timing, Kenneth Durham wants you all to know (though he knows you won't believe it) that he has just been made a vestryman at St. Paul's Church here in Des Moines. We're also impressed with our son, Taylor, who was recently elected president of the student body at his Junior High School. Surely that's enough Durham bragging for one issue. Hope to collect some Sweet Briar items soon on a combined business and pleasure trip to the Southwest. Will see Madeline Brown Wood and Caroline Compton for sure, and will write Marg a full report on them for the June News, because neither of them deigned to answer my plea. Thanks again to those of you who did. See you all at the 25th.

Class Secretary: BARBARA DE ZOUCHI LEWIS (Mrs. Alan Maxwell Palmer) 330 First Avenue, New York 9, New York.

Fund Agent: Katherine Leadbeatle (Mrs. Howard Bloomer, Jr.) Shoreacres, Lorton, Virginia.

I'm afraid I haven't a great deal of news for you this time . . . your postcards seem kind of few and far between these days. I did have one nice long one from Frances Covner Huffard, and she sent me such a nice picture of the Huffard family. I am so jealous of that beantiful hair I can hardly stand it! Frances has a daughter Alice, 17, in her last year at Stephens College, and another, Nancy, in her junior year at The Princip'a in St. Louis. They can travel together, which is nice. Her 10-year-old son is in the sixth grade at home, and her husband, Hudson, busies himself with civic activities as well as his National Retail Furniture Association interests. They are hoping for a spring trip to Bermuda and a trip through Colorado after Alice's graduation. Doesn't it all sound wonderful? Frances also said that she sees Connie Furman Westbrook once in a while, and hears from Charlotte Conuay Curran

Someone else who mentioned Charlotte recently is Lig Corpening Andrews, with whom I had an extensive telephone conversation the other day . . . it seems she lives just down the street from me, in Peter Cooper Village, so next week we are going to have a small reunion, and renew acquaintance over an old-fashioned or something. She told me she does quite a bit of work at the Clinic tear here, and keeps busy otherwise . . . more on this in our next.

Alice Webb Nesbitt has moved to 4911 Chamberlayne Avenue, Richmond, Virginia. Next time, Alice, let's have a few details.

Sara McHenry Crouse is in the South for an extended visit . . . I'm glad to report that she appears to have recovered from her very serious illness.

It seems to me that I am always filling up this space with my own doings, but needs must when the devil drives. If all of you would be better correspondents it wouldn't happen. But just to round out the page, I'd like to tell you a little about what I am doing right now, because it is so very much fun! My husband publishes a sort of local shopping news for the Stuyvesant section of New York, and I am the editor, no less. I write pages and pages about food, and as there is nothing I would rather do than cook . . . except eat . . . I am enjoying myself thoroughly. I had Connie Van Ness, 27, to dinner one night and she approved of my efforts . . . this week I am going to experiment on Aline Stump, '36, who as Vice-President of the Manhattan Alumnæ Club is my right hand in Club activities. Special care will be taken with this one, I assure you!

Do PLFASE write to me, some of you . . , and if any of you are ever in New York call me at ORegon 7-1035 and give me your news first hand. Meanwhile, a happy Springtime to you all.

Class Secretary: Marjorit Sturges (Mrs, W. Russell Moose, Jr.) 2210 Pingree, Detroit 6, Michigan.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George S. Writer, Jr.) 21 Fifth Avenue, Nyack 3, New York.

First and foremost: Our thanks to Sally Reahard for her years of persistent effort with its pleasureable results as our class secretary. I believe her retirement to Palm Springs, California, with her father for winter sports was caused not only by unrequited love of the job in hand, but also by her financial ruin due to the postage involved, for which, it would seem, there ought to be a fund.

There must be a mellowness of spirit that has settled over us, for your replies have bounced back with amazing speed, teeming with news and with every letter, a litter. Let there be no further remarks about wabbits: for, as of the close of February 25, of 20 representative stock S. B. families, the average is 2.3 children vs. 1.5 for the U. S. A.

From Margaret Hall Smith's full letter came an observation sweet to the earsnamely, that the passage of years has made all of us from S. B. more attractive as women than we were as fill'es. This is certainly true of Serena Ailes Henry and Ruth Hasson Smith, both of whom I've seen for myself. Serena is kept vibrating by her two live-wire daughters, 13 and 10. This I say with feeling, as Russ and I took over Serena's menage twice this fall to placate the servants and keep things running. Running is right! I haven't slowed down yet from lush living in Grosse Pointe, issuing nrders of the day, falling 'em in and out and running-even unto the horse. The Henrys make monthly ticks covering different parts of the United States, as Tom is President of the Printers of America. Their February trip was to Washington to set before the committee investigating the Taft-Hartley bill the employers' point of view. Of Ruth, I know you will be glad to hear she is recovering successfully from an operation. Can she hold a room enthralled by her genuine charm and humor!

Back to Margaret: Two daughters and a grand job with Mt. Ida Junior College keep her busy. She and her husband tried backto-the-soiling in New Hampshire for five years and have happily retired therefrom. Kay Marr White and her husband visited them there. Margaret says she and Lindsay Prentis Woodroofe had a nice get-together S. B. Day and that neither have Lindsay's four imps nor her apostolic duties mowed her down one whit. Margaret also reports that Flo Brown Elton is married to a Judge Advocate and lives nearby, as do Mary Archer Bean Eppes, '29, and Ginny Quinturd Bond, '31, both of whom have two boys and are active in the Junior League. Reggie Foster Askew writes often from Eden, New York, where she holds forth on a real farm, is unbelievably domestic and has a small son. Carolyn Martindale Blouin has moved from Newton Centre to South Berwick, Maine, where Margaret supposes she is entertaining as beautifully, extensively and effortlessly as usual in spite of the doings of three children.

From Norvell Royer Orgain comes word that she does nothing really—jist a mere matter of working on community boards (note plural), Junior Leagueing, and two children. How much do people want to do? Word also of Louise Nelson Bolling as having a daughter and living in Hanover County on a farm. Lastly, that Emma Riely Lemaire and her charming husband make frequent weekend sorties from New York City to Richmond.

Peggy Carpenter Terry of Cincinnati is curious to know if her about-to-be-drafted 18-year-old son is not the Class Baby. There are two more chez elle: a son 16 and a daughter 13. Husband Marshall is no less than Director of T.V. for the Crosley Broadcasting Corporation, along with its many attendant et aliter. They have bought a farm in the Rio Grande Valley. Peggy's pet project is the Children's Home and as a sideline the Council of Church Women and the Woman's Club. She waves a frequent hello to Mary Huntington Harrison, as their sons attend the same school. Norvell mentioned having re-nned with Mary and Betty Boone Willis last June as the only representatives of '30. Peggy also reports, as you might suspect, that Libby Smith Reaves is active in Cincinnati music clubs and I should imagine active, too, caring for her 7-year-old redhead named Rusty.

Mona Stone Green runs ever true to form, bless her heart! Her reply was in my hands almost before I'd returned from having posted my letter to her. Her Anne, she hopes, will enter S. B. C. this fall. Her Joan is going to Wellesley or Goucher next year. Mac is still a shaver of 5. Mona is surprised she is President of the Church Guild. I am sure we are not. She's also a member of the altar guild, worthy of mention in memoriam of Chapel in College. She spends her time heckling Senators and Legislators for the improvement of education in Wisconsin's rural schools. Through Mona and Gwen comes news of Lammie Lambeth Kilgore: a son of 9, and a daughter of 6. While Lammie's Navy husband was in the Pacific, she succumbed to the touch of Midas and sold everything except the children and the refrigerator and moved to the family's summer cottage at Hermitage, Tennessee. There they have lived for the last 21/2 years waiting for the price on houses to drop. How we sympathize, although with reservations, as the Kilgores are still sitting on their nest eggs. Mona is planning to visit Abie Blake Crane in Madison this month. Abie has a five year older, male.

I had a delightful letter from Tommy Thomason Griffin. Her mother is living with Martha Scott, whom all of you must remember. The Griffins and their two children, 13 and 11, live nearby. Tommy is active in Cub Scouts, the Y., the P. T. A., and the League of Women Voters.

Gwen Olcott Writer's letter overflowed with news, She is a Brownie leader (she'd have to be with three of her own), and is off to Pinehurst this month on what she believes will be a creaking athletic spree. From Cagey Woodworth Wilkin comes word of a Roger @ 6'1", a football playing Bill, and a Carol Anne, head of the house. From Shirley Otis-three imps: "smart, bad, and cute" plus three cases of duuble mumps. Holy horrors! Just about a year ago Gwen saw Betty McCrady Bardwell and her four taffy-headed bairns in Florida, where Betty "the lovely mistress of a large home." Betty is a Brownie leader, too, and she and her husband deep sea fish for fun, rising at 2 A. M. to beat the fish to school. That's not too fun-ny to me. She has run into Alice Scott Fuller down there who is married to a 'round-the-world explorer and lecturer and is one of note on her own! Lastly, in Gwen's letter: Merritt Murphy Green has two children, and her husband is stationed at West Point permanently.

Mary Hughes Hay wrote of her three little girls and their country place complete with chickens, two mares, one colt, and two Great Danes!

And from my G-2-ing I find that Clyde Manson Tinkess has invaded my own home territory of Greenwich and is married to our super-duper eye specialist there and lives on Stanwich Road. She has a son, too.

You will see that I am much impressed by the ages of your offsprings. I never realized before I was that old. My thanks to all of you for your letters. Having been out of the States for so long and living now as we do in a land alien to both of us, receiving them has "grounded" me at last. It's as if lights were snapping on and doors opening all over the country. My apologies if the items herein are nothing but flashbacks to you. They are all news to me!

Class Secretary: MARTHA McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman) 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA COOKE (Mrs. Frederick W. Rea) 650 Bexley Avenue, Marion, Ohio.

A most welcome, but all too brief message came from Mary Nice Jemison, ex 31, telling me that all is well with her family. Her children are now 15 and 17. Can it be

A letter from Mart von Briesen, which came too late for the last issue, brought the sad news of the death of Jean Pleobn Kauffman's husband last summer. He was taken ill while they were on vacation in Michigan and died in August. I know all of you join me in sending her our deepest sympathy. Jean has sold her country home and she and her three children, Eddie 10½, Grace 6, and Pack 5½, have moved back to town.

Gillette Hilton Pritchard sent me an announcement of the arrival of a son, Frank Robinson, born December 19, 1948. Hearty congratulations!

Nancy Worthington gave me news of one of our long-lost classmates, Bet West Allerton, who now lives in Seattle, Washington. Bet took her four children and flew to Alaska last summer. Her oldest child, Barbara, is 13 and the baby, Charlotte, is 2½. Nancy had just returned from an eastern "trek."

Aggie Cleveland Sandifer came through with a grand letter catching me up with her activities of the past year. Last summer she and her youngest daughter, Jenifer, spent some time at a Dude Ranch in Cal fornia while her older daughter, Prudence, was in camp. In the fall Aggie and Martha McCouen Burnet had a nice trip to New York. Recently she was back in New York for a few days and while there ran into Jane Mublberg Halverstadt at the St. Regis.

I was excited to learn that Martha Burnet will be featured in McCall's Magazine sometime in the spring. It seems that they are doing an article on Young Matrons and how they manage their homes without retiring from social activities. Martha was chosen as a subject. So be on the lookout for the spring issue of McCall's. I, for one, am shopping around for pointers in that department, and don't want to miss it.

Cynthia Vaughn is now Mrs. Francis Price and is making her home in Greensboro, N. C. I certainly would like some details from Cynthia about her wedding as all the news I have had of her has come through the "grapevine."

A brief card from Mary Kelso Littell tells not that she and Joe have finally found a house and although she describes it as a "wonderful big livable monstrosity" 1 am sure that it is anything but that, knowing Stewartie's flare for making any place attractive. Her daughter, Carolyn, is back at Grier School in Pennsylvania.

As you can see by the brevity of this report, I did not find the time to send out cards, due to an endless round of "flu" bugs, colds, etc., which circulated through my family from January 1st to the middle of February. However, I will be writing each of you for news before too long and please, won't you answer my card immediately and not stuff it in a cubby hole of your desk for future attention. After all, remember, I can't pass on the news to you if you don't pass it to me first.

Since Jobie was good enough to write a long letter compiling all the information gleaned from Christmas cards, I'll embellish it unofficially with some gleanings of my own. I object strenuously to that blank space allotted to 1932, and again heartily recommend that one of you say "yes" when the Alumnæ Office calls for volunteers to take over this column.

Jobie sent news of Adelaide Smith Nelson, who was about to have an operation which it was hoped would restore her completely. Kate Scott Soles, who now lives in Willoughby, Ohio, has a son, Jeff, off at boarding school and Kathie, her daughter, is about ready to enter Laurel School in Cleveland.

Ginny Squibb Flynn and family spent the holidays in Logan, West Virginia, and Cincinnati. They have bought a big house in Winchester, Mass., adequate, she says, for the many and lively activities of two boys. Jobie had also seen Ruth Kerr and Betty Uber Ely in Pittsburgh recently. She said that her husband, Gus, was promoted and transferred to Pikeville, Kentucky, last September where he is commercial manager of the Kentucky Power Company. With some friends they had been on a cruise on the Chesapeake Bay last summer in an old three-masted sailing schooner, and reported a marvelous time.

The Merrills, Sarah Harrison and Art, have a new offspring, which Mildred Hodges Ferry reported to me via the Christmas card method. The baby came in December. Bellamy sent me a snapshot of her youngest the other day, and she is adorable. Emily Maxwell Littlepage confided that with three to look after she found little time for other things, which is not hard to understand. Franke's three made a fetching Yule greeting picture, but how ancient it all makes me feel!

For me, the highlight of the winter has been a brief stopover in Greensboro on my way back to Sweet Briar from a meeting in Chapel Hill. I spent the night with Virginia Hall Lindley, whom I had not seen for twelve years. It was simply grand to be there and her two children, Van and John, are all one could ask for. They have a lovely house and Virginia still looks like the May Oueen! While there I saw a beyy of Sweet Briar cronies-including Mary Lynn Carlson King, Martha McCowen Burnet, (be sure to read the March issue of the Ladies Home Journal for the latest account of the Burnet family), Cynthia Vanghn Price, Ellen Kelly Follin, and Margaret Williams Brooks. Needless to say there was much to eatch up on, and the husbands and children were terribly long-suffering.

Class Secretary: Anne Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Sue Graves (Mrs. William K. Stubbs) 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana.

Doris Crane Loveland writes that Frances Quinn Bond has a baby girl born in December, 1948.

Elizabeth Gray wrote me a most interesting card February 9 reading, "I just got back from a most glamorous and fabulous vacation which included Havana, Cuba, Miami Beach, Palm Beach, and St. Augustine, Florida. In Miami I visited Inky Olsson and she and I took the trip to Cuba together where we were royally entertained for a long weekend, at the Nacional Hotel, the Grand Casino, and the Havana Country Club. Now, after three weeks of the 'soft life,' I'm back on the job again and believe me, the war is over as far as business is concerned. We have to buckle down and earn our living for a change—we salesmen, that is!" Lib had a Christmas card from Madeleine LePine Gipson with a picture of her charming looking five children, Madeleine has quite a family-1 wish I knew whether they are boys or girls and something about them and her.

Jean Van Horne Baber had a second son, Bruce Johns Baber, born on August 29, 1948. Nancy Howard is now Mrs. Arunah Randolph and lives in Charleston, West Virginia.

Lucy Moulthrop Alexander spent the winter in Naples, Florida, with her husband, Jim, their daughter, Lucy (age 12) and their niece, Jean. Lucy reports that it is a fine place for fishing and that the beach is a beauty. The Alexanders had a little cottage in Naples and enjoyed the simple life.

As a secretary I get some interesting problems: cards signed with just the first name; this and the postmark lead to quite a bir of research and then the results are not necessarily correct; cards with no maiden names (ony list is alphabetical by maiden names), you are of course very familiar with your married names, but there are 200 of us and I do not know them; and a card with no signature but two postmarks—Newport News, Virginia, and Sarasota, Florida. I am quoting this card as I do not want to leave some one out and hurt her feelings—"Am having the last two weeks of February and month of March in Sarasota, Florida. Then return to Newport News, Virginia, in April and May." These remarks are not complaints, but merely amusing incidents.

Charlotte Tamblyn Tufts' youngest child is 3, her two oldest are 9 and 11 and are very busy with a paper route, and her third buy is almost 5. Charlotte is bosy knitting and sewing. She still thinks California is the test place in the world to live.

Betty Green Nathan's new address is 25 Marian Avenue, Albany, New York. Betty has been very busy remodeling, redecorating, and moving. She has three sons—Richard, 13; Tommy, 11; and Billy, 6.

Also heard from Connie Murray Weller and Jo Rucker Powell. They say they have no news, but just hearing from one's friends is definitely worthwhile.

Elizabeth Selden Stainbrook wrote me a very fine letter. Her address is Boston Post Road, Branford, Connecticut. The Stainbrooks live in a charming old 18th century house out in the country. Edward is teaching, assistant professor, at Yale Medical School. He is in psychiatry. They have a daughter, Judith, who is 2½. She has curly hair and sounds adorable. Elizabeth spends her time keeping house and taking care of Jodith. She also wrote me news of Betty Taylor Antrim, who lives in Richmond. Betty has a little boy, Joe, a year older than Judith, and another son, Hugh, who was born last October.

Fund Agent: JEAN SPRAGUE, 1910 Kalorama Road, N. W., Washington 9, D. C.

That thing they palmed off on you for a culumn in the last issue was an excerpt from a letter to Terry Shaw, so don't be deceived by it; I had no notion it would appear in print! Your response to my cards was wooderful, and I certainly did appreciate it since I have just spent an idle moment toting up the fascinating statistic that I have written and mailed you some 3,000 postals since we left the sacred confines of old Alma Mater. I am trying to get as complete information on the whole graduating class as possible for Reunion. I wish when you write again that you would tell me your husband's (if any) business, your current activities and send pictures of your children. I'd like to make a scrap book with all this in it for those who can come back and then leave it at school or mail it to anyone who would like to see it. There are a few errant souls on whom I have absolutely no word whatsoever, and if anyone of you has heard one word about them, would you please let nie have it? They are: Lucille Bond Pendleton, Elizabeth Bryce Reed, Marie Lange Gaskell, Marie Lepine, Dearing Lewis, Sally Merritt Breotnall, Margaret Newton, Mary Evelyn Wood Littrell.

I have vast sums of news this issue. Eleanor Cooke Esterly writes that an Alumnæ Club has been formed in Los Angeles; Anne Corbitt Little now lives in Roanoke. Judy Daugherty Musser was wrestling Jan around with measles and plans to come back to Reunion.

Lydia and family had a winter vacation in Miami where she saw Alice Estill Rosemond, but no details on the latter. Mitzi is taking a course in painting and drawing in Adult Evening Classes.

Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman made a one-day stand at Sweet Briar for the Graduate Study Group; she suggested we try to round up clothes for a fashion show in June, viotage 1930-34 which I think is a marvelous idea, so keep it in mind. Emily Marsh Nichols has been living in Boise, Idaho, for two years working as a medical social consultant for the Idaho Department of Public Assistance; she expects to move back east soon.

Kitty Marshall Haonill and family spent a week-end with Debbie Ebangh Smith and also sees Jean Sprague occasionally; she also bumped into Mary Ann Page Guyol and Dee Taylor Sinkov; saw Eleanor Rust Mattern when she was home, and also Lib Ogilby Sands. I think Kitty ought to take on my old jub; she's very current with lots of people.

Elizabeth May field Chapman lives in Bronxville, New York, with husband, two sons, George, 7, and Edward 1, and one cat, Cream Puff. Mary Walton keeps busy with work in the Episcopal Sunday School and Woman's Auxiliary, and as Chairman of the Joint Committee on Colored Schools and on the Fairfax County Federation of P. T. A.'s.

Bonny McDonald Hatch saw Betty Carter Clark when the latter came home last summer. She is also a Den Mother which she finds a little enervating. Amen, sister! Jo Fink Meeks, she reports, has three girls. Kitty Means Neely and family vacationed at Virginia Beach last summer and have a sumner place at Baylor's Lake, Pennsylvania.

Marcia' and her husband went to California in February where Raleigh took his orals for the American Board of Internal Medicine. Ruth Myers Pleasants went to the J. L. Regional Conference in Pinehurst, N. C. Lib Ogilby Sands and family live in Gambrills, Maryland.

Mary Pringle is in charge of the nursery at a private school in Pittsburgh. She and Amy Davies had a wonderful trip to Europe last summer, motoring through England, Scotland, and Wales and then on to Amsterdam, Brussels, and Paris. She rounded out the summer by visiting her brother in California. It sounds like the dreams I indulge in over the dishpan.

Margaret Ross Ellice is still wedded to farm life, filling in with taxi-service for small Anne, choir practice, music lessons, Brownies, 4-H meetings and such.

lulie was planning to go to S. B. for a Council Meeting in February; hope you made it, pet. It takes a little juggling to get off, I find.

Lib Schener Maxwell and her husband spent two weeks in Laurel, Mississippi, with May McCallum Neill and her husband last September; also side trips to Natchez, Jackson, and New Orleans, then on to Macon for two weeks with Cecil. She saw Betsy Silva Atkins and Marion Gwaltney Hall while there. Mary and her family now live in Jackson, Mississippi, where her husband is practicing medicing

Julia Shirley Patterson was planning to visit Marjorie Thuma Anning in Cincinnati in March. Marjorie Smith Zengel writes of a son, Frederick, Jr.. now almost two, whom I didn't know about. Kathleen Spiller Gillis has two boys, Jimmy and Kenneth, 2 and 1 respectively. Jean Sprague writes that she had lunch with Martha Lou on her way to above mentioned conference.

Betty Suttle Briscoe keeps busy on hospital committees, plus benefit functions, Garden Club and chauffeuring. She wrote that the S. B. C. Club of Philadelphia is planning a Glee Club concert with Haverford College and Betty will have several S. B. girls as her house-guests.

Bonnie Wood Stookey had as her houseguest at Christmas Talat Rasul, Sweet Briar's Indian student who spoke at the N. Y. C. Sweet Briar Day luncheon. Bonnie and Don had an entirely successful ten days skiing in Canada in January which sounded heavenly.

Four new babies are expected by the next issue so if you haven't paid your dues, kindly do so and you will get the good tidings hot off the press. PLEASE answer my cards so I can "go forward with the project." You cannot imagine how interested and eager for news of each other each Briarite is when I see her or hear from her.

We were all on our feet for Christmas which was a novelty which I thoroughly enjoyed. I see Jane Forder Stribling frequently at church and S. B. Club meetings; she has a daughter, Anne, 13, and two boys, Johnny and Jimmie, 9 and 8. Also see Marjorie Van Evera Lovelace at the above. Went to Florida in February where I joined the lilies of the field for a beautiful two weeks and am now looking forward eagerly to Spring and hearing from ALL of you.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: JACQUELYN STRICKLAND (Mrs. Edward Dwelle, Jr.) 4910 Arapahoe Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida.

Fund Agent: GENEVA CROSSMAN (Mrs. Edson S. Stevens) 2151 Walnut Lake Road, R.F.D. 1, Birmingham, Michigan.

A card from Marie Schoeder Thomas announces the birth of her daughter on October 2, 1948. Marie has a son, also, who is 4½. If any of you are near West Springfield, Massachusetts, Marie would appreciate a visit.

Virginia Gott Gilbert has a ten-months-old daughter, Emily, adopted last April. The Gilberts are busy with her and their new home at 540 Buckingham Avenue, Syracuse, New York.

Maud Winborne Leigh's activities would fill a volume and in spite of three children, she has certainly been tripping. While in Chicago recently she saw Dorothy Mackenzie who is now Mrs. Henry W. Kraebber of 622 South Bridge Street, Belding, Michigan. In Maud's words, "Rusty is wonderfully preserved."

Mary Jane Hastings Gaff's address is 827 Forest, South Bend, Indiana—for the several people who have asked for it.

We were sorry not to see Margaret Glover Paddock, who with husband, Hal, and three children, is spending some time in Fort Lauderdale. Glover says they have just missed Jacksonville all around. She yearns for news of Helen Jackson Hagan—and so do I!

Sallie Flint Von Kann is living now at 3534 Gluston Road, Alexandria, Virginia. Her husband is in the Pentagon. Sallie has a son, 6, and a daughter, 1¹2. but is busy as usual, with her French class, P. T. A., League of Women's Voters and some teaching.

I did enjoy so much a long letter from Marion Walker Alcaro who reminded me that her son, our first class baby, was 12 in December. Her other boy is 5. Marion lives in Wharton, New Jersey, but hopes soon to move to Morristown where her husband specializes in ear, nose, and throat work. She has had wonderful success with her career as a professional writer and one of her articles is in an anthology for use in college classes. Congratulations, Marion. Look for her work, too, in Woman's Day, the A. & P. Stores Magazine.

A happy spring to you all—and keep the cards rolling in.

Fund Agent: ALMA MARTIN (Mrs. Ralph A. Rotnem) 330 East Seventy-uinth Street. New York 21, New York.

Don't be shocked! This is just a temporary arrangement until a better and permanent secretary can be found. Someone please speak up! Didn't get a chance to send cards to everyone but thanks to those of you who did respond.

Stumpy is still principal of the Day School, Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York, and is working on her masters in the summer. She sees Libby Hartridge who is Office Manager and Personnel Assistant for Ladies Home Journal. Stumpy also sees Alma who was at the Council meeting in February and showed me a picture of her precious little boy.

Kathleen Donobue McCormack has four beys and still finds time to work on A. A. U. W. Committees. Her husband, Jimmy, is heading the Red Cross Drive for their home town, DePere, Wisconsin Pinkie says she works hard and takes occasional trips to Richmond, but has no news to relate.

Mary Virginia Camp Smith has two daughters, Mary Lindsay, 3½, and Charlotte 16 months. Her time is also filled with the Red Cross Committee on Education and Instruction, Junior League, and Church Circle. She is looking forward to being matron of honor in her sister's wedding in June. Mary Virginia also writes that Marjorie Wing Todd's second daughter was born January 7, the fifth birthday of her first daughter.

Katie Niles Parker says that all her four children outgrow their clothes much too fast but despite that, her life suits her to a T.

Lib Morton Forsyth, whom I see occasionally, has four children now, too. What a prolific class! Lib's children are—Betty, 10: Elsie, 7; Douglas, 334; and Nancy, almost 2 Lib has just been elected Corresponding Secretary of the Junior League and belongs to a garden club and sings in the choir. Harry is busy with civic offices and various hobbies. They have just purchased a piece of mountain property and are hoping to build a summer cottage.

Betty Cocke Winfree lives just a few doors from me and I see her rather often. Her children, all of whom are wonderful, are P. B., 11; Macon, 8; and just exactly like Betty, and Penny, 4. Betty sings in the Madrigal Club with Rusty every Wednesday night.

Ruth Gilliam Viar and I have a good many long phone talks mostly about Lynchburg Alumnæ Chapter of which Ruth is Secretary-Treasurer and I am President. The Alumna Chapter is really my pet interest outside of our home. At home we now have Bill, 8½: and Elizabeth, 3. I have recently taken or the Beauty Counsellor line of cosmetics. I love dabbling in it. Can you imagine me doing that? I also give a little time to the Little Theatre and to the P.T.A.

Here's hoping we have a big turnout for our thirteenth reunion in June and let's buckle down and get a good secretary like Stumpy again.

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 1906 Dewey. Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Peggy Cruikshank Dyer has a son, Timothy Holmes, born February 16—at long last a boy! Congratulations, Peg! Another new addition, though not as recent, is a daughter for Margaret Sandidge Mason—named Elizabeth Dabney and born August 15. Peggy loves living in Port Chester, New York, where they have bought a house. She had heard from Maggie MacRae Allen and hoped to see her in New York at Christmas.

A wonderfully long and interesting letter from Lee Hall Cramer more than makes up for all the unanswered cards. Since 1943 she has owned and run a hardwood flooring warehouse and in the line of business she has done thousands of miles of traveling. "I always manage to go to one or two mills where they don't really know us-and I love the expression on the men's faces when they realize that I am the Hall Flooring Company! They never expect a young woman to be in my end of the business." Besides such activities, she has 51.2 years old Kathie to raise and a house to run. She managed to sandwich in short visits to Sweet Briar in June and October when she saw Terry, of course, and Pop and Nancy Worthington. She also spent a couple of nights with Nina Cauthorn Jarvis and reports her children are darlings. She also sees Dot Lochmann Gengarelly occasionally. Thanks, loads, Lee, and please don't slip back into your "no response" rut!

Another chronic ignorer of my most ardent pleas, Dot Green Kreuzberg to name names, reports that her three sons, plus helping Frank in the office (he's a doctor) and trying to get in some golf, keep her on the jump. When she can't get out on the course, she does a lot of sewing. They summer at Ocean City, New Jersey, and the two older boys have become great swimmers, being members of the Red Cross Beginners and Primary Swimming Club. Tommie, 15 months old, is doing wonderfully although he only weighed 3 pounds, 10 ounces at birth. Ellie Snodgrass Park sees Jane Collins Corwin and says she and children are fine. She also reports that Norma Rogers Cook has moved to Mobile, Alabama. Ellie seems to enjoy thoroughly her "lawyering"-luck to you!

Margaret Bradley Forsyth puts the trouble in a nutshell saying, "It doesn't take a minute to write a line or two—it's just to overcome that initial moment of inertia!" She is anxious to get back for reunion this spring and says Dot Price Roberts has almost talked her into it. She thinks the Dix plan is a fine idea. So would I if I could only manage a trip East! Brad has daughter Margaret to walk to and from school—part of the way being through a field with cattle—and a son, Legan, who arrived last summer—"the best baby, I wish I had five more like him!"

Sara Kirkpatrick is now Mrs. John M. Fearing, 5144 Nebraska Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. Her husband is a doctor with the Veterans Administration.

Betty Ball Fensom has just returned from a trip to Mexico City. She keeps busy with the usual round of home, church, P. T. A., Junior Red Cross, etc. Becky Douglass Mapp is still going through the remodeling siege but hopes to be through within a couple of months. She hasn't even been to Norfolk since October so hasn't seen anyone. The end is in sight though. A nice card from Molly Gruber Stoddart-they've done some improving in their house but are still dreaming of building. Sorry I missed you last summer, Moll, but maybe we'll do better next time. Lil Lambert Pennington has joined the ranks of emancipated women-an electric dishwater is the badge of distinction and I for one will join with her in shouting its praises. Oddly enough, I got mine because Charles got tired of drying dishes, but I am certainly reaping the benefits! Lil reports an exceptionally mild winter with everything in bloom. You've all no doubt read what we suffered through with three straight weeks of solid ice and below zero—unheard of in Oklahoma!

Anne Lemmon finally "found" herself and wrote a nice note. She's back at home buying ready-to-wear for a store her family has an interest in. She enjoys it and says the best feature is that she gets to New York every couple of months but so far hasn't had a second to look up any Briarites. She spends her leisure time golfing, fishing, and taking care of impacted wisdom teeth! She says that during her "lost" period she was working in Dubuque, Iowa, which is about as lost as you can get. She was doing the same sort of work there and liked it—but not the town.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: LUCY TALIAFERRO (Mrs. Charley C. Nickerson) Glendale Road, Colonia, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: BARBARA DERR (Mrs. A. I. Chenoweth) 1923 20th Avenue S., Birmingham, Alabama.

I asked for a little extra time on this from the Office because a group of us planned to 'reune" in New York for lunch, but of course plans had to change for a large number of us housewives and mothers so that we didn't get as many as hoped. Finally, we ended up with the Jersey group of Janet Macfarlan Bergmann, Adele Letcher Harvey, Kay Hoyt, Janice Wiley Adams and yours truly; but we had a grand time gabbing and did catch up on lots of news of you other gals. Just to give you a glimpse into households-Janet and Adele had gotten sitters and said they were determined to go out to lunch somewhere even if just down the street! Janet, our organizer, had specified that we bring snapshots and had some darling pictures of her Nancy and Skippy, the latter looking just like Daddy Carl whom he was standing beside. Adele had forgotten pictures, but she assured us that her three boys were as harum-skarum as usual. I guess Janice's three were, too, since she said she would have to be back by 3:30, after naps and school, or they would be too much for her mother.

We were specially glad to have Kay with us, since she has been sick off and on for the last few months. She seems quite fit and is starting a new secretarial job at Kimberley's, a private girls' school in Montclair. It sounded intriguing, except that she says they stay so busy in the summer that she will get only two weeks vacation instead of the usual school summer vacation.

I had gotten Janice and Bud over to the heuse not long ago, so we had caught up a bit. They are still looking for a house and she says Bud hasn't been assigned his territory, so they are unsettled. It was surely good to see all those gals again.

As for our "regrets," we still got a bit of news. Georgia Black Kievit hadn't been able to come at the last minute and sent her hellos through Janet. Judy Bemis Wills had reported to Adele that due to a siege of grippe throughout the family (she being the present victim) she wouldn't be present. Lew Griffith Longstaff had planned to join us but, as per usual, was called off on a trip to cover business on Moss Lake Camp that she and her husband run. I had a postcard from "M. I." Miller Hein from Clearwater, Florida, saying that she had flown down on the first of February with the two children, would be there till the end of March, that she feels "like an absolute bum, but intends to make the most of it, 'cause probably won't get to do it again for years." Needless to say, the postal had to substitute for her presence! And I had even tried to talk

"Macky" Fuller Kellogg into coming down to New York and visiting her father on the way. A letter from her explained that she couldn't work in plans with a business trip of Moulton's. She says that they are really about to begin work on their house—this month, they hope, since all plans are in blueprint form. I know they will be thrilled to have a place of their own at long last.

About the most exciting piece of news to me personally was the announcement of the arrival of Robert F. Allen, Jr., to my roommate, Rilma Wilson Allen this January. That means that her boy and mine are just about a year apart, so we hope to get them together as they are growing up. When I heard from her, Rilma was completely recovered and said that she and Bob about to take advantage of the last night of the nurse to go out to the Club. Needless to say, the baby is flourishing. Rilma did tell me that Dolly Nicholson Tate hadn't been too well, and was in Florida with her mother to get back on her feet. I guess with Florida sunshine she must have things pretty well under control by now, too.

I had a postcard from Frances Bailey Brooke, giving me the address of a new house that she and her husband recently bought. After doing graduate work on his Pn.D. at the University of North Carolina, she says he is now in the History Department at V. M. I. Her children are "Chip," four years old, and Marion, fifteen months. She wants to know who from '38 is coming to the Briar Patch for reunion in June?

While shopping not long ago I ran into Hope Hastorf, whom I hadn't seen in forever. She tells me she is working for the Red Cross down at Camp Kilmer—in full time capacity, not just a Nurse's Aide. She evidently got into this just after the war. She says they have very few soldiers down there now, but mostly D.P.'s. It was good to catch a glimpse of her, even if I couldn't stop long enough to get very detailed news.

That is all I have for you this time, but I will be writing you all again shortly. Or just send me any news you think of!

Class Secretary: ELIZABETH DURHAM (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.) 32 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Fund Agent: LEILA BOND (Mrs. Joseph S. Preston) 168 Madison Road, Scarsdale, New York.

This is only a preview—a "coming attraction" of the main feature due at the Amherst Orpheum next June. Our class undoubtedly has many Oscars—but come and see for yourself at our tenth reunion.

The preview is pretty good in itself. Our retired journalist, Betsy Campbell Gawthrop, Bob, and their son, Rob, aged 6, went to New York to see Betsy's mother off for Europe. They stayed in town long enough to introduce Rob to all the wonders of the big town, including Radio City, with a real airplane buzzing the audience. As for Betsy, her big thrill was sitting by David Niven at the theater.

Virginia Wellford Farwell is a terrific script writer, and sent me a wealth of news. She and Sumner are living in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and have a young starlet, Florence Carter Farwell, who was born December 14. She evidently is a charmer and already has her father wrapped around her little finger. Sumner works for Warner Brothers—not the Hollywood variety—but the company which makes exclusive feminine apparel.

Virginia had just heard from Della Meade Kelley with some typical Brambler-like stories of the Kelley's two sons, Skipper who is four, and two and a half year old Creigh. They live on a farm in Sharon, Connecticut, with their private trout stream in their back yard.

On the distaff side is Anne Harrison Brown with three daughters. They are perfect models for technicolor, since one is blonde, the others—a redhead, and brunette. Anne and John have just moved into a lovely old house in Wilmington, Delaware, and must be pretty busy just tying six braids every morning.

Betty Barnes Bird is living in Schenectady. She and Bill have two sons, Stonewall Jackson Bird, and David. I was dreaming of Rebel yells and Confederate gray, but their first son is named for General Jackson of World War II fame. Bill was a good friend of and aide to the General.

Connie Wallace Price and her family, all boys, are now living in West Chester, Pennsylvania. She, Della, and Betty B. B. were all bridesmaids when the Farwells were married in 1947.

Mary Lou Simpson Bulkley is a busy wife. The Bulkleys have just moved into a lovely new house in Fairfield, Connecticut. Mary Lou is an active Junior Leaguer as well as mother, wife, and interior decorator.

Betty Bell Wyman could be her stand-in. She and Dick live in Framingham, and have a darling two-year-old daughter named Anne Windsor. Betty is on the board of the Boston Junior League this year, and is editor of the League News. This would take all of most people's time but not Betty—she is an avid, and good golfer, and spends a great deal of time on the fairways and not off in the rough as in my case.

It may be a warm and heavenly springtime now, but one cold grim day in February I had a letter from Mary Jeff Welles Pearson. She wrote me of the apple blossoms at Sweet Briar, and never have I felt quite as cheered. Mary Jeff gives singing lessons for the Freshmen, and she herself is taking lessons from Mr. Gilpin, who is Sweet Briar's excellent music instructor. Mary and John, and their two children, 3½-year-old Betty and 2-year-old Jackie, are living with Mary Jeff's family while John is at Washington and Lee taking the course in business administration. John studies corporate finance at night while Mary practices her singing—so their careers are going hand in hand together.

The Pearsons had visited Augusta Saul Edwards and Dick in Roanoke and echoed what we have heard of the cunning children and attractive house. They also see a lot of Frances Bailey Brooke, '38, whose husband, George, is on the V. M. I. faculty. Their son, Chip, is very much enamored of young Miss Pearson—so the says.

The camera shifts now to New Hampshire. Kay Richards DeLancy and Bob moved two years ago to Keene from Pennsylvania. They have two children, Leora, 20 months, and 5-month-old Stephen. And true to good old '39er fashion have just bought and moved into a new house. Bob has started a men's clothing store and is fast becoming the young executive of the town. They also have a dog, not the Lassie type, but "a mutt I brought from France," said Kay. Its name is Moppet, and this I consider a charming bit of news—these days.

I talked to Kay Ortel Osborne, who said that she and Bob visited Leila Bond Preston and Joe after Christmas. The two Preston children had come down with Virus X, but all was well in February. As I think back, it seems that our children and everyone's were sick in bed with some ailment then, and I'm really glad to be over the snow suit and sniffle age.

Jane Parker Washburn should have her name in lights! For she not only wants to come down to our reunion, but suggests that grandmothers can be particularly devoted to their grandchildren between June 4 and 6. Linda and Stevie will have the time of their lives with Mummie gone, and we shall certainly do the same.

The Washburns see Tready and Fritz Downs often, and Jane says that Susie is dear, whereas the Washburn children are old enough to be active with a capital A.

Lucy Gordon Jeffers sent me the longest list of college friends she had seen in Norfolk, Virginia, where she was visiting—Ann Parks and Lu Martin among the many. She sat by Marion Brown Mann at the S. B. luncheon, and says Brownie looked positively wonderful.

Bennett Wilcox Bartlett and Harry and their two children are still living in Washington, D. C., and have just finished adding several rooms to their house. Bennett says they are now filled with trucks, tractors, dolls, and other childhood paraphernalia. Incidentally, Bennett is planning to join us in June!

A cozy letter from Henny Collier Armstrong tells me their latest—Penny, their six-year-old daughter, sounds very much like she must be a copy of her honorable mother. Henny and Dr. Bill are lucky enough to have "a house on a hill" and are watching everyone house-hunting in Atlanta. She tells me Barge is busy, too, with three children, Bill, Mary, and Tim, and any extra time is given over to Junior League work. She is President-Elect for next year.

Happy and Dick Wathen were in Atlanta on their way to Guatamala and Henny talked to Happy and felt as if it really hadn't been ten years since chats on "Second Floor Gray."

And that is all until June. After ten years there will be a great deal to say to each other, so all of you make a tremendous effort to be at Sweet Briar come June.

Class Secretary: Nida Tomun (Mrs. Robert C. Watts, Jr.), 2837 Sheringham Place, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.), 765 Valley Street, Orange, N. J.

It is wonderful to hear from and about people who are not homebound by bottles and britches, etc. Hortense Powell is leading a fascinating life. She has been working for three years for the United Nations as an Administrative Assistant in the Press and Publications Bureau. Hortense helps look after all the people who write about United Nations, put out all the pamphlets, and press releases as well. Last year Hortense was sent to Havana to the International Trade Organization Conference and found it most interesting. She spent this last fall in Paris where the United Nations sent her to attend the General Assembly. Hortense is now living at the Barbizon in New York. Mary Frances Hazelton, ex 40, lives near her and is working for N.B.C. Hortense says that she was present at a very well attended Sweet Briar meeting at Cynthia Abbott Botsford's not long ago. There she saw Ethel James, Bitzie Gordan Jeffers, '39 and Muriel Grymes, '43.

Kay Hodges is busily preparing for a trip to Europe this spring. She will sail in Apr.'l and will spend May in Scotland, June and July on the Continent and then back to England for another month or two. Kay's cousin, who lives in Scotland has made many wonderful plans. Kay has recently visited her brother in Canada.

Polly Boze Glascock is conducting a European tour for a group this summer and is looking forward to the trip a great deal. Polly reported the sad news of Mickey Mitchell Gillis' mother's death.

Elizabeth Conover has been traveling about the U. S. A. She and her mother spent the winter in Portland, Oregon. She had a nice visit with Coralie Kahn Ferro and Marien Phinizy Jones in San Francisco. Phin had a daughter this fall and Coralie's Mike, Jr. and Nancy are becoming quite grown up now. Elizabeth's permanent address is 7227 Greenway, University City 5, Missouri.

Mona Spurlock Fite is still leading a nomadic life. Her husband is a Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Force and is now stationed at Ft. Worth, Texas. Mona says that they live at the Air Base and that there are only seventeen children in their block. It must be a madhouse, but fun. The Fites have two girls aged four and two, also they have a collie and several kittens. Mona saw Mary Thompson Ball, '38, and Elinor Wilson Gammon, '38, at Ft. Worth.

Betty Hammer Morrell who is now living in Atlanta must move about a lot, too, as she says that she always finds out about S. B. neighbors just as she is leaving a city.

Clara MacRae Causey seems delighted to announce a permanent address, 402 Virginia Avenue, Alexandria, Va. She sees Virginia Allison Haywood who lives at 163 Preston Road, Alexandria, with her two boys and doctor husband. Sally Mitchell Clingerman and Mary Sue Kilham Davis are in the same general neighborhood.

Maria Burroughs Livingston is all settled in her new Andover, Massachusetts, home. The Livingstons visited Helen Cornuell Jones and her family of men in their white rambling house with its picket fence. They also saw Muriel Barrows in Boston. Muriel loves her job which is handling registration in the Boston Center for Adult education.

I was sorry to hear that Ann Adamson Taylor has had pneumonia and been in the hospital for quite a while. The Taylors had planned a trip to Bermuda, so perhaps they are there at this time. Phoopy says that Parge Woods Gillette writes "all Heaven" from Detroit.

Cynthia Noland Young's husband, Karl, is running in the Republican Primary for a city post in Stamford, Connecticut. Cynthia saw Estelle Sinclaire Farrar and her stunning house on Long Island. Estelle has a four-year-old son. Cynthia seems to be coping with her three small children very successfully.

Lois Fernley McNeil says that her three have all had colds at the same time. They won't even take turns! Lois saw El Snow Lea in November and says that she looks grand and that her apartment is most attractive. We should all be grateful to El for doing such a splendid job as our class Fund Agent.

Olivia Datis Brown is busy with Miss Barrett Brown aged one. She also finds time to do house painting and Junior League work as well as being a member of the Board of the League of Women Voters. Randolph Brown is back in private practice after being Assistant United States Attorney.

We three hamburgers from Lynchburg are having a violently active spell. Betty Frantz Roberts has a big part in the current Junior League play and Frances Moses Turner has given up her old "Aints and Asses" goin's on for serious back stage management. We enjoyed a brief visit from Ag Spencer Burke and Jack when they were on the way to Florida. Jane Hopkins Hanes and Huber hoped to join the Burkes, but were detained by their son and daughter and didn't get beyond Pinehurst. I'm plotting a week-end in Amherst soon to catch up on my naps!

Fund Agent: BETTY DOUCETT (Mrs. John E. Neill) 1177 California Road, Building No. 1, Apartment No. 3, Tuckahoe, New York.

Time is slipping by, and though this afternoon isn't as serene for letter composing as it might be, with Barky refusing to nap, I'll send along the news assembled as well as possible, what with small hands grabbing, table shaking, and numerous interruptions of accidents. The above should convey the present, never satisfied-for-long stage of the young lady.

Had several good long letters this month, which I'll quote here and there and the writers (bless em) will recognize their contributions. The first was from Pi, and was the equal of a lengthy chat on the arcade. Her first news was sad, however. Her father died suddenly November 2, and I know you will all join me in extending sympathy to her and her family. She said her three youngsters were a handful. Ingrid is in kindergarten; Alfred, Jr., is three; and little sister, Margaret, just over a year. Al is with Luxuray Mills, knitters of underwear, so Pi says her supply is never ending. Fort Plain is small, but fun. Weekends and trips to Utica for hockey games, P. T. A., and three acres of land keep the von Wellsheims busy.

Mary Scully Olney has been in Albiun, New York, for two years. Mary saw Kitty Estes and Decca Gilmer Frackelton in Washington. Kitty is living there, working in a brokerage. Decca is in Fredericksburg, and hers and Mary's children are almost twins. James B. Olney, Jr., was a year March 23, and Mary says he is satisfactory and mostly fun.

Ellie Damgard Firth is well settled in Charleston, West Virginia, with Swede and two daughters, Louise, the youngest, was a year in December. Ellie said Betty Fawcett Collier, husband, and two children, Jimmy and Gretchen, are moving to Ironton, Ohio (not far from the Firths) and they plan to get together.

A letter from Frannic Baldwin Whitaker which Peg Tomlin Graves sent on to me contained news of some of the Birmingham gals. Lillian Foulkes Taylor's two little girls, five and one year, are keeping her tied down. Ruth Hempbill DeBuys and her family have moved into a new house they built, and she is busy with her two sons, six and ten months. Young Meade Whitaker was two in September and Frannie says he's a joy—a real boy, mischievous, but worlds of fun.

Peg has seen a lot of Kirk, who was at school for the Council meetings. Her new pictures of the three young Headleys are a knockout according to Peg.

Another grand letter was from Meach, in which she reported of Anne Dewey's wedding in Dallas at Christmas time to John W. Guerin. They plan to live in Tarryton, New York, as the groom is a commercial artist for New York television. The Gays have a pleasant, if quiet, social life in Hudson, Massachusetts, and Meach says they live in the oldest house in town, complete with ghost in the attic, which is delightful except when the wind blows through the genuine antique siding. Robert is now 5½ and Gardiner 4; and she is the one who is eagerly awaiting school next fall, not the boys.

Betty Doucett Neill (thought she'd like to see her name written out) sent me a picture of 5½ months Johnny, but a Zwieback box is covering most of his face, so I can't tell if he resembles his mother or not. She and Lack had seen Betsy Tower Bennett and Charlie, and their bouncy baby boy, who looks like B. T.

Betty Joe McNarney Williams had a baby girl, Lucy Charles, January 6.

Tatty Spaatz is now Mrs. Walter Bell and is living in London.

The next publication goes to everyone and I'd love to have some fresh news about a lot of you that I haven't heard from in ages—50 please!

Class Secretary: Ann Hauslein (Mrs. Thomas G. Potterfield) 2058 Cropsey Avenue, Apt. 5-A, Brooklyn, New York.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH HANGER, 32 Aberdeen Place, St. Louis, Mo.

This chatter comes close on the heels of the last issue, so I am not overloaded with news. However, I am counting on all of you to supply me with pages of news for the lune issue.

A bouquet to Doris Ogden Mount who wrote from the hospital to announce the arrival of William Ogden, their second son. Topping all other news of the hour is word from Margie Trontman Harkin of the grand entrance of twin boys on January 24. William Pickens Harkin, III, and Robert Lester Harkin are their names. That makes four sons for the Harkins. Polly Peyton Turner, as another mother of twins, had best rush some words of counsel to Margie.

Dougie Woods Sprunt is working in a dress shop in Washington. She, Poose, and Sally (Butch) had an exhibition at the Hotel Jefferson in Richmond. My old box-mate, Shirley Hauseman, wrote telling of seeing Pat Potter Roach in Chicago and of chatting with Frannie Boynton Drake on the phone. Shirley failed to give me any details about her own activities.

In June 1947, following our fifth reunion, Betsy, Helen, Sudie, Martha, Elsie, Gege, Becky, Jean, Hank, and I started a round 10bin letter which has circulated without a break since that time. It is a wonderful way to keep in touch and I am telling you this because some of you might like to adopt the idea.

That winds up another '42 journal until the next time when I hope to have news of each and everyone of you. Please drop me a line. For now "fair flowers" so long.

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: ANNE McJunkin (Mrs. Frank E. Briber, Jr.) 8103 W. Bluemound Road, Milwaukee 13, Wisconsin.

The class seems to be simmering down considerably, but I can still scrape up a couple of new news items; a new wedding and a new baby (two different girls, though our groom is very familiar with the nursery). The wedding was Anne Mitchell's to Everett Albyn and took place in the fall. Anne says, "He is in the nursery (tree) business and we have fixed over an old house near Newark, Ohio." The baby belongs to "On ja" Adams Bush; a valentine that couldn't wait, in the form of Jeannette Seaman Bush who arrived February 13.

Also while in the infant department Lynn Emerick Huidekoper says she heard via the grapevine (which can you know become very tangled) that M. G. Smith Burgess has had daughter No. 3. Meanwhile Lynn says she is busy enough with her own two, Nellie and Ros. She and Huide expect to go to Virginia Beach for their vacation this summer as they had such a good time there last year. She had recently seen Logan Shearer who had a favorable report on wife Snookie Campbell and young Liz.

Good news from a couple of ex 43ers. A card from Jean Latham Jones tells of her two children, Martha 4, and Bobby, Jr., 2. She says they are at "a cute but difficult age"—but then aren't all ages?—at least difficult? Jean luckily has full time help now so she can relax occasionally.

I went to a very spiffy and well managed lunchenn and fashion show the other day only to discover Jeanne Claybrook Collier announcing. She looked very snappy herself and told me afterwards that she and another girl have been running a series of such shows for some time. She lives near Posy Hazard Potter whom she says has a child now (when and what variety, please, Posy?) and sees Mary Belle Lee off and on.

Nancy Pingree Drake's beginning months in Portland have been a bit hectic between settling and handling a sick child so they missed a charity Valentine Ball for which Judy Snow Benoit had been working on decorations.

Being at the end of my news I have just called all Baltimore Briarites for padding. Page Ruth Foster helpfully managed to drag out some short bits; Harriet Pullen Phillips has moved back to Pittsburgh again having been in Detroit for a while; Scottie Simmons McConnell is taking a secretarial course; and Ann Noyes is working for a new Senate Judiciary Committee. She had also had a letter from Francoise Yoe Schneider who is in McKinney, Texas, where her husband is a resident in general surgery. They have a 4-year-old son. Page herself is always at one thing or another, her immediate occupation being a television theatre show in which she has the part of a kleptomaniac.

Mary Law Taylor hops back and forth between Saranac where her husband is, and here where her children are. Mrs. Schmeisser had little to help me with about Betty except that she found keeping care of their little home in Cranford, New Jersey, a full time job.

I have seen Mary Miller Naquin, '40, Jean Blount, '40, and Margaret Leonard Baker ex 42, all of whom have moved to Baltimore recently, but their news of our class is nil in I'll just sign off and go back to my job-hunting (i.e. the kind you get paid for. I have been spending a lot of time volunteering at a local hospital) and I am not going to apologize for the dearth of material this time as for once I feel little of the responsibility. After all, two cards returned out of 12 sent is not a very good percentage. Help, please!

I don't see how I could have, but I almost forgot to include a nice long letter from Betty Lawrie Kimbrough, Her life has been so complicated I filed the letter for reference and then almost forgot to refer. Anyhow in August Dick was promoted and sent to Chicago, so they sold their home in Detroit, and Lawrie went to her mother's while he was house hunting. Said hunt was unsuccessful, but Lawrie did see Weezie Woodruff Angst on a visit and says she looks wonderfully. Finally in November Dick rented a house in Barrington . . , 53 miles out of Chicago. Here they had no water or plumbing for two weeks, which proved pretty complicated with two young children, but trust Lawrie to find ways and means, such as bathing the baby in the electric roaster. But then three weeks later Dick was offered a better job and took it. And guess what . . . the new company sent him back to Detroit. So back she went to her mother's and the house hunt was on again. This time they found what Lawrie terms an "architectural abor-' but very comfortable. Dick is regional sales manager for Bell and Hnwell over Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan. In the spring Betty expects to go to Louisville with him and look up some S. B. C. ites. Meanwhile she has seen Canville Guyton Guething since being back in Detroit. Can you imagine a more hectic five months and do you wonder I didn't count on my memory to relay it? I wouldn't be surprised to hear she is in Chicago by now. But she does seem to find time for other things as she says, "I'm the usual baggy housewife . . . with the usual volunteer jobs-Junior League, Red Cross, and on the board of a settlement house."

Class Secretary: MARTHA HOLTON, 2318 Densmore Drive, Toledo, Ohio. Fund Agent: Audrey Betts, 211 West Fisher Avenue. Greensboro. North Carolina.

Carol Cox MacKinnon recently had a baby boy but as yet the name is unknown to me. She is living in Belleville, New Jersey.

Julie Mills Jacobsen moved into a house in Washington last June and from the sound of her letter she is expecting to make something out of the first backyard she's had in years.

Betty Gray Gray (yes, that's the right name!) is having a busy time getting settled in her apartment in Cleveland. I gather she's in just about as much of a tizzy now as she was before she was married.

Jane McJunkin announced her engagement to David Hoffman in January and expects to be married April 14. David is a Charleston bey and they expect to live there.

Harriet (Pooch) Porcher Barnwell had a little girl, Acton Porcher Barnwell, but 1 can't give you the exact date.

Betty Cocke was married in January to David Atwood Wright and is now living in New York City.

If yours truly has neglected to mention Betty Zulick's wedding 'way back in October, she hereby sends out a public apology. She married Donald Reuter and had a Bermuda honeymoon. Zu is now living in a white cottage somewhere in Pennsylvania. I hope that someday she'll come down out of the clouds and send me her new address.

Jean Moores, Jane McJunkin and Susan Buchanan Coupland all went to Perk Traugott's wedding last October but more detailed information is lacking.

Jodie Morgan has a new job—very fascinating according to Jodie. She has a new name—"Miss Frances West"—and is the Personal Shopper in a "gorgeous new department store" in Charleston. She has more fun spending other people's money.

Doe Fagg made a trip to New York in the early part of March, but the deadline rolled around before I could get many details.

Frances Bickers Pinnell has been living in her new home for about a year. Her address is 353 Albemarle Avenue, Richmond. Buck is still in law school but expects to finish this summer. Daughter Anne is two years old now and manages to keep her parents busy answering questions.

Edith Page Gill is engaged to Stanley Breakell and expects to be married on April 30. Edic Page is busy getting their apartment ready besides making plans for a wedding.

Betty Carbaugh Mann sounds like she is doing herself proud. She was on a Quiz show when she and husband Jimmy were in New York City on a business trip and she won an easy chair and a portable ironer. Jimmy is the Divisional Merchandise Manager in one of Chattanooga's best department stores.

Recently the Toledo Alumnæ group had a card party and I was more or less chairman of the event. (We came out $50.00 to the good fortunately). Besides the party I had this letter to get into the Alumnæ Office. I also took a Notary Public exam (and passed it).

On top of all that I'm trying to make up my mind how to decorate my new house so that it will be half-way habitable when I get married on April 2. And to top it all off, I am trying to work 8 hours a day, so that if I seem a bit vague in my news letter, I hope you'll bear with me.

Class Secretary: ARIANA C. JONES, 8 Greenholm, Princeton, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: MARY VINTON, 1885 Peabody, Memphis, Tennessee.

Spring must be nearly here-Cupid's doings are playing a very important part in '46'ers' lives. Bea Dingwell was one of the loveliest of brides when she became Mrs. Dickson Loos on February 19. Betsy Gurley Hewson was one of her bridesmaids. It was like old times to hear Bertha Lee sing and we all had a wonderful surprise when the organist, Helen Graeff, played a very elegant version of the Sweet Briar Song, Also on hand to send Bea and Dick Bermudaward in a shower of rice were Miss McLean, Anne Ricks, Kay Vance, Jo Neal, Bev Randolph, Jane Pickens Church, and yours truly. Bea and Dick will live in Washington where Dick will practice law. (He learned just four days before the wedding that he had passed his bar exam!).

Nobody would have been surprised if Randi had caught the bouquet after seeing the diamond on her third finger, left hand. Her fiance is Bill Knight. Their plans are not too definite yet, but may include living a while in Japan.

Patricia Arms has announced her engagement to J. Ashley Brown, Jr., of Westfield, New Jersey. Her fiance graduated from Lawrenceville and Wesleyan and is with J. Walter Thompson advertising firm.

Louise Crawford is making plans for an April wedding. Catherine Smart writes that she is thrilled to be one of Lou's bridesmaids.

The report on Libby Ryland's wedding is a little late as she was married to William W.

Groner on September 11. After a honeymoon at Hot Springs they are settled in Philadelphia while Bill attends the Wharton School of Finance. They hope to take a trip through Virginia, of course, stopping at Sweet Briar before returning to Kansas City this June.

Monk Witherspoon Brannan is another temporary Easterner this winter as her navy husband is now stationed in New York City, Carroll Cone Cozart writes that about a year ago she and Bob decided that Florida is really the garden spot of America and that they love living in Tampa. Carroll's sister, who is now at Sweet Briar, keeps her up-to-date on all the campus news.

Clara Nicol Moore has become an enthusiastic Texan. Clara and Al have temporarily moved from Beaumont to Sweetwater where Al is gaining some valuable seismograph experience with one of Sun Oil's field crews. It sounds like the real West with plenty of red sand and cactus. They have been busy Kem-toning and varnishing their apartment. Nick also wrote of the fascinating time she had acting in a Clare Tree Major Company, the road company of "All My Sons," and the Detroit Dramatic Guild; all 'way back before her marriage, naturally.

Flash!! Ann Hill Edwards presented '46

Flash!! Ann Hill Edwards presented '46 with a future Sweet Briar beau on February 12. His name is Preston Hill Edwards and he is blond, handsome, and good as gold.

You'll be hearing from me again in June and I hope to receive loads of letters and postals from you before then.

Fund Agent: Frances Gardner, North Shore Point, Algonquin Park, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

Ann Colston, who is still working with the Cletreland Plain Dealer, has just been promoted to the Club Department of that paper. Colston is planning to go abroad in July. She is taking a course in photography so that she will be sure to get good shots of European points of interest. Colston's letter also informed me that Becky Knapp is doing welfare work with children and loves it dearly. Liz Ripley and Maria Tucker are employed at the Art Museum and Jackie Schreck is employed at the Eldred Theatre.

Sammy McMullen Lindsey is now living on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Emily Schuber is writing a front page column for the Asheville paper; the column is called "With the Women." Helen Hardy is employed as a secretary in Louisville with Embry and Sons.

Stu McGuire is taking a course in advertising art. She and Bozzy (Eleanor Bosworth) are going abroad this June. They are planning to start their tour in England and then go to the continent. Colston, whose trip was mentioned above, is beginning her experience abroad in Italy. I'm thinking tentatively of going to Europe this summer, too, but seriously doubt if this will materialize beyond the idea stage.

Margaret "Munn" Munnerlyn writes very enthusiastically about her job. She is teaching in high school in Jacksonville. I think she is teaching atomic energy. Her class has started a library on atomic energy. She is keeping in touch with her friends in Europe by mail; some of them have come to this country for visits and Munn is having a grand time seeing them. She is doing a lot of traveling; she has been to Princeton and New York and Tampa, where she attended the Gasparilla Festivities, and had a wonderful time. Munn's letter was really inspiring, and I just wish I could publish it as the part on atomic energy is very informative.

Sue Fitzgerald is working in Washington. She is teaching music at Sidwell Friends School, and she reports she loves the city and her job. She found Joan Littleford who is working at the Pentagon Building as a secretary. Cecil Butler likes her job as secretary for a Florida Representative. Sue and Kay Fitzgerald attended Maria Gregory's wedding on February 26. Maria went to Bermuda for her wedding trip. Kay Fitzgerald informed me that Laura Lee Grogan was married to Meade B. Crane and lives in Fort Worth.

I am working for the State Legislature here in Raleigh. Just love it, and love being here in Raleigh.

Fund Agent: Anne Ricks, 1506 Westwood Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Maddin is recovering slowly from an attack of spinal meningitis which struck her soon after her return from the February Council meeting.

It is with trembling hand that your respectful class secretary turns from the intricacies of the income tax form to the task of recording the activities of the youngest members of the Alumnæ Association. I feel impelled to get squared away with you all over the absence of news of '48 in the last issue. Ricky, who has been spending the week-end with Nancy and me in to attend Bea Dingwell's wedding, tells me that she has been accused of grossest misrepresentation, since her fund-raising letters all promied more news in the next three issues. The only explanation for the omission is simply that I went home for Christmas on my shield, so to speak, with a mean case of glandular fever, and by the time I had recovered sufficiently to gather news, the February issue had gone to press. 'Twon't happen again, I promise.

Christmas time was a good time to glean a few pearls from Christmas greetings, and I did appreciate it. As for engagements, weddings and births, all columns are reported gaining. Barrett announced her engagement to "Hurd" this summer; Liz Hooks, to Bill Richards; and Phil Thorpe, to "Judge" Miller. The latest news is that Sammy has set April 23 as the date of her marriage to Dr. Sam Upchurch. This spring-like air is full of rumors, but the cardinal rule of class secretaries is to print only confirmed news, so your correspondent is regretfully sitting this one out on her hands.

Anne Litton Rowland became Mrs. James Richard Tuck on September 17 in Louisville. Rucker became the bride of Mr. Tazewell Ellett, III, on October 15 in Richmond. Bridesmaids included Ces Youmans, Sally Smith, and Closey Faulkner.

December brides were Tee Snider and Nita Minchew. Tee was married on December 21 to Billy Martin with Allen Hobbs and Wayne Stokes in the wedding party. The following day Nita and Ralph Faulk were married in Waycross, Georgia. Wedding guests included fellow-Bitter-Suite-ites Felicia Jackson, Betsy Plunkett, and Diane King, as well as Suzanne Hardy and Warren and Twink Elliott Sockwell. B'Lou Lupton attended pre-wedding festivities, but had to get back to Chattanooga for her own debut. The Faulks are now living in Lexington. Suzy, incidentally, had just returned from Mexico where she had spent an inspiring fall working with the Friends.

February 1 was another big day as it was marked by Ruth Street's marriage to Charlie Ide and Peggy Sheffield's to Tom Martin, Martha Davis and Sammy were among the bridesmaids at the latter event.

As for the alumnæ's children, Anne McCaffrey McBrian is the mother of a daughter, Sarah, born in mid-October.

Nancy Moses has been busy debutanting, while Mary Jo Armstrong has settled down after an exciting European whirl to a life of scating the patients away from her father's office in her role as receptionist. Blair Graves is teaching music in Roanoke and Weezie, as you probably know, is back at Sweet Briar working on the Junior Year Plan.

It is always hard to write of these matters, but we were all terribly shocked and saddened by the death of Vicky Brock's brother, Charlie, in an accident this fall.

Jacky Jackson is doing graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania and Ces Youmans at Columbia. Nancy and I received the surprise of our lives a couple of weeks ago when Jo Neal called us. She's living just up the street from us while doing research for her M.A. from the University of Chicago on the Sociology of Music.

If we only stay here long enough, it's beginning to look like we'll get the chance to play hostess to all of you. At least we hope so. At Christmas time Steve and Janie Leach Cromwell and Dick and Ginny Wurzbach Vardy appeared. The Cromwells are living in Charlottesville, of course, and the Vardys in Pensacola, although they're expecting to be sent to Corpus Christi soon.

Lyn Irvine was down recently for a weekend, and she, McCall, Liz Barbour, Nancy Betty Kernan, and I made our shaky ceiling quiver with "Now We're Sitting on the Golden Stairs." Lyn is muchly improved and is busy rehabilitating small, underprivileged beys. Maddin also paid us a quick visit last week. She had been up to Sweet Briar for the Alumnæ Council's Meeting.

Kax also passed through Washington this week. In fact, Nancy just saw her off to Mexico this afternoon. She's been up Nawth all winter playing continuously in the Brattle Theater in Cambridge, Massachusetts, but is going home for a short visit. She expects to return to do summer theater work in June.

"MA TOMS' WATERMELON RIND PICKLE formula was chosen after trying seventy old recipes to find the one of best flavor, color and texture. The recipe chosen is over one hundred years old. The rind pieces are large, cut 1½-inches square, pale green and cooked clear, cloves the outstanding spice. Tender to cut, an experience to eat."

"MA TOMS' HUNTERS' PEPPER RELISH, one of the oldest varieties of pickle known in the South. Here again, dozens of recipes were tried before the condiment was ready to go places by mail."

Not only "painless" but pleasant
... a pleasure every Sweet Briar
Alumna will relish.

DEAR ALUMNAE:

Perhaps you noticed in a recent issue of that famous magazine devoted to fine foods—Gourmet—a very wonderful tribute to certain Old Virginia delicacies?

If so, you must have felt a few nostalgic longings, for Old Virginia food. In fact, the people responsible for these particular delicacies live in a tiny village only 30 miles from the college. It's a place called Shipman, Virginia—maybe you remember? Well back in the mountains and definitely rural! Yet that most sophisticated of magazines Gourmet went all out in praise of their products.

Here's the way the Gourmet article starts out:

"A symphony of good smells comes from country cellars with their bins of sobersided potatoes, fragrant apples in bunks, canned fruits and vegetables on the banging shelves a dim gleam in the balf-light. If it's old-time jellies and pickles you search, write to John Toms, Inc., Shipman, Virginia. He sells jellies and relishes, made by Old South recipes but in an all-modern kitchen..."

And then Gourmet's own food specialist, Clementine Paddleford tells you in detail about her favorites. You can read exactly what she wrote elsewhere on this page.

But first, let me explain just how we are able to make the very unusual offer that means money in the coffers of your Alumnae Association. You see, it's only recently that the John and Ma Toms people started to sell their pickles and jellies.

In spite of all the praise they've won, they're just a back-in-the-hills outfit. They haven't yet enough money to go in for one of those high-pressure promotions.

They need more business—just as we (the Alumnae Association) need more money — and so-o-o-o, that's how we struck our bargain!

From now on, John and Ma Toms and the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association are "business partners." We share the profits on every jar of Ma Toms' Pickles and Jellies you purchase.

As a result, you can now enjoy just the kind of real Old Virginia delicacies—and at the same time, with every toothsome mouthful, you can tell yourself that your pleasure is our profit.

So please, please, do cut out the order blank on this page and send it in today! You can order as many cartons or cases as you like. They'll look wonderful on your pantry shelves —taste wonderful at meals—and bring back wonderful memories of the old days here at Sweet Briar.

SWEET BRIAR WANTS YOUR PUBLICATIONS

All colleges are intensely interested in publications of their alumnae. This interest is not at all a sentimental one. There is actually a very real desire on the part of the administration and faculty to see the visible result of their teaching efforts. Your published works show this as definitely as your professional accomplishments or your community activities. Since the logical spot for housing such a collection is in the library, the librarian is one of the most interested members of your public.

In the MARY HELEN COCHRAN LIBRARY there are very few of your writings. At the present time, these are not kept together in one place, but are classified where they will be most used. I should like to see this collection grow. Eventually it should be kept together in one room.

DEAN LYMAN RESIGNS

Dean Mary Ely Lyman has been elected to the faculty of Union Theological Seminary as Jesup Professor of English Bible and will terminate her services as Dean and professor of Religion at Sweet Briar in 1950.

Graduating from Mt. Holyoke College in 1911, Dr. Lyman received the Bachelor of Divinity degree at Union Seminary, magna cum laude, in 1919. The year after graduation was spent in postgraduate study at Cambridge University, England. Beginning her teaching career at Vassar College, she was a member of the Faculty there from 1920-1926. In 1924 she was awarded the Doctor of Philosophy degree at the University of Chicago. In 1926 she married Dr. Eugene W. Lyman. From 1928-1940 she was Lecturer in English Bible at Union Seminary and Associate in Religion at Barnard College.

Dr. Lyman is the author of a number of books including Paul the Conqueror, Knowledge of God in Johannine Thought, The Fourth Gospel and the Life of Today, The Christian Epic, Jesus, and "The Liberal Spirit in the New Testament" in the symposium Liberal Theology. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis, and of the National Association of Biblical Instructors, of which she was the President in 1945. She holds the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from Mt. Holyoke College and Roanoke College.

BOARD OF OVERSEERS ELECTS NEW PRESIDENT

SALLY SHALLENBERGER BROWN, '32,

New Alumna Member

Archibald G. Robertson, Richmond attorney, was elected president for a six-year term of the Board of Directors and Overseers of Sweet Briar College at its annual spring meeting held at the college on May 28. He succeeds the Right Reverend Beverley D. Tucker, Jr., Bishop of Ohio, of Cleveland, who has resigned as president but will continue as a member of the Board. Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College, is serving a term as vice-president of the Board, and Rowland Lea of Agricola was reelected secretary.

Dr. Meta Glass of Charlottesville, president emeritus of the college, whose term as a member of the Board of Overseers expired, was reelected for a period of six years, and Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown of Louisville, Kentucky, was chosen for the same period to succeed Mrs. Richard E. Barnes of Cleveland, Ohio, as one of two alumnae representatives on the Board of Overseers.

Mr. Robertson, who has been a member of the Board of Overseers since May, 1941, and was elected to the Board of Directors in 1942, is associated with the law firm of Hunton, Williams, Anderson, Gay and Moore. A native of Staunton, he received his LL.B. degree from the University of Virginia. His daughter, Margaret Robertson, was graduated from Sweet Briar in 1947.

Mrs. Brown, the former Sara Shallenberger, is a graduate of Sweet Briar in the class of 1932. She was a member of the Alumnae Council from 1946-48 and for the past two years has served as an alumna representative on the Endowment Committee of the Board of Overseers.

Miss Lucas Announces Appointment of New Dean

A great honor came to Sweet Briar College in May when our Dean, Mrs. Eugene William Lyman, was offered the Jesup Chair of English Bible at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, effective with the completion of the 1949-50 session at Sweet Briar. But like most honors, it required an equally great sacrifice by this college and by those of us who have had the privilege and joy of working with Dean Lyman during the years of her service as Dean and Professor of Religion here. We are gratefully aware that this college has been singularly blessed in having as Dean and Professor of Religion since 1940 one of the world's finest scholars, teachers, counselors and human beings. The benefits which Dean Lyman has brought to our college have been far reaching and manifold. Her influence will not only remain with us but will, I believe, increase with the years.

In setting about to find Dean Lyman's successor, I requested recommendations from the Faculty as well as a committee elected by that group to assist the Administration in the selection. Student representatives were also invited to submit a list of the qualifications which they wished the Faculty Committee and Administration to use as one of their guides in the selection of the new Dean.

The outcome was more pleasing than surprising for it had been uncomfortably evident from the interest manifested in members of our Faculty by dean-seeking colleges during the last few years, that Sweet Briar was rumored to have unusually fine "dean material."

The many letters which came from our Faculty, recommending Dr. Mary J. Pearl in the highest terms as Sweet Briar's next Dean, gave convincing evidence to the Faculty Committee and to the Administration that Dr. Pearl's qualifications far outweighed those of other persons whom the group considered. It was evident, moreover, that Sweet Briar was in the unique position of having the opportunity of offering its deanship to one of its most distinguished professors who had rendered the college invaluable service for more than two decades and whose work as Acting Dean had afforded the college a "preview" which had met with what appeared as a landslide of approbation.

The Faculty Committee was unanimously agreed in recommending Dr. Pearl as Dean Lyman's successor, a conclusion in which I most heartily concurred. The Board of Overseers of the College has indicated its formal approval of Dr. Pearl's appointment. I believe that this appointment will have decidedly salutary effects upon the future strength and welfare of the college. Dr. Pearl is 49 years of age, and hails from the state of Michigan. She holds the B.A. degree from the University of Michigan, the A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Michigan. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She joined the Sweet Briar Faculty in 1928 as instructor in Greek and Latin and has, in her 21 years of service here, been advanced to Full Professor and Chairman of the Department of Greek and Latin, as well as to the chairmanship of the Committee on Instruction and, during 1948-49, to the acting deanship of the College. The Board of Overseers approved at its May meeting a sabbatical leave for Dr. Pearl for the coming year. She will assume the responsibilities of the deanship on July 1, 1950, upon Mrs. Lyman's departure for Union Theological Seminary.

How Can a Liberal Education Develop a Sense of Moral Responsibility

by Martha B. Lucas

Delivered at Goucher College, May 7, 1949, as part of a symposium on "Building the Future Through 1 ducation." The program was part of the inauguration ceremonies of Dr. Otto Kraushaar as president of Goucher.

W E ARE hearing from many sides these days that the schools and colleges must take over increasingly the job of educating our young people for moral responsibility. No longer, we are told, can we depend upon the home, the church and society in general to prepare the young for responsible living in the modern world. It is pointed out that most of our students in the schools and colleges come from communities which, compared with those of earlier days, are morally barren. Through the disruption of family life and of neighborhood kinship, the community can no longer exert social pressures which have perhaps served in the past as steadying influences upon the moral development of the young. The children of today know little if anything of what their fathers do to provide livelihood for the family. Business has become progressively impersonal and progressively amoral, by virtue of the loss of person-to-person obligation, gathering as we do in these days primarily along the production belts of industry and professional services. It is not unusual to be reminded of a time when "the old time religion" was the principal factor in molding personality. Dean Wallace Donham (formerly of the Harvard Business School), in his book, Education For Responsible Living, has put it this way—and, I fear, not without a certain nostalgia:

"In the good old days, before organized religion lost so much of its sanction, the fear of Hell and the hope of Salvation were potent forces in maintaining individual character and community standards, just as service to others was at least ideally an integral part of the religious life. Muchof the purpose of the college and a large part of the behavior and purpose of individuals was dominated by a sense that this life was preparation for life in the hereafter. Men lived under a sense of responsibility to God. The fear of Hell and the hope of Salvation have less hold now, while the ideal of service has become for too many a cold ethical rather than a warm religious concept."

Unlike Dean Donham, a good many of us would probably feel that moral responsibility for mature living must rest upon firmer foundations than religious attitudes of fear and the hope of personal escape from damnation by avenging diety. A society desiring its young people to develop altruistically moral viewpoints would indeed be well rid of the limited world-view and the lack of spiritual insights which such attitudes imply. But how can society, through its homes, its churches and its educational institutions lead its young people toward individual and social responsibility at a higher level of spiritual insights and one more consonant with our world view of the twentieth century? We in the liberal arts colleges must concern ourselves vitally and urgently with this question if we are to give our best service to the Good Society of the future. How can liberal education develop a mature sense of that which we in the twentieth century see as true moral responsibility?

Traditionally, and essentially, a liberal education is that kind of education which liberates the mind and frees the mind from bondage. We are by nature the slaves of our emotions. From earliest childhood we are "kicked around" by our own whims, impulses, and conflicting temptations. Of course our homes and our schools and our churches all try, according to their lights, to free us from emotional slavery; but the college comes in for a very large share of the responsibility in the liberation. As our minds become disciplined by liberal art studies, we begin to make decisions and to act in terms of our whole personalities, in terms of an integration of our desires, instead of letting some one emotion overwhelm the rest of our personality. Then there is the second kind of bondage from which a liberal education should serve as the special emancipator. This is the bondage arising from our acquired prejudices and misconceptions, from ignorance and narrowness of mind. Freedom from this second bondage can, it would seem, come only with a comprehensive view of the nature of human beings, our history and our hopes, as related to the universe in which we live. In other words, liberal education should enable us to gain perspective. And this perspective, in turn, should give us freedom of choice. Instead of seeing only one side of a question, we begin to see other possible sides and to base our choice upon a weighing of values rather than upon our own ignorance and prejudice. Without these two freedoms, freedom from emotional slavery and from the tyranny of prejudice, we cannot become the mature, responsible human beings so desperately needed by our world today. When Aristotle first used the term, "liberal education," he intended it to mean that kind of education which makes men virtuous, or in his meaning, excellent, both intellectually and ethically. In is an essential part of the historical tradition of liberal education that it should be the kind of education which gives perspective to enable human beings to make morally responsible decisions for themselves and for society.

So much for the traditional goals of liberal education, but new occasions bring new duties. The demands of our present world make it imperative, in my opinion, that we in the liberal arts colleges greatly expand our concepts of moral responsibility. Codes of tribal morality, national morality, or master-race morality are no longer defensible as bases for responsible action in the modern world. If liberal education is to meet the demands now being made upon it, we must do our full part in revitalizing democratic ideals, in imparting to our students a better understanding of the hopes and needs of the other peoples of the world, and in giving our students an opportunity to develop toward mature appreciations of spiritual values.

But how to set about the implementation of broadened moral concepts in order to enable our colleges to meet the pressing demands of our world today? It goes without saying that curricular revisions and additions are necessary at many points. Last winter a very long and very significant report was published by our government concerning "higher education for American democracy," a report with which all of us are quite familiar by now. This report of the President's Commission on Higher Education had a great deal to say about what we should be doing in the colleges of America to educate for broadened understanding and social cooperation. In the words of the report:

"American institutions of higher education have an enlarged responsibility for the diffusion of ideas in the world that is emerging. They will have to help our own citizens as well as other peoples to move from the provincial and insular mind to the international mind."

According to the thinking of the members of the President's Commission certain important innovations must be made if our people are to move from this insular to the international mind. We must, they say, provide expanded opportunities in our colleges for the critical and analytical study of other civilizations and cultures than our own. In the thinking of the Commission, revolutionary changes in our educational program are particularly and urgently needed in these United States because of the new and tremendous responsibilities which we must now take in world affairs. "But," as the report puts it, "the American people are not adequately prepared for world citizenship (or leadership). The new role has come upon us so suddenly that we approach it with hesitation instead of with an exciting vision of its possibilities. Our thinking still bears marks of provincialism. We tend to see other countries and peoples in our own image, and to view them with suspicion or dismiss them as inferior and backward when we find them different from ourselves." The report makes a sweeping condemnation of much of our traditional teaching in this country. It insists that in the past our liberal arts colleges have stressed the history, arts, and institutions of western culture and overlooked or largely disregarded the civilizations of other parts of the world. If we are to educate for world awareness and enlarged moral responsibility, we must enable our people to see their own civilization in the larger context of world history and many cultures. We must acquire a sympathetic understanding of the values and aspirations which determine the thinking and the acting of human beings in the vast areas of eastern Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, and the islands of the many seas. We must study the Orient, for example, not as a remote and antique culture but as a living and dynamic factor in our present world.

MISS MARTHA B. LUCAS

No one of us, I am sure, has been spared the embarrassing experience of hearing, in church or lecture auditorium, extravagant claims made for insights and revelations believed by the speaker to be a unique contribution to the world from Western culture. Nor can we expect enlightened appreciation of universal aspirations and revelations of truth from those who have been limited by their cultural patterns and by traditional intolerance of "foreign" viewpoints to a preoccupation with the development of their own culture. It may be that future generations of Christendom will continue to berate the infidel and unbeliever the while they claim exclusive insights into the nature of reality as Love and of society as universal brotherhood. It seems to me that we who claim to be the devoted servants of truth, and ply our profession as leaders of the young, have only ourselves to blame if our curricula of studies and the passion for truth which we try to kindle are so wanting that our students do not escape from the narrow bondage of our traditional culture. For us to fail in our responsibility so completely as to make it possible for college students in the middle of the twentieth century to fare forth into the world without an enlightened and inspired sense of the universal search for the meaning of God and the Good Life which they share with all mankind is indeed to do a grave disservice to the hope for understanding and peace, and indeed, for human survival.

The picture is not entirely grim and gray. Much is being thought and planned by educational leaders in these days which should serve to promote vastly increased awareness of the world and an enlarged sense of moral responsibility. Many current investigations of curricula needs, much present planning, will have far-reaching effects in the years to come. But, in addition to revising and expanding our curriculum, what should we be doing now in our colleges and universities to promote larger awareness and responsibility? Basically, we can work with all our hearts and minds toward an affirmation, in keeping with recent proclamations by UNESCO and the United Nations, of the human rights and fundamental freedoms for all the peoples of the world, even for our own compatriots and neighbors who may differ from us in religion or in race. It would, undoubtedly, be more convincing for our students if we who teach and lead the young actually ordered our lives as if we really believed it to be so—as if we really condemned the blind and bigoted treatment of minority groups in this country, for the Nazi master-racism that it is.

Of course most of us who teach know perfectly well that no abstract proposition like "basis rights" or "fundamental freedoms" can be a dependable bulwark of the mind unless it has been tested and tried and found good. If our students are to have an underlying faith in these great ideas, a faith which can produce moral and responsible action in society, they must see clearly how the great ideas have come to men's minds. They must have the opportunity of knowing other people, with other backgrounds and other opinions than their own. They must learn the values to all of giving a fair hearing to each. They must learn what we have perhaps euphemistically called the "American way." They must learn that personal freedom is inseparable from responsibility to others. It is imperative, I believe, that we who teach in the colleges should strive constantly to give our students the greatest possible opportunity to participate in the planning and the policy making for our communities. When policy is made behind closed doors and the will of the few is imposed by decree upon the many, we are missing one of the best means available to us of educating for responsible living. We all know the hindrances and the headaches of trying to put such a democratic ideal into action; but that does not detract from the validity of the procedure! A check through the student handbooks of most of our colleges indicates unmistakably that Student Government processes could be used very much more effectively than they have been used in the past in guiding students toward responsible freedoms.

In addition to the need of revitalizing democratic ideals and of imparting to our students an understanding of the other two and a half billion people in the world, I have referred to the necessity, as I see it, of giving our students greater opportunity of developing toward mature appreciation of spiritual values. This last is, to my way of thinking, necessarily the keystone of a fully rounded program of education for moral responsibility. It is imperative that we have a clear formulation of principles, a statement of faith, which can provide the integration and the sense of direction for our liberal colleges today which we "lost with our lost gods" of church affiliation. This is not to be interpreted as nostalgic longing for Dean Donham's "good old days," when the fear of Hell and hope of salvation dominated, in his words, "much of the purpose of the college and a large part of the behavior and purpose of individuals." I believe that we must and can formulate a guiding faith free of involvements with sectarian dogmatisms and in keeping with a level of spiritual awareness far beyond the customary reach of the credos of organized religious groups. I suppose that, when all's said and done, such a guiding faith finds its best and most effective expression in great teaching, in that kind of teaching which lights the flame of devoted search for Truth and self-dedication to the service of the Good.

Such faith, moreover, must become a moral force in the world, if mankind is to have the chance to know what Man may yet become. Within the last year I have heard the challenge voiced with particular emphasis; and I should like to pass it on to you now. I happened to attend last August a conference in Utrecht, Holland, where delegates of 33 countries, delegates who represented the universities and colleges of those countries, were assembled by UNESCO. Our assignment was to ponder the problem of relating the universities of the world more effectively in an all-out struggle for lasting peace. We met in the conference halls of the University of Utrecht, where over two centuries ago the Treaty of Utrecht was signed. It was our hope that we might help bring to pass among the peoples of the world an understanding which would far outlast those temporary truces between nations which have always been the fragile fruit of the so-called "peace" councils and their border juggling agreements. The work group in which I participated, as a delegate from the United States, had as its special problem the question of how the universities might supplement their programs in order to promote more effectively an international meeting of minds. Our group was chaired by a very famous gentleman from Brazil, Professor Paulo E de Berredo Carneiro. His introductory comment, in which he shared with us his confession of faith was this:

"The world has been drawn closer together materially by modern means of transport and communications; but it is more than ever divided spiritually by cultural and ideological antagonisms . . . Only a great intellectual and moral force, entirely free and independent of the temporal powers, could succeed in reestablishing order and in creating that 'society of minds' without which no human community can long exist. If the universities of the world fail to rise to the level of this task, the material forces will take possession of the destinies of mankind and will lead civilization from one catastrophe to another, ultimately to complete ruin. There is still time," he concluded, "to assert the supremacy of intelligence and the brotherhood of man; but we are standing on the verge of irremediable disaster."

Atomic jitters? I think not. But rather a considered evaluation, in the light of history, of the grave responsibility which we have in educating toward moral responsibility.

Report of the Alumnae Secretary

THE fiscal year 1948-49 makes the second one in which the present Alumnae Secretary has held office. In general no outstanding changes in policy should be noted. The main objective as in the previous year has been to increase the outflow of information to Sweet Briar's former students with the hope that added knowledge will mean added interest, and to see that the facilities of the Alumnae Office are available to and used by more individuals and clubs.

Much effort has been spent in revising and cleaning out files. This is tedious detailed work, since it is important to distinguish between what is needed for perminent record and what is only of temporary value. The more than 5,000 plates for the addressograph machine were all cut by the spring of 1948, yet from September to November there were more than 500 changes.

Miss Sue Francis joined the Alumnae Office staff August 15 upon the resignation of Miss Betty Van Aken.

The Alumnae Office books were audited for the first time, audit being performed by the same firm which handles all the college auditing.

Eighteen mailings, three of 1500 and fifteen of 5000, have been handled by the office staff to date. This includes 4 issues of the Alumnae News, 4 fund appeals, 4 News Letters, 3 magazine subscription appeals, the Sweet Briar Day mailing, Alumnae Conference invitations, and reunion notice and ballot. In addition, countless pieces of first class mail were mailed from the office each week, as well as multitudinous address checkups, etc.

The Alumnae Office engages in several small businesses, the sale of magazine subscriptions, china, place mats, matches, jams and jellies, playing cards, in addition to the detailed work in connection with the Alumnae Fund.

PUBLICATIONS

Beginning in the fall of 1948, the Sweet Briar News Letter has been sent to all alumnae. Four issues were mailed this year. Since the ALUMNAE NEWS is sent to all alumnae only in October, the News Letter is of real value in keeping alumnae informed of college activities.

The Alumnae News won a first place award in the national alumni magazine contest of the American Alumni Council, for quality of content and excellence of opinion. It won a second place for covers.

ALUMNAE CLUBS

A special effort has been made this year within Alumnae Clubs to establish continuing "Alumnae Representative Committees" to work with the Committee on Admission. Before the war individual alumnae served the college in a similar fashion, but if they moved from a given city, their usefulness to the Committee on Admission usually ended. To date 45 such committees have been formed. The Alumnae Office, the Admissions Office and the Public Relations Office have assumed the responsibility of seeing that the chairmen of Alumnae Representative Committees have the needed college publications and that frequent contact is kept with the committees to instill enthusiasm, and to keep alumnae abreast of college activities.

Each committee is given lists of schools within its area from which Sweet Briar has had applicants and/or students, and one Sweet Briar alumna, preferably a graduate of the given prep school, is assigned to each school. They are expected to make themselves known to principals and guidance officers, see that catalogues, scholarship posters are available, and are urged to offer their services to interested students, giving general information about Sweet Briar. They are expected to represent the college at College Days and to assist college representatives in planning visits, and if possible to accompany them to the various schools. The Alumnae Representative Committees serve the triple purpose of informing alumnae more fully about Sweet Briar, of constructively aiding the Committee on Admission, and of interesting college trained women in the problems of secondary education.

The aim of alumnae program planning has been to arouse interest in secondary education on the part of our former students, this being closely allied with alumnae representative work. The ALUMNAE NEWS is used as a medium for setting forth program objectives, with reading lists, and articles by alumnae prominent in the field of education, and by non-alumnae educators. Regional chairmen for Alumnae Clubs, who are members of the Alumnae Council, serve as liaison workers between the Alumnae Office and the clubs. They do much to help clubs to organize, and to keep them active.

This year added emphasis has been put on club gifts to the college. All club gifts go to the endowment of the Manson Memorial Scholarship. Interest on the capital Fund

The Aims of Secondary Education

by Dr. Louise P. Weisiger, Director of Research, Richmond Public Schools

THE drastic changes which have taken place in American Leulture within the twentieth century, as well as recent world movements which have shocked us into a keener realization of the interdependence of education and democracy have combined to make the subject of secondary education an issue in the public mind. There have been profound changes in our educational thought and practice. As a consequence secondary education is in a period of transition. There is great need for the understanding and interpretation of much that is going on in forward-looking high schools today. Not only as a matter of self interest, because secondary education is the life stream of institutions of higher learning, but also as a subject for social understanding because the whole course of democratic civilization may well depend upon the caliber of high school graduates of the next few decades, our college alumnae can find much food for thought and action in analyzing and publicizing the needs and aims of secondary education.

Today, in my opinion, we are ready to abandon aimless peripatetics and plan for education which has direction and meaning. Preparation for increasingly effective democratic living is being more widely accepted as the all-inclusive aim of education.

There are very definite signposts on the road which we are traveling, but they give directions so greatly at variance with those on familiar educational highways that a widening of the focus of our educational lens will be in order. First among the newer signposts which we must read is "Universal Secondary Education."

Secondary education for all youth has become a national necessity. If we are to have a citizenry sufficiently informed to participate intelligently in democratic processes of the present era a level of education beyond that of the elementary grades is definitely required, not for a selected group, but for all.

A second signpost reads, "Greater Holding Power of the Schools." If universal secondary education is to be made a reality, it must offer a curriculum of sufficient meaning, value, and appeal to hold boys and girls in school. The national statistics are startling. Of every 100 boys and girls who start to school, 55 drop out before graduation. Only 20 continue their education in college; only 20 enter skilled occupations. More attention than ever before is being directed to the education of the other 60 per cent of youth who will constitute the majority of our citizens in the critical years ahead.

The third signpost bears the inscription "Needs of Youth." Secondary education is seeking to capitalize upon certain educational needs which youth feel in common or which society requires of them. Ten imperative needs of youth have been identified by the National Association of Secondary School Principals in their bulletin, Planning for American Youth. These needs condition the aims of secondary education and for that reason I quote them briefly:

- "All youth need to develop saleable skills and those understandings and attitudes that make the worker an intelligent and productive participant in economic life.
- 2. "All youth need to develop and maintain good health and physical fitness.
- 3. "All youth need to understand the rights and duties of the citizen of a democratic society.
- 4. "All youth need to understand the significance of the family for the individual and society and the conditions conducive to successful family life.
- "All youth need to know how to purchase and use goods and services intelligently.
- "All youth need to understand the methods of science, the influence of science on human life, and the main scientific facts concerning the nature of the world and of man.
- "All youth need opportunities to develop their capacities to appreciate beauty in literature, art, music, and nature.
- 8. "All youth need to be able to use their leisure time well and to budget it wisely.
- "All youth need to develop respect for other persons, to grow in their insight into ethical values and principles, and to be able to live and work cooperatively with others.
- 10. "All youth need to grow in their ability to think rationally, to express their thoughts clearly, and to read and listen with understanding."

The democratic concept of education calls for the fullest possible development of the individual as a person in his own right. Here we bring to a focus those aims of education which center around intellectual achievement and cultural growth, around health, recreation, aesthetic interests, and character, terming them self realization, or attainment of the abundant life, or development of the scholar and the gentlemen.

Sound health is basic to individual development. The recent draft revealed the shocking fact that approximately 50 per cent of American youth have disabling defects. It is the aim of secondary education to raise the level of health among all youth.

Some Aspects in Long-Range Planning of School Plants

by Z. T. Kyle, Assistant Superintendent of Education for Virginia

Let US consider some of the factors which condition the planning for a long-range program and suggest some of the people who should have a part in a long-range planning of school plants.

An educational plant does not spring full-grown from the brain of an individual or a group of individuals. It cannot solely be an idealistic conception. Each plant must vary from every other because of the unique considerations which determine it. This is as it should be. It gives evidence that each plant must be designed for a given body of functions which are to be exercised under definite limitations. Anyone concerned, therefore, with the planning and designing of an educational plant should be aware of the factors which condition it, and should possess understanding of their weight and meaning.

Perhaps, at this point, some factors which have much to do with shaping any educational plant should be enumerated. They are:

- Size and character of the administrative units and attendance areas.
- Scope and character of the educational program.
- 3. The needs and culture of the community.
- 4. Population growth and trends.
- 5. Climatic factors.
- 6. Environmental factors.
- 7. Technological discoveries.
- 8. Legal barriers.
- 9. Economic strength of the community.

Size and Character of Administrative Traits and Attendance Areas

An "administrative unit" in most situations is synonymous with a school district. Generally speaking, an administrative unit is the area under the jurisdiction of one board of education. In many cases, boundaries of administrative units coincide with those of civil units, such as a municipality, a town, or a county. In others, the boundaries are established separately and without regard to those of other governmental units.

An "attendance area," on the other hand, is the area served by one school. Thus an administrative unit may have only one attendance area which coincides with the area of the administrative unit, or it may have attendance areas depending upon the number of schools within the administrative unit. Many consolidated units have only one school and hence, one attendance area,

The size and boundaries of administrative units are established by law. The size and number of attendance areas within any one administrative unit are ordinarily fixed by the board of education, and therefore, are changed by the board. Many administrative units were established at the time a state was admitted to statehood, when the population was sparse and transportation primitive in character. Administrative units vary not only in size and population, but also in economic strength and financial ability.

The mobility as well as growth of population and the accompanying economic ability makes it difficult, if not quite impossible, for many administrative units to become successful areas for developing and carrying on necessary educational programs. As a result, much attention is being given throughout the nation to a re-alignment of administrative units, so that the new units have a fair load of people to be educated. With economic strength to produce the necessary money, with the vast improved system of transportation, the trend has been to decrease the number of administrative units, or to put it in another way, to increase them in size.

Attendance areas are also changing rapidly. In dense population areas, it is necessary to provide two or more schools for an area formerly served by one. In rural and sparsely-settled areas, several small attendance areas are combined to form one school so as to make possible the provision of an adequate offering.

The size, population, and economic strength of an administrative unit, have a great deal to do with the number, size, and type of educational plants which are needed. Any community, therefore, which is faced with a school plant problem should make thorough studies at the outset to determine whether the present administrative unit is an economical and proper base as a unit of administration. If not, such changes should be made as may be deemed necessary in a given unit.

The function of a school is to improve the quality of living in the community of which it is a part. This function is not new. It probably has always been the purpose for which schools exist. However, it has not always received the primary emphasis. In earlier years, learning for learning's sake was emphasized. Learning from books received major attention. Later the growth and development of children was stressed as the fundamental school job. In recent years, emphasis has been placed more and more upon the education of both children and adults. Now all these emphases undoubtedly aid the improvement of living in a community.

It is important, too, to understand that the school which would improve the quality of living in the community must Alumnae News study its community to discover what to do. The program of the school, then, grows out of the needs which a community has.

Today the educational program of most schools has two major parts: (a) an instructional program and (b) a program of services needed by the community. As a part of the instructional program, people may be taught to read for the reason that illiterate people do not make good citizens. As a part of the program of services, the school may have a lunch room for poorly fed people, for people with improper diets do not make good citizens. It can be understood that the facilities of the plant will be determined by the nature of the program. In other words, the educational program does and should condition the character of the plant. The only purpose that a plant has is to aid in carrying on the program.

THE NEEDS AND CULTURE OF THE COMMUNITY

Each community differs from every other in some respect. Its needs and its culture are to a degree at least unique and peculiar to it. Every community, however, has the same categories of resources. They are three in number. They are (1) human resources, (2) social organizations, and (3) natural or physical resources.

If the school's job is helping to improve the quality of living, then it does its work through helping to develop the resources which a community has. No community has ever developed all its resources to the extent possible. There is always more to be done. The good school plant is one that is planned to aid the community to develop its resources. Some needs may be economic, some social, some cultural, some physical. Whatever their nature, the school plant should be designed to aid in their improvement.

Population Growths and Trends

School plants are occupied by people. The number and types of people who are to use a plant condition its size and its facilities. Another important factor in planning a school plant, therefore, has to do with the people who will use it, and their probable increase or decrease. Some communities continue to grow, others tend to become smaller, and still others like mature river valleys remain almost without change.

The influx of new industries and the conditions favorable to them, satisfactory and favorable factors for future housing developments, the age segments of the community, these and other causes deserve careful study in arriving at accurate estimates of the population growth of a community. Access to transportation facilities, climatic conditions, home ownership vs. rental housing, a favorable tax situation, pleasing surroundings, racial, social and religious composition of the present community, all have bearing upon the question of population growth.

Environmental Factors

Another factor which conditions the school plant may be called the factor of environment. A good school plant reflects the environment, architecturally, culturally and economically. The topography of the community, flat, undulative or mountanious, shapes the type of architecture of the school. The character and style of other buildings also exert an influence. The application of this principle does not mean that the style of architecture should be like that of other buildings necessarily, but it does mean that it should not be incongruous or unsuited in its relation to other structures. Then, each community has its own outward manifestations of its culture. A new building should be designed to help in representing and preserving the culture.

CLIMATIC FACTORS

The section of the state in which a given community is located is another factor which conditions the plant, and which the planner and designer must take into account.

Technological Discoveries

The 20th century is an age of science. It is particularly a period in the United States in which the findings of science are put to work. A characteristic of Americans is their ability to take scientific principles and find a way to translate them into materials and machines which mankind can use. The technological know-how already has resulted in the production of many materials and in the use of new principles in the design and construction of school buildings. Every bit of evidence indicates that far more numerous and important discoveries will be made in the years ahead.

As a result, new buildings can be made better and more comfortable than their predecessors. If the school buildings constructed in the last half of the 20th century simply incorporate the best principles and materials of those built during the first half of the century, they will be poor buildings. Much is constantly being learned as to how to use materials, to apply principles.

The past few years have witnessed such important developments as directional glass block, fluorescent lighting, plastic flooring, cinder block, new type glass, new mechanical ventilating devices, air-conditioning, and many others. These developments certainly condition the character and type of the school plant of tomorrow in contrast to that of yesteryear.

LEGAL BARRIERS

States have their own laws and regulations. Local units of government have their own ordinances. Several of these have application to building in general and school plants in particular. They certainly are factors which condition the planning and design of the new school plant. In practically all instances, these legal restrictions were established for the purpose of safeguarding the public's interest and welfare. However, as new conditions and situations arise, many of these laws have become barriers to designing the best type of plant. It is more difficult to remove or change a legal restriction than it is to make it originally. The result is that buildings constructed today are affected by legal barriers enacted 25 or more years ago and which are no longer necessary or desirable. Most building legal regulations have been enacted to safeguard the health and safety of the occupants. The purpose is good and should be encouraged. Ways must be found, however, to provide for an adjustment of the regulations in the light of new conditions and new discoveries.

FINANCIAL STRENGTH OF THE COMMUNITY

The financial strength of a community is always an important factor in determining any new school plant. The financing of new plants is ordinarily done in two ways, (a) by building cash reserves to pay for the plant when it is built, or (b) by issuing bonds against the credit of the school unit. In either case, the amount of funds which can be made available is conditioned by (a) the willingness of the people to use their financial means for the purpose, (b) the legal limitations to tax or to bond the district, and (c) the financial effort involved in providing for other public needs. In states where financial assistance for financing new capital outlays is provided from state sources, the amount and restrictions of such aid also condition the ability of the local community to provide an educational plant. Recent studies indicate that there is a growing acceptance of the principle that the state should share in the responsibility for providing adequate plant facilities.

It is necessary, in any case, for the planners of a new school plant to devote careful study to the community's financial resources. Where funds are limited, due to whatever cause, it will make it necessary either to delay building, or to make some reductions in size and character of facilities provided. It would seem to be the part of wisdom in all cases, first to plan the facilities needed, and second to determine if the community has the financial strength and willingness to provide it.

In the event that sufficient money cannot be made available, the planners are faced with certain alternatives. One, they can reduce the size of the plant. Two, they may eliminate or delay provisions for housing certain parts of the program. Third, they may design and construct the entire plant but use less desirable materials and design. Fourth, they may delay the entire project. Which of these steps to take involves serious and far-reaching decisions, not only tor the present but also for the future. It is well to remember that children cannot be put into a quick freeze unit to be brought out for their education at a more propitious time.

Your President Has Had a Busy Year!

The Alumnae Council and reuning groups were so interested in the work Miss Lucas is doing in the educational world, that we enumerate below the honors and responsibilities that have come to her this past year.

At the Alumnae Banquet on June 6 the reuners gave Miss Lucas a rising vote of thanks for her good work for Sweet Briar and for the recognition which she has been bringing to the college.

Last August Miss Lucas was chosen as one of the five official delegates from the United States to the Universities Conference in Utrecht, Holland, where a total of 135 delegates from 36 countries held a 10-day conference on problems of international education. She was one of only three women at the conference; and Sweet Briar College in Virginia, U. S. A., was the only woman's college having a delegate present. She reports that the delegates from the Orient and from most European countries had great difficulty pronouncing "Sweet Briar"!

During the last year Miss Lucas has been serving on the National Selection Committee for Fulbright Scholarships for Foreign graduate study. She shares with six other educators in the United States the responsibility for selecting the hundreds of graduate students who will each year be granted the Fulbright Awards for study in other countries. In accordance with the "Fulbright Act" (Public Law 584, Seventy-ninth Congress), funds are being set aside from the sale of surplus United States property abroad for the purpose of educational exchanges. This program, initiated by Senator Fulbright in 1946, is expected ultimately to embrace more than 20 countries and to involve the expenditure of more than $150,000,000 during the next 20 years. Around 500 graduate students will probably be studying in foreign countries next year on the Fulbright scholarships.

Besides these honors and responsibilities, Miss Lucas has within the last year been elected to three outstanding positions in higher educational organizations of the country. In January she was elected to the Board of Directors of the Association of American Colleges. In April, she was elected Vice-President of the Southern Universities Conference (of which President Goodrich White was elected President) and, in May, Vice-Chairman of The American Council on Education (of which President James B. Conant was elected Chairman).

She has been appointed a member of the Council on International Educational Enterprises as well as chairman of the Southern University Conference's Committee on Improvement of Instruction.

She insists that some of these offices are more or less honorary and "probably a sop to the suffragettes" (of which she is not one). But—Sweet Briar has reason to be very proud and pleased!

COLLEGES' HARDER TIMES

(Richmond News Leader)

Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10, a member of the Board of Overseers, asked that this editorial be reprinted

President Harold W. Dodds, of Princeton, would not have voiced rightly the congratulations all liberal arts colleges are extending to Washington and Lee if he had not included yesterday in his address at the climatic observance of the beloved school's bicentenary a warning that the next 200 years will be harder. Said President Dodds: "Unless all present signs fail, the future of the tax-supported institutions is growing increasingly secure, while that of the private is growing increasingly insecure."

State-suported schools share in larger public revenues; privately-endowed institutions suffer because their benefactors financially are drained by taxation in order to provide expanded public funds. This does not mean that State or Federally sustained education is to destroy the established liberal arts college or the university that is a center of research. It is not probable, specifically, that any State university, be it ever so bountifully financed, will be able in the foreseeable future to supplant Harvard, or Yale, or Columbia, or Princeton, or Chicago; but those great institutions have to realize that large gifts of endowment are not to be expected otherwise than on the death of a handful of millionaires of a generation now fading out. A few such philanthropists will have enough, at death, to add to great endowments. Some gifts may be expected year by year through the "15 per cent income-tax deduction." The most hopeful view of the finances of these private institutions cannot overlook the fact that an increase of $100,000 a year in the support of a State institution is by no means a legislative rarity but is equivalent to a successful campaign by a privately-supported school for $3 million of permanent endowment.

There is at present one hope only for these liberal arts schools that have been of value beyond all human reckoning: they must introduce, in effect, a system of education at cost on a basis of deferred payment. This is not as unphilanthropic as it sounds and it never need become formalized in contractural obligations. What it implies is that if a man goes to Washington and Lee or Princeton, or the University of Richmond, or any similar school, he gets his academic instruction at approximately half its actual cost. Friends of education gave the colleges money enough at some previous time to yield interest that pays approximately 50 per cent of the expense to which the institution is put for each student. When the student goes away from college with his diploma in his needed specialized training, he should realize that he will be pulling his weight in the boat if he pays back the difference between his tuition and the actual cost. This can be done most readily in annual gifts to the alumni fund. If this "living endowment" reaches yearly the difference between cost and income, the future of the average college financially is secure. We do not know of a single other device by which financial requirements can be met. Alumni funds are lifelines,

In fulfilling the aim of personal development, secondary education attempts to offer to every boy and girl, regardless of economic or social status, the key of learning which will unlock for them, to the maximum consistent with individual mental ability, the treasures of the cultural heritage.

Implied in the aim of attaining the abundant life through education is mastery of the basic skills. Secondary education accepts its share of responsibility in teaching them. On increasing levels of difficulty, reading, writing, and computation are today given a place in the program of secondary schools.

Knowledge and skill are incomplete without appreciation of the values in abundant living. All youth need help in establishing standards of appreciation for the good, the true, and the beautiful, whether such be found in the abstruse or the concrete, whether such be sought in the subtleties of great writers, musicians, and artists, or in simpler currents of life and nature.

But self realization, with its many facets, is only one phase of democratic education. It must be supplemented by growth in social relationships. Secondary education therefore sets up its aims for youth in three areas which we may call human relationships, economic relationships, and civicsocial relationships.

Among the most important emphases in modern secondary education is preparation for home and family life. To appreciate the importance of family solidarity, to understand the responsibilities of husband, wife, and children to each other, to acquire the skills of budgeting, of decorating and furnishing the home, of feeding and clothing the household, of child care and home nursing, to develop and maintain democratic relationships, to learn to resist the propaganda and high pressure salesmanship of the present day are typical examples of the specific purposes of homemaking courses. Soaring divorce rates and excessive juvenile delinquency bear witness to the need for implementing the aims of education in human relationships.

The importance which should be attached to preparation for vocational success has been confirmed by youth themselves where they have been consulted as to their greatest needs. In youth surveys a very large percentage have given economic security as their most urgent necessity. For the individual, work furnishes not only material security but also the satisfaction of constructive, purposeful achievement. It has been called "the central point of reference by which an individual takes hold of the world and makes it meaningful." If democratic society assumes responsibility for individual development, occupational adjustment cannot well be omitted from the aims of education.

But I have placed this aim among the areas of education necessary for social relationships, for our standards of living depend to a large degree upon the effectiveness with which each generation is prepared to carry on the work of the world. Pupils who do not plan to continue their education in institutions of higher learning need to be provided, while in secondary school, with the amount of training necessary to enter successfully the vocation of their choice. Whether students plan to enter the professions, business, industry, agriculture, or public service, all can derive benefit from a study of the economic needs of society, the resources available for meeting those needs, and the problems of production and consumption.

If democracy sets the pattern for education, training in civic competence must be considered an essential objective of secondary education. All youth, not merely those who will enter the professions or the skilled occupations, need education for citizenship. (1) All need to understand democracy as a great social faith with its implications both for the dignity and worth of the individual and for the general welfare; (2) all need to understand the nature and importance of civil liberties; (3) all need to understand the political institutions and processes of American citizenship; (4) all need to understand the problems of world citizenship; (5) all need to understand the major economic problems and trends; (6) and all need to understand the social structures and social problems of the society in which they live. I do not see that we can dare omit from the program of secondary education a single one of these six categories of knowledge essential for intelligent citizenship.

The aim of civic competence fails of realization unless it produces citizens endowed with tolerance, social understanding, and social justice. We of the teaching profession feel very keenly the sharp imperatives of the social responsibilities faced by secondary education today. I do not know of a better way in which to portray those responsibilities to you than to close with a poem, a great poem I think, by Dorothy de Zouche:

TWO MEN STOOD ON A HILL

Two men stood on a little hill to pray.

The younger spoke and paused and spoke again.

And listening, the older heard him say,

"I thank you, God, I'm not as other men.

I pay my tithe. (It's quite a sum, You know.)

I do not steal (except men's toil), nor kill

(Except the spirit, not the body, though,)

Nor let men starve (unless they starve at will.)

The old man stared with wide unseeing eyes

At shadows on the slowly darkening sod

And whispered there beneath the cloud-filled skies,

"Be merciful to me a sinner, God,—

Be merciful —" he bowed his tortured head.

"I was the teacher of that man," he said.

Alumna Teacher Urges Interest In Secondary Education

by Sue Francis

F EVERYONE took I such an active part in secondary education as does Virginia Mack Senter, '26, there would be today the urgency for an immediate enlivenment in this field. Mrs. Senter believes, and rightly so, that more interest plus action should be shown in secondary education and as a teacher and organizer she plays a very important role in the lives of many young citizens of Chattanooga, Tennessee.

As a teacher Mrs. Senter finds that she gets the best results by allowing her pupils to have, and encouraging in them, self expression and imagination. For instance, in her history class she has each student draw a map illustrating their main interest—some of them being the state flower on each state, products, minerals, colleges, historical events, etc. The maps were found expressive and original by many, other than the instigator of the project, for they were displayed around the city and some were sent to the State Convention.

The same history class had such a well thought out and motivating "town hall" meeting on the need for a recreation center for their district that it became necessary to carry it on. Four student speakers, a moderator and a chairman visited the Commissioner, repeated their meeting in the school chapel, and at a mass meeting of interested citizens. With the League of Women Voters to back them, their proposal for an addition to the budget set aside for recreational centers was passed and their district will be the first to get one. Mrs. Senter relates, "My children received medals from the Educational Press and they were presented to them by the Commissioner and were told that they were responsible for arousing the interest and bringing the attention of everyone to their need. This has changed my class from 38 sometimes inattentive children to a live group civic minded and with a deeper sense of democracy." This project was greatly publicized in the newspapers and it was agreed by all that this group of young students had accomplished what would have been difficult for a group of adult citizens. One newspaper stated that this was true because, unlike an adult committee that would allow themselves to be reasoned with and that would see other's viewpoints, they would back down all arguments against their cause by stating a positive need in every case. The article continued, "They might shout treason and start a recall petition against their confederate, but a man is justified in doing anything when a junior high history class is on the go-with right on their side."

If groups of students are this anxious to be led and guided by those who are capable of helping them, certainly more emphasis should be placed on the training of young minds. The most serious problems today are those connected with education below the college level. It is up to those with college training to take on the responsibility within their communities—first, by looking into the particular problems of their own communities and then by taking action toward solving them.

Mrs. Senter, as a college graduate, hasn't been sitting back and realizing the necessity of becoming aware of the urgent needs in secondary education without making an effort to improve them as so many of us have been inclined to do, but she has proven that the problems should be met, studied, and overcome. To do this the college trained women must unite and assume the leadership that is demanded today. There is no goal that can be achieved without difficulty but this thought should not lessen the drive, only encourage it. Mrs. Senter's thought, "The slower the pupil, the greater the thrill when you awaken him," must be applied to this problem of secondary education. Instead, you must realize, "The more difficult the struggle, the more triumphant the victory." The victory—a renaissance in secondary education.

Commencement Address of Henri Bonnet

French Ambassador to the United States at the Fortieth Commencement of Sweet Briar College on Monday, June 6, 1949.

THEN I was offered the privilege of addressing Sweet Briar College on its commencement day, I must confess that I felt a little bit embarrassed because it would be the first time that I should have to speak to such a distinguished gathering of young ladies, and I wondered what might be the best way to capture, if I could, their interest. I thought that perhaps it would make a good beginning to recall the high praise which, more than a century ago, one of my illustrious countrymen, Alexis de Tocqueville, bestowed upon the system of education for women in the United States. I remember that, after his return to Europe, many times he had occasion, both in letters and in speeches, to express his admiration for American ladies and the part they played in the building of your great country. So I looked up the chapter in his book "Democracy in America" concerning the education of young women in the United States.

I must say that, regarding the difficulty of my position today, I was not greatly reassured to read that Tocqueville had "been frequently surprised and almost frightened at the singular address and happy boldness with which young women in America contrive to manage their thoughts and their language amid all the difficulties of free conversation; a philosopher would have stumbled at every step along the narrow path which they trod without accident and without effort." I was somewhat disturbed, especially because I thought of the great and varied progress I have witnessed in the wonderful development of the American college and university. I wondered if I might not, like the philosopher referred to above, stumble before the eyes of a clever and amused assembly.

I saw many other interesting things in the pages I reread, and some of them have a direct bearing on our contemporary preoccupations. For instance, at that time "the great scene of the world was constantly open" to the view of the young American woman. To tell the truth, I am not sure that the French writer, in making that remark, was thinking of the world at large, that he was not thinking rather of the society and the life outside the college itself. Nevertheless, his purpose was certainly to advocate a bold and modern system of education as against the one in Europe which he considered to be too reserved and withdrawn from reality. Times bave changed, but the need to give youth, women as well as men, a broad outlook on our complex and dangerous world of today has become still more pressing.

This is recognized in France where, for centuries, there had been the tradition of refined education for young ladies, even though too few of them could participate in it. and where, as you know, the role of women in history, in art and in literature, has at all times been great. It is certainly fully appreciated in the United States where the study of the social sciences and international relations has made, in the last few years, such enormous strides. But the task is infinitely more complicated than it was in the 19th century.

First of all, our era has seen a prodigious increase of man's knowledge in every field. To make of their pupils competent citizens, your teachers today are faced with the difficult problem of giving them a broad and solid foundation of learning, far more extensive even than in the comparatively recent past, and, while they are forming the minds and the judgment of the young, they are not spared the duty of preparing them for the responsibilities they will have to face later and which today are more and more equitably divided between men and women.

Moreover, the "great scene of the world" has become infinitely more vast, and, what it is essential to understand, much closer to us at the same time. Today we are enveloped not only by the legitimate preoccupations of our national life; but every day the very atmosphere we breathe is charged with universality. Here at Sweet Briar in the year 1949 you can feel around you the whole world with all its wonders, its mysteries, its hardships, much more vivid and urgent than it was to the young ladies of the celebrated College of Saint-Cyr in our great classical century, or even than it was to your grandmothers who so strongly impressed Tocqueville.

Indeed, in my judgment, you are to live the great adventure of a completely new era in the history of humanity. Turning for a moment to my daily preoccupations, I dare say that I can see the first portents of that future in the intricate, and sometimes confused, evolution of our foreign politics. It is a curse on humanity that the new progress which it can, and, I am sure, will, realize will have been bought at the price of the most cruel and devastating wars. It is a malediction that the first great attempt which was made to prevent the return of such calamities by organizing the nations in a society governed by law, in the same way as the other human societies in each of our countries are organized, failed, and that another catastrophe of greater magnitude burst over the world before the nations tried again, as they are now doing, to build up, for the preservation of peace, a United Nations. It is appalling to see what ever-recurring difficulties they encounter in that great design and how slow are the steps forward.

But I see light on the horizon. What we cannot create at once, we shall build up gradually. A new solidarity between the democratic nations of the world is taking shape under our very eyes. It is being born in that great and glorious area which surrounds the Atlantic ocean, in young America and in old Europe. Four weeks ago, I came back from a trip to France where I could realize that there is a new atmosphere in the domain of international relations. There is a new outlook which did not exist in the first years following the last war. There is more hope, more confidence, a stronger appreciation of the bonds which unite all those nations which hold the same ideals. The same convictions, which have the same aspirations towards happiness and progress.

That change, which, needless to say, is warmly welcomed in my country which has always been close to yours, is primarily due to the bold and generous initiatives of the United States. The steps in that crucial advance have names which are well known and which will stand as landmarks in contemporary history: The Marshall Plan, which will bring about the recovery of our devastated lands in Europe; the Atlantic Pact, which will create a new atmosphere of security, open new prospects of the blessings of peace. Believe me, we must convince ourselves that salvation lies in that direction, that you have before you the promise of better days for our shattered world. During the long period of the dark ages, the light of culture, of knowledge, of civilization, was preserved in small islands amid a sea of ignorance and barbarism, in colleges, convents, and universities, by small groups of learned people. How could we have any doubts about the future of our western civilization, when its glory is firmly established in all the lands of freedom which represent the most powerful and promising potentialities and which have nothing to fear if they remain together.

What are the conclusions to be drawn from this situation insofar as the colleges and universities are concerned? There are many, but today I should like to dwell upon one of them, the more so since I feel that the initiatives I want to recommend cannot be better served and popularized all over Europe than by young American ladies who will, I am sure, be enthusiastically helped in their task by their European sisters.

To the new relationship which has developed between Europe and America must correspond a more and more intimate mutual knowledge. It cannot be obtained by studies alone, today still less than heretofore. It is often said that the world is shrinking; at the same time it is becoming more complicated. We must take advantage of both these conditions by establishing more direct contacts in every field, but especially between the youth of our countries, for such contacts now much easier to organize, cannot fail to help us immensely in our efforts to grasp the real meaning of the many problems which confront us, to develop the broad outlook indispensable in coping with them.

I know that such a tradition of student exchanges exists at Sweet Briar. I could not too highly praise such an initiative as the Junior Year in France, having witnessed its success in my country as well as its growing popularity among American colleges. Such exchanges must, however, be developed and enlarged. Whereas before the war we sent students from America to France and from France to America by hundreds, I am convinced that we should now plan for thousands of them. I am glad to say that such projects are not merely pious wishes; no more are they impossible ambitions. Thanks to the vote by your Congress of the Fulbright Act, steps have already been taken to make realities of the hopes I have just expressed. So I trust that before long many of you will visit Paris-teachers as well as students-and that you will receive at Sweet Briar a number of enchanted young ladies from France. There are no countries between which such intercourse is more desirable, in which students can reciprocally find a more useful complement to their national education. In cultural matters, we have in France an old and beloved tradition of give and take. You will quickly realize, if you go there, how happy we should be to show you our achievements in that domain, and how eager we are to learn from your accomplishments, so great that they seem almost legendary to us on the other side of the Atlantic. I am sure that I am addressing today the future artisans of an ever-closer friendship between France and the United States.

ALUMNAE AND PUBLIC RELATIONS

Mary Moore Pancake spoke informally at the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association Commencement Week concerning her impressions of Sweet Briar during this past year when she was acting Director of Public Relations.

It may seem presumptious for me to tell you about Sweet Briar, but I was only asked to pass on a few impressions resulting from coming back, after quite a lengthy absence, to spend this year in the Office of Public Relations.

There are many things which come to my mind that might be mentioned: a telephone on every floor of every dormitory, instead of Annie trudging across campus to deliver messages; no more Saturday night gyms; the students permitted to set foot in an automobile with their dates. But the things which have impressed me the most have to do with academic development. You all know about such things as the honors plan of study, interdepartmental majors, the Junior Year in France Plan, and the fact that over a period of a good many years tremendous progress has been made. My own observation has been that along with it has come a change in the attitude of students toward their work and a more seriousness of purpose, a higher regard for the value of a college education. It expresses itself in their wide variety of interests, the many subjects upon which they have considerable knowledge and a determination to get more; an increased desire to relate what they learn in the various courses they are taking. They know what they want to get from a course, they talk about it. They are frankly concerned with and openly discuss curriculum. Even their off the record, extracurricular conversations are more stimulating and inquiring intellectually than any bull-sessions I ever remember.

I mention this because it emphasizes the fact that those of us who have Sweet Briar's interests at heart, if we are to attract and hold students today, must be sure that Sweet Briar continues to fulfill its obligations to them. A few alumnae have said to me that they don't particularly want Sweet Briar to be "too intellectual." The truth is, that in this age when privately endowed colleges are fighting for their lives we cannot afford to be less than the best, for the chances are that only the best will survive. As a matter of fact, we are just approaching a new and potentially rich era, under the capable, energetic and enthusiastic leadership of President Lucas, beginning more and more to reap the benefits of past wise administrations. So it certainly does not seem beyond the realm of possibility, and certainly of necessity, that Sweet Briar can take its place not only as a leading institution in the south but also as one of the top liberal arts colleges in the country.

But-there's always a but-it will take honest effort on the part of all concerned—the administration to chart a sound course, the faculty to maintain high standards of instruction and inspiration; alumnae and students to prove that they are successful products of this endeavor. Obviously we need money, but in addition there is much that all of us can do to lay the ground work, and here is where alumnae and public relations join forces. Public relations, as such, is a vague term, one which covers a multitude of sins. The New Yorker, I believe it was, concluded after extensive research that "public relations is relations with the public," and so it is. There are, however, specific approaches to the problems, such things as are carried on in our Public Relations Office—cooperating with local civic enterprises whenever possible (a prophet is not without honor, they say, save in his own country, and it is my feeling that there is still much to be done to convince our immediate neighbors that we are serious about this business of education); promoting every project, however small, to create a more congenial and constructive atmosphere on the campus, assisting other departments in whatever ways can be helpful; and keeping Sweet Briar in the public eye through newspaper, magazine and radio publicity, or whatever means at our disposal. But by and large the alumnae of a college are its best public relations, for you it is who go out in every direction and come in contact with all sorts of people. You carry the brunt of spreading the good word, and in turn keeping your ears to the ground, reporting back what the public is saying and thinking about Sweet Briar, asking for frank and honest statements from the college in order that you may answer puzzling questions and thus present a true picture. Your public relations job is to be good alumnae, well-informed and alert, making the public aware that Sweet Briar is worthy of respect, and telling the world by word and deed that you are proud to be a Sweet Briar girl, not only because you believe in what it is doing now but also because you have confidence and faith in what it can do in the future.

HARVARD APPROVES JUNIOR YEAR PLAN

PPROVAL by Harvard University's faculty of the Junior Year in France, sponsored by Sweet Briar College marks the end of a long established policy of the university. Until this action was taken on May 3 credit for work done at a foreign university has not been accepted toward a degree from Harvard or Radcliffe College, and consequently no junior year group has received official recognition from these institutions.

During the current session a Harvard student is enrolled with the Sweet Briar group in Paris, but with no assurance that credit would be applied toward requirements for his degree. Under the sponsorship of Professor Francis Rogers, chairman of the Department of Romance Languages at Harvard and at Radcliffe, himself a member of the University of Delaware Foreign Study Group in 1934-35, a report and recommendation regarding the Sweet Briar plan was presented in April to the Committee on Educational Policy of the Harvard Faculty. With the committee's approval it was referred to the faculty, which approved the recommendation without a dissenting yote.

According to Professor Rogers, the full effect of "this revolutionary step by Harvard University will not be felt until next year," but applications, nevertheless, have already been received from Harvard and Radcliffe students. Adoption of the Sweet Briar plan by Harvard was urged by the Student Council and received the enthusiastic support of the Harvard Crimson, which stated editorially that a logical answer to any objections on the part of the administration is embodied in the Sweet Briar plan.

To date 70 students have enrolled for the 1949-50 session, which is more than this year's enrollment. 29 colleges and universities are represented.

is not sufficient to pay even a fraction of the cost of the Scholarship. As of July 1, 1948, the Manson Fund was $1,017.27. To date in the 1948 and 1949 fiscal year $1,000.96 has been collected.

A steady growth in number of Alumnae Clubs continues. In June, 1948, there were 38 active clubs. As of May 1, 1949, there were 41 clubs holding regular meetings, and 4 more informal groups which are mainly interested in Alumnae Representative work.

SPECIAL PROJECTS

Last May the reunion schedule for alumnae was changed. In recent years it had been the policy to adhere to a 1-5-10-15, etc., year reunion plan. In the belief that alumnae would enjoy renewing friendships with members of the other classes with them when they were in college, the Alumnae Council voted to adopt a modification of the Dix system, whereby the traditional 5-10 year plan would be kept, and at the same time there would be groupings of classes that overlapped in college. For example, this year reunion classes were 1914, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1924, 1929, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, and 1944. Also at Commencement the Alumnae Association held its first alumnae seminar, with alumnae remaining on campus for one day after graduation. Several lectures were given by faculty members, and a panel discussion was conducted by alumnae. The program was a marked success and will be continued. Amherst County alumnae assisted members of the Alumnae Council on a hostess committee which remained on duty all week-end. This was a most popular innovation.

On April 9, 1949, the Alumnae Association held a Conference on Secondary Education in the State of Virginia. Our 685 Virginia alumnae, presidents of all Virginia chapters of A.A.U.W., all teachers and school administrators in Amherst County and Lynchburg, presidents of P.-T. A. chapters, and state officials of Education were especially invited, and the general public was made welcome. In all, 1000 invitations went out, and 135 guests participated. The Amherst-Sweet Briar branch of the A.A.U.W. assisted in program planning and in "hostessing."

The purpose of the program was three-fold: to "bring home" to college trained women the seriousness and urgency of public education problems within the state, to draw our former students back to Sweet Briar, and to test out the possibility of suggesting such a program to Alumnae Clubs all over the country.

Not only did the office receive many congratulatory letters for sponsoring such a practical and worthwhile program, but newspapers throughout the state carried full stories of the Conference, and made lengthy editorial comments. The public relation's value of the Conference to Sweet Briar alone made the program creditable.

In closing special comment must be made concerning the excellent cooperation that the Alumnae Office has received from the Public Relations Office. Alumnae work is largely public relations work and thus it is of immeasurable value to have a cordial give and take between the two offices. In addition the acting Director of Public Relations, Mary Moore Pancake, has been most helpful to individual alumnae clubs in planning publicity for meetings, and in writing editors from the college.

The Admissions Office has also been very cooperative concerning the establishment and continued work of Alumnae Representative Committees.

Mr. Don Wheaton's willingness to give friendly advice is a constant comfort to the Alumnae Secretary, and alumnae are universally delighted with the News Letter which he prepares.

"Miss Mattie" and "Miss Gay"

by M. DEE LONG

MISS MATTIL AND MISS GAY

Miss Martha Rebecca Patteson died in Richmond, Virginia, on May 28, and was buried in Hollywood Cemetery overlooking the James River on May 30, her ninety-fourth birthday. So passed a little lady, known to Sweet Briar as "Miss Mattie" and endeared to the college and community.

For forty years the Patteson sisters, Miss Mattie and Miss Gay, were a vital and unique part of Sweet Briar College. They helped to make its history. Miss Gay, who was educated at Columbia University and the University of Munich and had taught at Farmville State Teachers' College and at Mt. Holyoke College, came in September, 1906, as professor of mathematics to join the first faculty of Sweet Briar College. When living conditions for the faculty proved hard in those early months, Miss Gay persuaded her sister Mattie to come and take charge of the Apartment House (now No. 1 Faculty Row) as a residence for the faculty and a boarding house. Professor Caroline Sparrow has borne testimony to Miss Mattie's ministry, in these words:

"In the early strenuous years of Sweet Briar, before the Infirmary was built, before the Inn came into being, and before the faculty had houses of their own, it was Miss Mattie who cherished the sick and homesick students; who took care of the hard-pressed faculty; and who ministered to the stranger in our gates. The work was hard, but she was untiring; it was exacting, but she was serene. To all she gave herself and her home, and none left her doorstep but was saner for her presence and stronger for her comfort. So it is that from all over the land, alumnae, faculty, parents 'rise up and call her blessed'.

"Nor is this all. Her servants, too, are her friends; they work with her and for her, and through her they learn the dignity of labor.

"The former presidents of Sweet Briar, too, here speal, through me. I have heard President McVea speak again and again of how much Miss Mattie meant to her and to the college. I can still hear the echo of President Benedict's voice, saying, 'There is no one like Miss Mattie, if you are in trouble'."

With Miss Mattic as hostess and manager, the Apartment House became the social center of the community, and the dining table was famous for its delicious Virginia dishes. There was a dessert so delectable that the only name adequate for it, the guests decided, was "Martha Rebecca."

Miss Mattie continued as head of the Apartment House until her retirement in 1934. Miss Gay, besides teachin, mathematics, served as secretary of the faculty and as a member of important committees. After her retirement from teaching in 1919 she was assistant librarian until 1930.

Meantime, in 1929, the sisters had built a good-sized residence on Elijah's Road—not that they wanted to move to it themselves, but that they might help President Glass to solve a housing problem. For a harassed college president to have two little ladies walk into her office and put a house in her lap must have been a memorable experience.

Not until the Apartment House was closed in 1934 did the sisters come to occupy "The Venture," as they named their house.

As long as they were with us, their living room was a social gathering place in evenings. They sat, one at each end of a Victorian sofa. Miss Gay, witty and spirited, enlivened the conversation with delightful anecdotes or, upon persuasion, with her own verses; Miss Mattie, gracious and kindly, nodded approval on all in the circle and spoke with old Tidewater pronunciation. Said Percy Mackaye, who taught one year at Sweet Briar, "No one should miss this linquistic treat." Alert they were to local affairs, to the newest books, even continued mystery stories about "thirteen steps" or such, and to political issues of the day. "I have a notion" said Miss Gay, incensed over an editorial in a local paper attacking her favorite statesman, F. D. R., "to go right in and tell that editor what I think of him." If she had carried out her threat some of us would have willingly been there to see an indignant mite waging battle with the broad-shouldered obdurate editor.

Often their talk was of early Sweet Briar. Miss Gay wrote for the Alumnae News, June, 1932, an article, "Sweet Briar College History, 1900-1906." Here, from her own memory and from information gleaned from friends and papers of the Fletcher family, she gave an account of the six difficult years prior to the opening of the college in 1906.

The Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award was conferred upon Miss Mattie at the Founders' Day ceremonies in 1933. In presenting her to President Glass, Professor Sparrow paid the tribute quoted from her above and also said, "But I need not dwell on the past. It is the present faculty of Sweet Briar that now renders grateful acknowledgement of 'a thousand unremembered acts of kindness and of love.' We know her, as she does not know herself. In the test of crisis, and the trial of everyday life, she has shown us the courage, courtesy and fine dignity of her tradition—and exemplified for us the teachings of her master."

President Glass presented the award with the following citation: "Martha Rebecca Patteson—for twenty-seven years a beloved member of the Sweet Briar community, upon whom affection has already conferred the title 'Miss Mattie', whose ministrations have ranged from presidents to cooks and beyond Sweet Briar to Sweet Briar's guests from many lands; for your unconscious giving of yourself, your gentle charm, your humorous comfortings, your understanding sympathy, Sweet Briar College confers upon you the Algernon Sydney Sullivan award as a means of speaking its appreciation, for your joy and for the inspiration of all who knew you." Again, on the occasion of Miss Mattie's ninetieth birthday, her friends expressed their appreciation and affection for her at a big birthday party, and she was as pleased as a child of nine.

Miss Mattie and Miss Gay left Sweet Briar in 1946 to spend their declining years with loving and attentive nieces and nephews in Richmond. They never lost touch with Sweet Briar and said that they were often homesick; and we, left behind, had no one to take their places. We began to feel sorry for the newer generations of students and faculty who never knew them, as we did for those who never knew inimitable Mrs. Walker and Aunt Kitty.

Miss Gay died in February, 1948; Miss Mattie survived her a little more than a year. From their estate they left $500 to the Ascension Church in Amherst, $500 to the Sweet Briar Endowment Fund, and the Venture, which will become later a clear gift to the college.

Already there is a movement to provide some fitting memorial for Miss Mattie. Several rare mathematical volumes were given to the college library last year in memory of Miss Gay. Also, it has been proposed that their house, having long ceased to be a "venture," should now be called "the Patteson House." It will be one way of perpetuating their name, though we shall always remember them affectionately as "Miss Mattie and Miss Gay."

In Memoriam

Hugh Skipwith Worthington—1879-1949

Hugh Skipwith Worthington, who retired in 1944 as head of the department of modern languages at Sweet Briar, died on April 4, 1949, in Lynchburg, where he and his daughter, Nancy Worthington, lived.

At various times he was on the faculties of romance language at Southern Female College, Petersburg, Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and John Hopkins University. Mr. Worthington first came to Sweet Briar in 1910, went to John Hopkins University for 2 years, and returned to Sweet Briar in 1916 as head of the Modern Language Department.

He was professor of French in summer school at University of Virginia, 1911 to 1918 and in 1921, and taught at the University of Chicago in 1919 and Ohio State University, 1920, and was a student in Paris the summers of 1905, 1907, 1911, and 1912.

Mr. Worthington was director of Camp Alleghany, Greenbrier county, West Virginia, from 1922. Nancy Worthington now manages the camp. He was the author of articles on Balzac, American College Society, 1916; Modern Language Notes, 1923; Phonetics Publication, Modern Language Association of Virginia and others. He was a member of Delta Tau Delta, social fraternity, and Lambda Pi.

Mary Flournoy Brown-1911-1949

Mary Louise Flournoy was born in Portsmouth, Virginia, in 1911 and graduated from Sweet Briar College in 1931. She married Cantwell C. Brown, a V. M. I. graduate in chemical engineering, and they lived for some years in Richmond, Virginia. At the beginning of the war, Mr. Brown went to Mexico with the U. S. Army Intelligence and liked the country so well that, when the war was over, he went into business there with a V. M. I. classmate. Mary Lou and the two children joined him and it was in Mexico, D. F., that she died of an acute brain infection on March 3. Besides her husband, she leaves two children, Mary Louisa, 14, and Seaborn, 11 years old. Mr. Brown and the children flew home with the ashes and the funeral services took place in Trinity Church, Portsmouth, of which Mary Lou was a member. The Browns are returning to Mexico very soon where they will continue living in their home until Louisa is old enough to send back to the States to school.

Class Secretary: ELIZABETH GRAMMER (Mrs. Donald F. Torrey) Apt. 203-A, Alden Park Manor, Philadelphia 44, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Sue Hardie (Mrs. William T. Bell) 40 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

I was much flattered by Josephine Murray Joslin's comments on my class letters but I fear I'm running out of material of interest and she won't read about '13 any more.

In March Eugenia Griffin Burnett visited her married daughter here in Philadelphia and I had them for tea at my home. Then Eugenia and I spent a day in town together with much talk of old times and old friends. It was lovely. We also met at the concert given here by the Sweet Briar and Haverford College Glee Clubs, which was a great success.

In April I spent a week in Cleveland with my son, Donald, and his wife and my granddaughter. Ellen.

I wrote to Margaret Dalton Kirk's daughter, Louise, who tells me Margaret died from an accident in the bathtub. The news of her death was such a shock and I had wondered so much about her, as I'm sure many of you have.

Frances Richardson Pitcher sent me a note at Faster with news of herself and family. Frances' husband had retired several years ago and they have been living in Vermont. "Pitch" has now taken a job and is head of the new Technical Assistance Division in E.C.A. and they're living in Washington, D. C. She failed to give me her address but J wrote to the old one. Her daughter "Sis" and her husband returned in May after nine months in Europe where they spent most of their time studying in Sweden. Jack Pitcher graduated in law from Columbia in May and sails in June to travel in Europe this summer.

Eugenia Buffington Walcott is busy with her farming, and Alumnae Council activities. Her son will go off to school next year and Russell and Eugenia will be alone with both children away being educated.

Have you all read in the papers or in Time in April about the discovery of the cause of theumatical arthritis and the serum "E" that is being developed to control it? It is thrilling news for many of us. The medicine won't be available for about one year but at last the doctors feel they have a specific to combat it. I can hardly wait. I'm better of course, but there is room for improvement.

Class Secretary: Bertha Peister (Mrs. Benjamin Wailes) Sweet Briar, Virginia.
Fund Agent: INEX SKILLERN (Mrs. Walter Reller) 121 Main Street, Boise, Idaho.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Alumnae Office received a very interesting account of the 1917 reunion from Mary Bissell Ridler, upon request of Bertha Pfister Wailes, but it is being held back for the October issue along with other news of reunion since that issue will go to all alumnae.

Fund Agent: Gertrude Anderson, 221 East Sandusky Street, Findlay, Ohio.

It is perfectly wonderful of you to respond so beautifully to my letters. There are so many, I thought I might save some of these letters for next time, but knew you would love having all the news pronto—especially since I have heard from several whose names haven't appeared in the 1921 news in several years.

Katharine Pennewill Lynch, living in Dover, Delaware, enjoys the activities of her club and church, which include committee meetings and social affairs. Her husband, a graduate of the University of Virginia, is an attorney as well as the President of a bank. I know they have contributed a great deal to their community. Their family includes Jane, who is 19, and in her second year at the University of Delaware after graduating from Penn Hall. Her plans for a career are to include an intensive one year course in merchandising preparatory to an interesting job in the business world. Their 15-year-old son, Howard III, 6'2", is at Hotchkiss School. Katherine writes she would love to see anyone from Sweet Briar who might be near Dover.

How I did appreciate your note, Ruth Simpson Carrington, and I know everyone will be glad to have news from you. What a wonderful life—a month in Florida and now in Europe. Regardless if business is your motive, I'm sure pleasure goes hand in hand and you and Berkeley are having a grand trip. You must promise to be at our next reunion in '51.

Gertrude Thams writes she is "in a whirl" and I know just what she means. She organized the Denver Alumnae group in 1932 which was active until the war, when everyone devoted their time to other interests and Gertrude went into war work. I'm glad to hear their Denver Club has some new attractive young girls to stimulate the enthusiasm a successful club needs. When I visit Denver again, I will surely let you know, Gertrude, and you must contact me when you anticipate a Chicago trip.

Catherine Hanitch's work must be very interesting—she has been a medical "Tech" in a large T. B. Sanitarium near Minneapolis. During the sammer, one can find Catherine and her mother at their home at a lake where she can have a lovely garden—at the moment, roses are her hobby. I do hope her anticipated trip to Sweet Briar will materialize this summer—it is more beautiful than ever. We all remember Catherine's roommate, Ruth Lundholm—she has her Master's Degree in bacteriology and now works at the State Board of Health.

Edith Durrell Marshall—for you I'm doing this (being your Secretary and Cub reporter has been fun) so lucky for you that post-card came through! After attending the February Council meeting at Sweet Briar, she spent a few days in Washington and then a week in New York with her sister Ruth. In March, "the traveler" managed to arrange a few days at luxurious White Sulphur—looks like Anne, her daughter, has inherited some of Edith's "wanderlust" ideas as she is going to Europe this summer to further her art studies. Anne has a job at the Museum in Cincinnati, and they have granted her a two months leave of absence. Edith's son attends Sewanee in Tennessee. At the moment, Edith is contributing some of her executive ability to the Girl Scouts, Church work and, of course, never neglecting Sweet Briar. This summer will find her at her summer cottage near Traverse City.

No apologies necessary for not answering my Christmas letter because hearing from you now was such a happy surprise—I'm directing this to Russe Blanks Butts, living in charming Natchez with two grown sons attending L. S. U. and the University of North Carolina. I think of you every year when a Travel Bureau sends me a Spring Trip itinerary to include the "Pilgrimage Tour." Last year I very nearly motored down and, of course, I'm always planning that I will do it some day. It is a charming gesture to open her lovely home to everyone and I am sure she enjoys it all, especially seeing so many Sweet Briar friends, Cupid Department—one of Ellen Wolf Halsey's daughters was married—sorry I have no more details.

I was so disappointed, Rhoda, that your trip to Texas rather than Collifornia blotted out Chicago as I had lonked forward to seeing you. I expect to be in New York about June 7 to see friends sail for England. I hope some of us can all have lunch together. Your anticipated busy summer sounds interesting so don't torget your promise to write me all about it for the next issue . . . I'll remind you come August! Was glad to hear you had such a nice visit with Fanny. I had a note from her written on her birthday, April 20, which she was celebrating at a dinner party with her family that evening.

How grand, Fanny, you are so well againplease give my kindest to Flo, Ruth, Gert, Julie and Elinor when you see them all again.

And now for news from "Gee" Brosius Kintzing-I quote-"Were there EVER such glorious times as we had at Sweet Briar"? Can't you all hear her saying that very thingand I think we all feel the same way. "Gee" has three most handsome sons-a picture, which she was so thoughtful to send me, proves it. Her oldest son was graduated from Dartmouth, served in the Navy, attended General Theological Seminary and now has been ordained an Episcopal priest as his life work, Her second son, David, is a Junior at Springfield College in Massachusetts, majoring in Physical Ed. Dick, the youngest, is in the Air Corps stationed at Keesler Field. What a wonderful family! "Gee" writes a heart condition has caused her a long illness-it was all too serious and we surely are all glad that you are so improved. You simply must be ready for our next reunion and if we can't "walk the back road to Amherst" we'll hire a chariot.

I know you all hear from Gertrude Anderson and hope the returns from her appeals for funds come in as generously as on my appeals for news. By all means join the New York Sweet Briar Day luncheon next Christmasthere will be so many there you know. After Gertrude earned her Masters Degree in Bacteriology, she worked in a Detroit hospital but transferred to one in Findlay, and is now a technician for several doctors in private practice. I was sorry to hear that her keen interest in horseback riding caused two such bad accidents, but apparently she is fine now. How fortunate that she can plan her time to include such wonderful trips to Alaska, the West Coast, a North Cape Cruise to Europe, besides her many trips East. Her many interests, gardening, collecting old glass, traveling, etc., must surely give her the "lift" we all need!

Francese Evans Ives from Austin, Texas, was one of my tablemates with the Lettes our first year, and I was so happy that a note to her brought an answer. She married Florence Ives' oldest brother and has been living in Upper Montclair-now that means, Francese, you should get over to the New York meetings! I speak for all of us when I say we are sorry to hear that you were left a widow five years ago-but, having two wonderful children and your mother has in a portion compensated for your great loss. Her daughter graduated from Pembroke this June and her son, Jack, is a Junior in High School. Francese has joined the business world, too, as a director in an organization sponsoring concert courses and travel lectures-sounds like very interesting work and with her poise, I'm sure she can do a good iob.

Marian Shafer Wadhams is always generous with news—a letter mentioned Lette Shoop Dixon and her husband visited Kate Cordes Kline in her lovely new home in Clearwater. Kate has been busy training some provisional girls for Junior League this winter. Marian remains in the Beginners Course doing Ceramics and, minus a masterpiece, she is still having fun. She will preside at a Sectional Conference for G. S. (Girl Scouts, I presume), and many national leaders in this organization will attend. Rochester will not be on my June trip East, but I will stop there some time—if not for lilac season, just to see you, Marian.

Florence Dowden Wood and family are planning their expedition for the summer, but have not decided whether to go to the Southwest or to Oregon and Wyoming-it is too bad time cannot be elastic so that you could stretch your summer vacation to include all the wonderful spots you have in mind. Their Easter holiday was spent at Cape May Court House, which has been the family seat since 1690doesn't it make you feel good to say "that's before my time"? She asked about the Geer girls, and the last mail brought a letter from Ruth. She is Mrs. Boice, living at 2553 Glenwood Avenue, Toledo, Ohio. Don't fail to call me when you are in Chicago-my office is directly across from the Tribune, which will be very convenient to see Charles Collins, the columnist, and have lunch with me, too. The Wood family should be able to dig up some new dirt and bones this summer, so I'm counting on an interesting letter from you for the October issue.

Ruth Geer Boice writes her family is a very busy one, living in a large house bursting with projects, and I can imagine with one daughter and two sons, all of college age, life would be very exciting. Her oldest daughter, Gratia, had two years at Sweet Briar and is graduating from the University of Michigan this June with a degree in music. She must be very talented as she has been asked to join the Pi Lamba Kappa, which is comparable to Phi Beta Kappa, and will probably get her Master's Degree next year. Ruth's son, Bill, is a sophomore at Toledo University, much interested in boats, and is the skipper for the Boice sailboat. Ruth wrote me while in Chicago with her youngest son, David, a high school junior, and he was having a real holiday riding the buses, elevated trains, and enjoying all means of transportation a metropolis has to offer. I am only sorry that you didn't call me, Ruth, and next time while David is taking a tour of the city, we can have lunch and a visit.

Kitty Davis Baynum had a wonderful holiday in Bermuda with her mother, and is now back "welcoming her lilacs and tulips" blooming at home. Kitty has rented a cottage in Canada for the summer, and will have her married daughter, husband and little grandson to enjoy it-it will be quite an experience "roughing it" in the Canadian woods with a six-month baby, but I am sure they will all love it. Her oldest son, Bob, a senior at Lehigh, has been accepted at the Princeton Theological Seminary and during this summer will be a councilor in a New Hampshire boy's camp. Kitty has assumed the presidency of the Ladies Aid in the large Presbyterian Church, which will keep her busier than usual for the next two years. I am keeping your phone number and will call you when I am in New York.

Frederica Hackmann Maxwell lives in Mount Union, Pennsylvania, and has a daughter, Jane, and a son, Sam. Jane was graduated from Goucher, and is now working for Mid Continent Air Lines as a reservationist in Kansas City. They just returned from a delightful trip to California. Her son is going to school in New York City, studying X-ray and medical technology. Frederica is very active in the Girl Scouts and the Shakespeare Club, but in addition to this, she does some substitute teaching and is superintendent of the Primary Department of the Sunday School. Thank you for your invitation to stop off in Mount Union, and hope I can arrange to do so some time.

We are having our Chicago spring meeting on Saturday—it will be a tea and our guest of honor will be Eleanor Harned Arp now on the Sweet Briar Council for this area. Dorothy Wallace will speak on some of her interesting work in connection with the atomic bomb, with slides to illustrate her talk. Elmyra Pennypacker became Mrs. Richard Yerkes a few weeks ago and will be at the party.

Greetings and best wishes for a wonderful summer to you all.

Class Secretary: MARGARET BURWELL (Mrs. K. D. Graves) 2505 Cornwallis Avenue, Roanoke 14, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Jant Guignaro (Mrs. Broadus Thompson) Box 480, Columbia, South Carolina.

First of all, my sincere thanks to all who have answered my appeals for news.

Catherine Zench Forster is now living in Vero Beach, Florida. Her daughter, Anne, is finishing her freshman year at Sweet Briar.

Edith Miller McClintock says she is busy with club and church work. Her oldest son is married and living in New York and the youngest is a junior in pre-med at W. and L. Edith insisted she had no news, but she knew how discouraging it is to have your post cards go unanswered. May I commend her example to you all.

Phyllis Payne Gathright has seen Mildred Baird White recently and says she looks exactly like she did the day she left Sweet Briar. Phyllis is living in Williamsburg, Virginia, and hopes that any of you who pass that way will call her (phone 1252). Her son, Norvell, is stationed at Charlestown, R. I.

Muriel MacKenzie Kelly's oldest son, Keith, was married in December and is living in Washington. The other son, MacKenzie, is a junior at Purdue. Muriel says her sister, Dorothy, is teaching at Detroit.

Marjory Cannon Hills is living in San Marino, California. She writes of the recent formation of a Sweet Briar club, of which she is president. They are planning a tea in the fall for the headmistress of secondary schools there.

Lorna Weber Dowling passed through Roanoke early this spring on her way home from Florida, and stopped long enough to telephone me. I was sorry there wasn't time enough for a visit, but I enjoyed talking to her. She had seen Virginia Stanbery Schneider when she came through Atlanta. From the newspaper I learned that Ginny's son was made Phi Beta Kappa at W. and L. this winter. We know you are proud of him, Ginny!

I had lunch with Mary Norvell Payne Millner a few weeks ago. She was here with her husband who was attending a Rotary convention. Although she lives only a short distance from Roanoke, in Danville, it had been years since we had seen each other and we had a grand time catching up on twenty-five years. Her daughter is teaching in Danville and her son, Victor, Jr., is in high school.

I had a grand long letter from La Vern McGee Olney... bringing me up to date on the Olneys. During 1946 and 1947 they covered the middle Pacific ... Honolula, Shanghai, Tokyo, Yokahama, and many other places. They lived for nearly a year on Guam in a house built by Jap prisoners. Since then Al has been in command at Mcffett Field in California. They have loved it there and hate to leave, but they they are moving to Dallas next month. Her oldest daughter, La Vern, is nearly sixteen and an "A" student and Roberta is eleven. Don't forget to send us your Dallas address, La Vern.

I am afraid I won't get back for Commencement this year as my youngest daughter, Marge, graduates from high school that same week-end. That strange noise you probably heard last Thursday was my sigh of relief when she received the notice of her acceptance by Sweet Briar for next year. Blair, my oldest daughter, sails the fifteenth of June for three months in England and the Continent including six weeks study at the Mozarteum Conservatory in Salzburg. I am looking forward to a very quiet and domestic summer. Do keep my address on hand and send me news at any time.

Fund Agent: MARY RICH (Mrs. R. E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17, Maryland.

There isn't much news this time, but I hope most of us will be back for reunion and we'll get caught up then. For those of you who can't make it, I'll try to absorb all the gossip and pass it on to you.

Dorothy Anstin Currie wrote a nice letter saying that she and her husband go to the Farmington Country Club in Charlottesville every year so I have hopes of seeing them some time. Dot also said she saw Elsie Wood Von Maur in Florida last year.

Flo Westgate Kraffert's daughter is to be married in June.

I saw Kay Klumph McGuire in Cleveland a month ago and as she and Fritz were in Washington the next week, we have really had a wonderful chance to visit. The day after I left Cleveland, Dorene Brown Humphrey phoned Kay, but was about to leave town, so their visit was confined to a lengthy telephone conversation. Kay said she soonded just like the Dorene of Sweet Briar days, and we were terribly disappointed that she hadn't 'phoned sooner so we could get together.

I was so pleased over a letter from Lorraine McCrillin Stott, but sorry to hear that she is not to be at reunion. She has two good reasons, otherwise she would be there. They are building a new home, which she says involves many decisions, and their son-in-law is graduating from V. P. I. June 13, and as they hope to drive down for that, it makes the time element bad.

There was one person I really did think would make reunion and that is Grace Merrick Twohy, but Grace says "No, unless Jack and I can get up for just a few hours Saturday." Jack says it's his reunion, too, and insists they drive up for long enough to say hello. Their daughter-in-law, Peggy Addington Twohy, graduated from Sweet Briar last June. On June 8 their daughter Patricia graduates from Finch Junior College in New York, so they are driving up for that, and in July, Grace and Louise Hammond Skinner are taking Patricia to Europe for two months. So it is easy to see why Grace hasn't much time to spare.

Hope to have a long letter for you next time, so please write me!

Class Secretary: NONE.

Fund Agent: Jani Bickir (Mrs. John II. Clippinger) 1263 Hayward Avenue, Cincinnati 26, Ohio.

Since there is no Class Secretary for the class of 1925, the items sent in by Cordelia Kirkendall Buckman were most welcome!

She writes, "My oldest son is finished school and has a position with Linde Air Products. My middle son is at The College of the Pacific in Stockton, California, a college founded by his paternal great-grandfather. And my afterthought, 10 years old, is in the fifth grade—another son, too." Cordelia is secretary-treasurer of the San Francisco-Oakland Alumnae Club.

She also writes that Sue Hager Rohrer's son is at the University of Virginia.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA LEE TAYLOR (Mrs. George F. Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

EDITOR'S NOTE: After this class letter was written, we received word of the death of loyce "Sis" MacGregor on June 17.

When this reaches you I hope each of you will be embarked on an Enchanted Summer—either by the sea, with sailboats in the distance, or perhaps beside a mountain stream, with the smell of the pines in the air—or in any far away places with strange sounding names.

Speaking of traveling Dorothy Keller Iliff and her husband Seward are just home from a wonderful trip in the east. On their way back to Washington, where they spent two weeks, Dot had a brief glimpse of Sweet Briar. Dut says they were not there long enough to see anyone, but even in their few minutes, she was impressed with the loveliness of Sweet Briar-the beauty of the flowering fruit trees in the dell. She spent several days with Dorothy Hamilton Davis in her perfectly beautiful home in Baltimore. Dottie Ham leads a most busy life and her latest project is representative for Baltimore's Sweet Briar Alumnae Group, which job we know Dot will dispatch in her always efficient and gracious manner. She was already deep in plans for the Baltimore tea to introduce High School girls to the attractiveness of attending Sweet Briar. Dot Keller Iliff had four days with her mother in Pittsburgh. She had a grand chat with Dorothy McKee Abney, who had just returned from seeing her son, Hamp. Hamp is attending Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and has pledged Phi Psi Fraternity. Dot Keller Iliff told me (Heavens! 1 think Dot should have the credit of Assistant Editor, for we always have a big "pow wow" over these letters, and I don't know what I would do without her excellent assistance) that before Helen Finch Halford sailed for London, after her visit in this country, her brother, who is an outstanding dentist in New York, advised Helen should have some dental surgery. So Helen's husband Cecil took their daughter Beverly and sailed for home. But thanks to this great modern world we live in, and Helen's indomitable spirit, she had the dental work done, flew home, arriving the next day after Cecil's and Beverly's return. The following day she had a marveloos birthday party for Cecil. Finch's American family and friends had loaded her down with baskets of goodies before she left, so she writes her English friends ate very well that night, Helen and Cecil are now enjoying a visit from Helen's mother and brother. What a wonderful person Finch is.

In April the Denver Alumnae group of Sweet Briar had a beautiful tea party at the gracious and delightful home of Edwina Newby Adams. Edwina's home is especially charming to us westerners, as it is a perfect copy of a southern mansion. It was a choice setting for the preview of Sweet Briar in the movie show we had for the girls and their mothers. Cecily Jansen Kendrick, our splendid Sweet Briar Club president, had used her wonderful ability for organization. With her tireless committee working it was a delightful party. We all really felt set up over the 75 mothers and daughters who attended in spite of Denver's dripping skies. The pictures of Sweet Briar gave the alumnae a bit of nostalgia, and we certainly hope some of our Denver girls decide to go to Sweet Briar. All the alumnae group agreed it is a wonderful place to be and

My husband Hank and I had just returned the day before the Sweet Briar tea from our spring treck to Phoenix. We had a "sooper time" basking in the sunshine, seeing some big league baseball games (this was an especial treat for us), going to the horse races, and really carrying out the old slogan, "When in Phoenix, do as the Phoenicians do." Phoenix was having their annual rodeo and everyone in stores, hotels, and every place, were dressed in western togs, and it cost you a trip to their kangeroo court, if they apprehended you in the streets without at least one western touch in your costume.

And now to the most exciting and thrilling piece of news that I have to report. Edna Lee was married to Joseph Gilchrist, Jr., on Saturday, March 26. Joe, the groom, is Bebe Gulchrist Barnes' brother. Edna, the dear thoughtful person she is, took time out from her many plans, to drop me a note, which I appreciated very much. Edna says, "The twins are delighted about the whole thing and pleased no end at the thought of living at Sweet Briar again." Joe, you know, is manager of the Sweet Briar farm. All our best wishes to you, Edna and Joe!

It was so good to hear from Polly Cary Dew Woodson. She says she feels like she is trailing far behind the gals of the class who are already grandmothers as her youngest boy is only seven. This year she has been President of his P.-T. A. Polly says this involves more work and more studying than she has done since she left Sweet Briar. In addition to all this she is 6th District Legislation Chairman of the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs. More power to you, Polly, it sounds like yoo were carrying out one of the basic principals of education to take one's place in the community.

And I know you are contributing an excellent job of it.

Martha Close Page writes she doesn't have a lot of news, but I thought Martha had the most wonderful news-that her family are all well. We are all so glad to hear this after the long seige you all had last year. Martha says her chief outside interest seems to be knitting. She is busy with sweaters, argyles and ties, for her husband Lody, and her sons. She has also made 10 sweaters this year. With Butch, her oldest boy, at Michigan State the Pages are missing out on their personal interest in basketball. I should like to add my praise here to Martha, for she knit the above sweaters for "Save the Children." Cornelia Wailes' address is Department of State, Washington, D. C., Martha, and thank you for always being so thoughtful in answering my postcards.

From Del Ray Beach, Florida, Adelaide Donglas Whitley writes they have been living there since her husband Rhea, was released by the Navy. Rhea is practicing law there. Adelaide says her oldest son is attending Princeton, the middle boy is at Stratford in Danville, and the Whitley's youngest child, Miss Peggy Rhea, is in school in Del Ray.

Page Dunlap Dee sent a wonderful newsy note about herself and interesting family. The Dees have been in St. Petersburg, Florida. arriving back in Mount Carmel, Illinois, on April I. Page, I'm sorry you didn't realize you were in my home town when you all were in Denver last fall. It would have been such fun to see you. Page writes of the trip she and her husband took last October. They first attended the Iowa vs. Notre Dame football game at Iowa City, then on to the old home place of Page's husband at Akron, Iowa. This was the first time Roy had been back there for 25 years. From there they went to Chamberlain, South Dakota, for a few days to pheasant hunt. Then on through the Bad Lands to Rapid City, Mt. Rushmore, through the Black Hills to Casper, Wyoming. On their way back they came through Denver. The next statement made me drool, for Page said they planned to go to the Kentucky Derby. Louisville is only several hours drive from Mount Carmel. The Kentucky Derby is certainly on "our wish list" and we were glued to our radio that famous Saturday afternoon. She also writes that Roy, Jr., graduates from high school at St. Leo Prep School, St. Leo. Florida, the last of May. Page and Roy plan to go down to the graduation but do not plan to remain long in Florida, as this is the busy time of year for them.

From Joyce "Sis" MacGregor came news that though she is still employed at the Buhl Planetarium and Institute of Popular Science, she has had a long seige in the hospital. It started in October when she spent 25 days in the hospital due to a spinal injury. She had to be flat on her back, which was no fun. Then in November, while she was convalescing, she developed jaundice and on November 23 the doctor put her back in the hospital and operated on December 9, and dear "Sis" has been there ever since. She says the Pittsburgh Sweet Briar Club sent lovely flowers and she had grand cards and notes from many of the Sweet Briar bunch.

What fun hearing from you, Tavenner Hazlewood Whitaker, and that your son will be in these parts this summer. Tavenner writes her lad is 16 years old and is coming to Round Up Lodge this summer. Tavenner, there is a Round Up Lodge near Sedalia, Colorado, which is a small town about 25 miles from Denver. Is this the place your son is going? You neglected to say in your letter what state he is coming to. Round Up Lodge sounds a little like Montana, and we were wondering. If it is at Sedalia, that is beautiful country. Do let us know. Tavenner was a fund of information, saying Martha Bachman McCoy has a beautiful 16-year-old daughter, and that she sees Henrietta Nelson Weston, Anne Maybank Cain and Margaret Elliot Manning about once a year. We would certainly like to hear more about these meetings. She also writes that Jane Riddle Thornton has two darling girls. As I write these names I can still see us all on second floor Grammer and the wonderful fun we had.

I thank you all very much for your help in writing this letter. A joyous summer to you each. Cherrio!

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH FORSYTH, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham 5, Alabama.

A salute to Jo Snowdon Durham for the grand job she did on the April issue of this News. It makes us feel mighty good that somebody wants to hear and tell about our doings. We read with mucho gusto!

Latest flashes from those who are and are not sewing on name tapes is as follows:

Maude Adams Smith and her husband and their son Lewis, 15, will spend the summer at Heir's Landing, South Dennis, Massachusetts. Daughters Carolyn, 12, and Miriam, 6, go to Camp Red Fox, Bristol, New Hampshire. Maude is active in the League of Women Voters.

I met a neighbor of Babe Albers Foltz on our West Indies Cruise. She told me that Babe was more fun and more popular than any gal in Fort Smith. We can easily believe that!

Missed Camilla Alsop Hyde in New York this time. The Hydes had been vacationing at Sea Isle, Georgia, not long ago. This summer they plan to look over various schools in New England for Camilla, Jr., and spend some time on the Cape.

Betty Bachman Hardcastle's son, John, goes to a camp in Delafield, Wisconsin, run by St. John's Military School. Kent, III, finishes Mechanics School at McCallie this June.

The Rawlings (Laura Boynton) are planning wonderful things for this summer—an extended visit to Central and West Texas—particularly El Paso, their former home. They will return by way of the Grand Canyon, Kaibab Forest and Salt Lake, where they have another family reunion in prospect. All the Rawlings are going which includes besides Mom and Pop, three children.

Daphne Bunting Blair's news came too late for the last issue. She sent an excellent snapshut of her two boys, said that skiing is the sport nearest their hearts but the mild New England winter fouled them up.

Elizabeth Cates Wall, lucky girl, sailed in May on the Queen Mary, a trip to Europe, no less—last seen in 1927.

We beheld Caroline Compton in the New York Times on April 3! She was attending a session at the Allison Art Colony in Allison's Wells, Mississippi. The article said that purtrait and landscape artists of wide reputation were attending the sessions. Only five names were mentioned, one of them was Caroline Compton, of Vicksburg, Mississippi.

After spending a couple of weeks in the Pocanos the Robbins (Esther Dickinson) will really get under way. Oldest boy Buckie will go to camp and Steve, 4½, will stay with Dickie's parents; then Buck and Dickie take off for California, he on business, she for the ride.

Eleanor Ervin Bullock says that they will have their usual summer, almost every weekend and as much time as possible in between spent on their boat, in the bay, gulf, and river, wherever there is a breeze.

Elizabeth Forsyth plans to spend the month of August in Daytona Beach, Florida.

Virginia Franke Davis and her husband begin their 1949 summer theatre season at Skaneateles, New York, on June 14. Twelve weeks of twelve Broadway shows with Broadway actors. She says that Skaneateles is a beautiful little village and a perfect vacation spot, if you don't believe it, come see.

The Shufords' (Alice Gibbon) daughter Margery goes to Camp Glenlaurel at Little Switzerland for the third summer. She loves it, Helen Mac and Dan.

Bebe Gilchrist Barnes—last seen and heard from by Connie Van Ness in New York. In the pink.

Claire Hanner Arnold took the two children to Vero Beach, Florida, for a couple of weeks in April. They came home by way of Atlanta and La Grange, Georgia, where both Julie and Wylie were in a wedding. Wylie gave the bride away and Julie was a junior bridesmaid. Claire and Sally Jamison go galavanting now and then . . . to a Sweet Briar luncheon at Martha Jamison Causey's recently.

The Streets (Ruth Lowrance) will be at Ponte Vedra, Florida, for the month of July. Frances has completed her freshman year at Sweet Briar.

Bill and I went over to Greenwich to call on the Cutlers (Rebecca Manning) in their beautiful new home overlooking the bay. Most of us would rock on the porch and enjoy the scenery—but not Beck—she is keeping her job and commuting daily and loves it!

Libbo Mathews Wallace claims she is a baseball widow. Dolly, her oldest, will lead assembly at West Virginia Wesleyan College, in July. Libbo is one of our star reporters and supporters for our 25th reunion. Recently, she sent the following enthusiastic review. I quote:

"Aren't all 27ers proud of our own Dr. Harpster? Sorry Hilda couldn't be with us for our 20th reunion, but what better way to celebrate the year than having the Viking Press poblish "The Insect World" by Dr. Hilda Harpster, in 1947?

"Don't be frightened even if you are not an entomologist, because it is easy reading. It is a must for garden clubbers. It may make you move to the country to enjoy more insects, but even in the city you can enjoy the metamorphosis of ants, flies, beetles, and even cockroaches and water bugs plus mosquitoes and clothing moths.

"If a cricket, lurking in your house, bothers you, read how the Chinese cherish them.

"While nur legislature was in session appropriating funds to fight the Japanese beetle, I learned why the beetle is not a pest in Japan!

"It is a wonderful thing that Nature has been generous in giving comfortable hiding places to small insects, but don't

Be an insect
Don't hide out
Plan now to attend
27's
25th reunuion."

End of quote.

Mary Opie Meade Bailey's Billy, 10. goes to Camp Kanuga near Hendersonville, North Carolina.

Enjoyed lunch at the Ritz with Elise Morley Fink and Connie Van Ness not long ago. Peter (16 and 6 feet) finished his second year at Taft. John, 9½, goes to camp in Maine, other than that, their summer plans were still in the making.

Pauline Payne Backus delights me with a snapshot of her beautiful baby every now and then.

Roberta Perrin Adams (now living in Fullerton, California) and her family will spend the summer in Minnesota.

Billy Quisenberry Marks took her boys to the beach in June. Bill, 12, is going to a camp at Buena Vista, Colorado, called the Round-up. Sounds wonderful! Billy and Stanley, 8, plan a trip to Texas, figuring it can be no hotter than Alabama.

Jo Snowdon Durham may well be the envy of us all-and as a roving reporter-she can't be beat. She goes more places, sees more people, and gets more done and with it all has more children than most of us. Shortly after she sent the April news to press she and Ken saw Compy in Vicksburg, talked long distance to Madeline, spent 3 days in Fort Worth and saw a good bit of Marjorie Stone Neighbors and her husband-drove from Tulsa to Fort Smith-was wild when she found Babe was in Tulsa for the day-so spent the day at a cattle auction! Then, the month of May found Jo off on another two weeks tour. Her itinerary went something like this-from lowa to Plainfield, New Jersey, in 2½ days, one night family reunion there; a night in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, with Sue Hager Rohrer and Dick; on to Washington for two nightsmore kinfolk. They drove by S. B. gates in a blinding rain hurrying to the Ivey's (Eugenia Goodall) in Lynchburg. They had dinner with Lib and Harry Wallace in Charleston, breakfast in Huntington with Lily Lovett which lasted till 4:30, grand visit with her and Middie. Jo is back home again gardening, attending the children's various recitals and anticipating house guests for practically the whole summer. Even Jo admits life is pretty hectic but well worth it. Sorry there isn't space to relate all the super accounts she gave of you and your husbands.

Nar Warren Taylor tells a little about Milwaukee-Downer Seminary of which she is headmistress. Among her students is Eleanor Harned Arp's Janie. There are 360 in the school from 4 to 18, including 50 boarders.

The Stanley's (Sara von Schilling) oldest, Jimmy, 12, is going to Camp Mondamise in the Smokies.

Kelly Vizard Kelly and her husband went to Mobile to the Mardi Gras. She is now busy with the Joint Flower Show of the Darien Garden Club and the Garden Group of Darien. Maggie Leigh Hobbs and Kelly are in charge of the children's exhibits and entertainment.

Betty Williams Simmons' three girls go to Camp Merrymeeting in Bath, Maine.

Beth Williams Cadigan tells us that she has a fascinating job in the Fine Arts Department at Amherst College. Jeanne, 19, finished her freshman year at Wheelock College in Boston. Judy, 16, is nn the Honor Roll at Amherst High and Dick, 12, the athlete, is going to camp Tecuneset on Lake Winnepasaukee. Beth expects to be very much at home this summer and says she will welcome the sight of any friends driving through her section of the country.

News from the Garnetts (Kitty Wilson) is that Maria will go to Camp Alleghany but that Kitty will go with the two "Thes" to Camp Greentree where "The" Senior is part owner. Kitty claims that she is eligible to our White Hair Club. Why don't we organize, our membership would be bound to grow and grow!

Virginia Wilson Robbins will take her two children to Cape Charles in June for their Lib Wood McMullan has been vacationing at Virginia Beach and Nags Head. This will be the first year in some time that Betty, 17, has not gone to camp. She graduates from Stuart Hall next year. Charles, 10, goes to Camp Arrow Head for a month.

And that, ladies, winds up the last news for the season 1948-49. The next will be on the 1949-50 calendar. If you have enjoyed reading this lengthy recital—give yourself a pat on the back, for it is only so, because each of you has cooperated so generously.

I THINK, without a doubt, THAT WE ARE THE BEST CLASS THAT EVER HAS BEEN OR EVER WILL BE AT S. B.!

Class Secretary: Barbara Di Z. Lewis (Mrs. Alan M. Palmer) c/o National City Bank of New York, Apartado 87 bis, Mexico, D. F., Mexico

Fund Agent: Katherine Leadbeater (Mrs. Howard Bloomer, Jr.) Shoreacres, Lorton, Virginia.

This will advise you all that I am off to foreign climes again . . . my husband has been overworking and we are going to spend a few months doing nothing. Except that he feels so awful, poor lamb, I am simply delighted with him . . . it is such a perfect excuse for being lazy! We are leaving New York on May 31, and will drive down in very leisurely fashion, spend a few days with my mother and sister in Mexico City, and then head for the provinces. My plans include the writing of some stories on food (and I hope some misguided soul publishes same), and a cookbook . . . Alan hopes soon to feel sufficiently energetic to put paint on canvas or some such innocuous pursuit. You will hear the results, if any, in September.

Meanwhile, I have offered to continue to write this news for you, but I will need some cooperation. I cannot send out postcards from there, so you will all have to try to remember to drop me a line whenever you can; whenever you have seen each other; whenever you have done something interesting; in fact, just whenever, period.

Speaking of such postcards, Kitty Leadbeater Bloomer is the champ . . . so I can tell you that she has conquered the old ulcer sufficiently to enter the 15th annual Narcissus Show of the Garden Clubs of Virginia, and win three silver cups. This is the second time she has won the sweepstakes and says, so help her, it's the last time she'll try for it: the nervous strain is more than the ulcer can bear. As I am sure she is the same old Kitty, so I am sure she'll be right in there again next year. She also told of spending three months in Florida . . . and a week-end in Williamsburg produced a long chat with Anne Harrison Shepberd Lewis, who hasn't changed a bit in 20 years except for being a bit thinner (oh, Paradise, oh Eden!) . . . has three boys ranging from 11 down to 5. Anne Harrison had Sarah Dance Krook visiting her last summer and says she is the same as ever. Sarah is doing lots of good civic and educational work in Flouston.

A post card from Susan Byford Jelley Dunbar tells me that she returned from her European honeymoon, which proved just as exciting and interesting as you can imagine it would ... lit for about five minutes and then took off for San Francisco en route to Honolulu, Manila, Hongkong, Shanghai and Japan . . . I imagine the Hongkong and Shanghai bits had to be left out, but the rest of it sounds wonderful. Will be gone six months to a year and says, "I like the new job (marriage) better than Previews!"

Sarah McHenry Crouse returned to New York from a long Southern trip, full of all the delightful things she had seen and done . . . the Pilgrimage to Natchez . . . Vicksburg where she saw some of Caroline Compton's lovely etchings. She stopped at Sweet Briar and saw Dr. Harley, as terrific as ever, Miss Rogers, Miss Ruby Walker, Miss Long, Dan Boone, Helen Mac and Dr. Crawford . . . her daughter, Jean, a freshman, went to Deland, Florida, for spring vacation . . . reports that Betty Balch had been deep sea fishing off the Florida Keys. Betty's Cynthia, a classmate of Joan's, is following in her mother's footsteps, being both pretty and popular. Ruth Lowrance Street's daughter is also with them, and looks inst like Ruth.

Diana Koch Lea is, as usual, up to her neck in doings . . . amateur theatricals, swimming and bicycling, and obstreperous children!

I talked to Marion Jayne Berguido the last time I was in Philadelphia, and hope to see her and Carlos (not to mention Carlos, Jr.) on my way to Mexico, as we will be in Philadelphia for a day or two. If possible I'll see some others of you then, too, and you'll hear about it later. Also, in Washington, I'll talk to Inch Culver Mann and Judy Thomas, even if I don't see them.

A wonderful summer to you all, dears . . and please don't forget to drop me an occasional line. If you don't, one of you will have to bestir herself and take over this job . . . that is a threat and a promise! So let me hear from you.

So! There are only 36 of us who take this ALUMNAE News. Fie and for shame! It would seem my letters to the other 163 are more or less like shouting in the wilderness. Because of this, there is all the more reason for my gratitude to those of you who have so kindly answered. The amazing point about this job is that I'm sure these kind people remember me not a whit, yet their letters are as full of friendly warmth and flavor as freshly baked cupcakes.

First, may we extend our sympathy to Dongie Lyon Althouse on the death of her father this past winter. She wrote of her two tomboy daughters of 13 and 14 and her thrill and pride in the joint concert of SBC with Haverford, sponsored by the SBC Philadelphia Alumnae Chapter. She said the girls and their voices were lovely, and the whole thing a grand success.

Word comes from our Sally Reahard that she made it back to Indianapolis with all the things one goes to California to get rid of. What price, California, this year?

Mary Earle Kaminer is living in Sao Paulo, Brazil, having moved there from Recife some 7 years ago. Her husband is a cotton man with Anderson Clayton, and they find life very pleasant down there, where there is a large American colony. Every year they return to their home state of South Carolina for a visit. Mary has-to quote her-a delightful stepson of 19 who is a sophomore at Yale. And from this South American source comes word about Atlanta, Georgia, where Boyce Lokey Martin is reported to have 4 children and a husband whose stories are currently appearing in the Saturday Evening Post. Also that Augusta Porter Orr has as many children and is as attractive as ever.

Ruth Keeler is still in that love of a town of North Salem, New York, where she was raising dogs until the meat shortage stopped her. During the war Ruth worked for the state running farm labor camps for Jamaican, Bahamian and colored men, women and children. Martha Lambeth Kilgore modestly wants no one to know that she has an M.A. in psych from Vanderbilt, for fear we'd think her odd. We'd love her if she went in for Sanskrit. In 1935, after a round or two with R. H. Macy's, she took a trip around the world, spending 6 months at Corregidor and 6 weeks in Shanghai. Lammie wrote that Charlie Coles Friedman has a daughter of about 6 born on Army maneuvers in Texas. She also said that Mercer Jackson Wellford is living in Chester, Pennsylvania, with her 2 children and her husband, Carter, who is going places and doing things with Du Pont.

Emilie Turner Cowling has just adopted a boy, now 15 months old. She was a WAVE for 3 years, on duty in Norfolk. It seems that she ran across Emma Riely Lemaire when both of them were being released from Navy duty on the same day in the same spot. Emilie's husband is with the C. & O., and is also president of the Little Theatre for which Emilie works on props and costumes.

I know you will be as interested as I am to see how many husbands have started new ventures after the war, as did Mary Huntington Harrison's. Her husband, along with two partners, has opened an investment business which proved a success from the start. Three cheers for men who can kick over the traces and start doing what they really want! Mary's letter also brought news that Agnes Sproul Bush lives on a farm in Virginia and has 3 children; and that Kay Graham Seiter has 4 and a husband with the telephone company. If you want to talk to her long distance inside the state of New York for free, you can!

Reggie Foster Askew's letter was delightful. Reggie has just finished with German measles. Their farm, mentioned in the last issue, is 48 acres of woodland and 4 acres cleared. They have been through 10 years of it and hens, goats, sheep and one fruitless Duroc sow. They are now down to one mare, one colt, and nobody rides. Ess, her husband, is with the Spencer Steel Company, in Buffalo. Nancy Russell Carter, '34, and Barbara Lewis Howard, '29, and Trudy Lewis Magavern, '31, have summer places within a few miles of Reggie and they all take walks together.

Yesterday came a letter from Caroline Maury who is teaching the 4th grade in the Kentucky Derby town and working on her M.A. in preparation for a principalship. She says she keeps in touch with Sherill Bromfield Verner in Brevard, North Carolina, where she spends a few weeks each summer. And also Willie Smith McConnell who has a chicken farm, 3 imps, a house with a perfect view perched atop a hill, and an ole wite hoth.

Laura Lee Sage Horner kind of scares me into wanting to hide in the woodwork. Just give a listen to this! Daughter One—married to an ensign in '48. Daughter Two—a sophomore at Vassar and to be married in September. Son One and Two at Christ Church in Arden, North Carolina. Daughter Three and Son Three are twins: one, a cowboy, and the other, a ballet queen. Don't go away. There's more. Laura Lee is a member of the Community Planning Council; local chairman for the North Carolina Symphony, etc., etc., et cetera. She says that Harriet Shaw was in Asheville this last winter at a gathering of the SBC clan and they had so much fun that they planned another get-together for the 29th of April.

Jette Baker Davidson, from Lynchburg, writes she has two boys and two girls—one, named Suejette!

Lindsay Prentis Woodroofe—and you will die at this—is painting trays. Item two: all her children are honor students. Being the wife of a minister it is Lindsay who went on a Lenten shopping spree in N. Y. C., while Bob slaved over services at St. Bartholomew's and All Angels' for a week. And here's another chartle for you. Jo Rend Stubbs, besides tripping from Nassau to San Francisco since Christmas, is in charge of the Ladies' Golfing Activities at the club for the summer. Be it said, however, to her credit that she has two children and does work for the Junior League and the Children's Relief.

Diddy Matheus Palmer's letter was full of news. Did you know that she was a newspaper gal until 1942 when Jr. was born? Her husband, who is a VMI man, opened up a launderette after the finish of his ETO service in 1945. Diddy says that Mary Moss Powell has 2 grown children and lives next to Alice Tucker Jones Taylor in Baltimore. Alice T's husband took over St. David's Episcopal Parish in Roland Park last spring. And Jane Callison Smith is married to "an elegant gent" and has 3 children.

Liz Stevenson Tate's letter read exactly as if Liz were talking in person. It vibrated like a plucked fiddle string. During the war, she worked with the local US Engineers. She has been raising field trial English setters for 5 years and has just won her first stake. It is the first time she "did" N. Y. C. from the Flower Show to plays through to concerts. Her husband is the light of her eye and talks to Ruth Keeler's papa in N. Y. C. on business about 3 times a week. How small our world is! Liz has decided to slow down and do one thing for the city, church and fun (dogs), which will not keep her from sniffing delightedly at the Azalea Festival in North Carolina, the only state, and admiring her one son, 5'11".

Betty Boone Willis is another person whose husband has started afresh after the war and this amid alien corn, too, in the "great, wonderful west"—to quote Betty. He not only started up an accounting office but is also practicing law. Life in Albuquerque is very pleasant and the climate is out of this world.

Well, that from New Mexico, From Longmont, Colorado, came news of Meredith Oakford Johnson. Carl, her husband, has several farms and feeds 700 head of yearlings. Meredith is doing all the proper things from Brownie leader to bridge clubs and working for the church, which is entertaining a state convention at Estes Park this June. She has been riding (1) a pure-bred black Arabian stallion and (2) a 4-year-old creamy white Tennessee Walker stallion. Heavens to Betsy! Do you RIDE those things? They have a cattle ranch in northern Colorado where they go for part of the summer and have spent the last two winters in Phoenix. She enclosed a snap of her 3 little girls ranging in ages from 2 to 8, about the cutest batch of biscuits I've seen in a long time. She says they live about an hour from Estes Park and the same distance from Denver and that a big welcome is on the mat to any SBC-ite coming out that way.

And lastly . . . We have a bride in our midst! Our May Court Eleanor Henderson was married on April 2 to Guy Hamilton Merry. I hope she will have the chance to read this and know that we send her our heartiest good wishes for a bright future. Her new address is 2911 Lake Forest Drive, Augusta, Georgia. She and Guy took in New Orleans and Guatemala on their wedding trip.

Here endeth the gleanings. A cool, pleasant summer to all of you, full of flowers and fresh raspberries and peaches and thick cream and a good book or two to read and the leisure to do it.

Addendum: For all my love for little, little children, I wouldn't think of according them an "s" final on bairn.

It is a real pleasure to make my report this rime because I have had such good response from the eards that I sent out.

First came a card from Isabel Solomon Levkoff announcing that she and her husband are back in Cleveland—since the war—and they have a 2-year-old daughter, Sandra.

Helen Sim Mellen had a surprise visit last winter from Ginny Quintard Bond's mother and Alice Barrous Francisco's mother-in-law. Mrs. Quintard reports that Ginny is, as always, busy with Junior League, and other worthwhile causes.

Alice and Stephen Francisco have five children, and in spite of the size of the family, their home is peaceful and restful to visit, all of which made Helen feel very lazy with only one child and "not too many good works," but I still recall that she devoted much valuable time to war work.

Nat Roberts Foster and Walter took their elders to Sarasota, Florida, uotil the eod of March. Then all had a pleasant leisurely drive home via Virginia and on to Wilmington, Ohio. Except for Mary Bess, her sister, she saw no "Briarites." Mary Bess spent some time with them in the South.

Ginny Cooke Rea and "Dr. Fritz" attended a medical meeting in Atlanta before Easter and managed to see Jean Cole Anderson who lives in Marietta. Ginny enjoyed seeing Jeao's home and two attractive children, Lovett and David. Later Jean joined them in Atlanta for a "spree". Ginny's latest endeavor is a day nursery for under-privileged children. She does not teach but merely organized the project with largely volunteer help.

A letter from Ella Williams Fauber told how busy she is kept with her 3 boys, with no help at present. Her main interest is the Junior League, when there is time for outside interests. Charlotte Kent Pinckney's most active interTroup of which Anne is a member. Her children are Jace, 13, Cotesworth, 9, and Anne, 8. Anne will go to Scout camp later, and Jane is a curved bar scout. Charlotte feels that scouting affords a fine opportunity for teaching peace and tolerance through world frieodship, and she is anxious to know how many of our classmates are as interested as she. So I wish some of you would write one more extensively on the subject.

1 had just learned of 'Pop' Worthington's

est is Scout work. She still has her Brownie

I had just learned of 'Pop' Worthington's death when Nancy wrote me the news. He was ill for three weeks with pneumonia and passed away on April 12. I know this sad news will come as a shock to all of you, for he certainly stood for all that was finest and, as I wrote Nancy, although I deeply respected him as a teacher I was more genuinely fond of him as a person.

At present Nancy is very busy trying to locate various personnel in preparation for the opening of another camp season. Recently she saw "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at Sweet Briar and considered it the most excellent Paint and Patches production in years.

Marjorie Webb Maryanov had no particular news, however, I got a kick out of her reply, to-wit, "If you can make cleaning and cooking three meals a day glamorous reading you may convey it to my classmates of yesterday."

Jane Tucker Ferrell continues to lead the "full life," namely P.-T. A., church work, Woman's Club and Red Cross.

Ella Williams Fauber writes how glad she is to have Nancy Worthington for a neighbor and says she has a lovely apartment and is a wonderful addition to Lynchburg life. Recently Ella had word of Mildred McCreary Driver's having had a serious operation from which she is now recovering.

Gill Hilton Pritchard said that she had no news. How about that fine new son of yours, Gill? We would like to hear something about Harriet Wilson McCaslin seems to be leading the sort of life we all dream about. She and Murray, her husband, have a place in the country which comprises 5 acres; 2½ acres in the front lawo, the rest in a small orchard, a garden and a berry patch. Her husband is the gardener of the family. Helen keeps fully as occupied with the children. Janet Louise is 10, Ellen Jane is 7, and Scott, 4. Harriet has been fortunate in having good help so living in the country has been a real pleasure.

Nancy Coe spent an interesting winter, having sung in the Bergen, New Jersey Choral Society under the direction of John Harms; also in Bach's St. Matthew's Passion, given at Town Hall by the John Harms Chorus.

Ginny Quintard Bood manages to get more information on one brief card than anybody I know. She and Eddie and the children had a house at Little Deer Isle, Maine, last summer but this year the boys are going to day camp and later will visit their grandmother in Stamford, Connecticut, while Mr. and Mrs. "B." catch their breath. Between the job of vice-president of the Boston Junior League and that of the Dedham Community Association, she has sandwiched in odd jobs for the P.-T. A. and the Community Fund. In the winter she had a bout with pneumonia but has rallied her forces and her chief occupation at present is hounding the contractor who is remodeling an old barn which is to be the new home of the Dedham Woman's Exchange. She also took a course in dressmaking which is producing astonishing results in creations and finished up the year with a course in public speaking. Ginny, I nominate you the Woman of the Year. That is an astonishing number of accomplishments and activities.

Peg Ferguson Bennett writes that Joe succeeds the Dean of Olivet in that position as of June 30. This means that both of the Bennetts will be in the administrative office, since Peg will continue as registrar. Dexter, who will be 15 in May, is completing his first year at Cranbrook and Steve will finish the 3rd grade in the local school.

Naomi Doty Stead sends greetings from the Southwest, where she and her family moved the first of the year. She writes that the climate in Tucson has proved most healthful for them all and she has been glad to shed the task of snow shovelling and oursing winter colds. They have bought a home there and George has bought a business so it is a permanent change for the Steads.

Polly Snift Calhoun has a new venture, namely that of coaching a team of elementary girls in basketball. None of them had ever played before. After one month they won their first game. The major part of the winter Polly spent "kibitzing" for bills in the State Legislature especially working for the Educational Bill. As usual, Polly has a tremendous garden, which furnishes plenty for freezing and canning. At the time her card was written she was planning a trip to the U. N. Since two of her children play on the baseball team she had been hauling children to and from the games.

Another message came from Dot Ayres Holt who lives in Hampton, Connecticut. Her son, who is 11, is attending Andover. Both Dot and Jack are up to their eyes in gardening and other outdoor work. Their main outside activity is connected with the Grange. Correct me, Dot, if I misread the last word.

And speaking of errors in reporting, my apologies to Jo Gibbs DuBois for saying that she and her husband had bought an old "storehouse." It should have been stone house. Jo conveyed to me the sad news of her father's sudden death while on the way to visit them. They were going to celebrate his 75th birthday when it occurred. We all sympathize with Jo at this particular time.

Jean Cole Anderson wrote about what a wonderful time she had reuning with the Reas. Jean has also been busy with rehearsals in the local Theatre Guild play, "You Cao't Take It With You." Besides this she has been busy helping collect properties, which included everything from a horsehair sofa to a stuffed alligator. She was stage manager of the production. Jean continues to teach a Sunday School class of 9 horrid darling little boys—4th graders. She has my sympathy—I tried it once.

Jane Bikle Lane attended the Haverford Sweet Briar concert and was thrilled by it. She was disappointed in the attendance though, for it was a very worthwhile performance. Bet West Morton writes that since Jere has Alaskan duty again this winter, she plans to pick up her four girls when school is out and come East to visit her family. Last year when the ship came into Cordova for two weeks she flew up to join Jere but this year the "working ground" is too far out in the Aleutians for that.

A brief card from Martha McCowen Burnet tells me of a visit from Aggie Cleveland Sandifer and daughter, Prudence, for a weekend, Virginia Hall Lindley, Aggie and Martha took their respective daughters to Winston-Salem, North Carolina, for a visit and Martha reports that although of an age, such a difference in sizes you never saw. I'll ber they got a good showing though if they resemble their "mamas." This reminds me that the article that was to appear in McCalls about Martha, came out in March but I missed it so I have written for a copy of the magazine.

Tillie Iones Shillington sent me a long letter which enclosed first the announcement of the arrival of Lib Stribling Bell's third son last October. Her other two boys are ages 7 and 10. Tillie also mentioned the fact that Cynthia Vaughn Price and husband are living in Salisbury, North Carolina.

Dot Boyle Charles still lives in London, Ontario, Canada. And Ginny Keyser continues to work in New York. Our Tillie has a son that has just turned 16, and another 14, and a girl 10. The former is interested only in driving the car and as Tillie expresses it, "Knows more than he ever will again." It's too bad we can't get our two sons together. They would have a lot in common.

I know all of you were saddened by the news of Mary Lou Flournoy Brown's sad and most untimely death. It was a great shock and seemed more tragic since she leaves not only a husband, but two children-a boy, and a girl.

I am sure that most of you will like the new system just started by the NEWs of writing a full obituary rather than putting in just the box notice used heretofore and I know that we are all proud of the very fine tribute made to Mary Lou in this issue.

I have just returned from a most pleasant 2 day visit with Mary Stewart Kelso Littell and her husband in Indianapolis. Stewartee and I had a lot of chatting to do to catch up on the last year and a half. Carolyn, her young daughter, continues to attend the Grier School out of Philadelphia. She will return home just a few days before Stewartee and Dr. Joe (an ear, nose and throat specialist) leave for a flying trip to California, combining pleasure and a medical convention.

Most of my time has been taken up with the children's school activities. Shippy was fortunate enough to be chosen as one of the two delegates to represent his school at the annual World Affairs Institute. It was an interesting experience for him since he had to make reports not only to his own school, but also before the local Kiwanis and Rotary clubs. Later he had one of the leads in the school play, "Night of January 16," and Monday he winds up his school year by giving the Gettysburg address at the Memorial Day services. Janie continues to be very active in Scouts and also is busy writing articles for her school annual. Since I have no accomplishments of my own to mention, I have to boast a bit about my children in order to try and maintain my status with my worthwhile classmates. Please continue your grand support in answering my cards promptly-it is such a

Fund Agent: MILDRED GIBBONS, 918 First National Bank Building, Tampa 2, Florida.

This certainly must sound like a voice from the blue-but I can't tell you what a thrill it is to be even remotely connected with Sweet Briar again after (I still can't believe it) seventeen years. My only regret is that, due to an unexpected rush of events, climaxing a typical Plummer winter in Florida, I was unable to get out as many cards as I had planned. However, your response was wonderfuland I'll promise to do better next time.

First of all, from Dorothy Smith Berkeley in Lexington comes word that she, Edmund and the rest of their entourage will be moving on June 7 to Chapel Hill, where Edmund will begin work on the 9th for his doctorate at the University of North Carolina. Their address will be 17 Rogerson Drive. Beautiful as it is at Chapel Hill, they regret leaving Lexington, where Edmund has been teaching at W. & L.

Dot's letter also included a few other tidbits, mainly concerning '32ers in Charlottesville. Henrietta Bryan Alphin's husband has accepted a position on the Medical faculty of the University of Virginia, while Connie Fowler Keeble and her family are living in an attractive house they bought last year on Valley Road at the same university.

Dot also adds a bit to Connie's reticent account of her activities as a research technician. Connie has been working for the past year with Dr. Sandusky at the University of Virginia on anti-biotics, with gratifying results, one paper which is to be published in the Annals of Surgery shortly. Dr. Sandusky included Connie's name in a paper he presented at a meeting in California last fall, while she has been tripsing this spring attending meetings in Washington and in Richmond. In her spare minutes, Connie is kept from twiddling her thumbs by her two sons, aged 12 and 61/2.

On other matters, Connie writes that she sees Miss Glass frequently in Charlottesville, and that she looks wonderful. Betty Allen Magruder is still in New York at the Psychiatric Institute finishing her special work, and Irene Kellogg gets north to Virginia from Daytona Beach, Florida, for a visit at least once a year.

Stuart Grover Moreno cracked through from Washington with a real letter with news that Jack left the middle of May for China in command of a ship. For the present "Tuey" and her off-spring "Miss Susy," whom I still can't believe is in the second grade, will remain on these shores until things are a bit more settled. They are hoping "Tuey's" sister Ann will come east from California to spend the summer with them, while "Tuey" is at present rounding out her year's work as parttime physical education instructor at Friends School. This has been her second year in this unexpectedly athletic capacity-and she loves

From Wilmington, North Carolina, Virginia Bellamy Ruffin writes that she is knee-deep in raising children and in household duties. Her oldest daughter Suzanne will be ten this month; her son Peter is eight years old; while the baby Virginia was two in April. Apparently the Ruffins have been traveling this spring, for in April they took the two oldest children to Williamsburg, Virginia; on May 6 they were in Washington for a cousin's wedding; and with the closing of school they plan to move to Wrightsville Beach for the summer, They are planning for a visit there from "Flappy" Pancake.

It was grand to hear again from Sally Shullenberger Brown, who somehow manages a most inclusive extracurricular life as well as a domestic one with her four children, aged 12, 9, 6, and 4. Sally writes that she had been working this past year as State Chairman of Open House in Kentucky. The purpose of this organization is to encourage visitors to see houses and gardens instead of just Kentucky's famed Derby and juleps. This year, twentytwo states were represented, as well as Canada and Mexico. Sally has recently been back to Sweet Briar for a meeting, following which she planned on visiting Cordelia Penn Cannon, 3rd, at Greensboro. Sally is well representing '32, being recently elected to the Board of Overseers at Sweet Briar.

Up in Pittsburgh, Ruth Kerr is careering with a gusto, being store superintendent at Jonasson's, and very busy. She writes that she frequently sees Betty Uber Eby, who also lives there.

From Tampa, I frequently see Mildred Gibbons, although not nearly as often as I'd like. Mildred is working in the law offices of her brothers in town but lives at the beach. which necessitates a good long commutation daily. However, she looks wonderful.

It really seemed like old times to hear from Alice Weymouth McCord, now living in Allendale, New Jersey. Although she writes that she has no world-shattering news to relate, it was almost atom-bursting to me to learn that her daughter is now aged 10. Alice says that she and Bud moved into a new home a year ago-and are happy as clams. It's a large house with lots of yard, on which the Mc-Cords are expending countless dynamos of energy in gardening.

And, from Wayne, Pennsylvania, Emily Maxwell Littlepage writes that she is going around in circles trying to keep up with a teen-ager, another of eight and a baby boy of 18 months. When I last saw Emily about four years ago at a cousin's house in New Jersey, she hadn't changed one iota since 1932. And, I'll bet she still is just the same.

As for myself, Frank and I are rapidly becoming Floridians, having moved from Cortland, New York, to Tampa two and a half years ago, after Frank's return from the wars in the Pacific. Last year, we finally collected our thoughts and our few possessions and bought a tipy house—no more thrilled homeowners in the world, I am certain, ever existed. Frank is an officer in a Tampa bank, while I recently took op the career life again with a job in a dentist's office.

That about winds up the story for now—Please do write when you can—and I'll try to shoot more news in your direction with the big ALUMNAL NEWS edition in the fall.

lund Agent: Sue Graves (Mrs. William K. Stubbs) 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana.

Gerry Mallory is very busy with a heavy schedule in howling and paddle tennis tournaments. I had hoped to be able to give you some of her results, but unfortunately do not know them, but feel sure she was successful.

Lois Foster Moore sent me a most attractive card from Sweet Briar. She spent a delightfol week-end there in April and found it lovelier than ever.

Frances Netalle Newberry keeps busy with P.-T. A., A. A. U. W., and quite a bit of church work. Also Girl Scouting with her ten-year-old daughter, Eloise. Frances is looking forward to the golfing season, which she enjoys.

Jeannette Shambangh Stein keeps busy with her three daughters—Nancy, 11; Susan, 9; and Carol, 5. All attend University of Chicago Laboratory School, where the Parents' Association is always active. Jeanette is active in the Hyde Park League of Women Voters and by way of recreation attends modern dance class, plus square dancing with her hashand. "Square dancing proves to be just the antidote for a busy investment counselor!" I should think it might be, as square dancing is such marvelous fun. It is my favorite pastime.

Miki writes from Newport News "still very busy trying to ron the peninsula—still have 2 beautiful daughters at my heels—architect husband still building castles—somewhere between writing minutes, pinning hems, and planting pansies you may find the girl that 'Miki' once was! Illa Jesse Latham went to Natchez with the garden girls!"

Nancy Howard's correct name and address is Mrs. Reunah F. Randolph, 19 Bradford Street, Ambassador Apartments, Charleston, West Virginia.

Sarah Wilson Barbour's time is well filled staying home and looking after the three young Barbours. She often sees Roberta Drane Wood, '32. Sarah writes that Mercer Jackson Wellford, '30, has been visiting in Nashville.

Mary Netille Sieman spent six weeks in Pass-a-Grille Beach, Florida, in March and April. They had a wonderful time. Her daughter, Mary Ann, age 8, has decided that she wants to go to Sweet Briar.

Louise Woodward Hurtt has lived in Laurel, Maryland, for over ten years, and says she leads a very quiet home life, kept bosy with the care of two young sons, two dogs, a cat, and since Easter, two baby ducks. Grace Kane lived nearby but Louise sees her no more now, as she left early in the year to teach school in Santiago, Chile.

On May 30 I drove over to Sweet Briar to spend the night in Dr. Fisher's home near the Boxwood to be in Jean Sprague's wedding, in Amherst on May 31, to Mr. Charles Hulvey. The wedding was lovely. They were married in the dear little church in Amherst and the reception was held at Jean's mother's family home (the Robertson's old home) across the street from the church. Charlie's sister, Margaret Wright, and I were Jean's attendants.

The day before the wedding, Jean, Beck Strode Lee, and I had a fine visit.

Also had the pleasure of a visit with Mary Lee Ryan Strother, Eleanor Alcott Bromley, and Nancy Russell Carter, who spent the night with us June 3 on route to reunion. They are fine and it was grand to see them, too.

Fund Agent: JIAN SPRAGUI (Mrs. Charles Hulvey, Jr.) 1910 Kalorama Road, Washington 9, D. C.

Many thanks to Anne Marvin who sent me a clipping announcing the engagement of Jean Sprague to Charles Hulvey, Jr. Jean thoughtfully took the time to write that she would not be at reunion due to "circumstances beyond her control" and sent her best to everyone. She was married May 31 in Amherst, Virginia, in the Episcopal Church where her mother was married; she wore pink lace and Anne was one of the attendants.

Alice Shirley Moore and Lydia Goodwyn Ferrell will not be with us owing to the advent of two sons: Alexander Moore, III, arrived March 12, and William Goodwyn Ferrell, on May 12.

I finally caught up with Sis Franklin Means who has been in Japan during 1948. She, husband, daughter, and spaniel went to Mexico City on a vacation on their return, then to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where her husband is in the Staff and Command School. They move on to Fort Bragg in July where Bill will enter the 82nd Airborne Division as paratrooper and where Sis hopes they will be for at least two years.

There weren't many of us able to get down to school for reanion, but those who were planning to go were Helen Hanson Bamford who planned a one-night stand there with her two oldest boys on their way to Virginia Beach. Nan Russell Carter hoped to get back with Ellie Alcott Bromley and Mary Lee Ryan Strother; meantime Nan is busy with Girl Scouts, Cub Scout Den, singing in the choir concert with her boys and playing the piano in a piano-and-violin trio for fun.

Anne Corbitt Little planned on two days at school; she has been working on the Church Altar Guild and is the new chairman of the J. L. Opportunity Shop in Roanoke for the next year. Jackie Boud Wood wrote from Virginia Beach where she was recuperating from a winter of children's ailments; she went over from Lynchburg for a couple of days.

Ellie Bromley was laid low with the prospect of measles and chicken pox which slightly raddled her plans for reunion, but asked that all of you send more pictures with your questionnaires.

Lib. Bonnie and Loo Bradley went down together. Lib had entertained for Jo Fink Meeks and husband and for Cecil Birdsey Wade and ditto when they were in New York, and said that Sue Fender Miller has a new daughter, Janet Mason. Bonnie has been in the throes of remodeling her kitchen and has been serving up a diet of plaster dust to one and all. She also wrote of entertaining the Westchester S. B. C. Club in May.

Mary McCallum Neill, husband and two sons are living at 768 Eelhaven Street, Jackson, Mississippi, where Charles practices neurosurgery.

Betty Carter Clark is involved with Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and family. They went to Ensenada this spring and otherwise she says her general routine has been providing transportation and "parent participation" and I know exactly what she means. Judy Dargberts Musser can't make it; we took up a lot of time and energy and paper making a lot of fancy plans to reune (?) . . . all for naught.

Mary Walton will spend the summer campaigning for Francis Pickens Miller who is running for governor of Virginia on a liberal, independent platform. Miss Meta Glass is heading up the women's division of this campaign.

Ruth Pinkham Nix's husband was transferred to Cleveland and they have a country home near Chagrin Falls, Ohio, quite near Jean Lydecker Roberts. Ruth's son, George, is now ten and her baby girl is big enough to walk and talk.

Helen Hoffecker Rochm has nursed her small son through a winter of illness, meanwhile finding time to serve as president of the local P.-T. A. Next year she will serve as vice-president of it and of the local council of the state P.-T. A.

Emmie Emory Washburn can't get down nor can Eleanor Cooke Esterly. The latter and husband went to Coronado in April and home to Kansas with their three little girls in May.

Martha Lou will hit campus about three weeks after Commencement with Freddie and Julie for a six-weeks vacation. They bought a hoose in Prioceton from Connie Murray Weller, '33, and will move in in the fall.

The best laid plans of mice and men et cetera, and mine did, too. I hated not getting down to school in June, but it was not to be. We have indulged in the usual spring festivities common to all parents such as May Days, school picnics and class days, two times over with the children in different schools and now hope to get up to Ludington, Michigan, for a very small vacation in Joly. It has been almost like seeing all of you from time to time through the years when your cards have come in and I am going to miss hearing from you. Many thanks to each and all for making the column fun; ave atque vale with love to all.

I shall miss hearing from all of you next year and do hope you will write as often to the new secretary as you have to me. I shall look for news of you in the magazine, particularly following commencement, and hope that I may see some of you at our next class reunion.

Alice Laubach has just returned from a grand vacation in St. Petersburg. She wrote of seeing Peggy Huvley Range, '36, and Lena Jones Craig, '33, at a luncheon Mrs. Walcott gave recently in Tryon. Alice said about 20 Briarites were there for a wonderful gettogether.

A card from Martha Jones Betts' mother savs Martha and her doctor husband are in Vellore, Madras S. India for a five-year term. The Betts have three children, Eugene, 7, and twins, Peter and Anne, 6. Dr. Betts is a thoracic surgeon and is training in that field as well as serving on the hospital staff. The international atmosphere in Vellore lends a pleasant social atmosphere. We all enjoyed Martha's letter in the last issue of the magazine.

Rebekah Huber took time off from her golf and community service to drop me a line—I'll certainly call you Becky, if I ever do get up Virginia way again.

Betty Fov Moon and her family have moved into the country nine miles from Toledo. It sounds ideal without the hard work of rural living. Their new address is Manley Road, Maumee, Ohio.

Polly Langford Payne, lucky Lynchburg-ite that she is, is able to attend the reunion and all its functions. Polly and Dr. Connor are play-reading chairmen of the Little Theatre and Polly also does some painting, P.-T. A. work, etc. The Paynes have two boys, 10 and 4.

Hester Kraemer Avery is moving to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in August for a year. The Averys have been at Fort Bragg for the past two years and Hester hates to leave—she reports that her children have not kept her from her golf and singing in a small choral group there.

Bravo! And thanks a million to all of you who sent in your cards with so much news. Ruth and I really enjoyed hearing from you all. We have prepared a list of "Missing Members" which we will print at the end of the article in hopes that we will hear something from or about them before the fall issue of the News.

Polly Rich saw a lot of the Ramage sisters this winter as they were at Yale as Research Fellows in English. They sailed for Europe the 12th of May. Polly says that Orissa Holden has a permanent job of some kind in Bridgeport and is living at home. Mark Powell Doty is busy with P.-T. A. and A. A. U. W. She has three children—Leete, 9; Barbara, 6; and Sonia, 4. Sonia was named for the daughter of the French family with whom Mark stayed in France during her Junior year. We are very sorry to hear that Mark lost her father last fall.

Willietta Thompson Scofield now has two boys, Tommy, 5, and Rolfe, 3.

Lucille Cox, who teaches at E. C. Glass High School here in Lynchburg, sails June 24 to study in Rome for about six weeks. I wille won a scholarship that was one of the 25 given to teachers in the United States to continue their studies abroad.

Alma, Stumpy, Betty Muggleton Patterson, Midge Silvester, Adele Bourman Smith, Alva Root Bound and G. A. Jackson Slocum all seem to see one another pretty frequently. Alma teaches Betty Muggleton Patterson's little girl in the first grade. Adele has a little girl in the 2nd grade in Stumpy's school. Alva now has two boys and two girls and G. A. Jackson Slocum apparently has twins and at least one more child. I'd like to find out more about that.

Nancy Braswell Holderness has two boys and two girls now and I think all of them are redheads.

Phoebe Picrson Dunn certainly must keep very busy. She has three children and lots of chickens. As if that is not enough she also hooks rugs, gardens, and is becoming quite adept with color photography.

Lillian Cabell Gay is moving to Columbus, Ohio, in July where Jimmy will practice neurosurgery. He has just gotten his degree from The Mayo Clinic. Did any of you happen to see the article about his discoveries on the best inducements to a good night's sleep? It was in Redbook last August, Lillian saw Fran Baker Owen in Baltimore not so long ago. We had a nice letter from Fran, too. Her family consists of husband, John, now in his third year of private practice as a surgeon; Mary Marshall, 61/2; Laura Lee, 21/2, and baby Ted who is 6 months old. Fran saw Maria Gray Valentine Curtis and her daughter, Calvin, and son, Ted, and also Kitty Lorraine Hyde and children, Janet, Terry, and Taylor last summer in Richmond. She reports that Sydney Millar Baker now lives at 114 E. Park Road, Havertown, Pennsylvania, and has two children-Debbie and Judy.

Marjorie Wing Todd moved to Virginia Beach last summer where her husband and two other doctors have built a hospital. Marjorie's husband does all the surgery.

Jane Shelton Williams also moved last summer, from Lookout Mountain to Wilson Avenue on Signal Mountain, both in Chattanooga, Tennessee. Her children are Patsy, 8, and Robert Henry Williams, 1. Jane saw Ruth Robinson Madison between trains on her way to the Derby and reports that Chloe Frierson

Fort has just had the measles. Our sympathy Chloe.

Chicky Gregory has just finished her thesis on Nathan Appleton and now has three copies of 450 pages each, all bound in Harvard red. She hopes to get her degree in June.

Alice Benet Hopkins sold her patent on little girls' adjustable dresses. She writes to ask her classmates if they will "ask their girl's wear buyers to write or go in to see the line of Gro-tall dresses made by Abe M. Pressman Co., Inc., 147 West 35th Street, New York City." These are the dresses Alice designed to adjust to a growing child and they are guaranteed to outlast two regular dresses. Sounds like a wonderful invention! Alice has two children, Christie, 8½, and Alice, 4. In her Junior League Follies this spring she worked with Georgia Herbert Hart, '40, Vesta Murray Haselden, '38, and Tiny Wilcox Bowerfind, x '38.

Esther O'Brian Towle spent last winter in Charlotte, North Carolina, and will spend this summer in Freedom, New Hampshire, with her 7-year-old son John, and 3 dogs. She doesn't know where she will be next winter.

Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist has had a 16-day boat trip to Alaska with her !usband this month and before that they took their two boys, aged 7 and 9, to see Washington, D. C.

Ada Denton Roberts has a second son, born on April 28. Her first one is now 2, and they live in Massapeque, Long Island.

Marylina Stokes Fulton has two children and I understand that she lost her father last fall. We're very sorry to hear about that Marylina.

Here is the list of people from whom we've heard no word in some time. Please help us out and bring us up to date.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Let's start off the June letter in typical style with news of two weddings. Lucy Gore is now Mrs. Gordon W. Stead—we're a trifle late with that item as it happened a year ago! They're living in London while Gordon writes his thesis for a doctorate in economics and on their return will live in Vancouver, B. C. Lucy hopes to complete her master's thesis in clinical psychology while abroad and is thoroughly enjoying the "ardours of English housekeeping." And a card from Margaret MacRae announces her marriage on April 7 to Charles R. Jackson, a Marine officer whom she met in Shanghai nine years ago. They are living in San Diego where Charlie is stationed.

Jackie Cochran Nicholson sees Ellie Snodgrass Park frequently-the latter is being very busy with her law work. They are all going to Nags Head this summer. Chink's medicine keeps him well occupied but the Nicholsons did manage a golf week-end at Virginia Ho: Springs this spring. Another active Washington lawyer is Jane Collins Corwin's Tom who just started practicing for himself. Her children are growing up far too fast, Janie says, and she yearns for a house with a separate wing for toys. Sara Kirkpatrick Fearing also lives in Washington. Her 3 children, plus gardening, sewing, and cooking, keep her busy. Jack is in the field of psychiatry-practicing and training. They hope to settle eventually in his home town of Charleston, South Carolina.

Kate Shaffer Hardy had a grand time at the AVI.A conference at Boca Raton, Florida, this winter—saw some twenty or more Briarites there and took full advantage of the sun and swimming. Anne Lauman Bussey is now living in San Mateo, California, where they've bought a house and is loving it. Agnes Crawford Bates reports "no news" but much excitement in Gloncester over Garden Tour, taking in many beautiful old homes and gardens

Dot Prout Gorsuch and Bob are still working on their house, the inside work yet to he done and depending on how the plumber and furnace man fulfill their contracts. She, Peg Cruiksbank Dyer, and Peter Dyer Sorensen are involved in a garden club—"up to our ears" and are counting on a lot of tennis this summer. Peg's son, Timothy, is growing like a weed and is the image of his daddy. May Weston Thompson has bought a house in Maplewood, New Jersey, and should be in by now after extensive repairs and renovations. She reports Sid Gorf Herpers is in Scattle. Another Jerseyite, Jean Gilbert Moister, finds life extremely hectic with 3 children and no help but she says the outskirts of New York City are certainly stimulating after a sojourn in "the provinces." She has seen Peggy Lloyd Bush who has a brand new son. Ginnie Rush Lang has a new son, too, Richard Winston, born February 1-that makes 3 for her, and and she's finally decided she's fated to have only boys. She saw Peg Minder Davis at Christmas. The Davises are living in East Haven, Connecticut, while Paul studies at Yale. Their daughter, Jill, is 6.

Vera Searcy McGonigle says the heat and dust of summer have already started but this year she has some grass and "2 small trees." Two children and a couple of dogs keep her hopping. Maggie Cornuell Schmidt and daughter were in Florida in February and then went to Boston to welcome her sister Helen's (x '40) third son. During their month there, they were infested with chickenpox so she missed seeing Macky Fuller Kellogg. She sees lis Lockett I ord and Edwine Schmid Mill. The latter has a new daughter. What with such an active winter, Ruthie managed only one full week of pre-kindergarten which she loves,

You'll all be happy to hear that Marion Leggett Currie's little boy is finally home after 6 days short of a year in the hospital. She teports that Betty Boyce Emmons' family has suffered through the chicken pox. M. J. Main Bender lives near Marion and has 2 daughters. Barbara Ann Munn Green has just become the first woman trustee of the town of Golf, Illinois . . . such a project undertaken because she got tired of sitting alone nights while Dwight played village attorney.

Polly Lambeth Blackwell saw Terry Shaw for a week-end in April. Ruth Myers Pleasants, Lillian Lambert Pennington, Peggy Hite Palmer, and Dot Thomas Upton got together with them for a Sweet Briar gabfest. Dinnie Hardin reports from Chicago that she is in the process of buying a house to have more room for her dogs-one of them has been doing a lot of winning lately, Peggy Merritt Haskell took time out from gala doings at The Homestead to answer-told of stopping by Sweet Briar for the Horse Show and having a nice visit with some faculty members. Miss Crawford was to diagnose her riding, but Peggy thinks her main trouble is old age! Bobbie Kirch Booth lives at Waban, Massachusetts, just outside Boston-she moved about a year ago. They have a very active Alumnae Club-with Macky Fuller Kellogg, Betsy Durham Goodhue, and Katie Niles Parker to name only a few. She has three children-11, 7, and 312, to keep her busy and also does volunteer hospital work. Marie Walker Gregory says she is too busy with laundry, gardening, and young John to go anywhere, but she has hopes of getting to reunion in '52 or '57!

Helen Rac Wainwright is another who is moving, her husband having been transferred to Pittsburgh. She hopes to get settled this summer. She had a grand get together in New York with Sally Rick Putnam, '35,—first time in 9 years.

Natalie Hopkins Griggs says she has no news beyond the usual church and college club work and chasing her 2 small girls-but cards are always appreciated, Nat, even without any startling announcements! Then I know you remember that I'm alive. Janet Bogue Trimble has been working on the Baltimore Alumnae Club report for the year and is about bushed from same. She sees Dot Price Roberts and Carrie Burwell Carter at meetings. Wes Ward Francis is still as active as ever, what with 5 volunteer jobs, 3 of which she chairmans, as well as her course in TV. She says it feels like exams-from which feeling Heaven preserve me the rest of my natural life! I would probably be considered in a rut by the majority of you busy creatures, but having been born tired, I love it! Nothing new from Bartlesville beyond a horrible month of rain and near misses by several tornadoes. 1 think we're getting a lovely lawn, nice and green, but Charles has just informed me we're raising a superior crop of weeds! Have a wonderful summer-all of you,

Class Secretary: LUCY TALIAFERRO (Mrs. Charley C. Nickerson) Glendale Road, Colonia, New Jersey.

Find Agent; Barbara Derr (Mrs. A. I. Chenoweth) 33 Ridge Avenue, Birmingham, Alabama.

My news this time is very brief; not many postal replies, because (1 trust) everybody is sending questionnaires back to Frannie Builey Brocke for Commencement. That news will be covered in the Fall issue when I hope to have lots of news for you.

Betty Dail Wilson wrote me that they had moved back to Cincinnati a year ago and she feels now that her nine years in Washington were only a bad dream. Her husband has started his own law practice there, and she is active in garden club, church circle, and several bridge clubs. Her young son Dail is now in first grade "minus his front teeth and full of himself."

Billy Heizer Hickenlooper from out there, too, wrote that she had recently seen Ruth Pfingsten Polster in Cleveland and she looked grand—has two children. Billy also said that Lloyd Lanier Elliott had been there a month before, so their gang seems to hold together pretty well. Billy says she has a busy, heetic, but happy life with her four children, two with tonsils to come out soon.

A line from Jin Faulkner Mathews says that, like me, she can't get back to Sweet Briar this June. She found time to get to Florida this spring. As for outside activities, she says she will be doing the News Sheet for the local Junior League again next year.

I was thrilled to have a card from Nancy Old Mercer clear out in Texas—I had last left her in South Carolina! Strangely enough, she too seems to have been busy with children—Anne Eugenia, aged 5, and Marilyn, 10 months. She says Blair has begun his own business, an RCA Sound Company engineer for that area. Nancy says she sees Caroline Potter Echols some, Surely wish I could take you up on that invitation to see Texas, Nancy!

1 have seen Janet Macfarlan Bergmann at New Jersey Sweet Briar Club meetings (she's our secretary). She tells me that Janice Wiley Adams is in the process of moving to New Bedford, that Bud has had a change of job. I know Janice will be glad to get her bruod settled somewhere.

We three are about as usual—the redhead is not quite so red and is moving about under his own locomotion now. A happy summer to you all, and I'll try to give you a full review in the fall.

Claw Secretary: BLISY DURHAM (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.) 32 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Fund Agent: Leila Bond (Mrs. Joseph S. Preston) 168 Madison Road, Scarsdale, New York

In between the names, I am packing my suitease for the Sweet Briar haul and hope to see everyone of you there—To get a new permanent, lose 20 pounds, and have a Rita Khan trousseau would be in order. But we may look more like 39'ers without the camouflage.

I had a note from Barge sayin; she and Henny were coming up for our reunion. Mrs. Armstrong will have just returned from the Junior League Convention at Boca Raton, Florida. Another card from Betty Fruzier Rinehart... She is busy keeping house and playing golf, while Ted is a flourishing lawyer before the Tulsa Bar.

Boots Vanderbilt Brown won't be down to S. B. C., as she is busy caring for baby Margaret Allison, who is a beautiful blonde, unlike her darker brother and sister, Jonnie and Julie. Jonathan has been working for the Sprague Electric Company since the Browns moved to Williamstown, Massachusetts, last April.

Mary Mackintosh Sherer and Joe have a wonderful new son, Joseph Forest Sherer, III, who was born last April. Mary and Joe will be spending the June 4 week-end with Claffic and Tommie Williams in Dover, Massachusetts, where Mary's brother will be married that Saturday.

Lois Lear Stoops writes me that her husband is in the Frozen Food business, which is the job to have on a scorching day like today. They have two children, Carol Beth, $6\frac{1}{2}$, and Wendy, $3\frac{1}{2}$, who are dear. Lois sees Ann Dearstyne Cornwell quite often, as they live near each other in Kansas City.

Marguerite Myers Glenn is moving to Corvallis, Oregon, where Frank will be taking a 2½2-year horticultural course at Oregon State College. They moved into a new house on their farm last year and will be returning there later.

A letter from Happy tells of her being in Princeton to become godmother to Nancy Nalle Lea's son. The Wathens had just returned from a fascinating trip to Guatamala in January. They flew down, stopping off in Yucatan to see the Mayan ruins at Chichen Itza (!!!!) and Happy is waiting for a return trip. Their 3 children are fine and ready for a perfect summer as the Wathens have bought a house in Rockland, Maine. Happy does a lot of Junior League work and has just finished running their Follies, so she must be ready for that vacation, too.

Lots of news from Dutch Hauber Crowe—Patty and Terry were 6 and 5 years old this past May and are in the throes of cowboys and Indians, which their mother finds as "hair-raising as the real thing." Dutch was very sick last fall and is still under the doctor's care and was thoroughly enjoying being spoiled to death by Joe and the children. We hope you are fine and dandy now. It younds like it, for through Joe's office, the Crowes entertain many of the Hollywood celebrities—such a list of Oscar material—Dutch and Joe are kept very busy with the University Drama Group and the State Play Festival. They have just finished producing "Skylark" and are busy with Children's Theatre Plays. "Cinderella" to "Sleeping Beauty" or A to Z.

Another member of our class who has been chatting with the doctors is J. O. A year ago last September she broke her leg by falling off Cheer (remember her wonder horse?), and it was a year before J. O. could walk again. It must have been GRIM and we are all so delighted to hear that the only thing that bothers her now is "navigating in high heels." During that year Jean built a flagstone patio and became an ardent gardener, so that now she has one of the prettiest homes in Shreveport. Alton, J. O., and 21/2-year-old Elizabeth were in Atlanta and Florida this spring, where young Miss Sartor spent most of her time riding her own horse! J. O. has been doing chairman work for the town X-ray survey and Community Arts, both projects sponsored by the League, and now she is co-chairman of the Red Cross drive. With all this she still paint: and just finished showing one work in an exhibition. Jean has seen Virginia Cheatham Newton, who is younger looking than ever and has 3 children and a handsome husband.

Henri Minor Hart is having a jet-propelled life these days, for she and Harrie and their two children are leaving White Plains, New York, and are moving to Colorado Springs... The Harts visited the West last summer and finally picked this garden spot for their future home. While there, Henri saw Helen McCreery James and her attractive husband. Best of luck, Henri, and keep an extra tooth-brush for all of us.

The Boston alumnae have just finished sponsoring a Pops Concert at Symphony Hall, which Albie and I went to. It was a grand evening and you never saw so many Swect Briar girls in your life . . . and husbands, too

I was in Richmond in May and again ran into all of S. B. C. Julie Saunders Michaux and Dr. Dick were leaving soon on a motor trip to surgical convention in Biloxi, Mississippi, with all sorts of plans to visit the French Quarter and all of New Orleans.

The Goodhues seem to be a family with one of everything. A boy, Tag (Third Albert G.); a daughter, Tempe; a dog, Taffy; a cat, Tixie; and Turtle Truman. To break the monotony we have added a racing boat which belongs to the S class.

So Tucking away my Things in my Trunk, it's Time I Take off for my Tenth . . .

Now that your "return post-cards" are unscrambled the exciting news of '40 May babies should be reported. Stephen Horner Both, second son, third child of Blair Bunting Both was born on May 4. Peggy Caperton Ranken's daughter, Margaret Tucker, arrived on May 14. Mama is thrilled about the whole deal and is doing beautifully. The Rankens have a new old house in Seaford, Delaware. Connie Chalkley Kittler's letter from the hospital was really appreciated. She wrote that Fred Warren Kittler, Jr., was there to keep her company. Connie said that she sees Ethel James quite often and that Ethel works for Time magazine and lives in New York City. Nancy Haskins Elliot wrote Connie that she and David are looking forward to his Ph.D. She also said that Olive M. Whittington and her husband live in Silver Spring, Maryland, and that she is still in the Navy.

Jackie Sexton Daley writes from California that she loves it there and admits that she feels like a traitor to her native Florida Jackie sees Coralie Kahn Ferro and Marion Phinizy Jones occasionally. In fact her husband, Jack, baptized Phin's baby. Jackie writes that she has one child in school this year and that another will enter school next fall. Elizabeth Conover wrote such a grand letter from Portland, Oregon, where she is teaching kindergarten in a public school. Libby has been visiting in Victoria, B. C., several times this winter and was fortunate enough to miss the "quake." However, Libby did have plenty of bad luck as she had a ruptured appendix and has to undergo another operation this June. After that she plans to return to Sr. Louis.

Eleanor Bosworth Spitler and her whole family vacationed at Delray Beach this winter. One evening they went over to Boca Raton and saw Mildred Moon Montague and Frances Moses Turner who were there attending a Junior League Conference.

Kay Hodge's mother was nice enough to answer my postcard and say that Kay is having a marvelous time in Scotland. She leaves there in June for six weeks on the Continent and then will return to Great Britain to visit her cousins and the Duchess of Montrose at Brodrick Castle on the Isle of Auran.

From Washington, D. C., Florence Merrill Pilkinton writes that she is very glad to be back there in a nice house at 1343 30th Street. Her day is spent with her two-year-old daughter. She also does some Junior League work on the side. Florence talked to Sari Mitchell Clingerman just before she moved to Pittsburgh with her two-month-old son. Clara MacRae Causey has a new house at 402 Virginia Avenue, Alexandria, and is very busy with her three children, aged two, four, and six. She is having a lot of fun with her first garden and enjoys the element of suspense involved because she doesn't know what the former tenants planted. I can certainly appreciate that because we are in the same boat and have great arguments over which plant is a weed and which one is a flower! I hope to wise up soon as a result of belonging to a new Garden Club. Frances Turner is President of it so you know that it isn't a dull outfit! Eve Williams Turnbull is busy with her vegetable garden and Music Festival activities. Eve's first roommate, Anne Burr, has replaced Meg Mundy in the current hit, "Detective Story.

Lois Fernley McNeil sneaked away from a few cases of mumps to attend El Snow Lea's first wedding aniversary party. Connie Currie Fleming also attended the party. El and Clemmic Carter Murray, who lives right around the corner from her, went to the last S. B. C. Alumnae meeting together. The last mail for the day just came and I'm glad to be able to tell you that Janet Runkle Wells' son, Robin, looks like an angel in the cute snapshot that she enclosed. In fact, he looks so nice that I must rush right out and cut a new batch of switches for my own angel? boy. Janet says that they have remodeled their home some more this year and are still crazy about the country and are hopeful of having a large crop of peaches, apples, and grapes this season.

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.), 3542 Larkspur Avenue, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

It surely is true—eight years ago this time we were commencing and 1941 became alumnae. Have any of you noticed how far from the back cover these letters are getting?

I did have success with my pleas for news and have some items I know will interest you.

Emory Hill Rex sent me a letter from Sweden "Euftpost," a month or so ago, which 1 have been hoarding. As you know the Rexes sailed on the Gripsbolm on December 4. Dan is technical assistant to the Naval Attaché at the American Embassy. Three weeks after arriving in Stockholm they moved into a house built in 1833 in the suburbs. It has been modernized and beautifully decorated—huge yard for the children and no traffic. She wonders how they'll do with only ½-hour of darkness during the summer. She and Dan are looking forward to their two years and are studying Swedish to make the most of their stay.

A delightful surprise of early April was a note from Charlie Datemport Tuttle. I was so glad to hear from her. She, John, and Chooper (1 year old April 19) are living in Stuyvesant Town in New York—a really wonderful place complete with play rounds and a park. She reported seeing Lucy Lloyd who's working in the city and looking fine as usual.

Lou Lembeck Reydel had a sudden and unexpected chance for a 2 weeks trip to Jamaica, B. W. I., with her father this spring, so she jumped at it, as who wouldn't? She shed all responsibilities, and left the children, Chuck and Jimmy, with a nurse and Charlie to oversee them. She'd heard from Jerry Posselt Clear that she is living in Newtown, Connecticut, and that Adel Diaz Eads is in nearby Southbory. Lou and Do Huner, who is with Merck, Inc., get together often.

Pat Sorenson Ackard wrote a lengthy letter, and from the busy life she leads, I can understand why they are few and far between. Denver is organizing an Alumnae Club and Pat had been going to the high schools talking (raving, as she puts it) to the girls about Sweet Briar. Ennie is a worker for the cause, behind the scenes. Pat says she can't believe there are only 24 hours a day, she gets so busy and involved, and is currently captain of the symphony drive in her area. To top it all, she and Bill have become interested in the purebred cattle business.

Libby Lancaster Washburn spent 2 weeks at home with her family this spring while William was in Norfolk for Naval duty. They see Lillian Foulkes Taylor and Tyler occasionally. Libby says real summer has come to Alabama and she takes the children swimming every day.

Bobby Clark Dickey and Fred have moved to Urbana, Illinois, and are living in an apartment at twice the rent it should be—the old business. Their young son is doing fine after a bad 3 months of colic. She said he was tagged with the name "Hobo" at that gruesome time, and "Hobo" it still is, though he's a happy baby now.

Emmie Lou Phillips Lohmeyer says like most everyone her news is domestic. Most of her time is taken with the care of "Sandy," aged 2, and like all little boys he's constantly into something. (I find little girls strikingly similar, for some reason.) Her outside activities are limited to church work and recreation. Emmie Lou sees Joan Myers Riese frequently. Joan is with the Curtis Publishing Company. Also sees Betty Irim. Phillips when she's home in Virginia. Betty has a darling house and two precious children, Betsy, 4½, and Kit, 2½, and beautifully trained according to Emmie Lon.

Cynthia Harrison Drinkwater writes they're ensconced in a pleasant smalltown life. Her young son (large, according to Cyn) is four and they're looking forward to the beach and the nice things about living near the water this summer.

Ann Handein Potterfield, a kindred worker at this column business, sent me news of Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey down in Texarkana, Texas. She has a lovely home, beautiful yard, filled with fruit trees and two daughters—Genie, 5, and Paula, 1. Annie said it was told her she is a wonderful mother and she ought to have a dozen!

Anne Gayle O'Beirne stretched her postcard into a grand six page letter. She and Eddie have been in Atlanta nearly 4 years and though she has not yet joined the Klu Klux Klan nor voted for Herman Talmadge, she has become an ardent "Georgian." She said at one time she could have had a S. B. C. reunion right in her own yard, for Sudie Clark Hanger, Fanny Bird Jones, Mary Carter Richardson, and Margaret Preston Newton-all lived within 3 blocks. Annie had run into Jean Trant Robert in Norfolk. Jean, husband, and 2 little boys are living at Virginia Beach. She was hoping to get to Sweet Briar for a day, while Eddie was "meeting" at Hot Springs, but vowed to make a reunion one of these next

Thanks to everyone for the news. Needless to say it zips up the column considerably. Have a pleasant summer one and all. Barby and I are deserting John for a couple of weeks in Michigan before he joins us for his vacation, so July promises to be good to us.

Class Secretary: Ann Hausi etn (Mrs. Thomas G. Potterfield) 262 Kent Road, Wynnewood, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: BITTY HANGIR, No. 32 Aberdeen Place, Clayton, Missouri.

Once again many of you have been wonderful about writing. However, all too many of you remain silent, and not being psychic, I cannot guess your whereabouts or activities.

At long last, Tom has parted company with the Army, we have pulled up our Brooklyn stakes and are resting peacefully in Wynnewood, Pennsylvania. In early June we are leaving for Montreal, Quebec and New England on a second honeymoon, then back to Philadelphia where Tom starts a 2-year residency in pediatrics at the Philadelphia General Hospital. Please notice my new address for your prolific future correspondence.

Let's travel to the West Coast to pick up Barbara Ripley. Barbara received her degree from the University of Chicago, and then got her teaching certificate in California, which she has put to use for the past year and one-balf. In June, Barbara will marry Todd Furniss, now finishing his Ph.D. at Yale. In the fall the Furnisses will settle in South Hadley, Massachusetts, where Todd will teach at Mount Holyoke College. Barbara claims that she repeatedly tries to impress her satisfied California friends with the beauty of Sweet Briar.

Thanks to Mrs. Keiser, I finally located Nancy, who is now living in San Diego. Nancy's husband, Jack Drown, manages the Imig Manor Hotel. They have two children, Warford, 5½, and Jack, Jr., 2½.

From California we will toot down to Texas to find Anne Barrett George residing in Austin. They are boasting of a new home, new car and particularly of a new baby, Claudia Gray, born April 1. Anne and Orme also have a son, Tog. Our next Texan is Jan Darby, a secretary for the Humble Oil and Refining Company in Houston. Before this, Jan served with the Red Cross in Japan. She claims that she does not brag about it or Texas (some Texan!).

As we jog up to St. Louis, Betty Hanger comes to greet us with exciting news. Betty, Helen Sanford, from down Texas way, and another girl are sailing on July 28 for England, France, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy and Monaco. They may slip in a Mediterranean cruise on the side. Before sailing, Hank will spend a month in Morehead, North Carolina, where she hopes to be joined by Sudie Clark Hanger, Bill, and their 3 children.

On to Chicago and Shirley Hanseman, who wrote glowing reports of a visit to Forrest City, Arkansas, to see Alice King Harrison. Alice is busy with club work, golf and bridge. Shirley also took a trip to Texarkana, Texas, to visit Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey, '41.

If my Atlas serves me right, we go to Indianapolis next. Margaret Becker Schiltges is announcing the arrival of their second daughter, Margaret Ellen, on February 28.

Faithful Frannie Meck Young meets us in Worthington, Ohio, where she is dabbling in Real Estate, unloading some of their 27-acre estate. The Youngs have a son, David Randolph, to add to their daughter, Rumsey, 3, plus a puppy, which husband Bill bought for the children but which mommie tends. Frannie received a phone call at 11:30 one p.m. from Korah Smith in New York. Korah has left her work with Inter-American Affairs and is now writing script for a radio program. Frannie also tells me that Virginia Beasley Holzer has moved to Lancaster, Ohio. Dick is with Ford there.

In Pennsylvania, Betsy Chamberlain Burchard is our receptionist. Mary Ellen Thompson visited her for a day with her two boys, Bobby, 2½, and Thomas Goff, born January 18.

Representing New Jersey is Jessie Marr Strahman. She lives in a little house on a hill in Livingston with Herman, daughter Peggy Anne, 18 months, 2 dogs and 4 puppies. Jessie visits often with Doris Ogden Mount and Ogie's two sons. Peggy Anne is slated for the class of '69 at S. B. C.

On to Manhattan, the city of lights, and to be oriented by Cynthia Abbott Botsford. This winter Cynthia and Bots took a trip to San Domingo to visit Barbara Bull Peake whose husband is with the American Embassy. The Botsfords officiated as god-parents for the Peake's new daughter. Barbara also has a son. Cynthia stopped in Haiti, and she states that that is the place. Peter, age 41/2, attends a French School and keeps Cynthia intellectually alert. Daughter Kathy seems to boast of nothing, according to her mother, except an unattractive head of wispy hair (cheer up, my Kathy has practically no hair). Can you imagine Cynthia as a gardener? Well, she is bragging about her geraniums.

Debbie Wood Davis will show us around suburban New York in between hours spent househunting around Choppequa. The two Davis girls have been sick most of the winter, but Debbie says that they are on the mend now.

Heading south, Phyllis Sherman Barnes waves hello from her honeymoon apartment in Wilmington, Delaware. Phyl states that her honeymoon in Bermuda was divine, and her new apartment chic. Tom and I got to Phyl's wedding in April. She made a lovely bride, and Eddie Syska Peltier was a most attractive matron of honor. Eddie seems to be thriving on her role as wife and mother.

No trip is complete without a stop in the nation's Capitol. Jane Taylor Lowell is settled just outside there in Silver Spring, Maryland. The Lowell's have seen Lucy Hodges Fuller and Jeanne Buzby Runkle. Bobby Lowell is now 4 and Joan is 2½, and is crowned with a mass of curls. They plan a month's vacation in Ocean City, New Jersey.

Lucy Hodges Fuller and Allen are still at Mt. Myer, but are counting the days until August when Allen becomes a doctor again and Allen, Jr., ceases being an only child.

What nicer place could we stop next than at dear old S. B. C. Miss Eleanor Ringer dug herself out from comprehensives and term papers to write that Miss Rauschenbusch came down from Rochester to see Ringer's spring production of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." This summer Ringer will go to Charlottesville to do speech work and a bit of acting. She has just completed the initial bulletin for the Southeastern Theatre Conference.

Now we will hit Route 60 to Richmond to see Lucy Call Dabney. Lucy says that Sally Jackson will be back in Cape May, New Jersey, this summer at the Chalfnnte Hotel. Anne Bundy Thurman visited Poose. Anne is considering going into the real estate business at Virginia Beach. Anne has a daughter, Ellen. Poose also told me that Margaret Preston Newman has a daughter aged 2, and that husband, Jim, has his own insurance agency.

Sosanne Hogue Deas awaits us in Charleston, South Carolina, that is if she is not off to Wrightsville Beach or Sullivan's Island where she and Zan and Hank are summering.

Let's catch Ruth Hensley Camblos in Asheville before she goes to her new home in Newton Centre, Massachusetts. Josh is going to Lahey Clinic in Boston to complete his surgical training. Josh just finished a residency in Pathology at Memorial Hospital in New York.

Winston-Salem is the home of Dot Myers Morchead. Dot announces the arrival of Robert Page, III. The Morcheads have seen Elsie Diggs Orr and spent some time with the Orrs at White Sulphur Springs.

Now that Grace Lanier Brewer has gotten settled in her new apartment, she can meet our train in Clarksville, Tennessee. Carlos and Grace plan to go to New York this summer while Carlos takes a post-graduate course in pediatries or obstetrics.

Last stop is with Frannie Caldwell Harris in Louisville. The Harris's have bought a home, a cute little white frame house, and are busy planting shrubbery to get the country effect. Frannie is busy with Jr. League work, such as working with a traveling library in a hospital, and doing nurses aide.

Now let's take a slow boat to China, rest over the summer and return full of news, exciting or just plain domestic, in the fall. Blessings on you all for your wonderful response to my "penny pleas."

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: ANNE McJUNKIN (Mrs. Frank E. Briber, Jr.) 8103 W. Bluemound Road, Milwaukee 13, Wisconsin.

First off I'd like to say something nice, for a change, about the replies to my cards-Believe it or not, Esther Jett filled hers out on her wedding day . . . and I couldn't ask for better cooperation than that. She did allow as how she was a little rushed and didn't have much time (or probably inclination) to tell me about anything else, but I was certainly most pleasantly surprised to find I had dropped my feeler into such a little hotbed of excitement. This all took place on May 14 at 8:30 p.m. in Norfolk, with Hugh Latane Holland, Jr., of Suffolk being the main male participant, and Byrd Smith Hunter doing her part as bridesmaid. (There's a perfect "Birdsmaid," as some people call them). Sea Island was the honeymoon destination and then back to Virginia Beach for the summer. After that Esther says they will live in Suffolk.

I learned from "Snookie" Campbell Shearer during her never failing Baltimore visit for the Maryland Hunt Cup that Mary Belle Lee is engaged (typically no details) and I think that's about all in the matrimony department, but then I guess we can't expect 5 or 6 weddings a month now that almost three-fourths of the class has already jumped.

Anyhow the birth news is usually in some kind of compensating ratio. "Snookie" also reported an offspring for Peggy Rondin Foster (naturally no details) and Brac Preston accommodatingly provided some additinnal news on this subject. The event took place on April 12 in the form of Joan Lawrie Foster, whom Brac says is so exceptionally soft and smooth that her parents call her "porcupine." (Hope she doesn't stick!) Brac has a new and apparently worse apartment in Princeton, and has seen Beth Dichman Smith with her very attractive sons in Philadelphia.

Chesley Johnson Dale sent word of her latest addition as of May 4. Janet Carroll is her name and according to Chesley she's so ugly she's cute, and already full of personality. Besides these, Posy Hazard Potter came through with some further information on her infant, Alfred Knight Potter, II, born December 13 (1949, she said, but somehow that makes him seem too unreal). Also she wrote that she had had a wonderful letter from Charlotte Johnson Barrett in Columbus saying, among other things, that she was planning to adopt a baby.

In her funding Nancy Pingr.e Drake dragged up news of Betty Potter Kinne Hillyer, long ago on S. B.'s "lost list." She is in Coronado, California, and her husband commutes to San Diego where he has a law office. They are renting a very Spanishy house complete with patio, and Betty Potter loves it out there.

A couple of other people I haven't heard from in a long time (but not that long) popped in with cards. One was from Elsic Jackson Kelly who is very happy and full-handed with her three, Pete now being 5½. Walter is still working hard at Georgia Tech. Also Della Read sent me a fine picture p. c. of Dakar where she has "been doing a slow broil since July." She says there is a nice crowd there and they all manage to enjoy themselves though it is definitely a "crummy town." She is still trying desperately to learn French, but has at least got far enough to find that "a few drinks considerably aid fluency therein."

And of course if you want to know the story of Jane Gilbreth Heppes' family read "Cheaper by the Dozen"—i. e. if you haven't already had that delightful pleasure.

When last heard from, Fay Martin Chandler was already making plans to go early to Nantucket and stay all summer; and Anne Mc-Junkin Briber was off to sister Jane's wedding in Charleston. Junk says "Ouija" and Bob Bush were moving to St. Louis. Also on the van is Mary Law Taylor, already settled in Blue Ridge Summit, Pennsylvania, for the summer.

And to end on another believe-it-or-not—I've got a job . . . I mean one that pays money. What's more, after 2 years of no job I suddenly found myself with 2 jobs at the same time. Now I am at the Gas and Electric Company here. They advertised for an English major and I bit. I also did some work for the Gallup Poll which was quite a lot of fun but much harder than I had anticipated.

Have a nice summer—and write me about it.

Class Secretary: Martin Horion (Mrs. Donald George Glesser) 1128 Shelly Drive, Maumee, Ohio.

Fund Agent: AUDRLY BUTTS, 211 West Fisher Avenue, Greensboro, North Carolina.

Kathryn Agee, accompanied by a friend from Huntington, took a 38-day cruise to South America on the S. S. Uruguay, stopping at Bahia, Rio de Janiero, Santos, Sao Paulo, Montevideo, Buenos Aires, and Trinidad. She highly recommends it to anyone interested in a leisurely and enjoyable tour. After this trip Kagee took another to Charleston for Jane McJunkin Huffman's wedding. Jodie Morgan, Susan Buchanan Coupland, Elizabeth Zulick Reuter—all managed to be on hand, too.

Alice "Steve" Nicolson made a flight (BOAC) to England and then Paris recently. Wish I could give you more details.

The third week-end in May was a momentous one for Mary Symes, Elizabeth "Zu" Zultek Reuter, Alice Gearhart, and Diddy Gaylord because they were all going to be together at Diddy's home on Staten Island. It was the first time they had all been together since graduation. In addition to the group was Zu's husband but from all reports he is one who should have been able to hold his own with the crowd.

Diddy said she finally broke down after 1½ years of traveling and started working. Her job is in the respiratory lab at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore and she says she likes it a lot.

Alice "Hedy" Eduards Davenport and her husband are now proud and very settled parents of two—Joe, Jr., 2 years, and Alice Nelson, 8 months. Hedy said they had just returned from a wonderful holiday in Florida to two nice cases of chicken pox. "Sech is life," quoth she!

Deen Brugger Wetzig, her husband, and son recently made a trip to Colorado to visit Paul's family. Another tidbit about them is that they have bought a very nice house on Staten Island.

Lib Love Orth's second son, Alan Tappin Orth, was born April 15.

Audrey Betts has been concerning herself mainly with horses this spring. She attended a steeplechase at Camden, South Carolina, a horseshow at Southern Pines, Sweet Briar for a show which took the form of Hunter Trials, and the Sedgefield Show at Greensboro. Beside that she is teaching Sunday School, taking care of her apartment and sleeping soundly every night.

Harriet Hazen Schmoeller sent some news of herself. She and her husband, Clyde, finally found a house to rent and of course they are delighted to have it. Their pride and joy of the moment is their baby Dee, christened Comer Wiehl Schmoeller. She was born on December 7, 1948. (Harriet wrote 1949—which would be the neatest trick of the year.)

derstand how she managed to have such an energetic daughter. Mindy Jeffreys Johnson reports that they have finished redecorating the inside of the house she and her husband have bought in Highland Park, Illinois, and are ready to start on the outside now.

Virginia Gans was married to Hugh Emerson Brown on May 28 in Goshen, Virginia.

Doe Fagg was married June 7 to Marvin Cecil Horner, Jr., in the Kernersville Moravian Church in Kernersville, North Carolina, Ann McLean Loomis was Doe's matron of honor, Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill sang at the wedding.

Yours truly was married the second of April to Donald George Glesser. We had a grand trip in the Great Smoky Mountains. Betty Gray Gray was one of my bridesmaids and my sister, Mary Lou, was maid of honor.

Don and I have a new house which we are enjoying decorating. It's on a mud road and until June I we had mud for a lawn but it's fun anyhow.

Fund Agent: MARY VINTON, 1885 Peabody, Memphis, Tennessee.

Thank you all for your replies to my cards. I guess it pays to send them out a little early. Ellie Clement Littleton nearly swept me off my feet with a letter by return mail. She reports that Joan Darby West's son, Clifton, III, was born on April 21. Polly Kent Page's son is a year old and has golden curly hair. He certainly keeps Peke stepping-last week he ate three eigarettes. Ellie's own daughter, Millie, sounds like one of the cute, plump babies you see on magazine covers even though "her hair is straighter than a stick" to quote her mother. Ellie saw Betsy Gurley Hewson and Tommy when they were in Philadelphia over Easter. Bets sounds very busy with housekeeping and being secretary to five psychiatrists at the M. I. T. infirmary.

Boots Taylor Hollowell's daughter, Mary Booth, was also born on April 21. Boots writes that she is awfully busy getting adjusted to the new member of the family who is the image of her father with black hair and large brown eyes. Ade Jones Voorhees' Stephen arrived on March 2. His name is Stephen Coerte, Jr., but they feel that two Coertes are too confusing. The Voorhees like being back in West Virginia where Coerte is working with the engineering department of the Amherst Coal Company. Barbara Hond Sprunt reports the birth of her son, Hugh, Jr., on March 31. Babs' other exciting news is their moving back to Memphis from Greenville.

March Sanders Starr is also moving—from Miami to Louisville. Harlan who is specializing in pediatrics has received an appointment as resident at the University of Louisville Children's Hospital. Last winter March was able to fit classes into her busy life as a doctor's wife and got her degree in February. March saw Jane Cook Beirnes and her young son, Jimmy, when they were visiting in Miami this spring.

Virginia Wynn is a secretary in the English department at the University of Louisville, She also is doing quite a bit of tutoring—mainly for college students who are having difficulties in English. Ginny had an appendectomy this spring but reports that she is fine now and back at work. Betty Ann Bass is working at the library of the University of Tennessee, Junior Leaguing, and partying. Bess Pratt is working in Huntsville and was a bridesmaid in Liz Hooks' wedding on April 16 to William V. Richards, Jr. She says it was like nld home week as all the groomsmen were Betas from W. and L.

Alan Mott became Mrs. William Roy on last July 23. After a honeymoon in Canada they are back in New Jersey where Bill is in the feed, coal, and lumber business. They are building a house which sounds like a dream on a hillside with a thirty-mile view. Ruth Houston writes that Pat Arms' wedding is June 4 and that Mary Vinton is one of the bridesmaids. She also reports that little ones have arrived in the families of Wistar Watts King, Jeanne Parbam Coors, and Jo Thomas Collins. Ruth returned in March from a wonderful trip to South America for two months.

Lagare Thompson is now working as a receptionist at the Wendell B. Powell Studio in R.chmond and likes it very much. Before this Jimmy was in charge of a public kindergarten and worked as a medical assistant. She has a garage apartment with several girls and hopes that Hoppy Woodard may join them. Lynn Hannab Crocker is making a happy blend of marriage and a career. Last March she sang the lead in an opera in Chicago and has been busy since then with radio, etc.

Tody Corcoran Hartzer and Joe flew down to Jacksonville for Easter. On the way back she stopped in Atlanta to see Jessie Strickland Eleock. Helen Murchsson Lane has just moved into a new house and she and Tody had a grand time comparing household hints. Murch reports that Ellen Robbins Red has moved to an apartment but that they hope to build sometime. Crutcher Field Harrison is living in a darling apartment in the biggest, newest apartment house in Miami. Florence Olive Taylor is working for her father in the real estate and insurance business.

Jane-Arthur Etheridge writes that it was a special treat seeing Catherine Smart when she was in Miami for The American Legion Convention in October. She says, "Her date was Commander of the North Carolina Legion, so Catherine, her friend, and I were honored to ride in the Commander's car in the parade. Catherine looked grand and is as sweet as ever. Afraid we didn't get much sleep catching up on back news and hearing about her wonderful European trip." She also wrote that Eleanor Myers Cole came down to see Catherine, and that Eleanor is now living in Ft. Lauderdale and is teaching kindergarten. She added that Louise Thomson Crawford was married to Charles Moorefield on April 23.

As for me, we have moved into a new apartment and are still busy fixing it up. Thus the change of address to 38 Wiggins Street, Princeton, New Jersey. I'm also planning a trip to France this summer. We sail from Quebec the end of June and return the middle of September. I've been working on French and I hope that people will be able to understand me a little bit-and vice versa-by the time I arrive.

Class Secretary: SALLIE BAILEY, 430 North Blount Street, Raleigh, North Carolina.

Fund Agent: FRANCES GARDNER, North Shore Point, Algonquin Park, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

I seriously doubt if many of you will recognize the names of the following ladies: Mrs. Kirk Averett, Mrs. Harry Samuel Morrisette, Mrs. James Carter Glascock, Mrs. John Thomas Perry. On April 8 Liz Abbott became Mrs. Kirk Averett and is living in the country; Kirk Averett is principal of the Boonsboro High School. Jean Old became the bride of Harry Samuel Morrisette on May 14 at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Norfolk. They are making their home in Sara Bryan became Mrs. James Carter Glascock on May 10. Her wedding was attended by many Sweet Briar girls who reported that Sara was a beautiful bride. Ceci Herr married John Thomas Perry on May 21; he graduated from Washington and Lee. The stream of brides is a continuous one. On June 11 Shirley Levis married Donald Briggs Johnson, Jr., and on June 14 Jane Arthur Etheridge was the beautiful bride of Hugh Marshall Kelly and moved to Denver, Colorado. During the late spring or summer Meredith Slane will become Mrs. Thomas Austin Finch of Thomasville, North Carolina. Connie Clevenger is the first of the fall brides; she will marry Frederick Christian Berk, Jr., of Georgetown, Maryland, in September. All of this news makes me wish I had kept my job peddling wedding gowns.

Ceci Herr wrote that Shirley Gunter Ratcliff and her husband, Bill, had a vacation in Cuba during the early spring. Ginna Illges has been commuting between Columbus, Georgia, and Ponte Vedra, Florida, all season. Gene Ray Minor, husband, and baby have moved into a new apartment in Danville, Virginia, with which they are very pleased. Alice Joseph Davis and Withers visited Withers' parents in Kentucky around Eastertime.

Ann Marshall is still with the Education Department at the Cincinnati Art Museum. She is taking a leave of absence this summer to visit Italy, France, Switzerland, and Austria. She went back to Sweet Briar in February to deliver a lecture during graduate study week, after which she visited Maria Gregory just before Maria married Cabell Mayo Tabb. She saw Anne Jackson Ragland and her baby, Evelyn, and Judy Burnett Halsey and her hasband, John. Ann Marshall received word from Alex Marcoglou that she was in Canada in the spring skiing. Ann has been painting, lecturing, and eagerly looking forward to her tr.p abroad this summer.

Saravette Royster was in Raleigh for a week-end during the spring, but I did not get to see her. Betty Weil, another successful New York executive, was in Goldsboro for a week-end in May.

Liz Ripley wrote me that Nan Hart Stone's son, William Stone, Jr., is now 9 months old. Liz is a secretary in the Department of Education at the Cleveland Museum of Art. She and "Mush" Tucker keep the art department in an uproar, I'm sure. They see a lot of Jackie Shreck as she works across the street at the Eldred Theater, part of the Drama Department of Western Reserve University. Ann Colston is still working for the Cleveland Plain Dealer and teaching dancing school on Saturdays. Sash Hudgins Rice divides her time between Charleston, S. C., and Norfolk, as her husband, Link, is a Navy man and is often in "faraway places."

Connie Clevenger writes most enthusiastically of her fiance, Chris Berg, and their plans. Connie has gone all out for domesticity, she says, and is planning to live in a cottage overlooking a river; she boasts of a spare bedroom with a welcome mat for all Briarites, so let's all try to make her a visit around the end of September. Connie writes that Patsy Camblos Guttshall has a son; he was born on March 17.

Jane Arthur Etheridge went to May Day at S. B. C., Little Easters at University of Virginia, and visited in Norfolk where she saw Martha Smith, Jean Old Morrisette, Margie Redfern, Rosie Ashby, Jolly Vandeventer, Harriet Willcox, Perk Traugott, and practically all Norfolk. At the final hops at V. M. I. she saw Pat Cansler, Marguerite Rucker and Judy Burnett Halsey. Jane Arthur graduated from the University of Miami in February of 1948, and was tapped for the Spanish National Honorary Fraternity, Sigma Pi Delta, and was given the American Legion award for being voted the most outstanding girl in the gradnating class. She studied graduate work at the University of Colorado in Bolder last summer and met her fiance. Hugh Marshall Kelly there. While out west she seems to have taken in almost everything worthwhile, such as trips to Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City, Grand Lake, Estes Park, and concerts at the Red Rocks natural amphitheater near Denver. Jane Arthur is President of the Spinster's Club and has had a rugged time arranging wonderful, but strenuous dances. She had been doing volunteer work with her sorority, Delta Gamma, whose national project is aid to the blind and sight conservation. She has been helping with sight saving classes at Miramar elementary school, and she finds the work extremely interesting. In addition to all the foregoing activities, Jane Arthur has been teaching a Sunday School class of 13 third grade boys. Also she has been put through her paces by the Junior League Provisional course from which she says she profitted greatly. With all this travel, study, projects and other enterprises I imagine Jane Arthur will be glad to settle down to quiet family life in Denver, Colorado.

Betsy Mullen was in Raleigh in the early part of May. Unfortunately, I was at work, and she was only here a few hours so I did not get to see her. She was down here on visits to Norfolk, Charlotte and Durham.

Margaret Ellen White writes that she is leaving Walton about the first of July to go to California and back. She plans about a 5 or 6 weeks trip, and says she hopes to see some of the old Briarites en route.

Right now I am a secretary in insurance work, and I am enjoying it a lot. I am still working with my Girl Scouts as my Junior League project. It gets dull when you all don't write, so let me hear from all of you soon.

Fund Agent: ANNE RICKS, 1506 Westwood Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

At the time this letter is being written, it's just a year since we were suffering from comprehensive jitters, and it doesn't seem possible that so much could have happened.

April has been a popular month for weddings in our little group, with Liz Hooks marrying Bill Richards April 16, and Sammy Samford becoming the bride of Dr. Sam Upchurch. Roommates Mary Barrett and Phil Thorpe took the step the same day, the 30th, Barrett to Hurd, and Phil to Judge Miller.

Ardis Fratus became Mrs. Edwin Thayer MacBride, Jr., on April 19 in Quincy, Massachusetts. McCall, Pris Masten, Jane Taylor, and Nancy Vaughn were in the wedding. Jane had recently returned from a sojourn in Florida after finishing up at Sweet Briar in February.

Mayde Ludington announced her engagement on April 10 to Vic Henningston. They plan to be married in late August and live in New Haven next year while Vic finishes at Yale. Mayde had traveled with her father this winter and visited Martha Sue Skinner in Florida. We recently received a hilarious letter from Martha Sue. She had written it on the typewriter, which she considered to be a more sanitary vehicle than pen and ink. She was then suffering from chickenpox to which she had been exposed by her first grade pupils. She is planning to tour Europe this summer with a group of Tampa girls. Nela Wattley is also planning a Europe jaunt this summer.

Dolly Antrim was married to Ensign James McKenna of the Supply Corps in New York on June 10. Patty Traugott and Helen Pender will also be summer brides.

A long, gay and newsy letter from Mary Io revealed that Martha Rowan and husband, Elton, sailed for Europe in March for a five months stay and that Cynthia Harding has been busily debuting in San Antonio.

Diane King is about to receive her certificate from L. S. U. and plans to do social work in Shreveport next year. Ruthie Faulkner is working for an advertising agency in New York. Betsy Plunkett has a job in Norfolk with a wholesale drug company. Just to prove that the world's a small place, I ran into Betsy Garrison one day while waiting for a bus. She's working for the National Catholic Weifare Association here in Washington.

Sylvia Shaw is attending University of Florida where she was president of her sorority, Chi Omega, this past year.

Everyone is glad that Maddin is recovering from her attack of spinal meningitis. She really had us worried!

Have a nice summer, all of you, and I hope a lot of you will be back for commencement.

The following statement was written by Miss Lucas for release to the press on October 6, 1949:

President Martha B. Lucas of Sweet Briar College will resign her post on June 30, 1950, it was announced today.

Dr. Lucas, now in her fourth year of service at Sweet Briar, came to her present post from the Associate Deanship of Radcliffe College and had, prior to that, been Associate Professor of Philosophy and Dean of Students at Westhampton College in Richmond.

She has been particularly active during her years at Sweet Briar in promoting international cooperation through education and has, during the last three weeks, been serving as a United States delegate to the General Conference of UNESCO in Paris. Besides her administrative work at Sweet Briar, Dr. Lucas teaches in the field of Philosophy of Religion and is planning to complete some writing now in progress in that field, following her resignation from the presidency of Sweet Briar next summer.

Announcement of President Lucas' resignation was made to the students and faculty of the college at a special meeting on Thursday noon by Dean Mary Ely Lyman.

Editorially Speaking—

From One Alumna to All Alumnae

We hope that all alumnie will study the Fund report on the inside front cover. It is a deviation from the former method of listing individual contributors, but the names of all contributors are in the office files. For the past two years those names and the amounts contributed have been checked by certified public accountants. Our gifts are already in use for Sweet Briar.

Fifteen hundred contributors from an alumnae body of more than six thousand! What does that indicate? Surely no one of us today is unaware of the financial plight of the private colleges, and all know well the dangers of education subsidized by government. The outstanding job which Sweet Briar is doing on many "fronts" in Education could not fail to make all of us alumnae pleased and proud. Then why were there more than 3,500 alumnae who did not make a Fund contribution this year?

Could it be that many of us no longer believe in a liberal arts college? Two thousand, one hundred twenty-two of us believed in it enough to work four years at Sweet Briar for our degree. One thousand, one hundred thirtytwo of the 1,500 contributions this year came from graduates.

Is lack of knowledge responsible for lack of interest? Are we in the Alumnae Office failing to keep you alumnae on "the outside" sufficiently informed of Sweet Briar's forward studies in the field of education? Unhappily, we cannot afford to send every issue of the ALUMNAE NEWS to all alumnae, but we had hoped that the Newsletter would help keep you abreast of Sweet Briar's activities and aims. We can and will try to provide you with interesting speakers for more of your group meetings. Let us know how we can serve you best.

Those gifts which do come from Alumnae to the college are most deeply appreciated by Sweet Briar. But can we alumnae be proud of the number of us who support the college or the amount we raise each year?

From X to G

Beginning with this first publication of the Association's new year, graduates will be identified by a small g following the numeral of their class year. Non-graduates will have no lettering with class numerals. Most ex's are very much interested in Sweet Briar, and we just did not care for the implication!

Academically Speaking-

Sweet Briar Elected to Phi Beta Kappa

by Martha B. Lucas

On September 2nd we received the following telegram from Mr. Carl Billman, Executive Secretary of Phi Beta Kappa:

"Happy to report favorable action today by Phi Beta Kappa Council on the petition of your Phi Beta Kappa Faculty group to establish a chapter of the Society to be known as Theta of Virginia at Sweet Briar. On behalf of Officers and Senators and Council members, I take pleasure in extending our congratulations. Letter will follow."

I know that this will be as good news for our Alumnae as it is for all of us here at the college. Those of us who, as a group of Phi Beta Kappa members of the Sweet Briar faculty and staff, last January formally petitioned Phi Beta Kappa for a chapter here have indeed had a most rewarding conclusion to our wishful wait. But the story began long before January of 1949! The first filing of a report in support of an application for a Phi Beta Kappa Chapter at Sweet Briar College was made in 1935, and a supplementary report was filed in 1938. On neither of those occasions was our application successful. A second full and comprehensive report was filed in 1941. In 1942 activities of the Phi Beta Kappa Senate were suspended for the duration of World War II; and when activities were resumed Sweet Briar was invited to submit a supplementary report, which we filed with the Phi Beta Kappa office in February, 1948. On the basis of the full report of 1941 and the supplementary report of 1948, Sweet Briar was asked to file the formal application for a Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Sweet Briar. This was done in January, 1949. Phi Beta Kappa's Committee on Qualifications recommended a chapter for Sweet Briar to the Phi Beta Kappa Senate, and favorable action was taken at the Triennium meeting in Madison, Wisconsin, on September 2nd.

Sweet Briar's Phi Beta Kappa chapter will be installed sometime during the academic session just beginning; and our first student members will be elected from this year's senior class.

Religion at Sweet Briar

by Marion Benedict Rollins, Professor of Religion

RELIGION at Sweet Briar is natural and unselfconscious. It assumes various forms, according as the individual finds God most readily in the beauty of the hills and sky; in the opening of truth to the mind; in the personal relations afforded by our closely knit community; or in the opportunities for service directly to our neighbors and indirectly around the world. For most persons at Sweet Briar, all of these elements enter into the meaning of religion. The worship services in the college chapel are brought into relation with these manifold potentialities of religious experience in daily life, unifying and focussing what has already become vital, and stimulating new moral and spiritual sensitivity.

Sweet Briar students bring with them religious convictions and practices drawn from many different backgrounds. In 1948-49, the student body included 216 Episcopalians, 104 Presbyterians, 32 Methodists, 20 Roman Catholics, 17 Congregationalists, 9 members of the Jewish faith, 8 Baptists, 8 Unitarians, 4 Lutherans, 4 Christian Scientists, 2 Quakers, 1 Moslem, and one or two members each of scattered denominations. The spirit in which these all live together is one of mutual tolerance and appreciation.

The typical Sweet Briar student is not in rebellion against the religion in which she was brought up, but neither is she content to let her childhood faith remain undeveloped while her thought is maturing along other lines. She wants to examine, understand, and evaluate her religious heritage, and to bring it into relation with her growing knowledge of science and history and philosophy. She seeks to achieve an integrated view of life and the universe, and a faith mature enough to support her in whatever experiences adult life may bring. The minority of students who do not share this religious interest nevertheless respect religious sincerity and do not impede others in their religious search or religious observances. What President Glass said in a discussion of this same topic in the ALUMNAE NEWS in 1945 remains true: "The spirit of charity and kindliness prevails to a noteworthy degree among the whole group. Deep worship and high, hard thinking is evident among a considerable number. There is no irreligious teaching and no spirit of scoffing or disrespect that I can find anywhere. The degree of active religious experience and living varies here as in the homes and communities from which these people come, all the way from seeming indifference to deep faith and much work. I think many students awake to an adult Christian attitude toward living here at Sweet Briar, and attain enlightenment and discipline in how to keep this living alive and functioning."

Students have an important share in planning and leading the organized religious life of the college. About a third of the members of the Church and Chapel Committee are appointed by President Lucas from the faculty and their families; the rest are students—three elected to the Committee by each class, and others serving ex officio because of their positions in student government or the Y. W. C. A. The Committee functions throughout the year in eleven sub-committees dealing with various aspects of the religious services and with the charitable work, both in Amherst County and at a distance, for which the Sunday offerings are used. Each sub-committee includes students as well as faculty members, and some have student chairmen.

The visiting ministers for the eleven o'clock Sunday services include many of the most outstanding figures in the religious leadership of this country. They are drawn from the churches and theological faculties of different denominations, but denominational affiliation is largely forgotten in the unanimity with which they challenge their congregations with the issues of our day and point them to the sources of religious adequacy for living in such an age. The remarkable work of the choir under Mr. Gilpin's leadership contributes immeasurably to the Sunday worship services. For the fortunate students who qualify for membership in the choir, one of the most significant elements of religion at Sweet Briar is the great religious music in which he gives them an education both exacting and thrilling.

The week-day chapel services on Tuesday and Friday noons are conducted usually by faculty members, but often by students and occasionally by outside speakers. During the past three years, both students and faculty members have given much thought to the question of the right balance between "informational" talks and "devotional" services. The amount of discussion in various meetings and in The Sweet Briar News is a good index of the community concern that these noon-day services be made an increasingly significant factor in the college life. Students who last spring answered a questionnaire on the subject were largely desirous of more "devotional" services with direct relation to personal religious living.

For a great many students, the ten o'clock services on week-day evenings during Lent are most vital of all. Begun about twenty years ago as early morning services conducted by President Glass and several members of the faculty, these Lenten services gradually gained an ever larger proportion of student leadership, and during the past eight or ten years they have been entirely planned, and almost entirely led, by students. The evening hour has proved more convenient for students than the original morning hour, and a large number attend regularly throughout Lent. The attitude toward these services is a vivid indication of the religious openness and earnestness of Sweet Briar students.

Throughout the year the Y. W. C. A. conducts occasional evening services and vesper services on certain Sunday afternoons. Besides this leadership in worship, and manifold activities such as the recreational work with children in nearby white and colored schools and the "Indian mission," the Y. W. C. A. began in 1947 a very successful plan of monthly student discussion groups with student leaders and faculty advisory members. Following a plan suggested by the national Y. W. C. A. and used in some other colleges, the discussions are organized in four "commissions" dealing respectively with basic religious convictions, personal growth, social responsibility, and world-relatedness.

Since 1932, all academic work in Religion has been elective. Religion is grouped with Philosophy and the four branches of Social Studies in "Group III" of the curriculum, and may count toward the number of hours required in that group, but the choice within the group is so wide that any student's election of a Religion course is entirely voluntary. The different Protestant denominations, the Roman Catholic Church, and the Jewish faith are represented in the Religion classes in about the same proportions as in the whole student body. The students can thus share with one another the insights derived from varied religious backgrounds, and gain sympathetic understanding of the beliefs and experiences of others while clarifying their own. A major in Religion was first offered in 1933-34, and since then forty-four students have graduated with this major. Among the major students, too, the Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths have been represented along with many branches of Protestantism.

After the removal of the four-hour Bible requirement in 1932, there was a sharp decrease in registration for Religion courses for several years. Then there began an irregular trend toward increase, with considerable fluctuation from year to year, depending upon the courses and sections offered and upon innumerable other factors, partly indefinable. During and since the second world war, many colleges have observed a quickened interest in the study of Religion and a widespread desire of students to find religious foundations for their own living. During the past twelve years, an average of 57 per cent of the graduates of Sweet Briar have elected one or more courses in Religion at some time during their four years. Taking just the last five graduating classes, the average has been 64 per cent.

Students who take Religion courses for only one year usually elect Old and New Testament, while for the advanced Bible courses and the History of Christianity this introductory Bible course is naturally prerequisite. The Old Testament study has been enriched in recent years by the publication of Fleming James' Personalities of the Old Testament (Scribners, 1941). The new books used in the New Testament field are more limited in scope. One stimulating new study is The Jesus of the Parables by Charles W. F. Smith (Westminster Press, 1948). The volumes of the Moffatt New Testament Commentary (Harper) are indispensable. One of the best of these for general use is William Manson's volume on The Gospel of Luke.

It is in the course called "Modern Problems in Religion" that upperclass students most specifically work out their own religious beliefs in relation to various trends in Christian theology and the philosophy of religion. At present, for instance, many students are eager to understand the positions taken by liberalism and neo-orthodoxy, and to make constructive use of elements drawn from both emphases. Two of the recent books which students in this course have found most rewarding are The Christian Answer, a symposium edited by Henry P. Van Dusen (Scribners, 1946), and a profound modern discussion of Christology by D. M. Baillie entitled God Was in Christ (Scribners, 1948). In both books, the first part is less helpful to most readers than later chapters. Modern religious issues are presented with their historical background in a symposium called The Vitality of the Christian Tradition, edited by George F. Thomas (Harper, 1944). More easily readable than these books are the little volumes in the Hazen series (distributed by the Associated Press) which treat suggestively a wide range of religious thinking. Some of the most generally useful volumes are Eugene W. Lyman's on Religion and the Issues of Life, Walter Horton's on God, Mary Ely Lyman's on Jesus, and Douglas V. Steere's on Prayer and Worship. Though not a recent book, W. Cosby Bell's If a Man Die (Scribners, 1934) is still for many students the most helpful discussion of the Christian faith in immortality, while Georgia Harkness' books on various aspects of the Christian faith are used by many, including her latest book on Prayer and the Common Life (Abingdon-Cokesbury, 1948).

The close relation between Religion and the other fields of liberal study is obvious throughout all the Religion courses. In particular, the correlations with Sociology has been brought out in the interdepartmental major in Religion and Social Problems introduced in 1937-38 and thus far elected by seventeen students. Another line of correlation underlies the new interdepartmental major in Art and Religion. A close relation with Philosophy is inherent in the subject matter of any Religion course, but since 1947-48 the two fields have been even more specifically combined in President Lucas' course in the Philosophy Department entitled "Philosophic Issues in Contemporary Religions of the World." The understanding of the thought and experience of other peoples has become one of the main objectives of Sweet Briar students, and many have taken advantage of the insight and stimulation which this course affords. In order to give background for the contemporary issues, the course in History of Religions (or "Comparative Religion," as it is popularly called), given in the first semester, has been made prerequisite to Miss Lucas' second-semester course, and the former has been opened to juniors and seniors without prerequisite. Upperclassmen are thus enabled in one year to become acquainted with the founders, scriptures, and formative periods of the world's living religions and then carry on into their current trends "especially in relation to recent developments in science, as well as in social and political theory." Books on the world's religions are pouring from the press during recent years. Two of the most readable are a symposium, Great Religions of the Modern World, edited by Edward J. Jurji (Princeton University

Mr. Worthington's Contribution to Sweet Brian

by THE REVEREND WALLACE E. ROLLINS

When Mr. Worthington died last April, many of his friends and former colleagues were led to think over his long term of service to Sweet Briar and to appreciate anew his contribution to the College. Many hundreds of his former students also recalled with deep gratitude their debt to him.

Mr. Worthington came to Sweet Briar in 1910, and with the exception of two years of study at Johns Hopkins served the College continuously until his retirement in 1944. This term of service is, I believe, longer than that of any other Sweet Briar teacher, except those of Miss Eugenie Morenus and Miss Caroline Sparrow. In these thirty-two years, Mr. Worthington contributed much that will be gratefully remembered in the years to come by all friends of Sweet Briar.

I was his colleague in the early years, lived very near him on Faculty Row, and can, therefore, speak from intimate personal knowledge.

Mr. Worthington came to the College when it had been in operation only four years. It was still very small. There were handicaps on every side. It was difficult to get students, and especially students well prepared. The demand for college education for girls, particularly in the South, was quite limited. Money was lacking, for most of the funds left by Mr. and Mrs. Williams had been spent on buildings and grounds. The College was still an uncertain venture, but it had in those early days one invaluable asset. The faculty, from the President down to the youngest instructor, were imbued with a truly missionary zeal to build a liberal arts college of the highest rank. Mr. Worthington fully shared this spirit, and labored incessantly to make the courses in the Romance Language Department thorough and exacting—worthy in every way of such a college. It was not difficult for him to do this, for he idealized France and the French language. Nothing seemed so important to him as a thorough knowledge of French literature, and he was a born teacher. The students caught his enthusiasm and did not resent his long assignments, even though they took too large a proportion of their time. Much of his influence was exerted outside the classroom. Many of his students flocked to the home of "Pop" Worthington, as he was affectionately called, for visits and counsel. He gave most generously of his time to the individual student. It was in teaching and in per-

Hugh Skipwith Worthington, lovingly known to many as "Pop," retired as head of the department of modern languages in 1944, and Sweet Briar has missed him ever since. A far greater loss, however, was suffered by the college itself and a host of individuals in April, 1949, when he died, for we have lost a real friend.

There are few whose influence has been felt at Sweet Briar so strongly for so long. For nearly four decades he lived on campus and during that time gave freely of himself to the college, to his classes, and to those who knew him.

An excellent teacher, an untiring worker, his first thoughts were for his family, Sweet Briar, and his camp. Only after that would he turn to recreation which he found on the golf course or at the bridge table.

A ready and sympathetic listener, his advice when solicited was always based on facts and good common sense. He could have been called a practical idealist. He was a thinker and a philosopher, with a dry wit and an ever present twinkle in his eye; and, in spite of more sorrow than most of us are ever called upon to bear, he never lost his sense of humor.

Sweet Briar girls who never knew "Pop" Worthington are without a little something which those of us who knew him have and will always cherish.

sonal work with students that his interests lay. In his early years at Sweet Briar he planned much research work, but in time he gave it up in favor of teaching and personal relations. Mr. Worthington was a very shy man. He was never completely at ease with girls and women, except in the classroom and in his relations with individual students, but with men he could fully relax and he had an unusual number of close friends among them. To all his friends he was one of the most loyal persons I have ever known.

It must be remembered, too, that Mr. Worthington's work, especially during the latter half of his career here, was done in the midst of unusual difficulties. He had a family of four children to educate, to whom, after Mrs. Worthington's tragic death, he had to be both father and mother. There was all along much serious illness in the family, and the economic pressure was very heavy. Salaries then were quite small. To make ends meet, he and his wife founded a camp for girls which necessarily absorbed much of his time and strength.

Mr. Worthington's contribution to the College was chiefly in his own department.

On account of his extreme shyness he avoided, when possible, committee meetings and assemblies of every kind. This made it difficult for him to do real teamwork, but in his own department and with his own students he gave himself unreservedly.

I am sure that a host of his former students, scattered throughout our country, will never cease to be grateful to "Pop" Worthington.

A Report on the A.A.U.W. Convention in Seattle

by Elizabeth Wall Saunders, 36g Delegate of the Alumnae Association

LOSE to 2,000 alert, sprucely dressed women carrying brown kits which bulged with miscellaneous data stepped briskly along Seattle pavements or lounged in groups in the lobby of the Olympic. The American Association of University Women was holding the biennial Convention. At first I felt quite noble, as though I were doing my college a service in being a delegate to the five day caucus, but I very soon learned that quite the reverse was true. It gave an oldster like me, some thirteen years out of Sweet Briar and very much involved with babies and business (sponsoring travelogue artists), a fresh lease on life. I found the meetings not only intensely interesting but stimulating and challenging. I wanted to read more, think more, above all do more. My one regret was that I did not bolt the door, park the papooses with Auntie and register at the hotel. As it was, I sashayed back and forth, now listening to an erudite discourse of democracy, now brushing rice crispies out of Susan's locks.

But to be more specific—after a Sunday afternoon welcoming program of scenic drives, garden tours, tea and a symphony concert, the convention opened officially in the Metropolitan Theater presided over by the charming president, Dr. Althea K. Hottel, Dean of Women at the University of Pennsylvania. Banked in the center of the stage was a pyramid of saucy scarlet geraniums in silver pots and along the footlights bloomed some five dozen of them. The keynote speech, "'Crossing New Frontiers," was delivered by Judge Dorothy Kenyon of the Municipal Court in New York, United States Delegate on the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women. A brilliant individual, her address was sparked with humor. She emphasized the point that our geographical frontiers have gone; the world is our frontier, not Latin America or Canada. We have to experiment in world government whether we wish to or no. We must go out and deal with problems of health, poverty, illiteracy, etc., at their source. Disease in one part of the world will spread to another in this era of airplane travel. Low wages in one part of the world will affect wages in another. We must speed democracy, restore economic health in the danger areas. We have the U. N. as a tool; it is invaluable as a huge town meeting, a market place of thought. The problems of the world are our problems; in their solution lies our preservation. We must balance the greatest good of the greatest number against the greatest good of the individual.

Following the meeting was an informal reception complete with iced punch in the ballroom of the Olympic. It was there that I caught my first glimpse of Dr. Meta Glass. Although my badge read "Mrs. Eugene Saunders," she called me "Libby" at a glance and began to recall intimate details of my life at Sweet Briar and year at St. Andrews that even I couldn't conjure up for the life of me. From then on I was only to see her across the footlights as she played a prime role at the convention as Chairman of the Committee on Fellowship Funds; so those were precious moments indeed. I confessed to her that although she was national president of the A. A. U. W. when I was in college, I had no idea of the immensity of such a position and was sure that my classmates too were unaware of the signal honor to Sweet Briar. Whereupon she said simply, "Libby, I'm glad to hear you say that. Perhaps it means that I didn't neglect my duties as College president." To me Dr. Glass is a very wonderful person—so queenly in her dignity, so human in her warmth and cordiality.

Monday opened with regional breakfasts followed by business meetings and reports of standing committees. Monday evening Dr. Margaret Mead, Associate Curator of Anthropology at the Museum of Natural History in New York, reported the findings of the Survey on Higher Education from a questionnaire in the A. A. U. W. journal which had an astounding one out of three response. A tremendously vital person who had her audience in mild hysterics Dr. Mead loves nothing more than a clash of ideas; I am sure that the only thing in the world that bores her is homogeneity. Some of her findings: Friendships are made in college, contacts later. College is the crucial spot that opens all doors that will ever be open to you; a door open just a crack at eighteen may be entered at sixty-eight. Demand for more practice in college; less child psychology, more handling of babies. Line fell between women with children and without, not between married and unmarried. Less than 7 per cent of the college women who answered had never been employed. There was one striking defect, however—no recognition of special gifts in people; everyone desired an active and balanced personal life bearing children, helping husband and community with no mention of who will write the books, compose the music, etc. In conclusion, a college education was one of the things nothing can take away; you can become a criminal, a dipsomanicyou still have a B.A.

Tuesday was devoted to special interest groups—Social Studies, International Relations, Fellowship Program, etc. I are afternoon was set aside for the creative arts—visits to the Northwestern Writers' Exhibit, the Penthouse Theatre where the arena style of play production was demonstrated, an exhibition of Pacific Northwest painting, sculpture and design. The buses wound up at the University of Washington pavilion for the International dinner. A colorful and festive affair had been arranged. The tables were aglow with candles and decked with shiny greens and curious Oriental oyster shells. After the assembling of United Nations flacs and folk dancing by foreign students at the University the illustrious speaker of the evening who had been flown from London for the occasion was introduced. Mrs. Mary Agnes Hamilton, director of the American Information Service and former member of Parliament and Governor of the British Broadcasting Company, spoke on the subject "Frontier Crossing: Yours and Ours." She stressed the point that freedom of mind, thought, movement, etc., lies not in isolation but in cooperation between men—"Finding our own kin and kith fun to be with." (Nash).

Wednesday found me dusting off the children and cajoling my long suffering spouse. Back at the Metropolitan election of officers was taking place, and the convention's main subject of controversy, the admission of Negro women to membership in the Association, was being hotly debated. The convention voted in the affirmative whereupon the Washington, D. C., branch withdrew from the organization.

Dr. Meta Glass presided most graciously over the Fellowship Program Thursday evening which brought the five day convention to a fitting and gratifying close. The A. A. U. W. achievement award was presented to Dr. Helen C. White of the University of Wisconsin, and Dr. Louis B. Wright, director of the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D. C., gave the concluding address on "Women and the Preservation of Learning." He warned us against the doctrine of immediacy which is a menace to higher education. Learning and scholarship are in low repute today. The emphasis is on vocational training, how to earn a good living. Pure science, philology, literature, art, is vastly important; without it scholarly imagination would stagnate. Mediocrity threatens us; the acceptance and tolerance of shortsighted materialism—the disdain for anything intellectual. We have to do more than exist. The most critical need in America today is cultural leadership such as College women are capable of if we are to survive the inundation of the cheap and tawdry.

Discovery of the A. A. U. W. and in particular the inspiring conversation was a thrilling beginning for me. I made the discovery that one's college life does not end with the presentation of that elusive diploma. I keep harking back to that survey. There are a number of doors that were opened for me at Sweet Briar that I intend to walk through and long before I am sixty-eight.

ALICE: 4 years, 4 months; Dress: 2 years, 3 months.

Alumna Turned Designer

by Alice Benet Hopkins, '36g

IN YOUR favorite children's shop these days you are likely to see a row of neat, dark-colored gingham dresses, each carrying a round tag with the figure of a little girl and her enlarged shadow, and the lettering on the tag reads, "Gro-Tall, The Dress That Fits As She Grows." Each of these dresses is guaranteed to keep up with a little girl's growth over two full years, and the means whereby this change is made is covered under the magic words on the tag "U. S. Patent No. 2,442,494."

It is a very far cry to the nice rack of dresses from the beginnings made in the winter of 1946. Back then, I cut out four dresses of some very precious (in those days) cotton goods, each to be smocked. Two were finished very promptly, with smocked voke and waistline. Then we had a long siege of tonsillitis, Christmas and like interruptions, and the two other cut-out dresses remained cut-out for about three months. When I was almost through the third, after this long lapse, I realized that something was very wrong about it-it would look too little even in its brandnew state. So Porcher (my long-suffering husband, ladies) and I figured over it, and came up with the source of the trouble: the waistline was too short, and therefore the whole dress looked out of proportion, though it really was still perfectly good in the other dimensions. From that discovery came the first, very crude Gro-Tall dress. I devised the simplest possible means of shifting the waistline, and yet keeping it secure against the dress, and our Alice became the test-model for the idea.

On the advice of a good friend who is a children's buyer, we then set out to get the idea patented. Convincing a good firm of patent lawyers that we had something was a job in itself, but finally, after a 20-month wait, I was given a strong, seventeen-year patent on an adjustable dress for growing girls.

In the meantime I kept working the idea over, and the month Alice was two, I made her several improved-type dresses and put them into regular service—trips through the washing machine about once every ten days for each one of them. They have been adjusted about four times each, and they still fit the 4½ year-old very fast-growing Alice perfectly. I have pictures of the contrast between the original proportions and the current ones that are almost unbelievable. The original measurements now put the waistline up under Alice's armpits, and the skirt length almost at hip-line!

Having been granted the patent, the next question was to decide what to do with it. The alternatives were to set up my own factory or to license a manufacturer, if one could be found who was interested. The first alternative was out of the question, when we found that capital of about $200,000 would be necessary to cut, manufacture, and distribute with promotion on the side, in a cut-throat highly competitive field already full of young hopefuls with ideas and a lot of oldsters with real old know-how and strong union alliances. So I packed fourteen of the dresses in a big, black suitcase and went to New York, hoping to win over somebody in the garment district. I had some good introductions from local stores and other contacts, and a week to find my manufacturer.

One contact promptly blossomed, and I came home with high hopes. By three months later, the bloom had faded—the powers-that-be had decided that the idea was too conservative and old-fashioned. So back to New York I went, with the suitcase and a somewhat disillusioned feeling about the entire garment industry. But this trip hit the jackpot: I was introduced to a man who caught the possibilities of the dress at once, and three days later he showed me three sample dresses based on my patent. That was last December. The Gro-Tall dress made the Parents' Magazine Fall Fashion Clinic in May, and has been nationally advertised since April. What it will do over the years remains to be seen, but every big store that has bought it has promptly reordered. Macy's sold 20 dozen in one day, with no advertisement.

The part that I like best about the whole thing has been the new world that has been opened up to us: the textile and garment industries are fascinating, even from the small contact we have had with them. And there is tremendous satisfaction in seeing an idea developed in the everyday routine at home prove commercially successful. A regular monthly check is a delightful thing—particularly when I know I haven't short-changed my duties at home to get it!

ALUMNAE COUNCIL ELECTIONS

Alumnae are urged to send names of possible candidates to the Chairman of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. Franklin Parker (Katharine Niles) '36g, 46 Glen Road, Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts, with lists and qualifications, activities, etc.

The Council meets three times each year at the College as Sweet Briar's guests. Unhappily traveling expenses must be met by individual members.

What We Need to Know

1. What the Alumnae Association is

All former students of Sweet Briar are members. There are now 2122 graduates, and a total alumnae body of 5245. Active members are those who contribute to the annual Alumnae Fund.

Active members may vote for the Alumnae Council, and help choose the two alumnae members of the Board of Overseers. They receive all four issues of the ALUMNAE NEWS.

2. Management of the Alumnae Association

Sweet Briar College pays the bills and the salaries of the staff, and works closely with the Alumnae Council, consisting of the officers of the Alumnae Association, 16 members at large, the Alumnae Fund Chairman, the alumna member of the Board of Directors, and the alumnae members of the Board of Overseers. Alumnae elect all members but the alumnae member of the Board of Directors, who is a life appointee.

The Alumnae Council meets at Sweet Briar three times a year for two days, and works hard to set the policy and plan the activities of the Alumnae Association. The members pay their expenses to and from Sweet Briar, but are college guests while on campus.

3. The Alumnae Fund

is our annual gift to the college. Private colleges do not receive money from the government. They have to support themselves. Sweet Briar runs itself by student fees, interest on endowment, and the Alumnac Fund. The college has a comparatively small endowment, and of course can only use the interest on this money—thus the Alumnac Fund is very important to the college. If we believe in a liberal arts education we must support it financially, just as we do our community chest, cancer and T. B. drives. For 1946-47 the average gift was $9.51—for 1947-48, $11.27, and for 1948-49, $9.75.

4. The Alumnae Clubs

There are about 41 active clubs. Their activities are varied. Some work as a unit for local charities, meeting often, and others meet only twice or three times annually. Some hold discussion programs, material being supplied by the Alumnae Office. Each club is asked to:

- -Entertain incoming freshmen in the fall.
- —Celebrate Sweet Briar Day. Traditionally it falls on December 28, but some clubs choose another date more suitable to their particular locale.
- —Have an alumnae representative committee. These committees cooperate with the Committee on Admission to see that local schools and guidance officers know about Sweet Briar. Members are often asked to tell local applicants about the college, and to help Mrs. Lill or Mrs. Munger plan school visiting. This is important work. Many colleges have paid field admissions workers but Sweet Briar prefers not to.
- -Hold some benefit, however small, for the endowment of the Manson Memorial Scholarship.

to Be Successful Alumnae

Hold discussion programs on local problems. The Alumnae Council realizes that public schools in the United States are having difficulties. Schools are crowded, teachers are few, and often trained poorly. It feels college trained women should help solve communities' problems. We're trained for leadership but not all of us assume it properly. So alumnae groups are urged to study local educational problems and then do what they can to further educational aims. The more practical and useful club programs are, the more the general public will respect and admire Sweet Briar and other liberal arts colleges.

5. The Alumnae Office

It is a service unit. The staff keeps address and fund contribution records, and can help alumnae track down "lost" friends, can send to individuals lists of alumnae in any given locale. The staff sells Sweet Briar plates, matches, place mats, magazine subscriptions, Virginia jams and jellies, the profits of all going to Sweet Briar. It edits the Alumnae News, prepares newsletters and addresses invitations for alumnae clubs—helps clubs get started. It plans reunions and is always glad to welcome alumnae on visits to campus.

And Now

WHAT WE ALUMNAE CAN DO FOR SWEET BRIAR

We are the end-product of this institution. We are its reputation in the world and in our communities. What we are is what our friends and acquaintances think of Sweet Briar. The college needs all alumnae good will and financial support it can obtain, but by and large its support must come from the general public. Sweet Briar cannot command that support and respect unless all of us who represent Sweet Briar at work in the world are worthy of it.

All institutions, like all people, who take stands and assume positions in the world, receive criticism. Some of it is worthy, some is not. Alumnae can help the college by writin; to the Alumnae Office whenever we hear "rumors," etc. We must give Sweet Briar a break, learn the facts, and then decide. Also whenever we speak of Sweet Briar we should think of the effect our words will have on others.

Whenever we are in the "news," new position, raise in rank, engagement, marriage, mention Sweet Briar. Creditable publicity helps "spread the word."

We should all contribute to the Alumnae Fund each year.

New Session in France Begins

Embarking for France and a year of study at the University of Paris, 57 of the 73 men and women enrolled in the 1949-50 Junior Year in France sponsored by Sweet Briar College, sailed September 8 from New York. Dr. Mary Lane Charles, of Western College, Oxford, Ohio, assistant professor-in-charge, accompanied the group.

As a preliminary welcome to France, M. Rene de Messieres, cultural counselor to the French Embassy in New York, gave a reception for students and their parents on Wednesday afternoon, September 7. President Martha B. Lucas of Sweet Briar College addressed the students briefly.

Thirty-three colleges and universities are represented in this year's Junior Year in France by students from 21 states, the District of Columbia and Nassau, B. W. 1. Vassar, with eight, has the largest group; Yale, Bryn Mawr and Mount Holyoke have five students each, and Sweet Briar and Cornell, four each. French is the major subject of 30 students, and the remainder will pursue their studies in 19 other special fields of interest. Five men and one woman are veterans.

Dr. Blanchard L. Rideout, professor-in-charge, met the entire group, including those already in Europe, in Paris. Dr. Rideout is on leave of absence from Cornell, where he has been assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, chairman of the Committee on Admissions, and associate professor of Romance languages. He has been in Paris since early August assisting Dr. Joseph E. Barker, director of the Junior Year in France, in making academic and housing arrangements for the students. Dr. Barker has returned to Five members of the 1949-50 Junior Year in France group, photographed just before the September 8 sailing of the Mauretania: Betty Meredith, Hollins College; Katherine Phinizy, Sweet Briar; Edwina Fraser, Randolph-Macon Woman's College; Audrey Breitinger, and St. Claire Hayden, both of Sweet Briar.

Sweet Briar, where he is chairman of the Romance languages department.

As a supplement to their academic acquaintance with France and French customs, most of the students have chosen to live with French families while they are in Paris. Headquarters for the group are in Reid Hall which has long been a center for American students in that city.

Miss Lucas UNESCO Delegate

Miss Martha B. Lucas has been named by President Truman as one of five members of a delegation, headed by George V. Allen, assistant secretary of state for public affairs, representing the United States at the meeting of the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Paris from September 19 to October 5. Miss Lucas left Sweet Briar on September 13 and flew to Paris.

In addition to Mr. Allen and Miss Lucas the other choices include: Milton S. Eisenhower, president of Kansas State College and a brother of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, vice-chairman; Luther H. Evans, librarian of Congress, and Reinhold Neibuhr, professor of applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary.

As congressional advisers to the group Mr. Truman designated Senator Brien McMahon, Democrat, of Connecticut and Representative Mike Mansfield, Democrat, of Montana.

The group from the United States numbers at least 300 delegates and observers who are representing 48 member nations in the fourth general conference of the organization.

Press, 1947) and Man's Religions by John B. Noss (Mac-Millan, 1949). Easy access to portions of the Scriptures of the different religions has been facilitated by the publication of Robert O. Ballau's The Bible of the World (Viking Press, 1939). Though no volume of selections can be wholly satisfactory, this fourteen hundred page book avoids the sketchiness of the same editor's Portable World Bible and numerous similar compilations.

Religion at Sweet Briar is a growing thing. Not only are courses frequently revised in the effort to meet the needs of the time, but the subtler aspects of the religious life of the college are continually renewed and enriched as successive generations of students, and faculty members of varied nationality and religious heritage, all give to the group life the treasures of the spirit that they have found.

Alumnae Arrange Town Hall Concert for Iren Marik

THROUGH the generous and active support of Sweet Briar alumnae, a concert in Town Hall, New York, has been arranged for Miss Irén Marik, who has been teaching piano at Sweet Briar for the past two years. The concert, under the management of Columbia Artists, Inc., will take place on April 1, 1950, at 8 p. m.

After hearing Miss Marik's recital at Sweet Briar last November, Alma Martin Rotnem, '36, one of our most resourceful and active alumna, a member of the Alumnae Council, conferred with Miss Miriam Weaver, head of the department of music, and with the Alumnae Secretary, about the possibility of presenting Miss Marik in a concert at Town Hall. Upon her return to New York, she began preparations for the concert. Her enthusiasm and hard work resulted, a few weeks later, in the establishment of a group of patrons, most of them Sweet Briar alumnae, whose contributions have assured this concert. Later this winter Mrs. Rotnem and her committee will take on the added labors of ticket selling. Miss Marik, meanwhile, has spent a busy summer preparing for her Town Hall recital and for her other concerts as well. During the early part of the summer, she was in Washington, where she had several pupils and upon her return to Sweet Briar she taught a number of others, in addition to continuing her own daily practice. One of her pupils is a young Belgian pianist, whom Miss Marik is preparing for her spring concerts. Another is a teacher in a school for girls, who spent a month at Sweet Briar as Miss Marik's student.

Miss Marik will play her first recital this fall at the Musicians Club in Richmond. Later, she will be heard again in Washington and in return engagements at nearby colleges. In February Miss Marik will go to several Canadian cities to fill concert engagements, including Winnipeg and Toronto.

Since coming to this country from her native Budapest, in 1946, Miss Marik has given several recitals at the National Gallery in Washington. She has been soloist with the National Orchestra, has played at Constitution Hall in a joint concert with the Washington Choral Society. She has played at Lynchburg, Staunton, Lexington, Chatham and several times at Sweet Briar. Besides her recital at S. B. last November, she played the Brahms piano quintet with the Curtis string quartet in one of the most delightful concerts at the college last February. She has been greeted most enthusiastically each time she played, by capacity audiences.

Equally warm has been the comments of music critics after her various concert appearances in Washington. They agreed, that her playing was distinguished by highly poetic and inspired interpretation, combined with a brilliant technique. One wrote: "... interpretatively she showed herself an unusual pianistic personality . . . Miss Marik's poetic performance evoked storms of applause from the audience."

Another wrote of Miss Marik's recital, that it was "piano playing that rose to true greatness, that was unfailingly beautiful in tone even in passages of monumental sonority, that was noble in intention, but did not lack the charm of humor, and that was equally convincing in classic and modern works."

Miss Marik, a graduate of the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest, was a pupil of the late Béla Bartók and Imra Stenániay. She spent five years in England, making concert tours, giving recitals in London and playing numerous radio recitals. In addition, she gave recitals in various European capitals, including Berlin, Munich, Vienna, Venice and Budapest. Before coming to this country, she taught piano as full professor at the College of Music in Budapest.

Beulah Norris, '22g, will direct the Alumnae Fund for the next two years from her home in New Castle, Pennsylvania.

Beulah served as a supervisor at the Children's Bureau in Cleveland, after prolonged study at the School of Applied Social Sciences of Western Reserve University.

After seven years in Cleveland she returned to New Castle as County Supervisor with the Pennsylvania Department of Public Assistance. During the war Beulah worked all three shifts in a shell plant. At present she is busy keeping house, tending a large vegetable garden, and doing volunteer work in New Castle.

In Memoriam

Eunice Pritchett Squire, Academy

Eunice Clay Pritchett Squire, wife of City Councilman J. Walter Squire, and daughter of Dr. C. W. Pritchett, dean of Danville's medical corps, died at her home in Danville, Virginia, on July 16.

Death brought an end to a valiant fight against a rare blood disease, leukemia, which was found to be present four years ago. She had been bed-ridden for four months, her condition becoming complicated by a fall in which she suffered a fracture of the hip.

Born in Keeling on February 7, 1894, she moved to Danville, Virginia, with her parents in 1898 and had lived there since except for part of her schooling in art and her journeyings with her husband whom she married in 1934. With her husband, she had lived at Fort Story in Virginia, in Florida, and in Texas.

Mrs. Squire was educated at Sweet Briar and at the old Roanoke Baptist College. Her tendency towards painting was encouraged by her parents and at the time of her death she was a recognized figure in that field throughout Virginia.

She had, during her life, executed at least 100 portraits, and a few days before her death had been requested to perpetuate in oils members of the Boisseau family, identified so long with Danville community history. Art critics who appraised her "one man shows" in Washington and Richmond, Virginia, had united in applauding her competency in the field of portraiture and still life in which she showed unusual capacity.

Following her education in Danville, and at Sweet Briar, she spent a year or more in Paris engaged in art study. Upon her return she attended the Corcoran Art School in Washington and was a regular devotee of the Art Colony at Cape Cod, Massachusetts, where she spent part of many summers.

At home, she had been one of the founders and leading workers in the Danville Art Association and she was also a member of the Virginia Museum of Art, also of the South Eastern Art Association. She was a member of the Wayside Garden Club and a charter member of the Shakespeare Study Club. Mrs. Squire had been a consistent member in the Baptist Church.

Class Notes

ACADEMY-SPECIAL

Class Secretary: MARGARET POTTS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams) 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Fund Agent: CLAUDINE GRIFFIN (Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb) 2514 Laburnum Avenue S. W., Roanoke, Virginia.

Those of you who were in school with me will probably remember me, for there were so few of us in those early days that we were almost like one big family; the rest of you who read this may recall my name because of the Fund letters with which I have been hombarding you for the past three years. I am no longer Fund Agent, but, through this medium. I shall still write to you, for I am the current Academy-Special secretary; and I hope that I shall hear from you, by letter or card, giving me news of vourselves, your families, and your Sweet Briar friends. Marion Peele made such an excellent secretary that I feel quite timid about following her; but I will do my best, with your help in giving me news-for without news I cannot pass it along.

Almost the only news I can relate at the present time concerns myself and my family. I spend my time largely between New York City, where my husband is in the investment business, and Shepherdstown, West Virginia, at my old home, Popodicon Farm, which my sister and my brother and I now own jointly, and where we raise purebred Hereford cattleand good ones, too! As I sit here in the country writing this I can look out over the lawn, now enclosed by an electric fence, and watch the most beautiful little calves frolicking around while their fat mothers contentedly graze this wet season's almost too lush grass or else lick their babies' white faces until they fairly glisten. (With such fascinating distraction, how can I write?)

My mece, Eleanor Potts, who was graduated from Sweet Briar in 1948, was married this past June to C. Stribling Snodgrass, Jr., an Ensign in the Navy of one day's standing at the time of their marriage. They went to England and France for their wedding trip and are now living in Norfolk, where Strib is stationed. Their address is the Larchmont Apartments, 5502 Monroe Place.

Virginia Emmert, now Mrs. Ralph Beall of Martinsburg, West Virginia, was here for the wedding. Also here, but barely able to hobble, was Elizabeth Green Shepherd, 1914g, just out of a Washington hospital where she had been for some time because of a bad fall which had painfully bruised a nerve and incapacitated her. "Lizzie," as many of you know, has a very smart dress shop in Georgetown and she comes up to Shepherdstown quite frequently to see her late husband's mother and her own son and his charming wife, who live here.

Austin Turner is now Mrs. Arthur Jones, Austin and her husband, who is an old friend of my husband, live in a beautiful old brick house atop a hill of a large farm at Somerset, Virginia, just a few miles from Orange, and raise horses and cattle. Austin raises beautiful flowers, too, and is quite a garden authority.

All of us who worked for the Academy-Special part of the 1948-49 Alumnae Fund were immensely pleased by the generous response our group made to the Fund, and I feel sure that the rest of you take as much pride as we do in the fact that ours was the banner group for the amount contributed. Your new Fund Agent is Claudine Griffin Holcomb, whose sister, Eugenia Griffin Burnett, is Alumna Member of Sweet Briar's Board of Directors. It is certainly gratifying to know that Claudine has consented to take over this work and I feel sure that our share of the Fund will continue to grow under her capable direction and with our help.

Don't forget to send me news in time for the February issue of the ALUMINAE NLWS, which goes to all contributors of the Alumnae Fund. And many thanks from all of us for your generous contribution to the 1948-49 Fund, and best wishes to you all.

As this is the issue that goes to all alumnae I'm particularly sorry I haven't more class news, I see in the June ALUMNAE News that one of our class, Bernice Richardson Campbell, is to serve on the Nominating Committee for officers and members of the Alumnae Council which will meet in Boston this fall.

Mayo Thach Tarpley's son has quite a prominent part in a new picture. It is "Black Magic," starring Orson Welles. His stage name is Frank Latimore. His original name was Franklin Kline. I haven't seen the picture yet but understand it was filmed in Italy.

Eugenia Buffington Walcott attended the Alumnae Council meeting at Sweet Briar in June. Her cuusins, Rebecca Patton, '14g, and Felicia Patton, '16g, met her at Sweet Briar and returned with Eugenia to Tryon, N. C., for a short visit.

I visited my sister Dorothy Grammer Croyder, '17, over July 4 at her summer home at Cragsmoor, N. Y. Dr. Harley has a home there but she didn't arrive in time for me to see her, I am sorry to say. Dorothy writes she has seen her several times.

I was in Cape May in August for a while and also spent some time in Avalon, New Jersey, with my son, Donald, his wife, Lea, and my 3½ year old granddaughter, Ellen. That was a great treat.

Sue Slaughter wrote in June she was preparing to accompany her mother to Warm Springs, Virginia, for the summer.

That about winds up my news. If you'd like to read more next time, send me a card and tell me what you've done this summer or plan to do next winter.

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: REBECCA E. PATTON, Beechmoor, Catlettsburg, Kentucky.

1915

Fund Agent: Anne Schutte (Mrs. Leroy H. Nolt) 1301 Homestead Lane, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

My postcards, which I sent out about a month ago netted only two replies, one from Margaret Grant from Geneva, where she is attending the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, and one from Louise Weisiger from New York, where she was spending her vacation. Louise's letter resulted in a visit to me last Friday on her return trip. I met her in Philadelphia and drove up to Phoenixville. Anne Schutte Nolt arrived before us from Lancaster to have lunch with us. We had a 50 per cent reunion of 1915 gradnates, and a very pleasant one it was, too. Anne had come bearing two loaves of delicious nut bread and a bouquet of tremendous zinnias from her garden. We spent a delightful afternoon together. Anne's new house is finished and occupied and she showed us several pictures of the interior which looks perfectly charming. Louise had been sight-seeing, shopping, going to the theatre and visiting Faye Abraham Pethick, '17, on Long Island. Faye is recuperating from a broken hip on which she had a pin operation last winter. Louise told us of her visit to Sweet Briar last spring for the meeting on Secondary Education.

Margaret Grant writes that she is finding time over her week-ends to get away from Geneva to visit and sight-see. She has recently visited friends in a lovely chateau in the province of Namur in Belgium. Her daughter, Peggy, who graduated at Barnard College in June, is taking a summer course at the Sorbonne in Paris. Harold finished his first year at Columbia and is to have a trip to Europe next summer when the Council meets again in Geneva. Her daughter, Leslie, and little grandson, Christopher, are living in Cambridge where her son-in-law, Leslie Bigelow, is teaching at Harvard. Margaret finds her work very interesting, if somewhat arduous.

In June I returned to Sweet Briar for Commencement, driving down with Mary Bissell Ridler, '17g, and Elizabeth Spahr Lytle, '17. As there were no other members of 1915 there, the class of 1917 took me in their care and I had a wonderful time. On Saturday I saw Eugenia Buffington Walcott, '13g, Rebekah Patton, '14g, and Felicia Patton, '16g. They had come for the meeting of the Alumnae Council of which Eugenia is a member. Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10g, was there, too, on Saturday, but they all departed before the end of the day. That left me the oldest alumna in the Academic procession. Sunday evening Bertha Pfister Wailes, '17g, invited us to a picnic supper at her home. We took with us the picnic supper provided by the college and found that Bertha had a tremendous dish of fried chicken and other good things. We had a hilarious time with Carrie Sharpe Sanders, Flo Freeman Fowler, Rosanne Gilmore, and Isabel Wood Holt of 1919; Polly, Elizabeth, Bertha and Rachel Lloyd Holton of 1917 and 1 of 1915. Henrietta Crump, '17g, and Margaret McVey, '18g, were on the campus on Sunday but did not stay for the pienic.

Elizabeth Spahr Lytle has been spending the summer in Europe with her daughter, Betsy, who has a job in Germany.

Dr. Harley was staying with the Walkers and we all found time to make a call there and found Dr. Harley, Miss Ruby, Miss Winnie, Dr. Will and Mr. Ted all at home and in fine form

My sister, Elmyra Pennypacker Coxe, '20g, who has been a widow since 1939, was married last April 2 to Mr. Richard W. Yerkes of Chicago. She plans to drive east in September and I hope to return with her to Chicago for a visit.

My Spring was a very hectic one. Phoenix-ville celebrated its centennial in July and I was appointed chairman of the Historical Committee. As Elmyra's wedding kept me busy until early April I was unable to work on the committee until after that event. It was our job to collect historical material for a pageant for the centennial copy of our paper, the Daily Republican, which put out a hundred page Centennial Edition. Besides this we put on an exhibit of historical documents and antiques. It was all hard work but the results justified the effort.

Anne Schutte Nolt has agreed to be Alumnae Fund chairman for another year and 1 hope that 1915 comes across in a big way in contributions to the Fund.

Class Secretary: ZALINDA BROWN (Mrs. Galloway C. Harrison) 5201 East 43rd Street, Seattle 5, Washington.

Fund Agent: Louise Bennett (Mrs. Albert C. Lord) 182 Hillside Avenue, Englewood, New Jersey.

1917

Class Secretary: BERTHA PFISTER (Mrs. Ben Wailes) Sweet Briar, Virginia.

Fund Agent: INEZ SKILLERN (Mrs. Walter Reller) 121 Main Street, Boise, Idaho.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Upon request, Mary Bissell Ridler sent in this class letter.

The five of us who were fortunate enough to return to campus for our 32nd reunion send greetings to the other members of our class. I know you will want to hear something about what we did, and also any news that we picked up.

Well, as for those present, first and foremost there was Bertha Pfister Wailes, who lives on the grounds of Mt. St. Angelo, and if she ever moved away from Sweet Briar, 1 am sure most of us would find returning to campus quite dull. Bertha teaches, and holds many important positions in Virginia, and 1917 is very proud of her. She is not only smart but good looking!

Then there was Rachel Lloyd Holton, who had driven over to Cleveland and picked up Rosanne Gilmore to make the trip with her. Rachel's daughter Martha was married in April, and we enjoyed seeing the candids of the wedding, with the other daughter, Mary, as maid-of-honor.

Elizabeth Spahr Lytle came down from New York on the train, and drove the rest of the way with Frances Pennypacker and myself. Elizabeth has an apartment on Riverside Drive near Columbia now. She has one son at home. Two of her children are married. Scott is teaching history and will be at the University of Washington in Seattle next year. He is the father of twin daughters, Jean's husband will be teaching at Middlebury next year. Betsy, who is 24, is in Germany with the Government, and working on the history of the Occupation. Elizabeth will fly over this summer, and they will visit the Scandanavian countries together. Elizabeth has been taking some courses in History at Hunter this past year.

Henrietta Crump was with us for only a few hours on Sunday. She is still a supersecretary, and flies all over the country with her boss on business.

We had a letter from Genie Steele Hardy, with snapshots of the family. Genie's youngest daughter has had a serious illness this past winter, but was hoping to be well enough to take part in Eleanor Steele's daughter's wedding this month.

Ruth Mcllravy Logan has been to Florida by air this spring, and felt she could not make another trip east from California. We missed you, Ruth.

Elsie Palmer Parkhurst sent snapshots of the grandchildren. Her youngest daughter was graduating from a prep school, and so Elsie could not join us.

Margaret Gibson Bowman is in Europe until July. Faye Abraham Pethick was moving. There were a few more letters and questionnaires, which are filed in our Scrap Book in the Alumnae Office, if you ever stop by the campus.

The only news of myself is that my youngest daughter, Ann, was married last November and now lives in Buffalo. My twin sons are just finishing their Junior year in engineering in Lehigh.

Now for what we did. The program was very full, but most interesting, as you will see from other articles in this magazine. However, we managed to find time to call on the Walkers and Mrs. Dew, and to visit the lake, the monuments, and to see the new building for entertaining "dates." The Senior banquet was held there. The high point of our week-end was our class picnic Sunday night. Bertha invited us to come to her house and also included 1915 and 1919, making eight of us in all. The fried chicken and strawberry shortcake would make your mouth water. After supper, we sat around and read your letters, and looked at old pictures, and just talked until 'most eleven o'clock. We had such a nice note from Miss Stevenson, our honorary member, and were sorry she couldn't be with us. She has retired from Mt. Holyoke, and now lives at 8 Park Street, South Hadley, Massachusetts, if any of you are up that way.

It was a grand reunion with perfect weather, and here's hoping we will be able to round up all of you for our next one.

I am sorry that I didn't get up to Sweet Briar for our 30th reunion but I had a son graduating from St. Christopher's that same week-end and decided that the importance of the present out-weighed the pull of the past in this particular instance. I know it was fun for those who did get back.

1 visited Louise Hammond Skinner before she took off for Europe for the summer with Grace Merrick Twohy and saw her granddaughter, Louise III, christened while 1 was there.

Ellen Bodley Stuart's son, Roger, a Rhodes scholar, graduated from Oxford in June and she and her husband went over for the exercises. It must have been particularly thrilling as William A., the husband and father, was also a Rhodes scholar Oxford graduate.

I am sorry I have no further news to pass along. Please write me and let me know what you're all doing and please remember to pay your dues so you'll get the other issues of the magazine.

What fun and such wonderful visits I have had with you all this year. I truly hate to say au revoir but I have saved all your letters and when I feel like a chat with you, I'll just open my treasure chest of correspondence and there you will be!

Ophelia Short Seward writes her daughter, Betsy Heath, attends Mary Baldwin and Susan is a Senior in High School. You say "no more news" so I go on the theory that everything goes well and life is a full time job with your happy family. A letter from Kitty Datis Baynum says she expects to be at your daughter's wedding this fall.

Madelaine Bigger, I knew I would win out —I did, and a note from you. I wondered if you were a lady of leisure or society but see you belong to "the toilers" as I do—surely does keep one busy. I hope to get down to Richmond on business and, of course, will see you. Am due on September 10 at Hopewell to attend my godson's wedding but am afraid I can't make it just now. If I do, I'll drop you a note.

Rhoda Allen Worden had a very gay bit of news-her daughter Ann was married July 2 to Dr. Thomas Dillon at a garden wedding. The strains of the wedding march had only faded into the beginning of happiness for part of Rhoda's family and she was on her way to Maine with her son, John, for his summer vacation. After a few days of rest and relaxation at a fishing lodge on Lake Kezar in Maine, they drove Rhoda's mother up to her home in Olean-how the Worden's do get about! Mildred Ellis Scales planned to be at Ann's wedding but Mr. Stork flew over the chimney of her daughter's house and Mildred felt he was a pretty important bird to welcome so she dashed back to Bennington, Vermont.

Now you're all in for a surprise-a grand letter from Bootsey Scorell Vaughu, still the "Oueen of Shreveport." This is another one of those jobs I really worked on, believe me! Bootsey has a son 13 years old who is spending this summer at camp. Bootsey planned to visit her sister living in Santa Fe, New Mexico, but the summer has been unusually cool so she and her husband are having a beautiful summer golfing, swimming, etc., at home. During the winter she spends a great bit of her time with club work, church activities, and in the Little Theatre project. Last year she saw Gerry Ball Bewsher in Florida. Don't forget your promise to look me up whenever you find Chicago on your map!

Kitty Davis Baynum had a lovely vacation with her family in Canada, grandchild and all. I know the Muskoka Lake region as my boss has a summer cottage up there—it's beautiful country and heavenly weather. Kitty's grandson must be a darling (Kitty admits he's a handsome child)—her son-in-law graduates from Lehigh next term and then launches on his own career.

Surely appreciated having a letter from Maynette Rozelle Stephenson as she is really a busy person assisting her husband in developing his Hearing Aid business which means the expansion of their sales and service personnel. Maynette's recreation is her flower garden and some good "stiff" bridge once a week. Seems to me I recall you had a few games in Carson. l, too, have started playing it again after a full of several years. She plans tu join the Woman's Chamber of Commerce this fall which is commendable as the right step in the interest of Kansas City. A spree for the Stephenson papa and mamma to Estes Park-then home to do some redecorating and the making of a wardrobe for the grandchildren-such vitality and accomplishments!

Maynette represented Sweet Briar at the 100th anniversary of William Jewell College in Missouri—congratulations to you and I know being "ill at ease" just isn't in your vocabulary—many congratulations.

The offer is still good—if you want some sample vials of Tabu, 20 Carats, or Emir Perfume for your pet charity this fall, just let me know how many.

Kathryn Pennewill Lynch writes her time this summer has been occupied by golf—she's on their club team and has played tournaments all over the state. Her daughter, Jane, had an interesting job this summer in a smart dress shop on the Boardwalk preparatory to her work in a merchandising course at Tobé-Coburn this winter. As a prelude to his summer vacation, her son Howard flew down to Havana to visit a school friend—what fun you all must have together and I can understand how you will miss Jane now as she commences her career.

Can you imagine anything more exciting than having Cupid lead one charming daughter down the aisle and touching another on her shoulder—Ellen Wolf Halsey's daughter, Frances, was married to John Phillip Wickser from Buffalo and Sarah Elizabeth is affianced to William Harding Pell of New York City. The wedding was at their summer home at Nantucket, Massachusetts, and the clipping Ellen sent me shows a lovely and charming bride. Her gown was satin, her veil rosepoint, and her bouquet orchids—the bridal party was in white organdy and carried field flowers. Hope you can visualize this lovely setting as 1 do.

Beulah Norris, our Alumnae Fund Chairman sent me some facts and figures—in the fiscal year ending last June 30, our class had 18 contributors adding $160.50 to the Alumnae Fund. Now I know what Beulah had in mind —RAISE THAT TOTAL—so here's my challenge to the Class of '21—let's make the goal $500! Your part is $250 and mine is $250. Send your generous contribution to Gertrude Anderson for this year's fund and when it reaches $250, my check is ready. I know everyone will come through just as you have in reply to my letters—it was your wonderful cooperation that brought all the news. Thank you and the best of everything to you all.

Well, the much talked of twenty-fifth reunion is over and it was a great success. The only thing that kept it from being perfect was the fact that more of you weren't there.

BILL TRANTER, JR., son of ELIZABETH Guy

I shall try to give you a blow-by-blow description of the week-end, in hopes that you may get long-distance a little of the feeling of nostalgia and campus that we got first hand. Not being trained in the art of writing, I may fail dismally but at any rate, I claim an "E" for effort.

I met Kay Klumph McGuire at the May-flower Hotel in Washington on Friday noon and we, with her husband Fritz, headed for Charlottesville where we had reservations for that night. Fritz hadn't been back to the University since his school days, so he wanted a chance to see it. We stayed at the Old Ivy Inn which, by the way, is perfect and we can highly recommend it. It was swarming with Sweet Briar parents and was full of southern charm.

Saturday morning we took off for Sweet Briar and the drive down was just the same as twenty-five years ago until we got to Amberst. If it hadn't been for the marker at the edge of town, we wouldn't have recognized it. It is a thriving-looking, busy town now with many new homes and we felt like Rip Van Winkle when we discovered our old road to school not used and in its place a lovely highway that goes straight out past Mrs. Wills' home.

As we drove up on campus the main thing that impressed me was the way the trees had grown. A quarter of a century has made a tremendous difference in the amount of shade there is, particularly along the drive from the sophomore wall past the junior bench and over to the cupola.

Of course we scanned every face on the way to the office looking for a familiar one, and fearing that no one would recognize us if we should meet one. We learned that we were to be housed on first floor Grammer, so we hurried over there to see who else had arrived. We found "El" Harned Arp and "Shiny" Bodine Mountcastle ensconced in the room that Elizabeth Sparrow Harshman and I had early in our freshman year. (Remember that far back?) Jean Grant Taylor and Mary Rich Robertson were unpacking in the room across the hall and Kay and I were put next to them. Only six of our class were to be back we learned and we were all terribly disappointed.

While we were getting dressed for the garden party, the six of us talked ourselves hoarse getting reacquainted and it was fun. Jean seems to be leading a very interesting life. Her husband is a professor at present at the University of Michigan, but has done research work in several places—their favorite one in Bermuda. Jean had pictures of their two sons—both fine looking lads. Mary had snaps of their seven-year-old son. He is very cute looking and I guess is as peppy as Mary. By the way, she hasn't lost a bit of it, and says she keeps too busy all the time.

The garden party was lovely. Miss Lucas greeted the guests at the foot of the steps of Sweet Briar house. She was as charming as all reports pictured her and she looked so pretty. Edna Lee Gilchrist was pouring at a long table in Boxwood Circle and her seven-year-old twins were there, looking perfectly darling in their long dresses.

That night the alumnae had dinner in the Refectory and from then on the meals were in Reid. Coffee was served after dinner in the parlors of Grammer which are now where the old practice rooms used to be, and are furnished beautifully. The gymnasium, at the other end of the hall, has been made into a recreation room, with a fireplace at the far end, red leather chairs and a coke machine.

Sunday morning Mary Wilson Walker arrived on campus unexpectedly and we were so glad to add one more to our small group. She and her husband have bought a farm in Virginia, so she hopped in the car and drove over to school. She looks marvelous, not a grey hair in her head, and they love the country life, in spite of her husband being in a cast for months on account of an accident to his leg.

During dinner that noon, Buffy Taylor Valentine and some other girls from Richmond dropped in for a few minutes. Buffy doesn't look a day older.

That afternoon there was the usual step singing and a few minutes before that started we had two more additions to our group. Susan

MARIE Brede BROWN and husband, LAWRENCE

ROBERT THOMPSON, son of KATHERINE Slaughter THORNTON

Fitchett had arrived and Harrell James Carrington drove out from Lynchburg but could only stay a short time. It was grand to talk to her. She hasn't changed either—the same pretty coloring and dark hair. There was a picture of her daughter on the bulletin board of the Alumnae Office and she is the spittin' image of Harrell.

After step singing our class collected its picnic supper and took it down to the lake. We chose the upper porch of the boathouse for our picnic and it was a beautiful evening. Mary B. and Harrell had left, so we were few in number, but it gave us a nice chance to really visit by ourselves and to get caught up with Susan. She looks fine, and her life at school in Richmond sounds very interesting. We got back in time for Lantern Night, which was beautiful.

Monday morning we donned our caps and gowns and marched to the new gym for Commencement. The French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, was the speaker. It was just as hot as all commencements are and the graduates were just as thrilled to have their sheepskins as we were. Students and parents started leaving for home soon after but most of the alumnae stayed for the banquet that evening. Kay and Fritz left at noon, as they had to be back in Cleveland the next evening for Maeve's graduation from the eighth grade, and to get ready for another trip.

Our alumnae banquet was well worthwhile—a wonderful dinner and several speakers and an interesting discussion on the problems of secondary schools. "El" Harned Arp sat at the speaker's table and was asked to take a bow for her outstanding work on the Council. We were very proud of her. "Shiny" had to leave in the middle of the banquet in order to catch a train for New York with her daughter, Anne. Anne will be a junior at Sweet Briar this fall. She is perfectly darling and looks a great deal like "Shiny."

El moved in with me for the night as we had both lost our roommates. We got up at the crack of dawn the next morning in order to get a taxi over to Monroe.

There were just two letters with news this time but I do happen to know that El Arp and her husband spent a week in Michigan in July with Dodie Von Maur Crampton and her family at their summer home.

Frances Nash Orand writes that their oldest daughter, Jean, was married to Homer Key of Dallas in June. He will receive his engineering degree from the University of Texas in February. Their second daughter, Nell, will be a sophomore at Sweet Briar this fall, and loves it. And Gail, their sixteen-year-old has one more year at Hockaday Prep School, and then hopes to go to Sweet Briar. She is president of the Athletic Association in prep school and sounds perfect for Sweet Briar. Frances and her hushand are going down to school next February on their way to New York and to Sea Island for their vacation in March and she hopes to see lots of their college friends. Thanks for the letter, Frances, and if you get to Washington, be sure to get in touch with Kay Klumph McGuire writes that they drove Maeve to Michigan for a visit and that they had had a special kind of excitement after they got home the end of June. Republic Studios of Hollywood were making a picture in Cleveland and they used Kay's home for George Brent's home in the picture—both exterior and interior shots. Lynn Bari and George Brent had the leads and it's to be called "The Cleveland Story" or "An Assist for Johnny," for the present, at least. It deals with juvenile delinquency, and the Cleveland Indians are in t quite a bit. Watch for it, and you may see Kay as an extra in some of the stadium shots.

A letter just this minute arrived from Betty Guy Traater from the Iron City Fishing Club about one hundred miles north of Toronto. They had been up there since the first of July and Bill, their seven-year-old, is getting to be a regular fish. Betty had planned on reunion but after all the work she did getting things organized for our reunion it didn't seem fair for her to miss it. Thank you for your letter, Betty, and I hope to see you in Pittsburgh some time.

That's all for this time, but PŁEASE do write me what news you know so we won't have a blank in the next issue.

Class Secretary: HELEN DUNLEAVY (Mrs. Henry D. Mitchell) 880 Clermont Street, Apartment 23, Denver 7, Colorado.

Fund Agent: KAY MORRIS (Mrs. Stillman F. Kelley, II) 35 Carisbrooke Road, Wellesley Hills 82, Massachusetts.

Last week when we were driving to our beloved Estes Park, I was bemoaning the fact to my husband, Hank, that my post cards had none of the characteristics of the "homing pigeons." He pointed out to me that summer time is such a busy time for everyone and also fun time. He said, "take yourself for instance." So now I've high hopes, that when the winter winds do blow and the children are busy at school, and you all are looking for something to do (ahem) you'll take pens in hands.

My sincerest thanks to Kay Norris Kelley and Retta Nelson Weston. Double orchids to you two dears for letting us hear from you.

Kay's letter brought the wonderful news that her son Randolph is slowly getting better. We are all so happy for you, Kay, and your family. She writes Camden, in August, is always a big run around. The Kelley family visited the two middle children at camp, where they are very happy. Priscella, the oldest, is teaching swimming and is headed for Middlebury College in Vermont. Kay, in answer to your question if the Mitchell's are doing any riding—had a wonderful week-end of it, last week in Estes Park. It is still my most favorite sport.

Retta Nelson Weston writes that she and the children are in Highlands, North Carolina, where the Westons have been spending the summers for the past ten years. Their older boy, Bill, age 14, is going back to Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Virginia, this fall for his second year. Their younger son, Nelson, age 13, is in Junior High and will enter Episcopal High School in 1950, and their daughter, Rett, age 9, hopes to enter Sweet Briar around 1956. Retta says as long as she is giving family statistics, her husband is a Pediatrician-a graduate of University of Virginia Medical School. Retta says they had a delightful time at Farmington in June, '48, when she and her husband attended his 25th medical reunion. She said they drove through Sweet Briar which looked as lovely as ever. Retta writes that she has recently seen Rebecca Ashcraft Warren and Elizabeth Cates Wall.

The Denver Alumnae group has one Coloradan in this year's Freshman class at Sweet Briar. Janet Neale Martin, who is a completely charming and delightful person.

Talked to Evelyn Anderson Tull, yesterday and we are going to try to get the Denver Sweet Briar gals together on September 13 for a bun voyage luncheon for Janet. And I know in each of our hearts will be a sense of nostalgia for the time when we were just starting out. I remember back, should I say way back, when I was the only girl from Colorado, and I've always thought some of you expected me to appear in Indian feathers!

Denver Sweet Briar group are also bursting with pride that Dot Keller Iliff has been chosen by President Lucas to represent Sweet Briar at our famous Colorado School of Mines 75th anniversary convocation. There will be a three-day program of lectures and doings, with many outstanding people attending. I know Dot will be not only a very charming representative, but also a very intellectual one.

Dorothy McKee Abney spent the summer holiday at Atlantic City.

A card from Marie Prange Conrad brings the news that she is living in Connecticut and married to an artist. They also have two adopted children, Erika, the five-year-old, is European who came to them a year ago and is very talented. She says that Wanda Jensch Harris was at their wedding in New York five years ago.

From Erie, Pennsylvania, comes word that Margaret White Knobloch has enjoyed a very busy and gay summer.

One of the most thrilling experiences "yours truly" had this summer was seeing the Rushmore Memorial in the Black Hills of South Dakota. As one stands looking at the four Presidents of the United States carved there in the granite hills, you are awed by its magnificence. You feel a deep, burning faith in your great country and a pride of being an American that is indescribable. It is called the Shrine of Democracy and that describes it in all its wonder, beauty and reverence.

We all read with a deep sadness of the death of Joyce "Sis" Macgregor. Every one of us will always remember her smile of happiness and the joy she gave each of us by knowing her. As we read this, let us each pause in a moment of honor, to the friend that was dear to all of our hearts.

On this Labor day, it is hard to picture ourselves reading this in October with the peace and quiet of the children in school and our winter schedules well in hand. It is indeed a happy thought! So now that at long last you have some time for yourself—why not send in your contribution to S. B. right now?

The following issues of the ALUMNAE NEWS for 1949-50, that is January, April and June, are sent only to those who send a contribution to the Alumnae Office. As you probably all know there are no Alumnae dues, as such. The Alumnae Fund is maintained by contributions which may be large or small but always welcome. We hope you will send a check today.

Don't forget that two years from this June will be the auspicious occasion of our 25th reunion. After the first shock of finding that your old schoolmate looks like her mother instead of herself, reunions are great fun. And believe it or not we have more in common than we did in our callow youth!

It will be new news to some of you that Hilda Harpster has written a book the title of which is "The Insect World." As Libbo Matheus Wallace puts it, "Don't be frightened if you are not an entomologist, because it is easy reading and should be a must for Garden Clubbers." Hilda is now working on her second book.

We are always proud for daughters of the class of '27 to enter Sweet Briar. Elizabeth Wallace, daughter of Elizabeth Mathews Wallace, entered in September.

Lois Allen Perkins has two children, Allen, now 18, entered Case Institute of Technology this September and Sue goes into High School in January.

Martha Ambrose Nunnally expects to move from Memphis to Chattanooga where her husband is now in business. More details later.

You gals who plan a trip west could get some good tips from Evie Anderson Tull who recommends highly the spot where her own family and her brother's vacationed this summer. A place called Phantom Valley Ranch near Grand Lake—must be Colorado.

Marjorie Atlee Parks sent a wonderfully long letter all about herself and family. We are overjoyed because we haven't heard a thing from her for years! Her husband Leon went to the University of Oregon and is Vice-President and General Manager of the Gulf Power Company. They live at 944 Fairway Drive, Pensacola, Florida. They are the proud parents of two children, Leon, Jr., 10, and Marjorie Ann, 21, who graduated from the University of Chattanooga last June and was married in July to Lt. Andrew J. Valentine, U. S. N., (military wedding) now in Norfolk headed to Patuxent River for duty. Marjorie is active in church work and scouting. She has just completed two terms as President of the Y. W .- The following I must quote, "If any of the class of '27 comes this way to follow the azalia trails, lose their minds over our glorious camellias or just enjoy the pure white sand of our beaches, I would love to hear from them." Doesn't it make you feel like dropping everything?

It is particularly exciting to hear from you people who have been silent for so long that we feared you were lost. Genevieve Black Newton is another one. Her husband graduated from Michigan in '26 and Harvard Law in '29. They have lived in Seattle, Washington, since 1930 and have two children—Mary, 12, and Sally, 8. Genevieve enjoyed dinner with Miss Glass when she was in Seattle last June. We would love to hear more about you and your family, Genevieve.

"Tabo" Brown Hood tells about her three. Frank ("Sonny") entered the University of N. C. this fall. He was a counselor at Camp Carolina this summer. Mary Anne, 14, is now in High School and Betsy, 8, is in the third grade. They all were in Asheville visiting Tabo's mother before school started. We hope you have completely recovered from the bad accident you had a couple of years ago, Tabo.

Can't be sure about Madeline Brown Wood's offspring whereabouts at this point since Madeline didn't include this information in her last newsy letter. During the summer Madeline had seen Billy Quisenberry Marks and her youngest son for two hours between trains and saw Compy several times while she was visiting in Covington, Louisiana, across the lake from New Orleans. Both girls, according to Madeline, don't show the wear and tear of the years at all! It appears to be an occasion of mutual admiration because Compy said the same about Madeline. Compy expected to go to the Allison Art Colony on September 29 for 10 days to instruct and do some painting herself.

Nice to hear from Elisabeth Councill after all these years. Since taking her degree at University of N. C. ten years ago, she has been librarian in the Hickory High School. She enjoyed a motor trip through New England this summer.

When last heard from Elizabeth Cox Inman was getting ready for the hunting season (her first attempt). We hope she will tell us more about this hazardous sport.

Eleanor Ertin Bullock's oldest son goes to the University of Alabama, her other son, Ervin, to a military school in Mobile.

Elizabeth Forsyth was in Daytona, Florida, this summer and went to the Triennial meeting of the Episcopal Church in San Francisco in September. She expects to be out West until November.

Dorothy Garland Weeks was recoperating from virus pneumonia when she wrote. 1949 so far, had not been lucky from a health standpoint, with four months in the hospital followed by two major operations. Better luck from now on, Dot, and our sincere best wishes. Dot's son, John, entered Syracuse this fall. Her daughter will be off to college next year.

Margaret Green Runyon had a gay summer visiting somewhere every week-end—Suburn, Lake George, Warwich, etc., etc. Her sons are now 17 and 15. As you remember Greeno is active in the real estate business in and around Summit, N. J.

Emilie Halsell Marston enjoyed a two weeks' cruise on the Chesapeake and part of the Atlantic. Had a fine visit with Dot Hamilton Davis and also Mary Rich Robertson. Emilie's daughter returned to Scripps College in California this fall.

The Arnolds (Claire Hanner) had a cottage at Garden City, S. C., during July. "Tootie"

Maybank Williams was among her many guests. Later in the summer Claire went to Nags Head, N. C., to see the Lost Colony. Julie is now in the third grade and their baby son has reached the marvelous age of one year.

The Hodges (Emily Jones) spent their vacation in the Poconos. I haven't seen Emily for two years but she sounds as gay as ever on the telephone.

Catherine Johnson Brehme was disappointed that she and Dickie Dickinson Robbins couldn't get together when Dickie was in California this summer. However they did enjoy a telephone conversation. "Tinker's" daughter, Mary Archer, really gave her mother a scare when she was at camp on an island in Puget Sound. She was taken sick and was flown out by a Coast Guard plane. Fortunately she made a rapid recovery and was able to go back to camp for the rémainder of the season.

Libbo Mathews Wallace sent a letter full of news just minutes late for the last Alumnae News. She enclosed a clipping from the Charleston Daily Mail with a picture of young Harry who with two other boys had the enviable job of taking care of the bats for the Charleston Senators. Young Harry's father was a behind-the-scenes cog in the move that landed the Senators in the Class A Central League this year.

When you read the following quote from Libbo, I'm sure we will all agree that she is a great asset to the class of '27. I quote: "Being the self-appointed chairman of the reviewers committee of publications by the class of '27, I call attention to Mrs. Hall Hammond's article on Chrysanthemums, starting on page 28 in the 'Maryland Gardener.' This is a practical magazine for Down-to-Earth Gardeners. I'm sure we are all down having graduated from S. B. C. 22 years ago, but if there are any of you who haven't hit earth yet, read our own Ibby Luck's article entitled 'I Disagree With Everything You Say.' She writes of the Autumn Queen with a contagious enthusiasm in the April, 1949, issue. This member of our class has served as president of the Maryland Federation of Garden Clubs and is now treasurer of the Hammond-Harwood House in Annapolis, Maryland. Also Ibby has fulfilled all requirements for a certificate as Nationally Accredited Judge so guard your entries in your local shows, because she may now secretly criticize them. This is a real accomplishment. (I know, I took one of the many courses required.) It would be nice to know if others in our class have rearranged the cobwebs in their brains enough to earn this award."

The Allans (Betty Miller) took a cottage with another couple right on the ocean at Amagansett for the month of August. Bettie plans to visit her father in September in Cincinnati.

Gretchen Orr Swift sends her news in a nutshell. Julie's engagement was announced on September 4 to Sheldon Brown. He is a graduate of Princeton, '49, and working in the advertising department of Proctor and Gamble in Cincinnati where they will live. Gretchen runs into Frankie Sample on "The Hill" occasionally.

From Pauline Payne Bachus . . . "If you feel a diaper routine and formula making is newsworthy do mention me in your column."

Connie Van Ness spent one of her vacations at the Inn on Lake Muskoka, Canada, and the first week in September at Martha's Vineyard. Although she loved Canada, she just couldn't desert Martha's Vineyard completely.

The Stanleys (Sarah Von Schilling) and their two youngest had a wonderful two week visit with Nora Lee Antrim at her summer camp in New Hampshire. Their oldest son, Jimmy, attends Fay School in Southboro, Massachusetts.

This morning's mail included two more cards—one from Bebe Gilchrist Barnes and the other from Elizabeth Cates Wall. The Barnes' spent five weeks at their cabin on Stoney Lake, Canada. Dan is now a fine three-year-old. Bebe expects to be on the campus in October for a spell. Cates' says that Connecticut was too hot for her this summer so she rented a house on the top of the mountain at Highlands, N. C. She had returned from Europe a short time ago; she says the trip was a great success, hobnobbing at the Embassy a pleasure. They were invited to Rita and Aly's wedding but had to sail home the next morning so couldn't accept. Too bad!

The largest single event in the Crane household is the return to the fold of Bill, Jr., 11, ("old Silver Tooth"), from Keewaydin Camp in Vermont. He is the proud holder of an enormous trophy which glorifies as well as weighs down our mantle until next June.

Thank you one and all and Good Luck to all of you! Stamford 4-2569 if you come to New York.

I am sorry to report that I have absolutely no class notes for this issue. In offering to continue to do this job, I mentioned that you twenty-eighters would all have to cooperate with me to the extent of writing when and as you had any news for me, since I cannot send out postcards from here; I suppose that as only those who pay their Alumnae dues get the June issue, very few of you were aware that I was no longer in New York. That is a nasty, but I am afraid deserved, crack! So let me rub it in by reminding you all that you don't get the ALUMNAE NEWS all year if you haven't sent in your contribution.

As to these notes, I think it would be a good idea if one of you, living in a more accessible spot and seeing more of your classmates, took on the job. If, however, nobody will do it, I will be glad to hear from any or all of you and do whatever I can to continue reporting on our class. I would hate to have us fall back to where we were in 1946 when I started this job. So please, everybody, try to write me a note before Christmas (that certainly gives you plenty of leeway!) so I'll have something for the next issue.

Meanwhile, I can report on only one member of the class . . . myself. My husband is still very ill, but he is going to get well . . . something that was rather in doubt for a while. We are happily settled in a charming small apartment in Mexico City, with a wonderful cook who is only 19 and beautiful, so we feel that we are fortunate. I hope by the time I next have occasion to write, everything will be good. Until then, I hope a few of the old faithfuls will communicate and give me something to write about.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA HODGSON (Mrs. R. C. Sutliff) 4733 24th Road North, Arlington, Virginia.

The campus we all agreed was more beautiful than ever! The soft blue Virginia hills surrounding the well tended lawns and ivycovered buildings—the boxwoods grown twice as big and smelling sweet and fresh—the dell looking lush and green—Doesn't it make you nostalgic for the old days at Sweet Briar?

All of us who got back for our twentieth reuninn missed those of you who could not come. We talked about you and wondered where some of you were and what you were doing but I must say, too, that you missed a really wonderful and exciting time. The weather was gorgeous, the program stimulating, the company gay and talk was plentiful . . . honestly we had lots of fun.

All of us "old" alumnae stayed in Reid . . . I say old for I'm sure that's the way we used to refer to the returning grads, though I must assure you right away that none of us looked fat and forty! In fact we privately agreed that we looked almost the same as twenty years ago and if we hadn't been so modest we might have added that we were even more attractive than as immature college girls! Seriously, it was most gratifying to find that all those of our class present were assuming responsibilities of leadership in our churches and in all forms of community service. We looked back to our undergraduate days at Sweet Briar with thankfulness and gratitude for the excellent training we got there.

There is not space to tell you of all we did so I shall have to limit this to a few of the highlights. Many familiar faces on the faculty were missing but our class sponsor, Mrs. Raymond, as charming as ever, gave us a party in her darling Garden Cottage which you would never have recognized as the old Bookshop. Sunday night the class picnics were held. Thanks to Amelia Hollis Scott and Gert Prior and her mother, who were hostesses, our class had a delicious supper at the Prior's delightful home which is just across from the S. B. station (near where Mr. Blank's store used to be—remember?).

Some other high spots: listening to recordings of original music by Virginia Lee Campbell Clinch . . . hearing of and anticipating reading Eleanor Dutall Spruill's stories in Good Housekeeping magazine . . . meeting and

"falling for" Lisa Guigon's most attractive husband, Baird Shinberger, who had just been ordained priest in the Episcopal Church-had there been more time I feel sure we would have made him an honorary member of our class, however we do send him the best of wishes for real success in his new work. A great pleasure to all of us was meeting Sweet Briar's president, Miss Lucas. We agreed that all the nice things we had heard about her were more than true. Another pleasure was to be able to see "our" president, Miss Meta Glass, who came for Commencement. Time had made little change in her for she was just as bright and attractive as when we all entered Sweet Briar. The alumnae seminar, held on our last afternoon, was most stimulating as was the panel discussion following the Alumnae dinner the last night . . . the 29ers were particularly proud of Amelia Hollis Scott for her leading part in the discussions on Secondary Educa-

I wish I could tell you all we learned from those of us who were there but I am afraid it would fill the whole magazine (you better not miss the next reunion!). This is a list of those who managed by hook and crook to escape their families for the three glorious days:

Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins, Winnetka, Illinois. Has four boys.

Mary Archer Bean Eppes, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Has two boys.

Anne Mason Brent Winn, Lexington, Kentucky. Has twin boys and one girl.

Athlein Benton Lawton, Roanoke, Virginia. Virginia Lee Campbell Clinch, Dallas, Texas. Has a boy and a girl.

Sally Callison Jamison, West Lafayette, Indiana. Has a boy and a girl.

Ruth Ferguson Smythe, Louisville, Kentucky, Has three boys,

Emilie Giese Martin, Lancaster, Ohio. Has two boys.

Amelia Hollis Scott, Lynchburg, Virginia. Has one boy and two girls.

Virginia Hodgson Sutliff, Arlington, Virginia. Has a boy and a girl.

Louise Lutz, Chicago, Illinois. Has a fascinating job with the Art Institute of Chicago. Polly McDiarmid Serodino, Cincinnati, Ohio. Has one boy.

Ella Parr Phillips Slate, New York City. Has one girl.

Gert Prior, Sweet Briar, Virginia.

Dottie Joliffe Urner, Hagerstown, Maryland. Has a boy and a girl.

Margaret Wessiger Proctor, Arlington, Virginia. Has one boy and three girls.

Lisa Guigon Shinberger, Alexandria, Virginia. Edna Earle McGehee Pleasants, Lynchburg, Virginia. Has three children.

Josephine Tatman Mason, Winnetka, Illinois. Has (I believe) four children.

Lih Lankford Miles, Newark, Delaware. Has two boys and one girl.

My newsletter about this gay and happy reunion would not be complete without special thanks to Terry Shaw, the efficient Alumnae Association secretary. In the next issue I shall give you the news gleaned from the questionnaires which were filled out and returned. So, if you haven't already sent your contribution to the Alumnae Fund do it quickly as the February magazine goes only to fund contributors.

Class Secretary: Marjorie Sturges (Mrs. W. Russell Moose, Jr.) 2210 Pingree Avenue, Detroit 6, Michigan.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George S. Writer, Jr.) 21 Fifth Avenue, Nyack 3, New York.

A simply huge HELLO from each of the 198 of us to the other! It took me until this June's issue of the NEWS to learn that 4/5ths of us never see the Alumnae News except for this free-gratis-for-nothing issue in October. This being the case, it is regrettable the class secretary job doesn't run from/to October so that we could then read a year's digest of what has been going on. Far be it from me to make any loathsome suggestions which might lead to murder, but it would seem that a little moonlight requisitioning on Junior's bank and the forwarding of those 200 pennies in your hot damp fist to Gwen might do lots to rectify matters. That is her job, however, but it has gotten all tangled up in mine, for come this June, WE reune!

Speaking of which . . . Great Jumping Jehosaphat! I do wish that those nice people who write me such splendidly full-of-news letters would relax about that reunion business. Perhaps it is because you are not on the receiving end of these joys to my heart, but I wish you could hear the chirpings therein: "Do urge ns '30ers to turn out for our June reunion." Since ye be of such little faith, hear ye what is sure to come to pass.

All children will be relegated to the deep freeze. All husbands farmed out. Fetters of 20 years' standing will be shucked off for the nonce and with a wiggle of delight we will pile into cars, if for nothing else than a drive through the countryside alive with little soft green growing things and sweet smelling freshly turned earth and the perfume of flowers and fruit blossoms wafting by the nose, tax free. And just when we think we'll go mad, mad, mad! with sights and smells and scenes, we'll turn in the college gates and go straight to Sweet Briar House and that fringe bush and stick our faces in the middle of it and swoon for the very joy of living. Yes we WILL. You KNOW we will. So quit fightin' it.

Mary Moss is going to pick up Alice Tucker down the road and Isobel Eldridge. Oh, and Patsy Jones and Georgie Wilson will have come down to join them. Katryne Blake having taken herself and Bob and the 3 boys off to Norris Dam, can come up with Lammie. Gwen will have collected Nancy Gaines and the reluctant Emma Reilly. Maybe even Reggie Foster from her farm at Eden, N. Y., and Merritt Murphy from West Point. If anyone can budge Abie Blake from her 1½ year old son and being Mrs. Frank Crane, Mona Stone can. And how I wish they would pick up Tommy Thomason in Chicago. Rely on Mary Huntington to fill up her car with Charlie Coles and Libby Smith and Peg Carpenter. By the way, Peg's Marshall is Director of TV for the Crosley BC in Cincinnati, and they have bought a ranch on the Rio Grande.

There are no less than circa 22 gals from Virginia and West Virginia alone who will arrive-Merry Curtis and Norvell Royer and Jane Callison and Diddy Mathews will see to that. Had a grand letter from Diddy saying she had been on a newspaper until Jr. was born in '42 and et cetera. Mercer Jackson is coming from Pennsylvania and of course Lammie Lambeth from Tennessee. Lammie is living in Hermitage with 2 children. Did you know she has her M. A. in psych and took a trip around the world in '35? Sally Reahard will have to show up or forever hold her pieces. Now, Margaret Hall has a job with the Mt. lda Jr. College, plus 2 children, but Lindsay Prentis will put her 4 imps in the lap of the Lord and scoop up those living around her. Of course Carolyn Martindale will have come down from South Berwick, Maine, where they moved in '48, to join them. I'll guarantee to get one May Queen model '30 there, along with Serena Ailes if she will light a moment from those cross-continent trips. And even Jo Reid, if for nothing else than to see her lower herself to flat shoes. Don't worry about N. C. Leave that neck of the woods to Laura Lee Sage. If she has had time for 6 children, including one pair of twins, and all else she does, this will be but child's play. Liz Stevenson will be right in there aidin' and abettin', too. I wish she would bring along one of those prize winning Field Trial English setters she is raising now, and we could get her a horse and see her handle it.

The heat of Florida will have driven Elizabeth Carnes and Betty McCrady north to join us all. Mary Earle lives in South America but she and her husband make yearly treks back to S. C. and so, maybe! maybe! No Texans. No Californians. But en route from New Mexico, Betty Boone will stop and pick up Jarvis Seele and Meredith Oakford in Colorado. Meredith lives on a ranch, of some size, too, and in her letter she extended a most cordial invitation to any and all of us coming out her way to Longmont. AND we will have a bride in our midst-Eleanor Henderson, who is Mrs. Guy Merry as of this spring. And going back a piece, Georgia ought to turn out about 5, with Augusta Porter and Boyce Lokey among them. Boyce's husband, Harold Martin, writes for the Saturday Evening Post. Well, there are roughly 55 without even consulting one of my cards.

I don't know about you, but it has taken me every moment of these 20 years to work out of that I'LL NEVER EVER GO BACK TO SBC attitude. Isn't it nice that being now des dames d'un certain age, we are through the worst of our fits and madnesses and can just enjoy each other? Changes? I HOPE so! Not only in our college, but in ourselves. We've lived through 2 world wars and were depression babes at college to boot. Maybe we WON'T recognize one another. But if Ruth Hasson and Serena Ailes are any samples, I can say we all have an eyeful and earful in store for us this coming June.

Oh. News. Let me start off by saying that Mercer Jackson Wellford has 3 children instead of only the 2 as reported. What a bobbing about that family has endured-from Old Hickory to Buenos Aires to Richmond to Seaford to Chester, Pennsylvania. Her Carter is the Assistant Manager of Personal and Industrial Relations Division of the Rayon Department of du Pont. Oh. & Nemours, Try that as an introduction sometime. The GOP'S would get back into power before one could get it out. They have spent their summer at Sabine Hill, Carter's home, on the Rappahannock. In Chester, Mercer cultivates with wondrous and loving care and success vegetables and flowers and weeds, impartially. Through Mercer it is reported that Myra Marshall Brush's husband is a very successful general practitioner in Lexington, Virginia. Wouldn't that be a relief, after all the specialists we have been surfeited with? And she has 3 daughters. Last spring, on a visit to Nashville, Mercer saw Lammie Lambeth Kilgore and Kay Marr White. Norvell Royer Orgain upheld the class honour by being at Commencement again this year. Wistfully she wrote that '29 was having such a good time and she did hope that we, in '50 . . . etc. Her summer was spent making small trips to the river, while her daughter was at Dan Boone's camp. Quite the place from all accounts. And Emma Reilly Lemaire popped up again in Richmond for the Fourth where Sarah Von Schilling Stanley gave a swimming party for her. From Emma herself I've had direct word at last, after having passed on to you all enough second hand information to be sued. Emma was a WAVE during the war, and for the last 3 years she has been living in N. Y. C. with her husband who is French and a former French naval officer. He is now with an import-export and shipping brokerage house and Emma is working for the organization which ships coal to France under the Marshall Plan. The two of them went to Squam Lake in N. H. for a vacation where also go Nora Lee Antrim, '29g, and Betty Speaking of WAVES, Emilie Turner Cowling was one and after her marriage, she adopted a baby boy.

Taylor Antrim, '33.

Gwen Olcott Writer wrote that they had their usual month, and then some, in the mountains chez the father-in-law with sports aplenty and Planters Punches at the club, but mountains or no, it was HOT. Gwen and a Dwight roommate of Ruth Keeler's plan to drive over to see Ruth in N. Salem. Ruth, by the way, is alive and kicking and did a most interesting piece of work during the war.

From two sources did I hear of Merry Curtis Loving. Mary Moss Powell said that she and Lib Lankford Miles, '29g, had a grand biscuity breakfast with her in February. Eagle's two oldest girls went off to camp this summer and she stayed and ruled the roost. I know, I know, pretty bad but I couldn't resist. She says her old man Rule runs a country store as a secondary interest, his first being to fish the Chesapeake and Florida waters dry. Smart man, if I've ever heard of one. Sara Callison Jamison and Jane Callison Smith and their children vivited Eaglebeak in July, Jane has a summer place at Lewisburg, near White Sulphur.

Back to Mary Moss Powell. Just when I was getting fairly brittle feeling about that gal, she came through with a whopper of a letter and reduced me to a thankful pulp. In the first place, she and her family have moved to 411 Woodlawn Road, in Roland Park, Baltimore, into a love of a 70-year-old house. And in August she celebrated her 16th wedding anniversary. Brent works for Martin Gillet and Company (House of Lords products). Her two children, 11 and 12, male and female, went to camp. Mary has two part-time jobsone with the Roland Park Country Day and the other as Placement Director for the Baltimore Junior League. She is also serving on our Alumnae Council and so has the chance to be at SBC 4 times a year. She finds the group of council members particularly fine and said the work involved was so hard that she didn't even have a chance to look around college on her last trip.

Of the others of us, Mary says that Virginia Wilson is still very much the May Queen, It seems that Delma Chambers Glazier is enrolling her daughter in Mary's Country Day. And that Isobel Eldridge Flack has a daughter Linda of 12. Also, Mary and Brent recently spent a night with Georgie Wilson Mockridge and her nice "Oz" in Montelair. I wonder what her address is, as mine reads Newark. Even word of Patsy Jones Muldaur-albeit a year old. It is reported she is as stunning as ever, and that she and Charlie and the children spend their summers at Edgartown. Alice Tucker Jones Taylor has 2 boys, 9 and 15, and her George according to Mary is a grand guy and a wonderful rector. That family spent their summer at Mantoloking, on the northern shore of New Jersey.

Sarah Meador Little wrote that she has kind of a cute set-up in her household—a Lewis, Jr., of 17 and a 2-year-old Maria, crazy about each other. They spent the summer off and on at Bluffton, S. C., shrimping and crabbing and fishing. And if everything went according to plans, Mary Sessions Lawrence and her two boys of 11 and 3 just have paid them a visit.

Eva Sisson's nice letter reports that she is a spinster called the Great White Mother of US Rubber, where her duties embrace personnel work for all women on a company wide basis. She spends her vacation on freighters, going so far as time permits. This year it's to Panama. Them are no spinster. Spinsters stay t' home 'n tat. Maybe even spin, but not around the world.

Word came from Virginia Proctor Brown that she has been married for 15 years and has a Melinda in the 2nd grade. She says her town is polio panic stricken and that they were grounded all summer. Her Russey was in the Navy and is now with the State Revenue Department. Smart, smart kid, that!

And now, hear ye! Hear ye! Eleanor Williams was in the government service for 9 years and in '46 latched herself onto one Howard M. Sloan. Oh, married and a' that. Five days a week Howard electronic engineers, and then after his marriage, he just took up two little hobbies-besides Eleanor-painting and music. For his first painting in oils, done, mind you, without instruction, he snatched off an Honorable Mention. Subject: Fishing Boats at Gloucester. As for the music, dropped like a hot cake at the age of 14, he whipped up such technique in one year that he did a twopiano concerto in public with his teacher this past winter. So great was the acclaim that the two of them are working on a whole concert for this year. Great Jum-oh I've said that. And Eleanor . . . well, she keeps a 14room house up, and acts as chairman to the Red Cross Motor Service and in the winter teaches cooking to 10-year-olds, having been at the art for 3 years. She mentioned that Betty Saunders Ramsey of Memphis has 3 children from 2 to 61/2.

Now a scoop from Swoope and Agnes Sproul Bush. You remember I told you she had 3 children. Her welcome letter full of half-told tales which she thought prosaic, proved very otherwiseishly. She said the war set them back . . . How? From doing what? They own one unschooled horse. I can hardly believe it. She is an utter failure as a politician. Actually she was put in charge of a precinct and had to campaign against Meta Glass and her candidates. That would have been the end of me right there. Agnes said sadly that not one of the four men she was working for got anywhere. Then, as an afterthought . . . But one was nominated for Governor-John S. Battle. If that is losing out, then I'll wear high heels on campus next June.

I've had just about enough of this hit and miss stuff with one Louise Nelson Redd. Snips of information from 4 different quarters and nothing definite. She seems to live in Nelson County (mais oui!) and/or Petersburg, Virginia. She has one daughter and according to Scootie Gorsline via Sproul, Louise is one fantastic mother and farmerette. More, I know not.

Adelaide Wampler Kundahl was good enough to write us. She lives in Washington, D. C., and has a George of 9 and a Mary Flo of 5. George, Sr., is with the U. S. Government Printing Office and they spent a month at Rehoboth this summer. I visited there once and horrified mine hosts by going crabbing with a dead old fish head on a piece of string. Lots of fun. Good returns, too. Couldn't look the salad in the face when it appeared. Adelaide brought word that Eunice Watters Coolbaugh has 3 offsprings, the last having been born just this spring. And that Mary Walker Northam, who also lives in Washington, has 2 daughters, 1 and 5.

Teresa Atkinson Greenfield was nice enough to answer and says that they have 2 boys, 4 and 5; and instead of farming in Minnesota, from whence her John cometh, they are in the insurance business in Atlanta. She attended a conference of the Episcopal Church of the Province of Washington at SBC in June and went to 5 classes a day and ate it up.

Fanny Penn Ford Libby wanted to know if the Betty McCrady who wrote "Children of Foreign Lands," published in '36, is our Betty McCrady Bardwell. Yes, 'tis! At the 13th hour came Betty's letter from Florida saying they had just returned from one grand fishing trip in Shark River (South of Everglades City). While on fish, let me pass on word to you that Betty is about to pop with information on where the fish are and when, and she wants any and all of you fellow fishermen to contact her for details thereon. She holds that tarpon fishing is the most exciting of all. Rule Loving please note. Husband Bardwell owns the Lake County Fuel Company, and both of them for the 4th straight year are in love with their pretty town of Mt. Dora. That there are 4 little Bs, you already know.

Do you remember my telling you that Alice Scott Fuller, the lecturer and world traveler, was unexpectedly encountered by Betty? It now seems that Alice and her husband plan to spend this coming winter at resorts all over Florida lecturing on their trips, illustrated with colored movies. Last winter Alice had a successful radio program at Fort Myer, and she has just had a children's story accepted by "Children's Activities." Along with all this, there are two children, too—a daughter of 15 and a son of 6.

As for me, I'm doing setting-up exercises for a sequel to "Gone With the Wind," Q.E.D.

Last tidbits from Betty: Alice Scott's roommate, Ginny Dail McCarthy, has 3 imps as has Emilie Jasperson Bayha.

Gladys Wester Horton wrote me on about the cutest Czech-design stationery I've seen in a coon's age. With the same justifiable modesty indulged in by all mothers, she reports her Nancy of 15 and her Billy of 11 as handsome and bright. I couldn't gather if Leonard, the husband, was handsome and/or bright, too, but he is Vice President of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company of N. Y. C., and a trustee and grad of Lehigh University. Let that speak for itself. Gladys, besides the usual activities mothers seem to be drugged into, is in charge of the Alumnae Representatives in her area of New Jersey. And she and her husband have spent their first summer at the Cape.

Word at the last moment from Margaret New Polikoff. Her family consists of a 16 year old daughter who is about to take off this fall for Emma Willard's, and a 12 year old son. Her husband is an attorney and they all spent enough of the summer in Nantucket to rue returning to N. Y. C.

Flo Brown Elton's letter read like honey falling from a spoon. Nice vocabulary, too. Chief news in it is censored. It is true that her "Sonny" was a J. A.—in Washington and for 3½ years in Trinidad and St. Lucia. Recently he resigned from the Regular Army and is now with a law firm which roster of names contains his. In Boston, his home town. Flo is kept hopping with drives for the L. of W. V. and the League for the Blind. They see Carolyn Martindale Blouin and her Maurie as often as can be arranged.

Jean Saunders wrote that she planned and built her own house in '40 and that it is on a piece of property complete with brooks and busy beavers—which are a financial woe to the water supply. She has given up her job as an analytical chemist with Standard Brands, which position she held for 5 years. She attended T. C. at Columbia this summer in preparation fer her new job of teaching kindergarten and remedial reading this coming winter. And do you remember her bobbed-tailed Nicodemus? Every time I saw Nicodemus on campus, I always expected Caesar's legions to come whipping round the bend in hot pursuit, Nicodemus being his vanguard. Well, I'll have you know that animal is 36 now and still successfully defending his cup again this year!

Jean also brought news of Willie Rankin, whom she visited on Memorial Day in N. J. Willie has been working for an advertising agency (thank heaven she got out of that racket) and is now collaborating with a friend on writing a children's novel. It is to be part of a series, written according to a plot outlined by the publishers.

Fanny Penn Ford Libby came crashing through with a special delivery, bless her heart! She and Fran and their 8 year old Betty, spent some time in Oswego, New York, on Lake Ontario this summer and en route home played torture-Betty, cramming historical facts and places into her mile after mile. Fran is Manager of the Piedmont Hospital Service Association in Lynchburg. Fanny wants to know if we know of Martha Lee Poston's new book for juveniles, published by Nelson & Company, entitled "The Mystery of the Eighth Horse." Also from Fanny do we have the news that Rosalie Faulkner Loving and her 3 children and Lundsford live around the corner. It seems that Rosalie is on the Board of the Old Ladies' Home being erected in Lynchburg, and in connection with details on that, she made a trip to Washington and so had the chance to see Elizabeth Marston Creech who has 3 children and whose husband is with the Telephone Company.

Thanks again to Fanny we have word that Lucy Harrison Miller Baker has brought honor to our class, too. The Governor of Virginia has appointed a council to study various problems in Virginia and make recommendations thereon. Lucy was appointed to serve on the division concerning Juvenile Courts and Probation, along with 3 judges and 2 members of the Virginia General Assembly. The only woman on the board!

Finally a brimming-with-news letter from Liz Copeland Norfleet. Nine years ago her husband pried her loose from the newspaper world to come to Woodberry Forest School in the Piedmont section of Virginia, where he was head of the French Department. Then he took time off to write a book on the French portrait artist, St. Mémin. Then came the litter, one Robin, one Abigail. I do think you have chosen the cutest names for your kids. Jette Baker Davidson has one named Suejette! Well, anyway, Liz, I'll have you know, eating all the salt she wanted, has shrunken from her college contour of 150 pounds on the hoof to a mere 110. She says that being where she is, she sees lots of SBites-Ida Massie Valentine, with 3 boys at the school: Sarah Everett Toy with 2; Jane Guignard Thompson and Ruth Aunsbaugh Daniels with 1 apiece. Next year Sue Tucker Yates' boy will enter and Beth Conover's son, who is so much like his mother. Liz hears from Betsey Williams Gilmore whose little Nell aged 6 is one for the story books.

Liz also sees Ida Moore Taylor and is asking of news of Virginia Dey Chard whose husband must be a West Pointer Captain, and she thinks they must have a daughter of about 19 now. Peg Carpenter Terry please note. Perhaps this is the class baby.

There you have it. All I've gleaned from your very welcome cards and letters written as I know in the heat of a summer. If you have read to here, you might as well stick with me through the statistic department . . . From 120 letters written and as many postcard jacker-uppers have come replies with news of or from 81. Plus 74 husbands. Plus 53 children. Think of the mob . . . 308 strong! From a little over only a quarter of the class. We are a class of 198-83 grads and 115 exes, of whom only 36 take the News. For that reason I am indeed sorry I can tell you no more back news than set forth herein. But we'll all get caught up in June. And finally, silly and previous as it must sound to you, this is the only chance I'll have of wishing you all a very Merry Christmas! You see, it is later than you think.

ADDENDUM: 1 have no addresses at all for these people. Do you? Frances Arbaugh, Frances Barnett, Katherine Brown, Eleanor Bruce, Sara Buckley, Elizabeth Crenshaw, Frances Gray, Margaret Gressitt, Dorothy Hartford, Jane Henderson, Mary Holt, Elizabeth Johnston, Alice Johnstone, Jane Kohler, Emily Kumm, Indel Little, Sims Massee, Belle MacVichie, Sue McAllister, Barbara Metz, Jane Moor, Louise Nelson, Mary Parker, Ethelyne Parsons, Katherine Parsons, Jessie Patterson, Alice Perkins, Alice Scott, Dorothy Snyder, Margaret Terrell, Edith Walthall, Catherine Williams, Hallie Williamson, Estelle Young.

Fund Agent: MILDRED GIBBONS, 918 First National Bank Building, Tampa 2, Florida.

This is certainly a "backward glancing" occasion, as I am writing this from my old school desk at 70 Tompkins Street in Cortland, New York, where Frank and I are spending a fortnight's vacation with my mother. Up until the eleventh hour (in typical Plummer tradition) we were uncertain as to whether the fates would permit our getting away, but we finally made it on the run-literally. Right now we are enjoying simply heavenly weather here, but are wondering whether our tiny house in Tampa is still intact from the reported hurricane's blows. However, a telephone call and subsequent telegrams from friends there indicate all is well and that they are investigating for "water leakage." I'm personally sure they'll find plenty of that as our sunroom windows are anything but stormproof but I'm keeping my fingers crossed against any real damage. Such are the vicissitudes of Florida home ownership.

Before going on further, I do want to thank you all for the wonderful cards and letters. It has been such fun to hear from all of you. Incidentally, en route to this north country, we had a few minutes lay-over in Washington where I tried to contact Tuey Groner Moreno—with my usual lack of success. However, from someone at the apartment, I did learn that she was still in town, but out for the afternoon. Captain Jack, I believe, is still somewhere in the Pacific with his ship, and I was sorry to miss Stuart.

Dot Smith Berkeley writes from Chapel Hill, North Carolina, (and a whole letter it was, too) that they are enjoying the campus life, but not the heat of the past summer. Edmund is again a student and working hard, and they expect to be at their present address, 17 Rogerson Drive, for the next two years at least. His brother-in-law recently accepted a position in the economics department of the University, and by some major miracle was able to secure the house next to them. The two Berkeley heirs were spending the summer at Camp Yonahnoka in Linsville, N. C., while Judy summered at Camp Junaluska, so Dot and Edmund were childless for several weeksand getting awfully bored with the situation. It was to be remedied soon, I gathered, as Judy was expected home the latter part of August.

Dot writes that most of her news is secondhand, but it was wonderful to receive. From her I learned that Connie Fouler Keeble was planning to go to Fontana Village for two weeks with her two sons, joining some friends there from St. Louis. She had the month of August for vacation, while during June and July the boys were in a day camp.

Betty Allen Magruder is moving into a new apartment in September. She had been both living and practicing in a borrowed one in New York and sounds like a very busy person. Incidentally, Betty Allen is now a full-fledged psychiatrist.

Dot says that she hasn't heard from Marge Miller Close since June, but at that time ail of the family were well and planning to move out to Ile Bizard for the summer as soon as school closed. The Close family now consists of four adorable children, all of whom Marge and Jack had just taken on a trip to Quebec.

Alice Dabney Parker wrote from Charlottesville, where she has been spending six weeks with her mother. Alice's life sounds like a busy and interesting one with a good deal of tripsing about the country, which she may have needed following a strenuous winter with measles and scarlet fever. Apparently Alice succumbed to the former with a greater gusto than any of the others-but "the skies finally cleared." She visited Sally Ainsworth Glass in Atlanta this spring, having a wonderful time there with Sally and her attractive husband, who is both literary and musical. Later in the season, Alice and Johnny had a short and pleasant rest in Savannah, following which she went to New York in May, where she must have done the town. She writes that she met Helen Bean Emery one day to see "Kiss Me Kate," with much gossiping between the acts of that sell-out; while in between times this year, she has accompanied Johnny on several business excursions—one to Washington, one to Asheville and another to White Sulphur. Incidentally, Dot Berkeley writes that Alice is younger and prettier looking than ever.

I was so thrilled to hear after these many cons from Tiny Marshall Timberlake in Staunton, Virginia, and I certainly will hope to see her again one fine day as she says that the family gets to Ponte Vedre Beach every spring. I can't believe Tiny's eldest can be 14, but she is apparently and will be a sophomore this year at Stuart Hall. In two more years, there may be another Tiny at Sweet Briar. There are also two others in the family—a girl and a boy, Francis.

Both Pat Ward Cross and Bea Stone DeVore cracked through with news from Wilmington, Delaware, where they both see each other frequently. Pat writes that her two sons are now aged 11 and 5, and that their life is comparatively normal. She did entertain Marjorie Blackie Colthup and her husband last spring, but missed Stuart Moreno when she spent some time with Bea this summer. And, in lieu of that visit, Bea writes that Stuart's eight-yearold daughter, Miss Susy, promises to be a real beauty. Bea and her husband moved to Wilmington two years ago, when the latter became connected with Du Pont. They are the real record-breakers, too, finding the house of their dreams after looking exactly three hours. As for the family, Bea's son is now 14 (and the class baby) while her daughter is 7.

My hat is certainly off to Lib Doughtie Bethea, who is combining a home, a family and a career. No Tennessee heat is holding her down. Lib writes from Memphis that her children are now Mary, aged 10; Ann Brandon, 7; and Richard, 4. Her business is acting, in collaboration with another girl, as the Southern representatives for Leron Linens of 745 Fifth Avenue, New York, and they have a shop together. Not content with all this, as well as a big house, Lib is trying to keep up with her music, and last summer visited Trudy Buist Roberts in Phoenix, while this year she was going to the Broadmoor, Colorado Springs, Colorado. Three cheers, Lib, for an interesting and exciting life!

Sweet Briar's prospects for the future look really rosy when I learn of all of the daughters produced by the Class of '32. And, personally, writing about the class children is the most thrilling part of this job. Hazel Stambs Collins (whom I still remember as the loveliest thing I ever saw enacting the heroine's role in "Smiling Thrn," hectically staged in the boxwoods in June of 1932) writes from Atlanta that her two little girls are 8 and 4-and I'm sure they are beautiful. The Collins' family planned to spend an August breather in Hendersonville, N. C., but at home Hazel sees much of Em Green Kennan and Lib Douglas Foote. Em's baby girl is 4; and Lib's girls are 7 and 9, so their interests still run parallel. Also, more Sweet Briar buds are noted in New Jersey by Letha Morris Wood, who writes from Upper Montclair that her daughters, Lee and Nancy, are respectively 12 and 8 years old. Letha says that she keeps busy with Junior League, church, and P.T.A. work, while this summer the family spent a month with her mother in California, where they had a marvelous time. Bouquets should be tossed, too, to Letha's husband, who was recently elected President of the New Jersey Life Underwriters' Association.

Dear old Jobie (Elizabeth Job Jopp) wrote a long letter, and it was so good to hear from her. She says that they moved last fall to Pikesville, Kentucky, where her husband, Gus, was transferred in the capacity of commercial manager of the Power Company, Last year Jobic taught English for half days at the local high school, but plans this year to remain a lady of leisure, keeping house and playing bridge. They spent a wonderful vacation this summer at Nag's Head, N. C., where beside sight-seeing, ocean bathing and digging for hidden treasure, they took in Paul Green's pageant, "The Lost Colony." On their return from the beach, they spent a couple of days in Roanoke, where Jobie talked with Mary Bess and Natalie Roberts Foster's aunt. Natalie's husband is an officer in the Army, and they are currently stationed at Dayton, Ohio, while Mary Bess divides her time between Roanoke and Salem. Rose Beverly Beard's Eusband is a budding young attorney in Roanoke, and they have several children. Jobie said that they also stopped by Sweet Briar, where everything looked even lovelier than ever. "I was particularly interested to learn that the old gate posts have been replaced by a stone fence; that the library (new in our day) is now covered with five-leaf ivy; and that there are new steps to the Post Office, and a gift shop." As for class news, Jobie writes that Kate Scott Sales is now back in Meadeville, Pennsylvania, where her husband is an official with Talon, Inc., and they have two children. And Betty Uber Ely now lives in Fox Chapel, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

From out Cleveland way came a welcome note from Nellie Nightingale Gleason, who says that their life is routine-and "incredibly dull." Knowing Nellie, I'll wager it is anything but that even though the Gleason family has returned to civilian life after a most interesting year abroad. The war over, Jim was sent back to Germany, where Nellie and son Michael (now 7) joined him six months later at Frankfort-Main. Jim's original assignment was with the War Crimes Commission, but he was also instrumental in working out the Kronberg Jewel Case, among others. The family returned to the States in November, 1947, since which time Jim has taken up his former law practice. Nellie writes that she has seen Ruth Remon Wenzel and Jane Hays Dowler, both of whom look exactly the same.

And, speaking of Jane, I had a fascinating letter from her, with news of a "dream come true" for the Dowlers. They have finally opened up a guest retreat, Loon Lodge, on Chautauqua Lake, New York. I only wish I could reprint Jane's entire letter, for it is a thrilling report of a real business adventure. The Lodge itself is perched on a hilltop overlooking the lake, and includes facilities for those who want to sit, read or just plain dream, as well as for the more athletically minded fishermen, swimmers and golfers. Jane says that she and Dick have had this idea in mind for a long time, and they have spent the past two years looking for just the right place. They finally moved up to Loon Lodge on May 10 of this year, and opened on June 26, a week early to accommodate a honeymoon couple. "We are having the most glorious time," she writes, "and, to our secret amazement, our guests seem to like it, too. I think some day I could write a book on the whole incredible adventure. Dick says it should be entitled 'Well, Janey, You Always Wanted A Big House." Beside the summer season, the Lodge will be open all year round on weekends to take care of the hunters and fishermen in the fall, and for winter parties of skilers. As for the rest of the Dowler family, Jane says that her daughter Penny enters the third grade this fall; Steve will go into the second grade; while young Mark is not quite

This about winds up my news for now—except for a line or two on the Plummers. We are both hale and hearty following a busy summer in Tampa, keeping two jobs going in the family as well as a bit of socializing on the side. Last winter, mother spent several months with us, and we are again putting in our bid for her presence this year. However, numerous small grandchildren (unfortunately, none of them ours) are a decided attraction in the northland, so we may not be able to corral her for too long a time.

I'll try and have more news ready for the winter edition of the News. Until then, have a wonderful fall and early winter—and again, many, many thanks for your letters.

Susalee Belser was married to James Norris in Charleston on April 13. James is a New Orleanian and at the time Susalee wrote me they were living at 722 St. Louis Street (right across from Antoine's). She says the French quarter is fascinating, but that they are searching for a house in the garden district to buy so they will be near Susalee's daughter's school.

Margaret Ellen Bell Hare wrote that they had a wonderful summer, as they were right on the water. She said that delightful life of lying on the beach all day couldn't last forever, as she has a lot of work cut out for herself. She is chairman of the local Red Cross and they do lots for disabled veterans in nearby Westchester hospital. She saw Gertrude Dally Massie recently and they went to Bonnie Wood Stookey's for dessert and a white elephant sale (proceeds of which went to the Fund). Seems to me that is a wonderful way to earn money for the Fund.

Pat Atkinson is still employed in the Registrar's Office, Veterans Hospital, North Little Rock, Arkansas, one of the outstanding neuropsychiatric hospitals in the country. She has daily contact with the great minds in fields of pathology, surgery, and psychiatry and loves her work. Pat has a four-room apartment on the Heights across from Alsopp Park—a bird sanctuary and is master of her "ins and outs" and loves the freedom. She expects to resume the study of voice and piano.

Martha Boss Luxford writes that her two children spent two weeks on her brother's cotton ranch in Bakersfield, California, in July. When she went down to bring them home, Charlotte Tamblyn Tufts was there with her four children, and they all spent the night there. "Charlotte is as cute and gay as ever and has beautiful children." Martha writes it was a treat for her and Charlotte to get together and that they had a wonderful time. It was the first time they had gotten all their children together.

Virginia Vesey was married to Mr. Joseph J. Woodward on the sixth of August in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Norfolk, Virginia. Sorry I don't know more details and wish I had her address to give you. All I have heard is that he is a good-looking retired naval officer.

Jessie Coburn had an interesting experience this past summer. She had a flying vacation abroad. She flew to London on the first stratocruiser to take passengers across the Atlantic. After a two weeks train and carravel across England and Scotland (during which she joined up with the Ramages who were spending the summer abroad), Jessie flew to Stockholm and visited that beautiful city for a week. Then across to Gothenburg to see a friend who's living there, and once again by air to Paris for the rest of the time before flying home. She says that after 8000 miles by air she is finding it mighty hard to spend 8 hours a day at her desk!

Mary Elizabeth Clemons Porzelius writes that life in the Porzelius family continues as usual, but that she and Al did have some trips in June. Early in June they visited Sarah Houston Baker and Hugh in Decatur, Illinois, and had a wonderful time. The last two weeks in June they spent at Pawley's Island. Alice Andrews Fackert '36, husband Bill, and their two adorable sons were across the hall in the lnn

"Ted" Clary Treadwell writes that their summer vacation was a 3000 mile auto trip through the south, visiting their parents in St. Petersburg, Florida, and Ben's two sisters in Foley and Montgomery, Alabama. They had a grand time. The rest of the summer they spent at home trying to keep cool and entertaining Kay, who is 7 and Ben, who is 4. "Ted" sees a great deal of Pat Malm Fowler, '32g, and is very sorry to say that Pat is leaving September 1st for Ann Arbor, Michigan, where her husband, Commander in the Navy, is studying this winter. "Ted" says she will miss her terribly.

Kitty Gochnauer Slater had a cottage at Virginia Beach this summer for two weeks. She and her family were there. Her son, aged 7, learned to swim in the ocean. Saw Anne Brooke and Sue, her sister, ('29g), who had just returned from a trip to Nova Scotia. On their way home, the Slaters stopped in an antique shop in Williamsburg and ran into Anne Harrison Shepherd Lewis, '28g, who has three adorable boys. Kitty was in New York last winter and had luncheon with Marietta Derby Garst, who now lives in Tarrytown, New York. Marietta had been in Buenos Aires, Argentina, for ten years.

Nevil Crute Holmes writes that her husband, Win, was in Houston (whence they moved two years ago). He's been in their old home town almost as much as Hamilton, their new one, but was due home in September after being away four months this stretch. Marge Van Evera Lovelace, '34, stopped by to see the Holmes in July, with her two handsome blonde children, Jean age 9, and Richard 7.

Julia Sadler de Coligny, '34g, wrote me a most enthusiastic letter about her stay on Upper Saranac for the month of July. She, her husband Calvert (who was there for some conference at Saranac Inn) and their four children had a marvelous month there. Upper Saranac in the Adirondacks is my favorite of all places and I envy them their stay. Julia is going to teach third grade at St. Catherine's this year.

This summer I went north for a little over two weeks and went to Bronxville, New York, Hartford, Connectient, and Castine, Maine. Had a lovely time and saw many of my relations and friends. Hetty Wells Finn and I had lunch together in New York City. Hetty spent a hectic summer at her summer home in Shoreham, L. I. I had a nice chat on the phone with Gerry Mallory and was very sorry not to see her.

Thank you so much for your wonderful response to my cards. Your fine cards make this column interesting.

Ruth and I have really taken a vacation this summer, as far as collection of news is concerned. However, we have collected a few items of interest.

Lib and Harry Forsyth are off to Hot Springs for Labor Day week-end. Lib had a long letter from Cary Marshall, telling about her Alaska trip which apparently was superb.

Betty and Peyton Winfree have been to their camp on the Cowpasture River for several weeks this summer. Betty says that Peg Lloyd Bush has a second boy, Gregory, born in May.

MICHAIL, TIM and FLIP, sons of MARTHA

Hardesty O'SHEA

Her other boy is Loyd, aged 7. Jean Gilbert lives near Peg and has three children, 1 girl and 2 boys.

Peg Campbell Usher and her husband Don flew to London for about six days this summer. Don works fr Pan American Airlines and they have been living in Scarsdale, New York, fr the last two years.

Ruth has just moved into her new house on New Hampshire Avenue. We both hope to do better next time. If you have any news PLEASE send it in even if you don't get a card from us.

Frances W. Gregory visited Miss Fraser on S. B. C. campus for several days late in July. She took her Ph.D. degree at Radeliffe College in June, as the culmination of eight years of graduate study at Radeliffe and Harvard, following earlier graduate study at Columbia.

In her chosen field of American History, Frances pursued the career of Nathan Appleton, nineteenth century Yankee Merchant whose chief business was that of cotton broker. Following a trip to Charleston, S. C., in 1802, he bought cotton for sale to the Liverpool England textile industry, and later he sold cotton to the first New England textile miles.

Here's for a better report next time!

Not much news this round—I guess most of you were too busy with summer vacations to answer your cards. Syd Gort Herpers is at last settled in Seattle and loving everything about it. She and Ferd are planning a trip East in '50 for Princeton Reunions and may be able to take in Sweet Briar, too. Nancy Nalle Lea is busy with new baby, puppy, and gardening but hoped to have a trip to Charlotte this summer. Lib Lee McPhail moved into her new home in April and is "rattling around" in same after three years in three rooms.

Jessie Rose Harvin finally condescended to join the ranks of answerers! She has three boys, 10, 7, and 2½2 sn you know how she spends her time! She had seen Sizzie Johnson Finley in the spring—also Gurley Carter Davis and family in Annapolis. Never mind the lack of news, Jessie, we love hearing from you.

Henrietta Arthur Skinner is also the mother of three sons and is deeply involved in Y work, Cub Scouts, and P.T.A., besides gardening and housework.

Becky Douglass Mapp reports their remodeling is finally done and she now has a guest room ready for any girls going through on U. S. 1. Her daughters are growing up-2, 4. and 7-and keep her pretty well tied down. Ellie Snodgrass Park and son were at Nags Head for two weeks visiting Jackie Cochran Nicholson and family. They saw Frances Kemp Pettyjohn there with two of her four children and had a grand reunion. The Nicholsons are busy with plans to build in the spring. File also reports that Jane Collins Corwin and family plan a trip to Mississippi the end of August to visit the Collins. Tom is still working hard and doing well on his own. Terry Shaw had a month's vacation touring Nantucket, Cape Cod, Bar Harbor, and the Maine Coast, into Canada, and back by way of the Green and White Mountains. She has the welcome mat out at her little cottage for any girls going through-protection: one cocoa french poodle! She says that Nina Cauthorn Jarvis had to have an operation on her knee which she hurt while at Sweet Briar.

Dot Prout Gorsuch is about to move into her home—not finished yet but she says they can do more being right on the spot. She went to reunion but aside from a one day visit by Margaret Bradley Forsyth and Dottie Price Roberts, she was our only representative. She thoroughly enjoyed her visit though and reports the entire program was splendid—for which Terry deserves great credit.

Don't forget to contribute to the Alumnae Fund, otherwise no more ALUMNAE NEWS! Remember this is the only on-the-house issue!

I started this letter earlier, but the typewriter proved too fascinating for my 20-months old, so I stopped to feed him. This is a tedious job, since we are now at the jello stage and it involves Mommie putting the jello from her spoon to his, and still having a good deal spilled before it reaches his mouth. However, since Clark is now abed, I trust I can continue without interruptions.

I appreciated so much Frannie Bailey Brooke's attending reunion last spring as our class representative. She was quite disappointed to find that she was the only one attending from our class. Fortunately, the '39ers took her in, and she sent me a nice picture of the group sitting on the steps of Grammer. She says that the college looked as beautiful as ever, and that it was nice to be remembered by the faculty members who taught us "in the old days," but (and I surely agree with her!) the class will have to do better next time. I have gone over the questionnaires that were sent in, and will try to pass on the general news. Of course, it was wonderful to look at the pictures, although almost all were of the children and did not include the mothers.

It was good to hear from a group that had been silent too long. For instance, Virginia Mitchell reported that she is teacher of English IV and U. S. History in Madison Heights High School, Virginia. She is also President of the Amherst County Teachers Association, Treasurer of her district V. E. A., and Vice-President of the Sweet Briar Branch of the A. A. U. W.—so she certainly stays busy enough.

Helen Hesson Binns reports from Providence Forge, Virginia, that although her husband is manager of a motor company, she also has a job as Superintendent of Public Welfare of New Kent and Charles City Counties. She has also done Home Nursing, Red Cross, and Public Welfare work.

Harriet Daniel Herd reports that her husband is in Oil Properties, and that she has three children—Tevis, 6, Elizabeth Claire, 4, and Daniel, 10 months. Harriet seems to keep up her music interest; she is in choir and guild work and is on the Board of Directors of the Civic Music Association.

Jane Job Manning is in Louisville, Kentucky, and says her husband is with the Reynolds

Metals Company, and that they have a little boy, 5½. She, too, has held many offices in the community clubs and says she has a hard time keeping up with her support of a preparatory school and two colleges.

Howell Lykes Colton's husband is General Traffic Manager of RCA Victor in Wynnewood, Pennsylvania, and they have two boys and a baby girl. She says she recently had a letter from Josephine Happ Willingham, but that is the extent of her S. B. C. contacts.

Jo Happ Willingham herself wrote from Macon, Georgia, that they have a boy 7, another 5, and a little girl 1½. She has held education and legislative chairmanships in the Junior League, and perhaps that is how she happened to see Rose Hyde Fales in Washington in October.

Helen Judd Tooke's husband is a physician in Shreveport, and they have three boys. She says she has seen Caroline Staman Ogilvie among others in civic work there.

Jane Townsend Herlihy has a little girl 6 and a little boy 3 and is living in San Marino, California.

Barbara Fish Schiebel, whose husband is a surgeon in Durham, seems to do all kinds of outside activities from church to Junior League, to flying, to exhibiting wolfhounds at shows.

Annie Rose Wallace Buckham has a little boy 7 and another 4 months old, but still seems to find time to keep up with her French clubs in Memphis.

Janet Forbush Fead is living in Birmingham, Michigan, and has three girls—6½, 5 and 3½. She says that occasionally she does substitute teaching in nursery school or kindergarten, and besides her Junior League work she has been Vice-president and Secretary of the Kingswood School Alumnae Association for eight years.

That's the bunch of gals that we have heard the least about, but I will pass on more general news of the rest of the gang. For instance, the Cincinnati gang seems to stick close together-Billy Heizer Hickenlooper had spent a week-end in Cleveland with Ruth Pfingsten Polster and her family of two boys, and Betty Dail Wilson, a few blocks from Billy, reported that Dotty Selbert Smith has two boys and Dotty Mather Goyert has three children, two of them redheads. Dail had recently heard from Cess Jansen Kendrick for the first time in years. Not far from them, I had a picture forwarded to me of Virginia Eady Williamsa wonderful newspaper picture of Eady accepting the gavel as President of the Junior League in Louisville.

1 also had nice pictures of Dotty Gipe Clement and her daughters, Faith and Dorothy, and of Maud Tucker Drane's two little girls. However, Maud reported glowingly that their house, born June 23, named for his papa and to be known as Hardy.

Ginny Faulkner Mathews also reported an addition—a second girl born on July 12.

Becky Kunkle Hogue says they are having a fun summer, with the children old enough to be independent and not be worried over. Despite her four, Becky finds time for golf, Garden Club and Red Cross.

From way out West, Pauline Womack Swan sent darling pictures of her three little girls, one on a pony, and Nancy Old Mercer of her two. Nancy says that when Mrs. Lill was in Dallas last fall the S. B. C. group did get together and catch up a bit. Nan Golden Moore, however, had "sitter" trouble and couldn't make it.

Pollyanna Shotwell Holloway and I occasionally hear of each other through my sister, in Baton Rouge too. Polly has a girl 6½ and a boy 2½ and says she is President of the Book Club, President of the Dance Club, and Study Leader of her Church Circle—which sounds nice and well-rounded!

Connie McDuffie Turner is still busy with her newspaper work, as well as a gossip column on the radio. She says she sees Mary Cobb Hulse and Mary Thompson Ball a great deal in Junior League work.

Babbie Derr Chenoweth reports a new girl baby, Barbara Mary, who has adopted the name of Babbie and made her mamma degenerate to Babs. The Chenoweths are also in a new home with plenty of room for the expanded family.

A card from Marion Brown Zaiser came from the mountains and said she had to get away from home to do any correspondence.

Fritz Cordes Hoffman says that she hasn't seen any Briarites lately but has had a lot of fun going back to college for Council meetings. Both her children will be in school this year and leave Fritz with just her Boxer puppy, but she expects to stay busy enough between church and hospital work.

Bobbie Cross Reese wrote from Stroundsburg, Pennsylvania, that she keeps busy with three children and a new puppy. Their latest addition was the little girl Deborah, born in February.

A card from Gertrude Alexanderson Young said that they were spending the summer, as usual, at Assembly Point, Lake George. The family had just had a wonderful automobile trip through Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The group around here seemed to be doing as usual. I was glad to see pictures of M. J. Miller Hein's boy and girl, though they seem awfully big already-5 and 2. Adele Letcher Harvey said she had Dot Evans Haveron, Janice Wiley Adams, and Janet Macfarlan Bergmann with respective husbands for a dinner party reunion. Kay Holt is still with the Kimberley School in Montclair. Marge Thaden Davis says she and Judy Bemis Wills get together regularly as they are a few blocks apart. She also reports that Sigur Moore Whitaker has a son and a daughter, the baby girl being 8 months old. Alice Hooper wrote from New York but said that since her family is being transferred to Florida she is moving to Washington, where she has spent most of the last two years on a part time job translating medical articles for the National Institute of Health.

Molly Talcott Dodson sent an adorable picture of her little girls that she promised to bring out from Lynchburg last year at reunion but then let us down! She says her life this summer' is chiefly political, since Grif is up for reelection to the Virginia House of Delegates, in which we wish him luck.

I had hoped to get up to see Barbara Ferguson Lincoln, but we just missed connections. She wrote that Mary Ann Housel Carr was just a few houses down the beach from her, so her four and Fergie's three had a wonderful time.

My news of roommate Rilma Wilson Allen came direct from her younger brother, who is up here with the Navy. Like Dolly Nicholson Tate, he agrees that nobody sees much of Rilma since her fat eight-months-old boy came along; yet he says when he calls Charlotte in the evenings Rilma and Bob are never home! Dolly says Jack has now gone into the real estate and insurance business, and they are thrilled to be "on their own," and everyone is well and happy.

Well, I think that about covers what news I have for you. Two pleas I make to you—send in your contribution to the Alumnae Fund this fall so you'll continue to get the Sweet Briar magazine, and don't forget to send me announcements of your new arrivals in the family!

Class Secretary: Betsy Durham (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.) 32 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Fund Agent: LEILA BOND (Mrs. Joseph S. Preston) 168 Madison Road, Scarsdale, New York.

Long, long ago in June of '49, we drove to our Tenth College Reunion! And what a time we had. For those of you who just couldn't make it I will give you a kaleidoscopic view of those three days.

With Mary Archer Bean Eppes, '29g, going back for her twentieth, we left Boston one cool June morning. By two o'clock we met Yvonne Leggett Dyer, who also was dressed in a tweed suit. The thermometer then rose to 101 degrees in the shade and we burned up the road to Sweet Briar from then on. After a fantastic evening in a luxurious Maryland Motel, we limped into College the next afternoon, just in time to register and see some familiar faces. We had run into Bennett Wilcox Bartlett and Gertrude Robertson Midlen when we stopped for lunch at the University's gorgeous new Howard Johnson. (Even the University of Virginia looked a little different; it couldn't be us?)

Naturally, the limber and lithe classmates of 1939 were put on the THIRD floor of Grammer. After struggling with enough luggage for a month's stay, we finally made it. My only wish was that the President's Garden party was going to be held on third floor Grammer.

Miss Lucas' party was delightful, and we saw our old friends among the faculty and met the intellectual charmers of the graduating class and Sweet Briar girls of other years. Drs. Sanford and Robinson had not changed a bit, and we all enjoyed ourselves thoroughly. In the evening we saw movies of college years, including horse shows and May days of our vintage, but somehow they didn't seem so long ago. By this time most of the reuning thirty-niners had arrived, • a good old fashioned bull session was in order. And that is where most of our class news comes from.

Patty Balz Vincent had only recently returned from England and she, and Patrick and their infant son are living in Charlottes-ville while he is working on his masters . . . Patrick, that is . . . Patry showed us pictures of father and son. The atmosphere was so British that you knew the baby cooed with an accent.

Patty was rooming with Augusta Saul Edwards, whose husband and eldest son we met when we arrived. Augusta had a marvelous picture of herself and her family taken around the Christmas tree. Every Edwards is better looking than the next one. She also had a picture of her new house, which seems to overlook the entire Blue Ridge Mountains.

Gertrade and Bennett were roommates, too, and they had photographs of their children. The Midlens' little boy and girl seemed very grown up, but even their mother says they keep her on the run. Father John is a lawyer for radio and television, and our Spinday breakfast in Amherst was an occasion for Gertrude letting us in on the life with pushbottons. Bennett also kept us fascinated with tales of Harry's work. It involves testing various kinds of engines and most be highly inspirational for the young Bartletts. Perhaps with airplanes in mind, Bennett's small son jumped off the roof and was desperately ill for quite a while. She said it was a long hawl, but now he is perfectly well, and peace and pleasure have reigned for a long time.

Julie Saunders Michaux was right across the hall from us, and it seems to me that she wins the Gold Pipe cleaner for having changed the least. Not that the rest of us aren't still thin and beautiful... Julie and Dick had a grand trip to Louisiana in the spring and took in the Surgeons' convention also. Julie attended the wedding in Richmond of Patty Moncure to Mr. Samuel Drewy the Saturday of our reunion. We all saw Patty's wedding picture in the Sunday paper, and it was a lovely one.

Ronnie Mann Hawkes and her husband Stoart, who is also a surgeon, flew down for the day from Montelair, N. J. All of us had a coke (they have coke machines, also) at the Inn, and Ronnie and Stuart told us of their mountain climbing and hiking which they do on their vacations. Stuart's work takes him to many cities on the eastern coast, so he and Ronnie travel a lut in their plane.

Jean Gray Scott MacNair and her husband, Van, have moved to Cuernavaca, Mexico, where Van expects to do some writing and reporting. They have two boys, and it sounds like the perfect life for two little cucarachas and mother and father, too.

Jean McKenney Stoddard and Johnny and their children have moved from Balboa to Madison, Connecticut. Johnny is now working for the State Department, and it is wonderful for their friends to have them back in this country again.

The Dyers also have two darling little girls. Yvonne showed us their picture and I have been envious ever since. Suranne looks a lot like her mother and Diana like Danny. As for Yvonne, she still has twice the pep and vigor of ten years ago and had us laughing most of the time. Incidentally, she has turned into a crackerjack tennis player. Just after our reunion, she was going off to Hanover with Danny to his Dartmouth reunion, and now they have just recently returned from Canada, so you see what I mean...

At the last minute, Lottie Lewis couldn't come, and afterwards she wrote that, from the questionnaires sent in, we were a remarkable class with a large number of children. She also wrote that Eleanor Little Morfit flew the airlift with her famous hosband, Garry Moore, when he went over to entertain the troops in February. Lottie is still working at Benton and Bowles and is THE career woman of our class.

And that is about all from those days in June. We particularly enjoyed Commencement with the address by Ambassador Bonnet, and we all arrived at the staggering conclusion that we hadn't changed one bit, but, somehow the Senior Class seemed very young and immature! I don't sound like sour grapes, by any chance? . . .

And now back to my tweed spit . . .

Class Secretary: NIDA TOMLIN (Mrs. Robert C. Watts, Jr.), 2837 Sheringham Place, Lynchborg, Virginia.

Pro tem: Cynthia Noland (Mrs. Karl Young, Jr.) Long Ridge Road, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.), 765 Valley Street, Orange, N. J.

This department has shifted to the moist and trembling hands of your one-time Propaganda Minister. It is to be hoped that our readers can withstand the dismal comparison with Nida's usually capable handiwork. Nida is again caught in a series of crises and this was one job less for her at a complicated time. She lost her sister-in-law late in July, at the very time her mother became ill in Cincinnati. Nida was to go there and was hoping, as do we all, that her mother would be better in time for the Watts' scheduled trip to Virginia Beach. Since Nida has efficiently and charmingly carried on her duties as correspondent for all of nine years now, sometimes in the face of extreme domestic difficulties, it is obvious that a tribute to her faithfulness is long overdue. Experiencing for the first time "Deadline Jitters," her heroic performance seems even more outstanding!

The happy news has reached us that Martha Rector was married on June 18 in a very small family ceremony at St. John's Church in Roanoke to Mr. Robert L. McGee, Jr. Martha, with her osoal masterful aplomb, plucked an elegant five-room apartment out of a terrible housing shortage that exists in Roanoke. "Bob" is with Bethlehem Steel and is reported to be entirely worthy of our approval.

Nan Dickie Neil writes from Brooklyn that she can recommend dodgers—those who dodge Brooklyn! We have offered her haven in Connecticut but perhaps our post card sales talk left something to be desired!

C. P. Neel Mahoney's husband, George, now has his own architectural practice there in Memphis. Their son, George, Jr., is now 5½. They see Midge Fleming Gray and Frank often. She says that Kay Hodge spent the summer in Europe.

Mildred Moon Montague is a dynamic leader in the League in Chattanooga. She gave the Provisional Course last spring.

You won't be at all surprised to learn that Marion Dandt McBride has a new horse there in Union, Missouri, where her hosband operates a freezing locker plant which he recently expanded.

Jeanne Harris is now on the staff of the Nelson Art Gallery in Kansas City as Assistant Curator of Oriental Art and this department is most impressed, Hug Schmid Hardy seems thoroughly and securely tied to home plate in Grand Rapids with sons Billy, Eddie and David; Cowboy, Horticulturist and Zoologist, respectively.

Dorothy Campbell O'Connor has found life pretty hectic with her two small children ever since Diane, born last November, arrived. It would certainly seem that Diane could have enough bounce and vitality without having to swipe some of her mother's. Dottie and Bill have just moved to 32 Cooper Lane, still in Larchmont, so perhaps Diane is being unfairly blamed.

Estelle Sinclaire Farrar is as delightful as ever. She has three doors entering on a small hall in her house on Long Island. Most of os would accept an unkind fate (or rather architectural shenanigans) but Telle has painted each a different color—cerise, chartreuse and a third equally uninhibited hue! This summer their son, Dougie, now 5, had scarlet fever and both Telle and Fred were quarantined. However, Dougie timed it so their quarantine ended just as Fred's vacation began, in time for two weeks at the shore.

Marie Gaffney Barry summered at their place in the Adirondacks. She may stay on there a while since their hoose in Forty Fort, Pennsylvania (near Wilkes Barre, if you're wondering) was sold. Additional information is lacking so she is presumably homeless for a time.

In Jone we completed a two week, 2,000 mile automobile trip with the young sprouts-Billy, nearly 7, Ann and Betsy, 3 and 1, respectively, in September out to Illinois (scene of our bride 'n groom life) and on down to Richmond. We had lunch in Amherst at "Ye Travelers Inn" (remember?), We had mixed signals with Nida and thereby met the great disappointment of the trip. After a stop at Sweet Briar, where it was the last day of exams, for the kids to romp on the grass, we continued on to Lynchburg where we saw Betty Frantz Roberts who was tending her hosband's office while his assistant was on vacation. Tom is an exodontist, not to be confused with the garden variety, and since he was at the hospital, our invasion was a private one and we had a grand chat while Billy pestered the elevator operator. Betty is even more sparkling and peppy than you remember. (At press time, she is to go to the Eastern Shore on a fishing expedition and, in the fall, deer hunting. Other than this she is merely trying to learn golf.) Tom appeared before we had to leave to make that brief call entirely successful, in contrast to the Nida snafu.

The following day, in Richmond, Patty Moncure ('39) was married to Tom Drewy. Saw Emory Gill Williams in the church but never did get to speak to her. Somehow we managed to miss Virginia Allison Haywood but did see her later when she brought Hubie, who is 3, over to mother's. Did see Ann Adamson Taylor and Jane Goolrick Murrell both with their M. D. husbands and both with the unmistakable air of very proud parents.

Virginia Allison Haywood's husband, "H. B.", is to enter the medical office of Agnes Spencer Burke's father-in-law. Dr. Burke is a well-known and famous opthalmologist there in Washington, D. C.

Mary Petty Johnston Bedell brought Reggie over one afternoon. Mary Petty is as gracious and more poised than you-know-when. Reggie was toddling around on a pair of husky, stocky legs and looking very sober and a good deal like Wood.

I ran into Adelaide Boze Glascock with her extremely pretty mother downtown. For want of better chatter, I hazarded something about her being "bound for far away places" and hit it right on the nose! She was sailing in mid June for several weeks in Europe! She was taking a group of girls, I gathered. Hope she ran into Kay Hodge.

I also saw Clara Call Frazier in the grocery store. She was looking very housewifely into the frozen food locker. Another disappointment was not getting to see her family.

Another highlight was seeing Lida Kepner Short and "A. J." in their apartment on Park Avenue in Richmond. Although she still looks like date-bait, she and A. J. have two children—Billy $4\frac{1}{2}$ and a girl 2, whom we did not get to see. We made arrangements which later fizzled.

And now back in Connecticut-word of our celebrity, Ann Burr, has reached this department. In addition to playing the lead with Ralph Bellamy in "Detective Story," rated one of Broadway's ten best plays of the moment, she has roles in three radio serials. They are Nona on "Wendy Warren," Valerie on "Big Sister" and Ann Dunn on "When A Girl Marries." Her role as Ann Dunn was pictured in the winter issue of Radio Album. She was to vacate her radio roles during September while continuing in the theater and planned to relax a little at nearby Westport, Connecticut; then. Whether or not a Young-Burr reunion takes place will be continued in the next issue which you will not receive unless you put pen to paper of the old checkbook.

Now that football season is with us, some of you will be bound for New Haven (or points beyond), so please stop here for at least a minute. We are right on the Merritt Parkway on the Stamford side at Exit 34. Count four houses on your left!

Hiya there! It is difficult to realize that the pigskin will soon replace the baseball, and that those seeking their sheepskin are preparing to "hit the books" again. Summer whizzed past me. Now let's take time out for a chat about the news that has come my way, and I will insert a plug for the Alumnae Fund. Please, do not forget to send in your contribution both to make you eligible to receive the News and to help the dear old Alma Mater.

In late July Helen Sanford stopped by for a couple of days on her way to New York to board the Queen Mary, for a glorious trip through Europe. I chatted with Betty "Hank" Hanger on the phone as she made last minute arrangements to meet Helen. They will land aboard the Queen Elizabeth on September 19. Helen looked wonderful, keeping me in gales of laughter.

Washington, D. C., remains the most fruitful source of information. A most welcome letter came from Eloise English Davies. She and Tom have bought a home in Washington where Tom is stationed as a Naval Aviator. They have two sons, Tommy, 3, and Douglas, 1, and also a Boxer pup. Eloise says she has plenty of room for visitors. On their vacation, the Davies' are going to the Cleveland Air Races. Tom is a Cleveland hero because he holds the world's long distance non-stop air record established in the Truculent Turtle.

Lucy "Calamity" Hodges Fuller is now boasting a daughter, Beverly Harrison. Allen is just out of the Army and hopes to return after Christmas to Presbyterian Hospital for a surgical residency.

The latest Miss to become Mrs. is Edith Brainerd who on May 21 became Mrs. George R. Walter. George is a native Washingtonian and a lawyer by profession. The Walters have an apartment across from Ft. Myer where Edie is learning to keep house. While on their honeymoon Edie ran into Mary Stone Moore Rutherford, who was hospitality itself (have heard that before).

"Di" Greene Helfrich has a son, Daniel, born on July 4 in her home state of Maine. All Washingtonians wrote of welcoming Harriette Gordon Loman, Harry and their three children back from Germany. Harry is to be stationed at Fort Knox. I understand that they are happy to be back in the good old U.S.A.

The silence surrounding Virginia Duggins is appalling, but I hear via the grapevine that Duggins is still in Washington working at George Washington Hospital. Duggins, Ringer and "Di" had a reunion.

Cynthia Abbott Botsford and Barbara Ripley Furniss sent cards to say that I have so completely covered their activities that there is nothing left to tell.

If anyone is interested in building a house, I'd suggest she consult Betsy Gilmer Tremain. Betsy and Mike are up to their necks in plans for a house to be built in Farmington, Virginia. Besides seconding as an architect, Betsy is Treasurer of the Junior League this year.

Another prospective builder is Alice King Harrison. She and Morris bought a lot instead of taking a summer vacation. Vive Walker Montgomery and her husband visited Arkie. Alice also reported on the long lost Maude Headley Allen, who is living in Birmingham. Maude has a son. Alice is the county chairman of the Christmas Seal Drive.

Dottie Hutchings Price gave up the idea of building and bought a house. This house is built on three levels which will give young Leonard plenty of tumbles. Dottie has done a good bit of work for the American Cancer Society.

You can bet that Margie Troutman Harbin is kept busy with 4 boys. However, she did go to St. Simons Island in July with the two oldest boys. Outside activity is confined to work with The Marionettes of the Service League.

Without any doubt Rufus Pierson Fisher is the "gaddinest" person around. She spent July in Chicago, September in New England, the rest of the time on Long Island except for Christmas in California. Whereas Ruthie Hensley Camblos stays quietly at home in Newton Center, raising corn and waiting for Josh to finish his training at Lakey Clinic.

Frannie Caldwell Harris has spent the summer golfing and encouraging Jim in his interest in outdoor cooking. Frannie asked about Phyll, claiming she only hears about her through the News. Phyllis Sherman Barnes and Wilson moved into an elegant new apartment in Wilmington, Delaware, staying a month, then moved back to Bronxville. Once a New Yorker always a New Yorker! They have finally gotten their own apartment and are eagerly settling down again. The Barnes seem to divide their time between the golf course and the bridge table.

Gad, I have finally heard from Gadsden, Alabama (sorry, couldn't resist it) home of Florence Gillem Pressly. Flossie has two sons, Jimmy, Jr., 3, and "Jenks," 22 months. Jim has just completed his specialty training in Radiology and has entered private practice. In May, the Presslys had a vacation in Pensacola, Florida. Their home is near a mountain resort where they have plenty of fishing and boat racing. The Presslys have rented a house, put up a picket fence, and gotten a size 52 kitchen assistant.

Friends of mine have been going to the Chalfonte Hotel in Cape May where they have seen Sally Jackson, who runs it. Butch is working mighty hard, and is getting results apparently, everyone raves so about the place.

As I was about to put this in the mail, along came a long requested note from Catherine Coleman. Kippy is busier than a one armed paper hanger, teaching remedial reading and Bible at St. Anne's School, plus attending graduate school and being in charge of one of the dorms. During the summer, Kippy was on the staff of the McGuffey Reading Clinic at the University of Virginia. She did plan to snatch a few weeks in Florida.

Kippy wrote that Penelope Lewis is coming to the University of Pennsylvania to do some work on her doctorate in psychology...so hope we can get together, Penny. Ringer (Eleanor) trod the boards at Virginia, Kippy saw her in "Arsenic and Old Lace"—excellent of course. I was thrilled to learn, through Kippy again, that Lucy Case O'Neill is married to a law student in Charlottesville. Toppin Wheat is still in nurses training at the University Hospital.

Don't forget to keep writing. My best to all of you. See you again in a few months,

Class Secretary: Clare Eager, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: Anne McJunkin (Mrs. Frank E. Briber, Jr.) 6640 N. Elm Tree Road, Milwaukee 9, Wisconsin.

Have accumulated quite a bit of news over the summer, but first I must remind you to send "Junk" your monetary contributions if you expect to keep getting this magazine, and me your news contributions if you expect to see a column for '43 when you do get it.

And now, announcing the arrival of first-borns. Allison Montgomery Jones appeared on the scene for Libby Corddry Jones on August 4, and while she was in the hospital Win and Libby's family moved her bag and baggage to Morristown, New Jersey, where they have acquired a cottage. Meanwhile Libby's roommate of spinster days in N. Y. C. was beating her to the draw over in Paris with a daughter of her. own. Nancy Bean White, unsuccessfully trying to hold off until Bastille Day, produced Ariana Vanderhuyden White on July 11. Beth Dickman Smith tells me Muie Grymes has been over visiting the Whites since.

Beth told me lots of other things, too, in a wonderful and much appreciated unsolicited letter, so I might as well impart her information right now. She says Sally Bryan was off for Europe, too—sailed August 4. She had seen Libby in the hospital and had also attended Mary Belle Lee's wedding on June 6 to Frederick Aldridge, a major in the Marines. Beth also told me briefly of the nice but hurried vacation she and Bevin stole from their "two friends," covering Ottowa, Montreal, Quebec and New York in one week.

Now again back to the original subject—word comes of another Jones baby. Kitty Doar Jones reports her main news item is "Kathy," or more formally, Katherine Palmer Jones, who was born February 17. She has reddish blonde curls, blue eyes and her Daddy's turned up nose. And the Joneses are still keeping up with the Joneses, having also acquired a house instead of their little apartment. Kitty says she sees Frances Taylor Trigg quite often and thinks her little Terry is a darling.

CONNIE SUE BUDLONG

News on recent "additional" children comes from Elsie McCarthy Samson and Frances Gregg Petersmeyer. Frances' remarks were brief but apparently her new son is both a joy—and a heavyweight. Elsie's is another boy, born February 22 and called Mike. She seemed very pleased with him all except for the fact that he wasn't another redhead. She says her husband, Bob, is working in a Research and Development Lab. at Rome, New York.

I hear, too, from "Ouija" Adams Bush that "Tookie" Kniskern White, showing no originality, produced her third son, Michael Bruce, last May. Congratulations!

And right here and now let me state that "Ouija" is NOT going to St. Louis as reported. Things are all changed—don't ask me to what because I have gotten three conflicting versions, but I 'spose the safest thing to do is to quote "Ouija," who when last heard from said it will be Dallas, Texas. (You can imagine how that hurts!) in the middle of October.

Still on the same subject, sort of, Camille Guyton Guething's big news is that she has not had a baby recently nor expects to soon. After three in 2½ years I can understand her point of view, She was in Blowing Rock, N. C., for her vacation this summer.

Among the others who have gotten houses recently is Anne McJunkin Briber, and hers is complete with yard, old elm tree, fruit trees, raspberry bushes, grape vines and flowers. "Junk" nearly faints from shock when she finds herself out working in the garden—and enjoying it! She told me she had a stupendous 3-minute visit with Nancy Pmgree Drake and family as they changed trains in Milwaukee en route to St. Paul. You can imagine how much I learned about Ping from that—but fortunately I heard from Ping myself, and found out their visit was for 2 weeks, during which time they saw Alice Suency Weed, '42g, and new husband, Phoebe Swency Woolley, '45g, plus her two cute children, and sister-in-law, Frannie Boynton Drake, '42g. Ping said her two little boys made traveling a bit hectic but the vacation was very gay and fun. Since she has been back she has seen Judy Snow Benoit.

The word from Margy Shugart Dennehy is also of a new place to live—Quantanemo, Cuba, where Red will be stationed for two years. It is what he was hoping to get so they are very excited. Meanwhile "Shug" says life for the Dennehys is "one happy affair of nursing, golfing, bridging and Navying" in Norfolk and points nearby.

A nice full return card from Carter Claybrook Booth says she is too tied down by two children, a house and an Irish Setter to have a dizzy enough life to make good reading. However, she had seen Anne Tweedy Ardery who sneaked off from her 4-male family in Frankfort long enough to catch a quick glimpse of New York bright lights. Carter had also seen B. J. Leighton Lane this summer and Jody Willis Leaman who lives in Westfield, N. J., too. She says "Jody has two children (one of each) and as remarkable a waist line as al-Carter wrote, too, that she had heard Gloria Penniston had been married this summer but had no first hand info. Gloria is now Mrs. Henry L. Poole and is living in Scotch Plains, New Jersey.

I was sorry to hear that Fay Martin Chandler has been in bed all summer with rheumatoid arthritis. However, I have hopes that my own news (aren't I polite to save it so long?) will spur her on to get well soonvery soon, as she will be expected to be on hand for a wedding which comes October 22. She was dying to meet a man that I thought I could enjoy being with all my life (so was I!) and now's her chance. She will find him called "Worth," "Worthless," or "Deacon" (I think it's from the one that went down in the cellar) by his many friends-Albert Dilworth Matthai, Jr., by the license. His good looks are slightly offset by his slew feet, but after being subjected three years to his never failing sense of humor and unbelievably beautiful disposition I'm afraid he's irresistible. My defenses are down . . . the engagement has been announced . . . wives here I come!

I know you all join me in enthusiastic applauds for Connie Sue Budlong and her FIVE (yes, THAT long!) years behind the newsletter. She has always managed to keep it lively and interesting, and I nominate her Miss Wonder Girl!

The early heat wave brought Reunion and '44 into focus. I wish you all could have been there, but what with one thing and another, S. B. C. understood. Sydney Holmes Bales (the Bales was added on September 9, but more about that later) and I drove down together. En route we disrupted Peggy Gordon who was studying for exams at U. Virginia Law School and whisked her off to S. B. with us. The result of that interruption caused her to come out on top of her class, so we aren't apologizing. Alice Lancaster Buck, our reunion chairman, greeted us and told us about life in Charlottesville as a wife as we unpacked. Then we all sat on the arcade and chatted furiously. Dot Denny Sutton got us hysterical with the story of her courtship. I wish I could repeat it without spoiling it. We'll make HER tell it soon. Frances Longino Schroder looked like a freshman and told delightful husband and child stories. Alice Johnson Fessenden who came up from Venezuela for the occasion had us spellbound and sighing. She will be there another year anyway. Martha Lindsey Barton gave us some social and political data on Rome, Georgia, while T. Tift Porter covered various Atlanta scenes and people, including her hilarious child. Marian Shanley Jacobs suggested we read "The Preacher Takes A Wife" and thereby proceeded with tales such as only Marian can tell. Murrell Rickards Bowden and I put our heads together and conferred on respective news since I joined ber honeymoon in Bermuda last year. Martha Lee Hoffman McCoy sat up with Murrell, Syd, Alice J., and I while we discussed even unto the atom bomb. Pat Whitaker Waters joined us in between short dozes so consequently was bright as a button at 4 a. m. By the way . . . our Mrs. Waters won a Bendix on a radio show!! Unless someone else has won "Stop the Music" I think Pat deserves some sort of very special class commendation for duty above and beyond the call of alumnae!

Sunday after church Carlisle Morrissett Branch, Fence Maury Valentine, and Ellen Boyd Daval arrived in a flurry of convertible, moving picture camera and stories of Richmond and Talluhla Bankhead, both of which are pretty interesting by themselves. Emily Ann Wilkins Mason dropped in from Lynchburg looking very chic and with long hair again. Step singing was of course teary but nice. Mr. Duncombe took a movie of us all for Barbara Duncombe Lang. We had a picnic supper in the dell for which Giddy Whitehead arrived and Mary Carter joined us, too. Giddy has been doing terrific welfare work and on a schedule that is exhausting to think about. I guess the Virginia climate breeds energy . . . at least for Giddy!

Mary Jane Brock's letter from England was read and appreciated. She was about to leave for Paris to work for the Marshall Plan in what sounded like a terrific job and loads of fun. We thank you for the very cute letter!

Monday a. m. at six o'clock Bea Boericke arrived on campus having forgotten about Standard Time and ate some odd berries to ward off starvation until the refectory opened. She said she'd studied the berries in Botany, so I guess they were safe. She is still doing O. T. but took time off last summer to explore Scotland. I guess we all wept a little at graduation, and finally had to scatter East, West, North and South until our next!!

Sydney Holmes married William Bales, a very delightful person who is the feature editor on the Long Island Press and a radio commentator. Peggy Gordon was the maid of honor, and caught the bride's bonquet. She (Peggy that is) insists, nonetheless, that she is going back to U. Virginia. Janet Staples and Annabelle Forsch drove out to the wedding with me. Janet is California bound in October for 3 weeks. Am seeing Susie Somervell Griswold for lunch tomorrow. She has a divine apartment on East 66th Street, B. J. Rogers Hammond called me while she was East. I didn't get to see her, but she told me her little girl Holly talks a blue streak. I saw that Leslie Herrick has announced her engagement to Douglas Danford. Doug works for The New Yorker and is most attractive. Adeline Taylor joined the married ranks and for the moment she and Julio are living in Westbury. Mimi Etheridge Wood, husband and baby, are now living in Atlanta. I think some of you may remember George Wood at W. and L. Tina White please note. I hear you are somewhere in N. Y. C. Please call me uo! Mary White Hollander had a L. Preston Hollander, III, in June. I haven't been able to get an interview from him yet as he went to the country in July and isn't back yet. Anne Bowen Broadus has a mammoth apartment, a telephone and a charming husband who takes her out to Sun Valley. Paulett Long Taggart had another little girl and Peggy Gordon is about to visit, so Mrs. T. will have a busy September.

And so with the old cry "Send me some news" . . .

Fund Agent: AUDREY BETTS, 211 West Fisher Avenue, Greensboro, North Carolina.

My news is quite limited this time as you can see. Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill did send a few bits of information. She said that Betty Grayson Geer got her Library Science Degree last June from the University of North Carolina and is working in the library at Duke University now. In case I missed it before, Edith Page Gill married Stanley Breakell last April. Betty Carbaugh Mann, Frances Bickers Pinnell, and Dede Enright were her attendants.

The biggest news from Mary Kathryn is the birth of a boy to her and Sam last January 15. The occasion was quite an event in the mostly girl family. His name is Steven Mills.

Betty Gray Gray talked to Barbara Beistle and found she married Richard Northrup in April. Barb is still working in the Admission Office of Mather College, one of the undergraduate colleges of Western Reserve. She and her husband try to arrange their out-of-town schedules so that they coincide whenever possible. He is an accountant and to quote Barb, "He travels, too."

Deen Brugger Wetzig had a baby daughter recently but more details are lacking.

Ann McLean Loomis' husband has a new job as a research chemist for American Viscose Company in Marcus Hook, Pennsylvania. She and daughter, Betsy, will be moving up there as soon as Gil finds a place to live.

Betty Gray and Dick have a new car and they are as proud as punch of it. Who wouldn't be?

I wish someone else would volunteer for this job, not because I don't like doing it, but because I think someone else may have more contacts with a different group of people than I. The next letter won't be due until February so you will have plenty of time to get more information.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This class letter was written by Catherine Smart.

With Ariana Jones in Europe all summer I'm substituting as class secretary. Thanks, all of you, for your interesting letters which I have so thoroughly enjoyed. Now to pass on your news.

Arlana went to Europe with a group in June and was to live with a French family for about a month, after which the group planned to travel through Europe the rest of the summer. Sounds wonderful! Maybe she bumped into other '46-ers. Rosie Ashby's father reported in her absence that she was there on a Brownell tour. A marvelous letter from Tib Force (shared with me by Jean Love) written on board a Greek ship somewhere between Gilbraltar and Geona, described the gay ship life she and Bobby Warner were having. They were on a classical tour, had already stopped at Lisbon and planned also to visit Italy, Greece, Switzerland, and England. Tib said they had no trouble picking up a few conversational phrases of Greek, but that Greek dancing was too complicated a procedure for them to master! I hear from P. V. that Mary Lou Holton had a nice trip to Canada this summer.

Wedding bells rang for Bert Lee and Dr. Alfred Mann Battey, Jr., June 1 in Augusta. Thanks for the bridal clipping, Bert. The ceremony and reception sounded beautiful with all those Easter lilies, magnolias, and lilies of the valley. Anne Stuckle was one of the bridesmaids and Miss McLean presented the organ music. Al is a resident in surgery at the University Hospital in Augusta.

June 4 Pat Arms hecame Mrs. John Ashley Brown, Jr., in Rye, New York, where they plan to make their home. Her attendants included Mary Vinton and Jenne Belle Bechtel.

Jean Love sounded like she was about to bubble over with happiness in her letter telling the exciting news of her engagement to Lt. John G. Albert, U. S. Air Forces, of Dansville, New York. He is a June graduate of West Point and now is at Panama City, Florida, attending Air Tactical School. Jean, we'll all he thinking about you on your wedding day. November 5. Until her engagement Jean shared an apartment, while attending the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D. C., with Jean Richardson and another friend. Jane's the secretary for the Curator of Prints and Graphic Arts at the National Gallery of Art. She has completely recovered from that bad automobile accident last fall, I'm glad to say, and was with Jean on a Myrtle Beach, S. C., house party this summer. Jean often sees Ann Farr in Fairfax, Virginia, where Ann taught physical education last winter.

Nearby in Silver Springs, Maryland, are Bea Dingwell Loos and her husband. Bea's her usual busy and versatile self — on top of cooking and housekeeping she's kept her job as chemist and frequently takes week-end trips with Dick, who's an outdoor lover. That sleeping bag arrangement sounds rough to me, Bea!

It was good to hear from Wheats Young Call. Doug was graduated from the University of Virginia in August (Wheats says it was like one great long week-end living in Charlottesville), and they plan to be in Richmond next.

Jean Carter has a new job as secretary to Sara Bryan's brother in the Bryan Hosiery Mills in Chattanooga—"a colorful and varied position," says Carter. Hmm-mm-mm. She says Vinton will be in New York this fall with a publishing firm, and will room with several Sweet Briar girls.

Another change is Dottie Sue Caldwell's new position as Youth Director at the First Presbyterian Church in Tampa. She heads the junior high, senior, and collegiate groups—quite a large order, but not too much for our capable Dottie.

These career girls really get around. Anne Stubbs, who's been a stewardess with United Air Lines since she finished at Cornell. has flights to Denver, Des Moines, Washington, D. C., New York and Boston. Between trips she shares an apartment with three friends in Chicago. I spent a delightful week-end with Anne in Newport News last spring and she looks grand.

Suzie Criswell wrote a most wonderful letter brimming over with news of her whereabouts since she left S. B. C., and of her fascinating career. After graduating from Pratt Institute's Department of Interior Design in June, studying the last year under a scholarship, she landed a job in New York as assistant company director and interior designer for an international insurance holding company. Sue decorates and designs furniture for the clients, which include companies all over the world. She not only does offices, but also the private homes of all the executives and associates. Sue really sounded homesick for news of Briarites.

In was a treat to see Carolyn Conley this spring at Louise Crawford's wedding. Carolyn finished at Northwestern, where she pledged Pi Beta Phi, and is now a full fledged interior decorator at John A. Colby and Sons in Chicago, where she's worked for two years. Carolyn is quite happy in her work and says she doesn't know why she didn't get into interior decorating long ago.

I was nearly bowled over by Libby Ryland Groner's news that she is living on a farm and loving it! Since her husband got his M. B. A. from Wharton School of Finance, they've been running a 40-acre farm just outside Kansas City, Missouri, with cows, bulls, orchard, garden, chickens, and dogs! Libby couldn't rave enough about country life. Another city slicker turned country gal is Caroline Rudolph Sellers. She and her husband built their own house themselves, and raise cattle. Rudy saw Anne Ouens Mueller, her husband, and daughter Sharon en route to Patuxent Air Base, Maryland, where Dick is now stationed, and says Sharon is adorable.

Jessie Strickland Elcock believes she has set a record in our class. "Wish you'd ask in the column if anyone else who graduated in our class has had two children in the three years, as of June, '49, since!" Walter III, is two and talks a blue streak, and Jessie II, born June 22, tipped the scales at 10 pounds. Congratulations on a fine family, Jess!

Other proud parents of new offspring are Jane Laurence Houis, whose Jacques Francois Houis, Jr., arrived in June. (Jane plans a visit to the United States in October); March Sanders Starr, who has a July 4 daughter; Anne Hill Edwards, whose young Pres I presume is a son; and Wistar Watts King, whose Jack, Jr., is about 6 months old. Wis sees Sarah McDuffie Hardaway often and says Sarah has two darling little girls.

Eden Taylor Persons and Pink spent their vacation at Sea Island, and Eden writes that 2½-year-old Eden behaved just like a duck in the water.

Polly Pollard Kline wrote that she saw Tody and her husband in Chicago on a recent trip, and that she sees Cholly Jones Bendall and her baby all the time.

Anne Hill Edwards vacationed with the Graeffs in Fayetteville, Pennsylvania, and reports that Graeff is coming to Danville, Virginia, to head the music and youth activities in the Mt. Vernon Methodist Church there.

Polly Vandeventer has been traveling and visiting all over Virginia. Was a bridesmaid in Eleanor Pott's wedding in June. As new fund agent, P. V. pleads: "Everyone cooperate and send donations pronto—scattered people are a load to contact and someday YOU might have the same job!"

Betty Ann Gaines Myer writes that her two chief interests are 2½ year old Tommy, and their new home, which must be quite outstanding to have made "Mademoiselle Living" and the new Better Homes and Garden's "Book of Homes." She says Lil West Parrott's husband Marion is a representative in the N. C. legislature, and that she attended a meeting in Raleigh of the State Legislative Council of the Junior League, where she saw several other Briarites.

Grace Schoenheit became Mrs. William Stafford Metz on July 9. Bill is a student of international affairs and is now doing graduate work in the school of South Asian Affairs at the University of Pennsylvania.

Charlotte Dinsmoor Olin and her husband are building a home in Austin, Texas, and love it there.

Peggy Todd Fanning's husband has been transferred to the New York office of Tide Water Associated Oil Co. Peg saw Joan Berend Morse at the last S. B. Day luncheon.

Peg Coffman is with Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in New York.

That's all for now. Keep up the good responses!

All the news contained in this letter was sent to me by Elaine Davis Blackford and Eleanor Bosworth. My heartiest thanks to both these ladies.

Elaine has two sons: Charles, who was born August 25, 1947, and David, born September 3, 1948. Her husband, "Chuck" as we all remember him, resigned from the Navy in 1947 and is now a trust officer in a bank. They live at 10 Demarest Place, Maywood, New Jersey, and are building their home there.

Martha Ann Francis, now Mrs. Robert D. Brown, is living at 5 Peter Cooper Road, Apt. 3H, New York City. She and Elaine were neighbors there last year.

Martha Lois Budd Shelnutt lives at 718 Greenhill Road, Wilmington, Delaware, and also in Martinsville, Virginia. Her husband, Jimmy, works for a Dupont nylon plant. They have two daughters, Ann, born March 7, 1946, and Jane, who is now 7 months old.

Mary Joe Williams Duckett has a son and a daughter.

Pat Hassler Schuber and Jack have a son. Emily Schuber is writing the society column of the Asheville paper.

Sue Van Cleve Riehl recently moved into her new home. She and Bud have a daughter, who is two years old.

Sammy McMullen and Doug Lindsay have

Elaine has done such a grand job of keeping in touch with so many of you that I was tempted to ask her to write the column. Her grapevine is much better than mine. However, I enjoy this so much that you will probably have to request my resignation when arthritis sets in and gets the best of me.

Eleanor Bosworth wrote me a news-filled card telling me that she and Stu McGuire had a perfectly wonderful summer in Europe. Margaret Munnerlyn put them in touch with her friends abroad who took them to Parliament and to the Lido in Venice. Their escorts in Venice were two Italian gentlemen whose charms were unlimited. Bozzie and Stu went to Europe on a Brownell Tour. While they were in Lucerne, Bozzie received a cablegram saying she had a position teaching history at Southwestern College in Memphis. She spends her leisure time with her godchild, Leslie White Berry, who is Evie White's daughter.

Stu McGuire and Maria Tucker are at Virginia Beach. I suppose Stu points East and tells them all about what it was like over there.

My hat's off to Bozzie and Elaine. Their communications compose this letter, and I think they deserve high praise for rounding up all this news.

Late News Bulletin hot off the wires of the Romance Press informs me that Frances Nelson Gardner will be married to John Hughes Curtis, Jr., on October 22, 1949. Frankie and Johnnie ARE lovers—no joke.

Ann Colston was married to Dr. John Gore Hawley. The wedding was beautiful and Frankie Gardner and Sue Van Cleve Riehl were attendants! As for me, my last day of work will be September 1. I have worked a little more than a year so now I am retiring. I am threatening to visit each one of you and get some first hand news so I won't have to wait with baited breath for your scarce letters. A word to the wise is sufficient; you better start writing.

For the class of '49, the summer has been one full of weddings or trips to Europe.

June Eager headed the class by becoming Mrs. William H. M. Finney on June 20 in Baltimore. She plans to teach school while Bill finishes Medical School. Carolyn Cannady became Mrs. E. Hervey Evans on June 22 in the garden of her home. Mimi Powell and Emily Pruitt were on hand as bridesmaids. Then they rushed to Tappahannock, Virginia, to be in Ann Doar's wedding to Francis Jones on June 25. Ann was married by our class favorite, Froggy de Bordenave. Dot Bottom became Mrs. Langdon Gilkey on June 25 in Hampton and Anne Bush became Mrs. H. M. C. Train on the same day. Brantley Lamberd and Libby Trueheart were bridesmaids and Caroline Casey caught Anne's bouquet. Fritzie Duncombe was married to Jack Lynch on July 8 in Winnetka, Anne Higgins and Carrie Beard were bridesmaids. From all reports, Fritzie is the best of housekeepers. Also married in July was Evelyn Lee Kagey. She became Mrs. Johnson Lee in Fort Knox, Kentucky. Betty Blair married Pete Gosling on August 11 in Marietta, Georgia. She will live in Ann Arbor, Michigan, next year while Pete finishes school. September brings forth a new batch of brides. Sally Melcher married John Jarvis on September 1 in Philadelphia, Brantley Lamberd became Mrs. Stuart Bolling on September 3 in Lynchburg and Margaret Woods was married September 10 to John Tillet. Margaret Saunders Jones was also married this summer.

Europe claimed a few more '49ers than did matrimony. Bunny Barnett, Preston Hodges, Mary Lewis Stevens, Alice Trout, Margaret Woods, and Mary Graham Hull were together on a tour of the old world. Goodie Geer spent part of her Summer at an International Work Camp in France, after which she traveled. Peggy Cromwell stayed with Irma Tammia in Helsinki and wants to go back for the '52 Olympic Games. She went on to Switzerland, hating to leave Scandinavia, and then to Rome and Paris before returning to the States on September 18.

Fran Pope and Carter Van Deventer had a wonderful time on their tour of Europe. Judy Easley makes Genoa her headquarters while in Europe and travels from there. Larry Lawrence lives with her sister in Paris and loves to see any schoolmate who passes through.

Katie Cox spent two months bicycling through England and then met Larry in Paris for further traveling. Libby Trueheart, Marie Musgrove, Betsy Dershuck and I also went on a tour of Europe. Pat Brown was on the boat with us going over. Casey came to see us off. We saw Ann Henderson in London. Ann was planning to stay in Switzerland for art school. We also saw Mimi Semmes Dann in England. The highlight of our trip was attending the Royal Garden Party in London and having an audience with the Pope at his summer palace near Rome. While in Paris we had lunch with Katie and Larry.

As for those who stayed home, Margery Babcock taught riding at a summer camp, Dee Dee Currey and Bertie Pew attended Margot Fortier's wedding at Virginia Beach. Dee Dee stopped in to see Betsy Dershuck at Sugar Loaf on the way up and then she and Bertie went to Quebec where they saw Larry off for Paris. Bertie is still in Chester, Nova Scotia, and Dee Dee is back in Tennessee, practicing up on her typing preparatory to job-hunting in Washington.

Lizzy Hancock, Trip Corddry, Kay Veasey and Jody Becker toured Canada having such experiences as only those four could. Anne Fiery taught summer nursery school and is also teaching nursery school at Hathaway-Brown this winter. Patsy Davin spent her summer doing Junior League work and making preparations for her fall wedding. Nancy Houriet is working at a bank in Cleveland. Betsy Brown is doing Frontier Nursing this fall and then plans to spend several months in Europe. Emily Pruitt announced her engagement to Saunders Jones and is planning a fall wedding.

Along the education line, Lucie Wood has an assistantship at Louisiana State this winter. Rosie Holmes plans to enter Temple University Medical School this fall and study more psychology. Marilyn Hopkins is going to Ann Arbor for more psychology. Sarah Gay and Joyce Smith are entering Chapel Hill for more work in Sociology.

Mary Fran Brown is going to start on her degree in Journalism. She also writes, "Jeannie Crawford came to Michigan in July to visit Marilyn Hopkins and we had a short but happy S. B. reunion. Jeanne vacationed in the N. C. mountains trying to decide which of two jobs, both at home in Columbia, to take." Mary Fran seemed to be up on all the latest news informing us that Nancy Jones spent the summer at Walloon Lake, one of Northern Michigan's finest, and that she made the front page of the Detroit paper two weeks running. She continued that Evelyn Lee Kagey married Johnson Lee in Fort Knox, Kentucky, in July, and they have an apartment for the present in Washington. Next year will find Hop in Ann Arbor taking more psych.

Polly Plummer plans to go to Geneva for further study of International Affairs. Tat Aubrey took education courses at Johns Hopkins this summer and is teaching 4th grade in Baltimore this winter. Margaret Towers and I are teaching 2nd grade in county schools near Richmond.

Sorry there isn't some news about everybody in our class, but this was the best I could do from Europe.

Editorially Speaking—

What Do You Have To Say?

Last fall Polly Swift Calhoun, '31, listed some of her activities in reply to an inquiry from her class secretary. The list was by no means all-inclusive but it contained the following: "school census enumerator; Connecticut Children's Aid Society Committee; working on school transportation survey, in the fight for better secondary as well as elementary education in the state; a short spell of delivering milk on the route as Frank returns to special session of Connecticut legislature."

Ever since her marriage to Frank C. Calhoun, a Yale graduate, in 1931, this Sweet Briar alumna has been living in the village of West Cornwall, Connecticut. A farmer's wife and the mother of four children, she has made time for a variety of undertakings, in and beyond the limits of her community.

In addition to the list of activities given above, Mrs. Calhoun wrote a letter, asking some important questions and seeking answers from other alumnae, as follows: "A short list does not really give an idea of the variety of life we lead. I would like to know how many other Briarites have landed in small towns, and feel as though the entire burden of supporting town affairs, church, library, etc., falls on the few people who have some sense of responsibility. Are people all over the country met by apathy to needs for better education, a strong U. N. or a world government?

"How can we get more youngsters interested in these problems and responsibilities and therefrom rewards of democracy? Some of those bright girls must have some of the answers to these things.

"Do Sweet Briar people living in cities feel the same compulsion of time and energy running out, and the urgency to do as much as possible now, this week, today, before it is too late?"

What do you have to say?

ONE ALUMNA SUMS UP

I certainly did enjoy Mrs. Lill's talk at our Baltimore Alumnae meeting October 11th. She suggested we send our views on what Sweet Briar has meant and should mean to its students. I don't feel too qualified to sound off due to my short stay there (before transferring to the University of Virginia). However, I feel in my own case that it offered a close association with fine minds, an excellent choice of subjects in the curriculum and all the advantages of being associated with a small, well-knit group. The latter is particularly missing in larger, state-run colleges. I feel too that Sweet Briar is outstanding in its encouragement of international interests through foreign students, year in France, inter-relations clubs and lectures.

It is difficult for me to be detached and critical in any appraisal of Sweet Briar. It makes sense, however, to hope that the Board might be enlarged to include representatives who are truly less sectional—say one from the north and one from the far west. Whether this is feasible, I don't know, but as a typical Virginian I realize that we often get in mental ruts.

Sincerely, FRANCES Baker OWEN, '36.

In Memoriam

Mrs. Edward Hardie (Frances Matson, '12) passed away in San Diego, California, on October 13, 1949.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Hardie resumed her teaching of music and continued teaching until the week before her death.

She is survived by two sons, Edward of San Diego, and Matson of Whittier, California; and also five grandchildren.

The Alumnae Office also wishes to express deep regret at the death of the following alumnae:

SUSAN CADWELL (Mrs. Harry Cummins) Academy—deceased October, 1949.

MARJORIE Moss (Mrs. J. G. Taliaferro) Academy—deceased June, 1949.

IDA WALKER (Mrs. Charles B. Castner) '18g—deceased June, 1949.

Gratia Sanborn (Mrs. George Nelson) '22—deceased June, 1949.

On Miss Lucas's Resignation

Martha B. Lucas's resignation as Sweet Briar's fourth President is a source of deep regret to the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association. Miss Lucas has given freely of her time, thought and energies to the furthering of the purposes and plans of the Alumnae Association. Unceasing in her efforts to arouse alumnae interest, she has visited alumnae clubs, spoken at Sweet Briar Day meetings, met with the Alumnae Council on each of its visits to campus, and been an "ever present help" to our Alumnae Secretary and to your Alumnae President. Our association owes to Miss Lucas our unending gratitude for making each alumna realize that she, as a representative of Sweet Briar in her community, is vital to the future welfare of the college.

AMELIA Hollis Scott, '29g President, Alumnae Association.

Feature Article Honors Dean Lyman

Dean Mary Ely Lyman was recently included in a feature article about women who have become the first feminine holders of positions or records formerly held by men.

In a story printed in the New York Sun at the end of December, Dean Lyman's appointment, effective July 1, 1950, was summed up as follows "Union Theological Seminary recognized women, too, by naming Dr. Mary E. Lyman 'Jesup Professor of English Bible,' first woman to occupy a chair on the seminary faculty."

Dean Lyman, who was a lecturer at Union Theological Seminary before she came to Sweet Briar in 1940 as dean and professor of religion, is the author of several books which are widely recognized in her field of study. Last summer she was ordained as a minister in the Congregational Christian Church.

Alumnae Named to Phi Beta Kappa

MARTHA VON BRIESEN

TEN Sweet Briar College alumnae will become members of Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society, Friday, March 3, at ceremonies marking the installation of Sweet Briar chapter.

Chosen for their academic careers since and during their undergraduate years at Sweet Briar, the ten were selected by faculty members of Phi Beta Kappa.

One of the first graduates of Sweet Briar, Mrs. William T. Hodges, Staunton, headmistress of Stuart Hall since 1943, is among those named. In 1913, three years after taking her bachelor's degree at Sweet Briar, the former Miss Annie Powell received a master's degree at Columbia University. She taught at Sweet Briar and at several other colleges and schools in Virginia before becoming dean of women and professor of English at the College of William and Mary. Later she became headmistress of the Collegiate School in Richmond, and in 1943, went to her present position in Staunton.

Mrs. A. Kent Balls, Berkeley, California, a graduate with the class of 1913, took her Ph.D. degree in biochemistry at Columbia University six years later, after studying at University of Louisville and in Germany, as well as at Columbia. She is a member of Sigma Xi, science honor society. Before her marriage, the former Elizabeth Franke, taught at Cornell University Medical College for three years and then organized the laboratory at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital. Mrs. Balls served as one of the first two alumnae on the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers from 1934-1940.

Another 1913 graduate, Dr. Margaretta Ribble, now a psychiatrist in private practice in New York, and the author of several books on child psychology, also has been named for Phi Beta Kappa honors. Dr. Ribble studied at Cornell, in clinics in Boston and Vienna, and took her M.D. degree at Cornell in 1919. Dr. Ribble is the author of The Rights of Infants, published by Columbia (1943), several chapters in Contemporary Psychology, a source book published by Harvard (1943); Personality and Behavior Disorders, a 1944 publication of Brown University.

Mrs. Margaret Grant, New York, economic affairs officer in the United Nations and a 1915 graduate of Sweet Briar, is a Ph.D. graduate of Columbia University. Mrs. Grant has served as associate research director for the Twentieth Century Fund; as executive secretary of Berkshire Music Center; and as dean of Eastman School of Music before going to her present post in 1946. She is February, 1950 the author of More Security for Old Age (1937); Old Age Security, Social and Financial Trends (1939); America's Symphony Orchestras and How They are Supported (1940); and she has edited or directed research for several other publications. Mrs. Grant served as a member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers from 1937-1943.

Miss Louise Page Weisiger, director of research for the Richmond Public Schools, is a classmate of Mrs. Grant. Graduate study at Columbia University culminated in the degree of doctor of education for Miss Weisiger, who taught in the public schools in Richmond and served as assistant principal for two senior high schools there before she was named to her present post four years ago.

A lawyer, Mrs. George H. Kellerman, the former Elizabeth Rountree, of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, is also included among the alumnae to be named for Phi Beta Kappa. Mrs. Kellerman attended Columbia University Law School, from which she took her LL.B. degree in 1933. She served as an attorney for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and for the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for the next five years. Since her marriage, Mrs. Kellerman has been living in Hawaii.

Another lawyer, Mrs. Howard Cutler of Greenwich, Connecticut, is among the alumnae chosen by the faculty. The former Rebecca Manning, a 1927 graduate of Sweet Briar, studied at Radcliffe and then at Columbia University Law School, where she took her law degree in 1942. She was admitted to the New York bar that same year as an associate in the firm of Milbanq, Tweed, Hope and Hadley.

Miss Marcia Patterson, who teaches Latin and Spanish at Kent Place School, Summit, New Jersey, studied at Bryn Mawr College after her graduation from Sweet Briar in 1932. She won her Ph.D. degree at Bryn Mawr in 1941 and has taught in several schools before and since that date.

Mrs. William W. White, the former Connie Burwell of Charlotte, will be unable to come to Sweet Briar for the installation ceremonies because she and her husband are at present living in Rio de Janeiro. After graduating from Sweet Briar in 1934, Mrs. White studied at University of North Carolina and at Heidelberg, Germany, before receiving her Ph.D. from Carolina in 1937. She taught philosophy and other subjects at Queens College, Charlotte, four years and then joined the staff of Time magazine. She served as head of researchers for two years, 1942-44, and then for a year as executive assistant to the editorial director of Time, Inc., before going to London as foreign correspondent for the organization in 1945. Since January, 1947, she and her husband have been on the foreign staff of Time, Inc., in Rio de Janeiro.

Another 1934 graduate, Mrs. Frederick Stohlmann of Princeton, New Jersey, is to be honored. The former Martha Lou Lemmon continued her graduate studies in psychology at Cornell University, from which she took her Ph.D. degree in 1937. She was on the faculty of Colorado College until she entered the foreign service branch of the State Department in 1944 and went to Rome as a member of the embassy staff for a year and a half. She is a member of Sigma Xi, science honor society.

ALUMNAE JOINT COUNCIL

Students, Board and Faculty Members, pictured at the first meeting of the Joint Council. This group, a continuing committee to discuss college problems and policies, was formed last fall.

Personnel Office Ready to Serve

THE NEW ASSISTANT in the Personnel Office, always ready to talk with students and alumnae and advise them in any way possible vocationally and personally, is Miss Shirley Rosensteel.

The Personnel Office serves both the students and the alumnae in many ways. Files are kept in this office which reveal the various vocations in which the students have demonstrated an interest, and in turn speakers in these fields can be brought to campus. Another file kept in this office to advise those interested is the file on information about various careers and vocations for women, and the office follows this up by acting as a Placement Bureau for both students and alumnae.

This office has found a plan by which the alumnae can be of great service to the students, while they in turn help the alumnae. Miss Rosensteel urges alumnae to write her about any specific job openings that they or their husbands might know about. It is also requested that you alumnae write in about any specific or general community needs that Sweet Briar girls might be able to satisfy. The Personnel Office awaits your acknowledgment of their suggestions, which will make it possible for them to help you as well as the prospective Sweet Briar alumnae.

A number of students are interested in obtaining summer jobs as "mothers helpers," or as companions with alumnae. Let the Personnel Office provide you with a responsible house assistant for the summer.

What Kind of a President, We Ask?

ALUMNAE everywhere are asking, "What kind of president do we want for Sweet Briar?" "What is being done about finding one?" Many of you have given serious thought to this urgent matter; some have submitted names of possible candidates.

All alumnae are being urged to take part in this search, which is now in progress.

We all realize how important to a college is its president, as a leader and stimulator of faculty and students, as the person who sets and maintains standards of learning and doing and being. The president can either generate or smother visions of opportunity or enthusiasm for generous service.

What are the qualifications which we alumnae of Sweet Briar feel are most important in our consideration of candidates for the presidency of this college, now in its forty-fourth year? Do we want a man or a woman? What education, degrees, and scholarly achievements do we demand? What experience in teaching, administration, or finances do we require? Must the president be a good public speaker? Is it essential that the president be a money-raiser? What are the age limitations? What about church affiliation? Is it desirable that the president have a husband (or wife) and children? What traits of a candidate's character show ability (or lack of ability) to choose faculty and staff personnel wisely, to lead the faculty to work together, to deal effectively with students and to be liked by them?

No one person will combine all qualifications, and surely alumnae will differ in their opinions as to what are the essential qualifications for a candidate. Undoubtedly, however, there would be some core of agreement.

One alumnae, after weighing each of the above questions carefully in the light of her own extensive academic experience, has submitted her own answers, as follows:

Sex Prefer a woman, definitely, but would not bar consideration of a man.

Age Approximately 35-52 seems desirable.

Family Prefer single woman or married man.

Church

Active participant in some Protestant church. The President's role in the religious services is so important at Sweet Briar that a sincere Christian conviction seems necessary; likewise, active membership in some sect whose service is not too different from that now used at Sweet Briar.

Education

Prefer undergraduate degree from a woman's college similar to Sweet Briar, if a woman; from a man's college if a man. A Ph.D. seems highly desirable.

Scholastic Achievements

The research and publication requirements for the Ph.D. would be a minimum and anything more would be welcome.

Financial Experience

Some experience in educational administration would presuppose some knowledge of finance and such experience would be a requisite, to my way of thinking.

Ability to Pick "Men"

Essential that the president should know how to choose people who will be able and loyal to her and the institution.

Ability to Raise Money

Secondary. A very nice characteristic, indeed, but this takes a great deal of time and energy. I would prefer someone who can devote herself to administering the budget while someone else raises the money.

Ability as Speaker

Must be able to speak convincingly and easily; not necessarily a brilliant orator.

Ability to Unify Faculty

Exceedingly important, but not easy to judge in anyone except a president of another college.

Ability to Deal with Students

Greatly to be desired, but if she can command respect of students I would be satisfied to let others do most of the person-to-person coping with students.

Several alumnae have indicated their interest in having a man for president by sending in names of possible candidates; many other alumnae have asked whether the Board would consider appointing a man to the presidency.

In answer to these alumnae it should be pointed out that, from the beginnings of the college, the Board has upheld the conviction that a woman should head a woman's college. There is no indication that today's Board is inclined to break with Sweet Briar tradition and precedent in this matter; it feels that the theoretical education of women for leadership should be followed by opportunities for administrative careers for women, especially in education.

Shortly after the Board of Overseers named the Committee to Select the Fifth President, a committee of alumnae was appointed last November to aid in finding possible candidates. Miss Glass is chairman of this committee, which includes Bishop Tucker, Sally Shallenberger Brown, Mr. Lancaster and Mr. Jenkins.

Members of the alumnae committee, of which the chairman is Sue R. Slaughter, '13g, include Amelia Hollis Scott,

'29g, president of the Alumnae Association, Mary Huntington Harrison, '30g, Martha von Briesen, '31g, Elizabeth Bond Wood, '34g, and Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman, '34g, More than a score of names submitted to this committee have been sent to the Board Committee.

On Saturday, January 14, Miss Glass, Bishop Tucker and Mr. Lancaster met for several hours with Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Wood and Miss von Briesen to discuss possible candidates for the presidency, on the basis of information one or both groups had on hand. On the same day, the Board members also met with the faculty committee for a similar discussion.

In spite of the progress now being made in pursuing the search for a president, alumnae are still being asked to give the whole matter careful thought and to send the names of well-qualified persons, together with as much biographical and other data as possible, to Miss Sue R. Slaughter, 8 Pelham Place, Norfolk 7, Virginia.

Bringing You Up-to-date On The Sweet Briar Farm

Edna Lee Gilchrist, '26g

EDITOR'S NOTE: Joseph A. Gilchrist, Jr., B.S., Yale, (brother of Elsetta Gilchrist Barnes, '27g) came to Sweet Briar as Farm Manager in May, 1947. He brings to the position a fund of practical, as well as scientific knowledge, having previously managed the family farm near Cleveland. Subsequently he served five years in the Army, being discharged as a Major. Last March he and Edna Lee Cox, '26g, were married and they, with their nine-year-old twins, Joan and Judy Cox, are now living in the Sweet Briar Farmhouse.

Perhaps people weren't as farm-minded when I was in college (were they when you were here?) or perhaps, being a "city gal" I didn't recognize the goings-on (did you?) or perhaps the dear old studies took up so much time that none of us looked beyond the walls of the Library. In any case, I would venture a small stipend that many of you, too, spent four long and studious, or short and merry years at Sweet Briar, never being aware, except for the cows on the hill, the apple blossoms in the Spring and the inevitable wagonload of hay that held up the Commencement procession, that Sweet Briar Farm was anything but scenery.

How wrong we all were! I've learned fast and furiously in the ten months I've been "the Farmer's Wife" and although I doubt you could ever reach the degree of ease with which words like Lespedeza, Culti-mulcher, Ladino and Landrace now roll off my tongue, your Secretary felt that from my vast (?) store of new knowledge, I could perhaps catch you up on one of the big parts of Sweet Briar. (Naturally I'll let some of you still think that Phi Beta Kappa is more important—but, Oh, Sister!—not in my league!)

Way back at the beginning of course, Sweet Briar was a farm long before it was a college, so we of the Farm Department look with benign tolerance on you youthful academicians who date only from 1906. But enough of the past. Sweet Briar Farm is today looking forward as surely as is the College.

Let's start with something we all at least know is here, the Dairy. The Dairy is still where it used to be, down the hill from Grammer, and they still give a free glass of milk to any student who can walk that far, but otherwise there is little resemblance to days gone by. In the large Dairy Barn at four each afternoon (and four each morning, too, if you are there) you could see sixty Holstein ladies being ushered into their individual stalls, brushed, washed, and then milked with the most modern electric equipment. The milk from each cow is weighed then rushed in large and shiny (and very expensive!) cans to the pasteurizing plant directly across the way. This milk that each cow gives is important to her as well as to us, because on the amount is based her feed for the next twenty-four hours—plus a standard ration of course to keep up her body weight. The food is brought in on carriers which run on an overhead trolley from the Feed Barn next door, and delicious indeed it is, since all of it (with the exception of minerals, some proteins, bone meal, etc.) is raised on the broad Sweet Briar acres.

Including these sixty who are now being milked, the herd consists of 135 Holsteins—dry cows, calves, young heifers and two very important gentlemen, "Carnation Sweet Briar" and "Admiral Segis Creamelle Burke." "Carnation Sweet Briar," by the way, arrived at the College as a young bull in 1944 as the gift of Mr. E. H. Stuart, President of the Carnation Milk Company.

The Sweet Briar herd was started many years ago with the purchase of registered Holstein-Fresian stock. Unfortunately during the years the registration had been allowed to lapse and although the stock was just as good, there were no papers to prove it. Three years ago there was only "Carnation" who could prove his ancestry, and searching out old records so we may again have a registered herd has been a long and arduous task. A few pictures (necessary for registration) were found and the first five cows registered two years ago were dead! This meant a start, however, because at least their children could be registered, and the F.F.V.'s in the herd now number twenty-six, plus the two bulls.

The Dairy operation has grown in size as well as quality. A few years back milk had to be purchased each day to supplement our own supply for the College needs. Today, thanks to good breeding, scientific breeding programs, excellent herd management and modern methods of combatting cattle diseases, the Dairy sells $1,500 worth of milk a month to Lynchburg over and above that used by the College, Faculty and Staff. For three months, as a matter of fact, a Sweet Briar cow has been the top producing Holstein in the Lynchburg area of the D. H. I. A. (Dairy Herd Improvement Association to the uninitiated).

Last fall the Sweet Briar Dairy went into the Show Ring for the first time. We started in a small way by exhibiting six heifers at the Amherst County Fair and very proudly came home with a large royal purple rosette reading "Grand Champion Holstein" and three other "firsts." Mr. Mann Overton, formerly Dairy Manager at Brandon, has been Dairy foreman here for the past two years and is responsible for a large part of the Dairy's growth and improvement.

A new venture in cattle raising was started a little over a year ago when "the Farmer" bought twenty-one Aberdeen Angus heifers and a very fancy young bull, named Etoile VII of Scotland (this latter from Dr. Will Walker by the way) and Sweet Briar went into the beef cattle business. All the young ladies have come through the winter well and as you are reading this, are about to become mothers. It's all very exciting and we believe Sweet Briar's pastures (this is where the Ladino (clover!) comes in, my friends) can raise better beef than those prime ribs you've been getting, and that a new income producing project for Sweet Briar has been started.

Hogs are the third (and last) of our farm animals and here we come to the Landrace mentioned some pages (or is it only paragraphs?) ago. The lord and master of the hogs is an extremely handsome (if you fancy the beauty of pigs) but anyway a very well born, Landrace boar, his ancestors imported from Denmark and himself purchased from the United States Department of Agriculture Experiment Station at Beltsville, Maryland. The present hog population is 120, a good many of which will be sold in March, as they are at various times during the year. The hogs are pastured on alfalfa lots and fed good Sweet Briar corn (not, as is popularly supposed, scraps from the Refectory!) and produce as fine hams and such as have fostered Virginia's fame in this field.

A new project, started now for next fall, is the marketing of a limited number of Sweet Briar hams. Mr. Ellis Lamb, the Farm Foreman, who, incidentally, has been here twenty-four years, has a way with a ham that makes us wonder why Smithfield didn't snap him up long ago. He is planning to cure, in his own inimitable fashion, about fifty hams which will then be wrapped, and may be even tied with rose and green ribbons, and offered for your Christmas buying next November. (Advt.!)

The Sweet Briar Stables have been a part of the Farm program since Mr. Blackwell's day, and although the Board this fall passed a ruling putting them in the Physical Education budget for next year, where they of course very properly belong, they are still part of the Farm, and even under the new setup, the labor will no doubt continue to be supplied by the Farm.

The Sweet Briar Stables are VERY grand! Box stalls with names above each, individual drinking "fountains," hay on the floor (because that's the natural position for a horse when eating, no more mangers, mind you!) a tack room, an instruction or conference room, a harness repair room as well as the fine indoor ring make you think you've stumbled into the paddock at Churchill Downs. Sweet Briar now has twenty-four horses of its own, carefully selected and schooled, as well as two old "pensioners," and no longer has space to board students' own mounts.

The Stables now boast, as well as the indoor ring (complete with bleachers and a large mirror—this for the riders, not the spectators) an outside teaching ring, an Olympic sized schooling ring, both adjacent to the barns, and the now modernized horse show ring on the way to the Lake.

Miss Rogers is still the moving spirit in Sweet Briar horsemanship, but for the last two years we have been most fortunate in having Mr. C. E. Bailey, of Lynchburg, a horseman par excellence, as an instructor in schooling, purchasing expert and general inspiration. Howard Hutcherson, who boasts twenty-two years at Sweet Briar, is still the head groom and is as efficient and cheery as ever.

Near the Stables is the new Farm Shop, an addition about a year and a half old. Here Mr. Webber, who can make watches out of horseshoes, and Mr. Bickers, the carpenter, hold forth, and miracles are performed! Here, as one item, the horses are shod, and the forge, electric and acetylene welders, band saw, air compressors, electric paint sprayer and such, PLUS Mr. Webber and Mr. Bickers, make the Farm practically independent of outside repair bills with the exception of major overhauls to the tractors and trucks.

And now to the other end of the Campus, to the orchard. You probably knew that those sweet smelling blossoms were produced by apple trees, and you may even have taken a laundry bag in the cool of an autumn evening to pick up some of the "drops"—but here's the present picture.

The orchard has been little more than a source of beauty to Sweet Briar for a good many years, but it is now, we hope, coming into its own. There were orginally nine hundred trees, many of which produced only a few apples and a large number of which had not been pruned for eleven years. Pruning was started two years ago and two-thirds of the orchard has now been pruned for two years and the last third pruned for the first time this fall. One hundred new trees, which were chosen because they are good pollenizers, were added last year, and last spring, during the blooming season, bees from Sweet Briar and all its willing neighbors were brought in to help. Eleven sprays were applied during the summer. The crop this fall was encouraging both in quantity and quality (two "firsts," for Stayman Winesaps and Black Twig at the Amherst County Fair) and the future looks hopeful. This fall the woods above the orchard, on the hill overlooking the lake, were cleared in the hope that this would increase the air circulation and ward off the danger from early and late frosts.

Now, the Farm itself—the real "farming projects," and the caretaker of all these adjuncts that have gone before. Overall, Sweet Brair now comprises about 3,000 acres, of which three hundred are in active cultivation, three hundred in pasture and the balance in orchard, campus and woodland.

Corn, wheat, oats, barley and alfalfa are the main crops, which supply the needs of the livestock, with some left over for outside sale beside. The Farm used to also raise Timothy hay for the horses, but the land which produced one crop of Timothy, which can be bought for $25 a ton, is now producing three crops of alfalfa which sell for $40 a ton.

The pastures at present are still largely blue grass, but plans are afoot to increase the present acreage of Ladino and Orchid grass. The pasture mixture for which we are working will be Ladino, Red Top, Orchid Grass and Lespedeza. The pastures are regularly fertilized and limed. About two hundred tons of lime are used per year (and here I boast again!) lime costs $4.50 per ton, spread, and $1.35 per ton at the plant. This year "we" have bought a second-hand lime spreader for $850 and are buying our lime at the plant. Figure that one out!

The farm now has its own baler for hay and straw, which saves a good $800 per year, and a new hammer mill and mixer which prepares feed for all the livestock and provides rainy day work for a good many of the men. The Farm labor total, including all departments, is twenty-five, and aside from the work already mentioned they keep up farm roads, clear bridle paths, build bridges, repair Farm buildings and sheds (of which there are sixty), maintain the Athletic Association Outing Cabin, etc., etc. They are not idle!

Some statistics? Well, you asked for it—or maybe you didn't, but here they are anyway. Roughly, the Farm equipment includes: 2 pickup trucks (farm and dairy), one 1½ ton farm truck, one truck with lime spreader body, one Case baler, one small John Deere tractor, one big Farmall "M," one big John Deere "A," one John Deere combine, one Culti-mulcher, a tractor disc plow, a cultipacker, a tractor drill, two tractor mowing machines, three side delivery rakes, one hay loader, three tractor trailers on rubber (tires!), a power elevator for grain and baled hay or straw, two tractor cultivators, a tractor sprayer for use of D.D.T. on poison ivy in the orchard and weeds in the corn and a power orchard sprayer.

Enough? Oh, dear no! We needs lots more! If any of you are now farm-minded and want to contribute to dear old Sweet Briar, how about endowing two new silos? Or perhaps you'd like to make a memorial gift of a liquid manure pit near the Dairy, with motor, pumps, and lines for the irrigation of pastures and fields? Or perhaps you'd like to build a new hay shed in place of the old green barn—on the road toward the monuments, which is still being held up by poison ivy. In any case, do watch us grow—and come to see us whenever you get near.

Whoever coined the phrase "quiet life on the farm" had, I'm sure never heard of Sweet Briar, but in spite of its hectic days (and nights!) it is fun—and satisfying—and provocative—and a big part of Sweet Briar.

STABLES will go from FARM to PHYSICAL EDUCATION budget next year.

Class Notes

ACADEMY-SPECIAL

Class Secretary: MARGARET POTTS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams) 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Fund Agent: CLAUDINE GRIFFIN (Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb) 2514 Laburoum Avenue, S.W., Roanoke, Virginia.

Thanks to all of you who were so prompt in replying to my questionnaire. It is certainly heart-warming to find so much interest still being shown in Sweet Briar by the alumnae who were there in the Academy days, and it is stimulating to discover the active, useful and interesting lives they lead.

Mary-Martha Armstrong McClary lives in Windsor, Vermont, where her husband, who is a banker, also runs two farms of Jersey cows. Mary-Martha went on from Sweet Brian Academy to Smith College, from which she was graduated in 1920, and two of her daughters are at Smith: Mary-Martha, who will graduate next June, and Sarah Frances, who will graduate in 1952. Another daughter, Susanna Armstrong McClary, will graduate from Milton Academy in 1953. Mary-Martha Senior is not only a busy housewife but is active in Grey Lady work at the Veterans' Hospital at White River Junction, Vermont, and in her spare time collects antiques, which include Staffordshire hounds and cows. She and her husband live most of the year at Whitehall Farm, in a house built by his greatgreat-grandfather, but in the summer the family goes to Osterville, on Cape Cod, where they live in another old house, overlooking the water. At the farm they keep ponies and horses, but due to her other activities, Mary-Martha writes, she hasn't much time for riding these days, and adds that her "life is not very exciting but it is very nice." And I say, very, tery nice. Also, I should like to add that despite her interest in Smith she still shows her love for Sweet Briar by having served as a subagent for the Alumnae Fund last year.

Gertrude Bilhuber is another Academy alumna who went on to college, from which she collected quite a number of degrees: B.S. and M.A. from Columbia and M.S. and Dr. of Health from the University of Michigan. She. too, is a collector of antiques-her specialities being early American glass and historical items -and she, too, still shows her interest in and love for Sweet Briar. She now has her own travel bureau, here in New York, and her prospectus sounds so alluring that right now in my dreams I am traveling to western ranches, hunting and fishing camps and to foreign lands, by land, sea or air. I'm not subsidized, but in case you are interested her bureau is called Vacation Advisers and her address is 9 East 46th Street. In addition to all this, she writes articles on travel and on antiques.

Helen Browne is married to a surgeon, Dr. Marcus Hobart, who is much interested in athletics, also. They have two children living: Emily, who was graduated from Wellesley and is now married to Dr. C. C. Hall; and Josephine, who is in training at the Nurses School of St. Luke's Hospital in Chicago. It was sad to learn of the tragedy that befell their only son, Robert, who gave his life in rescuing a girl from Lake Michigan. Previously he graduated from Dartmouth and was studying medicine at Northwestern Medical School. After leaving Sweet Briar Academy Helen went to the University of Wisconsin, from which she was graduated in 1919. She is now on the Board of Visitors of that University and, in addition, runs a 425 acre farm of registered Guernsey cows at Waupaca, Wisconsin.

Right now I think I should put in a plug for my own (1/3) interest in a herd of purebred Hereford cattle, for I can't let the dairymen or women take it completely away! But we do seem to have mutual interest in cows.

Mary Ervin, now Mrs. Foster Townsend, is still living in Richmond, Virginia, where her husband is an architect. They have two daughters and two grandchildren. In addition to her interest in her home and the children and grandchildren, she is an active worker for the Presbyterian Church of which she is a member, and for a community center for underprivileged children.

Elise Gibson is now Mrs. Chesney Carney, of Clarksburg, West Virginia, where her husband, a lawyer, is with the firm of Steptoe and Johnson. (The senior member of that firm, who retired to my old home town, Shepherdstown, had a daughter, Nancy Moss Steptoe, who was graduated from Sweet Briar in 1948, and the junior member is no other than Mr. Louis Johnson, Secretary of Defense). Elise has one son, John Augustine Washington, named for his father, her first husband, who died some years ago. Elise doesn't give me much news of herself and her activities, but I can say that she worked for the Sweet Briar Alumnae Fund last year.

Claudine Griffin Holcomb, who is doing a swell job as Fund Agent this year, is, as you know, Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb, of Roanoke, Virginia. Her husband, a banker, is chairman of the Board of the Colonial American National Bank. Claudine is really working hard, for in addition to her work for the Sweet Brian Fund she is an active member of the Garden Club of Virginia and in October went to a meeting at Williamsburg of the Board of Governors of that organization. She is now cetting together a collection of colored slides of members' homes and gardens and of outstanding flower arrangements. These are available to garden clubs, so anyone who is interested should write to her for particulars. (That, also, is right down my alley, for I too am a gardener and flower arranger, so you will hear from me, Claudine!) I had a very pleasant visit with her one evening last September, when I passed through Roanoke, and she has written me that in October she spent the night with her cousin, Claudine Hutter, in Lynchburg. There at the same time were her sister, Eugenia Griffin Burnett, Alumna member of Sweet Briar's Board of Directors, and Frances Murrell Rickards.

Maude Taylor Robbins, who lives in Houston, Texas, and who, also was a subagent for the Sweet Briar Fund, writes that her husband, Dr. E. Freeman Robbins, is a physician and surgeon. They have three children: Marion, the eldest daughter, who attended Sweet Briar for two years, Ellen, the second one, who went to Sweet Briar for four years and graduated in 1946, and the son, Horace, who is now studying medicine. Both girls are married.

Margaret (Peggy) Wilson Ballantyne lives at Grosse Pointe, Michigan, where her husband is vice-president of Wyandotte Chemicals. They have a son, Ford, Jr., who graduated from the Asheville School, in North Carolina, then went to Williams College and from there to Lehigh University, where he was gradnated. He is now secretary of Wyandotte Chemicals, is married and has two sons, Ford III, and Tommy, of whom their grandparents are very proud. After leaving Sweet Brian Peggy attended Ely Court, a school at Greenwich, Connecticut, but she still retains her affection for Sweet Briar and last year served as a subagent for the Alumnae Fund. She is evidently a very active person, for in addition to her interest in painting, she has twice been president of Allied Youth, Inc., a national organization to teach young people not to drink, and she is a member of the Junior League and of the Grosse Pointe Farm and Garden Club.

Eudalia White Lohrke, a former Special student at Sweet Briar, lives at Orange, New Jersey. Her husband is manager of the Metasap Chemical Company at nearby Harrison, New Jersey, and in his spare time is interested in woodworking and has set up a woodworking shop in his basement. Their son, Emil, Jr., was graduated from Princeton after service in the Navy during the war and was married a year ago, and their daughter, Sherley Lohrke, who is now nineteen, has just announced her engagement to a naval officer. The wedding will be in the spring. Eudalia's own activities include Red Cross work and the care of her invalid mother.

Elizabeth Cocke, another former Special student, is now living at the Prestwould Apartments, in Richmond, Virginia. For six years she has been secretary of the Speakers Bureau for the Community Chest campaign, which meant working in September and October, and she is active in church work and other volunteer work. She was president of the Junior League just after it was taken in to the A. J. L. A. in 1927-28. In World War I she was an occupational therapist in a government hospital in Boston and in World War III she worked in an aircraft warning center and also was a nurse's aid. She writes that she sees Ellen Lee Ball, who is interested in art and has done some painting, and also sees Mary Johnson Jerman, now a widow with three married daughters and five grand-children.

We here in New York are looking forward eagerly to April 8, when Miss Iren Marik, Associate Professor of Music at Sweet Briar, will make her Town Hall debut. If you can possibly be there, don't miss it, for Miss Marik is a great artist.

Be sure to send me some more news of yourselves. I like to hear from you and I am sure your friends like to hear of you. Many thanks for your wonderful cooperation so far.

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: REBECCA E. PATTON, Beechmoor Place, Catlettsburg, Kentucky.

Among those who graciously answered my plaintive appeal for news of themselves and their families was Alma Eisendrath Meissner. She is living in Milwaukee and replies modestly "Home Work" to the question as to what she is doing at present. Alma speaks of seeing Elsie Zaegel Thomas and Sarah Arnold frequently. She has three children: Barbara (Mrs. Albert Heller); Doris, who is Director of Occupational Therapy at La Raleida Children's Sanitarium in Chicago; and Paul, who will finish engineering in February. She is the proud grandmother of two, Henry Heller and Ann Heller, two years and two months respectively.

Abbie Munroe May writes bravely from Quincy, Florida, that she continues to suffer from crippling arthritis and "is living to take cortisone or AGTH but due to the scarcity of these drugs it may be '51 before I have a chance." She plans to return to John Hopkins soon for further treatment. Abbie has heard recently from Harriet Evans Wyckoff who has been in Greece for almost a year. Her husband is with E.C.A. Abbie has three children-Frank is a chemical engineer with Pan Am Oil in Texas City. He is married and has one son, Michael, aged three; Betty Mae Emby, who with her husband and little boy, Joel, live with them in Quincy; the youngest, George is unmarried and has a job with Fullers Earth Company in Quincy.

Katherine Wilson Sellers has returned to her home in Chicago "after a great year of adventure spent in the near east." Her husband, Dr. Ovid Sellers, was Director of the American School of Oriental Research from July '48, to July '49. She writes: "We were situated on the Arab side of Jerusalem, about one hundred and fifty yards from the dividing line and never were allowed to cross it. For nine months the school was the headquarters for the United Nations Observers, where everyone who could cross the line cleared. In our Director's house the dining room was the United Nations Office and the kitchen, the radio room, used for all communications. Our living room's olive wood fire warmed many an important person.

"After the United Nations secured a bnilding of its own we filled the hostel with Arabs from Jesusalem. We cherish them as our dearest friends. They were the leaders who were struggling to get order out of chaos. I helped organize what we called the Holy Land Industries. We helped the producers of ancient arts to get a new start—Hebron glass made since the Roman days, Bethlehem Mother of Pearl since the crusades, Ramallah needlework and Jerusalem pottery with their lovely designs."

Katherine tells of her husband's "being a part of some of the intriguing episodes connected with the discovery and the clearing of the cave where the Dead Sea Manuscripts of Isaiah had been found the day before. Precious bits of parchment, cloth and pottery told a tale of interest all over the world." Dr. Scllers' pictures of them and of the cave were a part of the exhibit shown at the Library of Congress and the Walter Art Gallery.

Katherine concludes: "Our year brought us an intimate knowledge of the vital part which the Near East plays in the whole world picture. We have been deeply concerned with the future of Jerusalem and believe that the recent action of the United Nations Assembly for permanent Internationalization of Jerusalem and Bethlehem, if accepted, could be the beginning of peace in the Near East and a turning point in history."

Katherine has three children: Mrs. Richard Harter, wife of a Presbyterian minister of Le-Roy, Illinois, and mother of three little girls; Mrs. W. W. Butler of San Juan, Puerto Rico, mother of one boy; and Roger, the youngest who is a music student in Chicago.

For the next issue of the Alumnae News I hope to throw the spotlight on Laura Portmann Mueller, Marjoric French Nevens, Henrietta Washburn, Lucille Schoolfield, Alice Su ain Zell, "Jim" Hayes, Liz Green Shepherd, and several others whose modest lights are under bushels—or who tossed my double posteard in the Christmas fire!

The response from the 14ers to a request for a proof of interest in the Alumnae Fund has been gratifying. To those who have not contributed this year—we need your gift to raise the percentage of the '14 contributors and to prove our proverbial loyalty!

Class Secretary: Frances Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Anne Schutte (Mrs. Leroy H. Nolt) 1301 Homestead Lane, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

While I was in Chicago in October visiting my sister, Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes, I saw three "old girls"—Helen Babeock Nevins. Louise Kimball Hardin, and Yelena Grgitch Prosch. It would be hard to find three more attractive and charming people.

In November I was surprised and pleased to receive a note from Emily Kersey inviting me to have lunch with her in Philadelphia. We hadn't seen each other since 1912 but had no difficulty recognizing one another. She lives in California and was visiting friends and relatives in the East.

December 3 I drove down to Wilmington, Delaware, to attend Jean Ridler's wedding and reception. Jean is the older daughter of Mary Bissell Ridler. Sweet Briar was represented by Carrie Sharpe Sanders, Elizabeth Joy Cole, and Marjorie Ward Cross. Carrie and I sat together at supper and had a grand pow-wow. She and Elmyra were roommates in 1919.

Harriet Erans Wyckoff writes from Athens, Greece, "I get homesick often but in spite of it love this remarkable country. It seemed very barren when I first got here but now in spite of the rocks and lack of green it is beautiful to me. Bernard is enjoying his work and begins to feel he is helping the Greek farmer who seems to bear the brunt of most of the troubles of this poor country. There is some history or very interesting relic at about every corner. We never tire of exploring whenever we have a chance. Think of seeing Socrates' prison cell, the old Greek Agora where such interesting things have been dug up. We saw them open a child's grave dating about 900 B. C. Then going to Mycenae and seeing the remains of the palace of Agamemnon-the stairs where Clytemnestra put out the red carpet, and most wonderful of all the ancient bec-hive bomb in perfect preservation after about 4,000 years. It makes you feel you are dreaming."

Margaret Grant writes that she has received word from Miss Lucas that she has been elected a member of Sweet Briar's new chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Three cheers!

In case anyone is fooled by the caption under a snapshot in the October ALUMNAE News which credits me with being Frances Pennypacker Davis, let me assure them that I am still a spinster and the Davis name belongs to sister Mary.

Class Secretary: (We are grateful to Helen Beeson Comer for sending in this class letter.) Fund Agent: Helen Beeson (Mrs. Francis M. Comer) 325 Limestone Street, Maysville, Kentucky.

Inasmuch as some of you were nice enough to send me a line as well as cash or check to my October appeal for the Fund, I am sharing the news with all of you. I scan each class for a familiar name and now even try to guess whose daughter might so-and-so be, so here's my news of us.

Margaret High Norment sent along a nice card in the spring, I believe, welcoming us if we ever went down Texas way—that I still hope to do, so look out, Margaret, I may drop in sooner than you think. Ida Massie Valentine crashed through with a very nice "token" gift as she expressed it, and most welcome it was. She says she has two sons in college and a third at Woodberry, "so at the moment our family is an expensive one." She goes on to say, "I wish I could do much more for Sweet Briar—I am very proud of her attainments." Surely hope to see you the next time I am in Richmond, Ida, and my best to Brac—he always was one of my favorites.

Elmyra Pennypacker is now Mrs. Yerkes. I read about it in a letter from her sister, Mary, in an earlier News this year, so upon delving further into this bit of news found that she is Mrs. Richard W. Yerkes, living in Chicago. Congratulations or felicitations to you, Penny.

My next news came in a rather formidable envelope with a high sounding name in the corner-"Wellman and Smyth" and a fine sounding New York address in Trinity Place. Well, it was from Dot Whitley Smyth and we will all have to take our hats off to that little gal, for, and I quote, "I have lots of personal news for you. I expect to graduate from the New York Law School next June, get my L.L.B. and take the Bar exam the same month, which if I pass, I will be admitted to practice. In August I married Herbert C. Smith, partner in the firm. Now I am sure of a position, pretty smart, eh! We are very happy and companionable. I go to school in the mornings and work as 'managing attorney' in the afternoons so you see my time is well filled." I will surely give you a ring on my next trip to New York, Dot, and best of luck to you. I think it is wonderful to have such ambition and be able to fulfill it as well. So if any of you New Yorkers, in or around that locality, need a good lawyer on or after June, 1950, call on D. Whitley Smyth, and in the meantime perhaps Herbert C. Smyth would take your case. No extra charge for the plug, Dot, and thanks for your contribution.

My news, as always, is about my lone chick, Kitty, who I am still hoping will enter Sweet Briar next fall. Her senior year so far seems to be all it should be from her standpointclass president, cheerleader, and movie editor on the school paper, so I see very little of her which no doubt will help prepare me for next year when I won't even have her little sox to scrub out for some important game that very night. I am one of those parents who believes teen-agers are people in spite of the things they do and say at times, and so am letting her make up her own mind where she will go. Made a quick trip to New York this fall-France, the husband, Prima Donna, the child, and I-and had a wonderful time taking in every play and night spot we could work in. The mister, to the races in the daytime and Kits and I, in the shops. Fair enough I say.

Let me hear from some more of you before many moons so I'll have more news next time.

Fund Agent: Mary Rich (Mrs. R. E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17, Maryland.

Not having received many letters from the class this bulletin will have to be short.

Early in the fall I had a chance to see some of the girls as I happened to arrive on campus during Council meetings. I was very sorry to hear that Eleanor Harned Arp was ill, and would not be able to be there, I "sat in" on about ten minutes of one meeting and sat next to "Shiny" Bodine Mountcastle, so had a short whispered chat with her. Wanda Jenseh Harris was across the room but as I had to leave early I didn't have a chance to talk to her. I heard that Dorene Brown Humphrey and her husband were on campus, too, and were on a tour of inspection, so I started after them. I did my best to track them down but didn't have any luck.

I guess '24 was touring Virginia that week as I learned that Helen Rhodes Gulick and Lydia Kimball Maxam had been on campus the day before, on their way to visit Emily Jeffrey Williams in Roanoke, They had luncheon with me the next week on their way back, and it was so good to see them. We talked ourselves hoarse, and thought of people we had not heard of in years. Helen's daughter, Phoebe, is in college in New England, and her son, Peter, is yearning to be a farmer and will take an agricultural course in a couple of years. Lydia's only daughter, "Cubby," is at the U. of Pennsylvania, and sounds as peppy as her mother. Both Helen and Lydia insist they will be at our next reunion along with a lot of others.

Eleanor Harned Arp and her husband were in Baltimore one week-end so we had a nice visit with them. Louis, Jr.'s engagement was announced a few days ago to Patricia Jane Pinney of Clinton, Iowa. They both graduated from the U. of Iowa last June. Louis is now in the first year of medical school at the U. of Maryland.

I was delighted to receive a Christmas card from Phyllis Millinger Camp. Her note said that she and her husband visited Helen Grill in Tiffin last summer. It was the first time they had seen each other since they graduated. Helen is doing juvenile court work, and is very successful at it. They say she is wonderful with the children.

In October Phyllis received a letter from Miss Lucas asking her to represent Sweet Briar at the inauguration of the new president of Westminster College at New Wilmington, Pennsylvania. It was a most thrilling affair. There were over one hundred and seventy delegates from all over, and the academic procession was blocks long, with an infinite variety of caps, gowns, and hoods. Congratulations, Phyllis, for having a master's degree, and being able to represent us at such a noteworthy affair.

"Mardi" Henigbaum Curtis writes that her younger daughter, Julie, announced her engagement Thanksgiving Day. Sorry I don't know more details.

"Dodie" VonMaur Crampton sent the cutest Christmas card—a picture of their seven Irish setter puppies! With seven dogs and four children "Dodie" should be busy. Gertrude graduated from Vassar last June and is now in the advertising department of Desre & Company. Bud is a sophomore at Cornell—Kitty is at the U. of Illinois, and Charlie is at home in the eighth grade.

And last, but not least, congratulations to "Shiny" Bodine Mountcastle for being made a member of the joint Council of Student, Faculty, Alumnae, and Board Representatives. She is certainly "doin" us proud"!

Well, since I started this Christmas has come and gone, and by the time you read it, a new year will be well under way. I hope it is a "newsy" one and all of you will write to me often.

1925

Fund Agent: Jane Bicker (Mrs. John H. Clippinger) 1263 Hayward Avenue, Cincinnati 26, Ohio.

1921 must have as many choice tid-bits of news to pass on to each other as any other class but I'll promise you that trying to get that news out of you is almost like trying to get blood out of a turnip!

Jane Becker Clippinger and Lucy Holmes Carson Haddow have been my comfort and 10v for this letter. Jane has a daughter, Judy. who is a junior at Connecticut College and a good friend of Peggy Malone's daughter, who was at the same college last year. Jane also has another daughter, Sallie, who is 15, and a son, Johnnie, age 6. Even at that she manages to be on a couple of boards and to do a large amount of church and Red Cross work. She writes that Deedie Kirkendall Barricks (Mrs. A. A.), is now living at 1057 Walker Avenue, Oakland 10, California. One son is married and living in Yakima and another one at the College of the Pacific in Stockton. Frances Burnett Mellen has a daughter who is a freshman at Sweet Briar, and a son at Kenyon. Mary Reed Hartshorn has a daughter, Mary, at De Pauw and a son who hopes to enter Dartmouth or Purdue next fall. Eleanor Miller Patterson is living in Greensboro, North Carolina, and has two most attractive children, a son and a daughter. Ruth Pratt is now Mrs. Paul Jones. A friend of mine saw her not so long ago and says she hasn't changed a bit and is still wonderful company. Virginia Whitlock Cobb has just come back from a visit to Amy Williams Hunter in England. Virginia and her daughter went over together and not only visited Amy but toured the continent with a party. Sue Hager Rohrer has four children, 3 boys and a girl. The boys are all at different schools; Charles at the University of Virginia, Dick at St. Georges, Middleton, Rhode Island, and Bobby at Eaglebrook, Deerfield, Massachusetts. Susie is too young for school but came South to Camp Alleghany this past summer. Ione McKenzie Walker has two sons-one in the Army and the other ready for High School. Adelaide Harris Holmes' son is a knock-out, I hear. Lucy Holmes Carson married Donglas Haddow in the fall and is now living at 10 Mitchell Place, N. Y. C. She's still adorable looking and still has the most delightful sense of humor. I had lunch with her in New York a few weeks ago and she gave me much of our news. Harrell James Carrington and I went up to New York to see Harrell's daughter, Langhorne, off to London. Langhorne is with the State Department and stationed in London. She and our daughter, Julia, graduated from Randolph-Macon in June, 1948. Julia was married the following September and, much to my delight, is living in Lynchburg. Eleanor, our 18-year-old daughter, is now a freshman at Pine Manor Junior College, Wellesley, Massachusetts.

I hope some of our children go to the same schools and will get to know each other. Please write me any news that you know so I can pass it on in my next letter. It would be nice for all of us to get in circulation again!

Class Secretary: HELEN DUNLEAVY (Mrs. Henry B. Mitchell) 4707 East 7th Avenue, Denver 7, Colorado.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA TAYLOR, (Mrs. George F. Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

Here we are well into a new year, with new plans, new hopes. But let us also renew the old faiths in our God and in our country.

I was delighted to have news from our dear friends that live in far away places. Elizabeth Rountree Kellerman, 5683 Kalamianiaole Highway, Honolulu, Hawaii-isn't that a dreamy address? Lib started her card with an invitation to pay her a visit. And wouldn't we all love to accept! She says that the Islands are really lovely, but that the natives are just 'mainlanders." Lib writes she is as busy as very active in P.-T. A. work. This year she is chairman of the Legislative Committee for The Territory and has to make trips to all of the islands. We are proud of her and know that she will fulfill her duties with the same excellent manner as in Sweet Briar days, as well as being as beautiful as a member of the May Day Court should be. Her two little boys are in the second grade and kindergarten, so she says that she has many years ahead of her in the school business.

From across the other ocean to the east of us, I hear Helen Finch Halford was "shooting" in Scotland in October. Doesn't that bring visions of "Baronial Castles"? There were pictures in a recent Life Magazine of the men returning from the Hunt. Precious little Beverly Halford, age 9, had a severe cut in her leg and was laid up most of the summer. Helen Halford, age 16, is in a London school and the Halford's son, John, age 14, is at Rugby. Helen's mother, Mrs. Finch, was with her all summer. It was just a year ago this time when Helen, Cecil and Beverly were out here, and we are all hoping that 1950 will bring another visit from them.

Speaking of romantic spots, "yours truly" and husband, Hank, had a wonderful stay at Camel Back Inn in Phoenix, Arizona, in November. When that Harvest Moon came up over Camel Back Mountain, and silhouetted the strange Desert Vegetation, the thrill was like you were 18 again. Hank and I really were thrilled this fall, for just before we left for Arizona we moved back to our duplex at 4707 East 7th Avenue. We literally pushed the furniture into the house, locked the door, and took off for Phoenix. It was a bit of a shock to return from the "plush life" of Camel Back to boxes and barrels. But the old saying still held, "There's No Place Like Home."

Another interesting sounding address. "Shady Rest Farm," North Wilbraham, Massachusetts, brings news of Jinny Lee Taylor Tinker and her family's wonderful summer up there. They all returned to their Montclair home late in August. Jinny Lee's daughter, Joan, age 18, entered Pine Manor College in Wellesley, Massachusetts, this fall. I was wondering if Joan had met up with my dear friend's child, Edith Davis, who is a freshman also there this year. Jinny Lee's son, George, or better known as "Tink" is 14 and is going to Montclair Academy. Jinny Lee and her husband, Fred, had a nice visit with Katharyn Norris Kelley and her grand family in the Fall when the Tinkers were visiting colleges. They hoped to see the Kelleys again when they drove Joan up to Pine Manor this

I hear that Margaret Laidley Smith is planning on a new address, as she is building a new home in Palm Beach. She spent the Christmas holidays in Martinsburg, West Virginia. Margaret was having an especially happy and interesting time, as her ward, Dorcas, who married a man in the consular service, was home on leave. Dorcas and her husband have just returned to the States from Johannesburg, South Africa, where they are now stationed. Their first assignment had been in Bombay, then in Durbin and now Johannesburg. Marg writes that she sits enthralled for hours listening to their unusual and positively thrilling experiences.

I had a grand card from Margaret Poscy Brubaker, who lives in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Peg writes that she is still leading a very busy but uneventful life. Then she lists her activities which sound to me like a full and wonderfully eventful affair. Her sons, Henry, almost 9, and Peter, 2½, are fine little chaps. Peg is also busy with P.-T. A., Community Chest, King's Daughters and Church activities and with the time left over she is a very enthusiastic gardener.

Bless you, Margaret White Knobloch for your wonderful Christmas letter. It was such a personal joy to me and a treasure chest of news of the Sweet Briar cronies. She tells me Dorothy McKee Abney's mother isn't too well, and that Dot doesn't have a maid so her life is a very busy and full one, as her son, Hamp, and her daughter, Barbara, are just at that age when life is a very busy affair. M. E. W. writes one of the greatest happinesses that came to her and Ellis was the recovery of Ellis' mother. I stand in complete admiration of her and the many things she accomplishes. for in the midst of the busiest season to take time out to write me such a wonderful letter made me very happy. She writes that last June found them quite settled after a bout of redecorating, they painted and papered from cellar to attic. It sounds like her house is completely glamorous. In the fall she and Ellis had two wonderful trips-one, a week in New York taking in the shows, the shops, and all the wonderous atmosphere of that fascinating city, and then their traditional trip to Ithaca for the Cornell-Princeton game. She and Ellis also made a visit back to her home town of Rock Island and from where they stayed one could look across the park and see "The Lindens," her old home. Brings memories back to me of the good times we all had there. The "Lindens" is to be made into a church and parish house. As I dream back to it, and the beautiful surrounding trees, it will look all delightfully like an English vicarage.

It was wonderful to hear from Rebecca Ashcraft Warren and of her grand sounding family. She says they all love living in Memphis. They spent the summer at Highlands. N. C., where they have a cottage. I'll bet Retta Nelson Weston and her family and Rebecca's family have some wonderful times up there together. Rebecca writes that her daughter, Peggy, graduated from Vanderbilt in June. Claude, her son, is a Junior at Georgia Tech. Mary Lee is a senior at Miss Hutchison's School in Memphis and aspired to Sweet Briar in 1950. Eleanor, the youngest, is 10 and goes to Miss Hutchison's School, too. Rebecca says it is quite a gathering and keeps her and Don pretty busy, but that they love it and I can imagine what fun their household must be.

I was completely delighted when I found tucked into Dot Hamilton Davis' Christmas card a pamphlet put out by the Red Cross of Baltimore, for whose picture graced the frontispiece but our glamorous Dot, and I do mean glamorous. She is not only beautiful, but terrifically efficient, and is doing a magnificent job heading the Baltimore Red Cross Volunteer group. Orchids to you, Dot. She was planning for her family to be with her and Allan for the holidays. Know they all had a happy time together.

Mary Gladys Brown Moore, you are a dear to always send me such a grand newsy letter. She writes that they spent the summer in the heat of Bronxville (except for a few weekends) as they had their real vacation in Florida last winter. She said she didn't mind it too much, as she is really more comfortable in her own home during hot weather. I think, Mary Gladys, you can hear a lot of echoes saying "I do, too." The Moore's daughter, Mary Chester, graduated from Briar Cliff in June and was going to start looking for a job in New York after taking it easy last summer. Mary Gladys, please write and tell us what success she had and what she is doing. It seems to me, living in a comparatively small city, that to knock on New York's Door of Opportunity is really something. She says so far nothing definite about their moving to Connecticut. From all the reports I hear, there are some of the loveliest places to live in Connecticut! And I'm a strong booster from our grand Colorado. She saw Tavenner Hazlewood Whitaker in Asheville over Labor Day. The two Marys had driven down in the new Ford convertible that Mary Chester had received for graduation and her twenty-first birthday from her devoted parents. Sonny Hood was with them as he had spent a week in New York. He had graduated from Riverside Military Academy and Mary Gladys had given him the trip up to New York to visit the Moores and see the great Metropolis as a graduation present. They all spent a few days in Asheville with Mary Glady's family. Jack, her husband, joined them for over Labor Day. She says her plans for fall aren't very interesting. She has a Church job and plans to work in a clinic once a week—also in "The Hospital Box" which is a thrift shop run by the Woman's Board of the hospital. If Mary doesn't think this is rather a full program and a terribly worth while one, I gasp at what she would say a complete schedule was. She plays a swell game of golf, bowls in the winter time, takes in football games (she was especially looking forward to the North Carolina—Notre Dame game). She finds time to play bridge and canasta, plus a heavy schedule of domestic duties. Her life sounds like a wonderful one and she is giving a lot to lots of people.

I hope everyone enjoyed their Sweet Brian luncheon on the 28th of December as much as the Denver group. We had a beautiful luncheon at the Denver Country Club, with 15 lovely Briarites attending. The high spot of the meeting was the informal talk by our Freshman gal at Sweet Briar, Janet Neal Martin. She is a darling girl, pretty and poised, and her enthusiasm for Sweet Briar was like a shot in the arm to us oldsters. She spoke in the highest praise of Sweet Briar's honor system and the excellent way it really works. She admires her professors tremendously, in fact is "all out for S. B." She told us of the new Date House which sounds super special. It was a stimulating experience just to listen to her. She really thinks Sweet Briar is plenty perfect.

Dot Keller Iliff has done a bang-up job as Secretary and Treasurer for the group the last two years, plus being a spark of enthusiasm and drive for us all. She deserves a great deal of the credit that our Denver group has come as far as it has. We are all very grateful for the time and effort that she has given us. She has sandwiched all this into a very busy life of two little girls, their many activities, their parties, plus all those many things that always seem to accumulate for mamma at Kris Kringle time.

As I read over the reports for this year it sounds as if you are all doing a fine job of taking an outstanding place and contributing a lot to each of your communities, which is a great compliment to your Sweet Briar training.

I appreciate so deeply your taking time out of your busy lives to write to me. It gives me a great personal joy and also YOU are this news column. I send all my good wishes to each of you for everything good during 1950.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH FORSYTH, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham 5, Alabama.

I would like to express my thanks and appreciation for your contribution to the S. B. Alumnae Fund for the current school year. Your cooperation is very heartening to your secretary, and certainly makes this job a pleasant one. As I have said before, if any of you have any suggestions or complaints, I hope you won't hesitate to tell me. I assure you that I welcome any help! Both Jo Snowdon Durhan and Libbo Mathews Wallace have given a great deal of copy which I'm sure you have enjoyed and appreciated as well as myself.

I tell with regret that Libbo Mathews Wallace and Mary Vizard Kelly lost their mothers, and Anna Patton Thrasher, her brother, last autumn. We send our deepest sympathy to them in their sorrow.

Elizabeth Cates Wall at long last came to New Canaan for a spell in October. She has a sweet place in the country which makes you want to pick it up with everything in it and claim it for your own. Rebecca Manning Cutler and I enjoyed a wonderful lunch with Cates.

The Hobbs (Maggie Leigh) had a grand trip to S. B. over Thanksgiving. They are considering sending Peggy next fall. We hope you do, Maggie.

Virginia Wilson Robbins and her family visited Virginia's parents in Cape Charles during the same holiday.

The Cranes (yours truly) took their usual trip to Kingston, Pa., for Turkey Day. Saw Dorene Brown Humphrey at one of the parties. Incidentally, I couldn't help but notice the men's eyes follow her in admiration. She has as much charm as ever to men and women alike.

Connie Van Ness spent a week-end not so long ago in Richmond visiting Camilla Alsop Hyde. Many parties and a wonderful time!

Welcome news from Peggy Lect Briganti who hasn't been heard from for years. She lives in Washington, D. C. Her husband, Frank, is a graduate of Cooper Union Engineering School and has been with the engineering corps of the Army for a number of years. They have two sons. She tells us that Jack (22) was in the Marine Corps from 1945-47 and spent about eight months in Tientsin, China. After some university training he is now out in the business world. Peggy goes to the S. B. meetings in Washington and reports that the club misses Edna Lee Gilchrist very much.

Evelyn Anderson Tull enjoyed entertaining the Denver S. B. group in November. Her cohostesses were two girls from Texas, Lillian Francis Morrow and Rosemary Harwell Van Vleet.

Another grand surprise was to hear from Dickie Harper on a very nice letterhead HARPER WALK-OVER SHOES, HARPER SHOE CO., INC., 1518 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. We are very much pleased to be brought up to date. Dickie went to work for her father when she left S. B. and when he died almost three years ago, she inherited the business and has been running it ever since. Much to the consternation of her friends (she says) she took up tennis last summer and finds she enjoys it as much as ever. She finds golf too time consuming so only plays spasmodically, mostly during vacations. She sees Peg Reinhold whenever their jobs will permit enough time. Peg had recently come east after two years teaching in California.

Those of you who would like to sharpen up your repartee should contact Babe Albers

Foltz who returned from a medical convention in Chicago simply loaded with jokes. She and Tommie had a wonderful time seeing their old Navy and Tulane friends. Babe says that their sons' sense of humor amuses but sometimes shocks her. Tommy, Jr., has a horse and won a blue ribbon and twenty dollars in the horse show at the Stock Exposition. Harry, the younger, Babe says, is crazy about the piano (also cash) as he wanted to know if they gave cash prizes in the State Music Contests.

Gretchen Orr Swift announces the marriage of her daughter, Julie, to William Sheldon Brown, on December 17, in New Bedford, Mass. Gretchen sent the newspaper clipping with a gorgeous picture of Julie and an account of the wedding. It was truly the prettiest Christmas wedding I ever heard tell of.

Libbo Mathews Wallace, always civic minded, is now on the Board of Charleston's new Childrens Museum. A Planitarium is being planned at this point.

You will most certainly enjoy the following, which is Libbo's own account of a "Parent's Eye View of Parents Day at Sweet Briar."

"For a long time October 29 had been marked on the calendar of some 150 parents. We were not disappointed and celebrated Sweet Briar's third annual Parents Day together.

"Changes, certainly, but all for the better. Did you ever think you would live to see parking meters in Amherst? At college there are telephones on all floors (no ringing between 11 p. m. and 7:30 a. m.). There are lock boxes in all closets, drinking fountains at your elbows and maids sitting around in all the fancy parlors. The gravel walks are paved and one side of the front yard is paved in brick.

"Academic smells the same—floors the same too—well worn. (Most of the old floors in Gray, etc., are covered with sleek lincoleum). All the laboratory equipment is super. W'onderful new windows in the Art Room. What Compy could have painted with such horizontal and vertical lighting!

"Looking around for May Queen material I picked her as I passed a beauty in an arcade. This beauty turned out to be Miss Jester. Among her duties is pairing the roommates sight unseen.

"I missed Miss Ruby but had a nice chat with Miss Winifred Walker, a reasonable facsimile.

"Dear Miss Long was there really remembering me. All personnel was perfect to the very top. Dr. Lucas greeted us most graciously at the door of Sweet Briar House.

"Met Dorothea Reinburg Fuller's attractive daughter looking very much like her mother. Saw Betty Prescott Balch who has a daughter, Cynthua, on campus. Accused several students of being Ruth Lourance Street's daughter but erred each time.

"Mr, and Mrs. Joe Gilchrist's (Edna Lee) farm was an oasis for very tired parents. The twins, Judy and Joan, are lovely hostesses.

"At luncheon we had beautiful china decorated with Sweet Briar. "At the end of the day we all concurred with Fulton Lewis, Jr., as he commented: 'You know 1 am a proud guy to have my daughter at Sweet Briar!'

"Sorry I missed Jocelyn Watson Regen's husband who preached on Sunday. Helen Mac was lonking as lovely as ever. Sorry, too, that I missed Dan Boone and Gert Prior, but hope to see them the next time I am on campus. The old barn in the apple orchard is still leaning. The Virginian Hotel in Lynchburg is as you left it. The only place in the world where the shoeshine boy sits down and leans on you to shine your shoes.

"By now you must be packing for a visit. You should be warned, do not look for the old iron gate. The entrance is so modest that we passed it five times. Let us put at least two very large boxwood there to invite us in. The very red clay is at least a clue. There were parents from Connecticut and Texas that found it, so you could too. There is a wonderful men's lounge on the first floor Gray, so bring your fathers, brothers and sons."

Thank you Libbo, that is really a super report and makes us long to go back to Sweet Briar, Class Secretary: BARBARA DE ZOUCHE LEWIS (Mrs. Alan Maxwell Palmer) Calle Miguel Schultz, 73-1, Mexico, D. F., Mexico. Fund Agent: KATHERINE LEADBEATER (Mrs.

Fund Agent: Katherine Leadbeater (Mrs. Howard Bloomer, Jr.) Shoreacres, Lorton, Virginia.

Ever since I left New York to come to Mexico I have been saying that I thought the class of '28 deserved a secretary who was able to keep in touch with people and collect news . . . so far nobody has offered to take my place, but now I feel that someone must do so, or else we just won't have any more news. This, therefore, will be my last letter as secretary, although I shall be very glad to send news of the Palmers when there is any to whoever takes over the job.

News of the Palmers is about all you'll get again this time, too, for my only correspondent is Kitty Leadbeater Bloomer, who, bless her heart, in the midst of funding and ulcers and family and all, takes time to write. She was also kind enough to send on a note from Mary Nelms Locke, saying that she had moved to Spring Hill, Alabama, that her oldest daughter, Nan, is a freshman at Sweet Briar and loves it.

Kitty writes that she picked up a lot of gossip for me in Detroit, sent it to me, and hoped I received it, which I didn't, I'm sorry to say. She also says that she is doing something she never expected to do again—teaching school. The local school was caught without a teacher when one of their number had to go to the hospital for an indefinite stay, and as Kitty's own son would have been one of those left without a teacher, she pitched in and took over.

As to the Palmers, they have been all the way to Purgatory and back this year. It turned out that Alan had a brain tumor, instead of a nervous breakdown, and they only just found it in time. He is wonderfully recovered, but unfortunately the thing had gone so long that the optic nerves are atrophied, and it is very doubtful if he will be able to see again. We are both holding the thought that he will, and will appreciate everyone else doing the same. Meanwhile, we are having a lovely time, because in Mexico you really live -breakfast in bed, the constant care of the pretty Indian hand-maiden, wonderful food, and such heartwarming attention from all our friends. We had a wonderful Christmas, with Alan able to go to some parties that he could listen to even if he couldn't see them, and we are just hoping that 1950 turns out to be a nicer year than 1949.

And to all of you, that wish—if you "had it good," may it be better—and if things were a bit rugged it's really your turn to be on the up-swing instead of the down. And warmest affection to you all.

P. S. A recent note from Squeak Harned Ross brings us up to date in a hasty fashion but it was grand to hear from her. Her husband's business has taken them out in the area of Hinsdale so they have bought a house there. However, they still plan to spend their summers in Highland Park. Peter, the oldest of Squeak's offspring is a freshman at Princeton this year and Debby, the younger, is a sophomore in high school. With a son in the east there is good reason to hope she may give us a ring some time. She got down to Charlottesville last fall, though not to Sweet Briar, but she reports the country looked mighty good to her.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA HODGSON (Mrs. R. C. Sutliff) 4733 24th Road North, Arlington, Virginia.

Do you remember that I promised you news gleaned from the questionnaires which Sally Callison Jamison sent out last year . . . well, here it is in brief. Lucille Burks Hopkins classes herself as "housekeeper" whose outside interests are gardening and club work in Louisville. This also seems to describe Meredith Ferguson Smythe who, in addition, has three boys. One of Meredith's main interests is government and public health. She is state chairman of the Kentucky League of Women Voters.

Virginia Lee Campbell Clinch, who has forwarded some snapshots of our reunion, is on the way to becoming famous as a song writer. Be sure to listen for her compositions! Her husband, in Texas, and Sally Callison Jamison's husband in Indiana are in the same business—supplying the "staff of life"—bread to you all. Sally seems to be as busy a person as ever doing church work, serving on Red Cross committees and holding offices in music and literary clubs. She has a boy, John, who is 15 and a girl, named Jane, who is 12 years old.

A short note from Anne Christie Stevenson who lives in Jacksonville says she has a job as supervisor in the U. S. Internal Revenue Department. Her two daughters are Jan 16 and Ruth 12.

Emilie Giese Martin is married to a lawyer and lives in Lancaster, Ohio. Her time, after caring for William, 14, and John, 10, is spent with numerous welfare agencies. She has been on the board of the Nursing Welfare Association for 8 years and on the board of the YWCA for three—really worthwhile work.

Anne Gochnauer is another one of our busier classmates—she teaches first grade at the Hill School at Middleburg, Virginia, in addition to running an antique shop, "The Golden Horse Shoe" in nearby Upperville. During the war Anne had a most interesting time as lieutenant in the Waves—she served 4 years.

Amelia Hollis Scott honors our class by being president of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association. Her time at home is pretty full too, with two daughters and a son but she does a lot of other things such as Junior League work, church work and being Commissioner of Girl Scouts.

Mary Gochnauer Dalton lives in Charlottesville where her husband is librarian. Mary herself is chairman of the Hospital Library Service as well as being V. P. of the local P.T.A. Her son, John III, is now 11 years old.

Julia Harrison Watts wrote a letter regretting she couldn't join the reunionites in June but had to attend a medical convention with her husband. She has no daughters to send to S. B., but "no doubt my boys will find their way there"!

Nora Lee Antrim says she spends a lot of her time working for the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond. Janet Bruce Bailey also finds outside interest in Garden clubs and community drives. She enclosed a picture of her two lovely children, Peter, aged 16 and Anne, 12 years.

Maria Bemiss Hoar says she has been on the wing as it were for the past few years having moved to St. Louis from Baltimore and now just settled in Pittsburgh. Her three small children keep her occupied as can well be understood.

Mary Archer Bean Eppes has a long list of social and church activities in Cambridge, in addition to her housewifely duties for husband and two boys.

Anne Mason Brent Winn has twin boys and a little girl. She describes herself as a housewife "going round in circles" though she seems to find time for considerable outside activity with Red Cross and volunteer hospital work. Her husband, John, is a professor at Transylvania College and raises tobacco on the side. She gave some news of Janet Lee Auchincloss who is living on a farm in McLean, Virginia, and has a large family and Anne says "still looks young and lovely."

Athlein Benton Lawton has recently moved to Roanoke, Virginia, where her husband has started a new business. He is a silver craftsman and Ath enjoys helping him design his original pieces. It is lovely work, too, for I saw it when I was in Roanoke visiting my family last summer. They have a new house and Ath has furnished it in a stunning modern decor.

Ellen Blake says she has a most interesting job as counselor at the Granby High School in Norfolk. Diddy Woods Meek has two daughters off at school and a son, John, at home. The board of the Junior League and garden club work being her other interests.

Mallie Bomar Johnson, who lives in Spartanburg, is one of our most active 29ers—she owns and runs her own real estate business and in addition to various community interests is vice-president of the American Contract Bridge League.

Jean Buchanan Bingham, I have recently discovered, lives just around the corner from me so I hope to see something of her and find out more details of her busy life—taking care of three children plus being an associate editor on Collier's Magazine—did I say busy life!

Virginia Hodgson Sutliff is a gal who needs help from you all—she is our new fund Agent and I do hope you will send her your contributions promptly! Her husband is a captain in the "regular" navy and Hodgson's spare time is spent playing golf, and good golf too—she wins tournaments! On a visit to her husband's parents in Wisconsin last summer she stopped by to see Belle Brockenbrongh Hutchins in Winnetka. Another ardent golfer is Peg Harding Kelly. She writes that during the war she lived with husband and two daughters in Newark, Delaware, but has since moved back to Birmingham. She occasionally plays cards with another classmate, Alwyn Redmond Barlow.

Going back to Delaware, Adaline Hoffman Allen lives in Wilmington. Her husband is a physician who served during the war in the Medical Corps as a major. Another distinguished member of our class lives near Wilmington—Elizabeth Lankford Miles, member of the Alumnae Council.

Martha Dabney Jones lives in Raleigh where she is dean of students at St. Mary's Junior College. Also living in North Carolina is Jo Kluttz Ruffin whose main interests, in addition to her three children, are the Junior League and the N. C. Symphony. She wrote regretting she couldn't join the reunionites in June but had to be with her son who graduated from Episcopal High School.

Elizabeth Lewis Reed, whose husband is a physician in Richmond, has a boy and a girl. Her outside activities include church work and various committees of the YWCA and Woman's Club. Martha Maupin Stewart, living in Portsmouth, also has a boy and a girl and is active in church work, Red Cross and the Community Chest.

Louise Lutz has the imposing title of executive secretary to the director of the Art Institute of Chicago and her outside interests include music and cooking. Polly McDiarmid Serodino, who lives in Cincinnati, has one son and does a lot of volunteer work when she is not playing golf. Gert Prior, who is living just off the S. B. campus, also does volunteer work with the Red Cross and church activities.

Adelaide Richardson Hanger of Dallas is another church and welfare worker. She mentioned seeing Claire Giesecke Walker, Ann Beth Price Clark, and Anne Gleaves Drought.

Edith Roache Tollefsen has been working at the Virginia Paper Company but she and her husband are planning to open an antique shop soon. She heard from Sue Brooke that her family has built a year round home at Virginia Beach; that Virginia Bellamy Ruffin has one son and two adopted daughters and that Elizabeth Stevenson Tate is running a dog kennel. Also that Alice Lee Perkins Clayton, after living on the west coast, has moved back to Dallas.

Natalie Sidman Smith sent a charming picture of herself and three children. Of many outside activities Lee seems most involved with the P.-T. A., Brownies and Scouts. Says she occasionally sees Sally McKee Stanger and Katharine Smith Boothe, both of whom live in nearby New Jersey towns.

Sue Tucker Yates with a family of four boys still finds time for many activities including executive board of the D.A.R., church anxiliary, P.-T. A., and volunteer hospital work. She wrote that when taking her oldest son to Woodberry Forest School she saw Mary Lee Shepherd Bradish, Mary Lynn Carlson King, and Elizabeth Copeland Norfleet who were looking "just grand."

Nan Torian Owens, whose husband is professor of Landscape Architecture at the University of Georgia, has a son and a daughter. Her spare time "if any" is spent in garden club work and flower arranging. Also interested in gardening is Esther Tyler Campbell whose other interests are the Junior League, church and scouts. She has two daughters

Dottie Jolliffe Urner is interested in bridge and the Woman's Club. Her son, John, is 9, but her daughter, "Jolly," she hopes will be entering the S. B. class of '53. She writes that she sees Mary Marshall Franklin occasionally and that at a May Day recently she saw Anne Conway Whitehurst who also has a daughter interested in going to S. B. in '53.

Harriet Wiggers Wright, who lives in Cincinnati, spends her summers in Phelps, Wisconsin, with her three children. She says the P.-T. A. and Sunday School keep her so busy that the only other interest she has time for is gardening.

Margaret Wessiger Proctor spends her summers at Rehoboth Beach in Delaware with her four children. Whiz's other interests are Sunday School, P.-T. A., and cub scouts, Amelia Woodward Davier says her interests are gardening, dogs and sports in addition to Red Cross and church work. She says she lives a "dull hausfran existence" in Darien, Connecticut.

Louise Dailey Sturhahn voices the sentiments of a lot of us when she says that her days are full of chores but none of them make exciting reading. Well, let me say right here and now that's where you are wrong! We can't all be trail blazers and adventuresses—haven't you enjoyed reading about your old friends, their clubs, husbands and children? Don't be modest! Please send me your news—a trip, the kids' measles, the church bazaar—whatever you have done. If you want to hear about the others you have to send along yours, Please!

EMILIE Giese MARTIN, '29

Class Secretary: MARJORIE STURGES (Mrs. W. Russell Moose, Jr.) 2210 Pingree Avenue, Detroit 6, Michigan.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George S. Writer, Jr.) 21 Fifth Avenue, Nyack 3, New York.

It does seem that when so many people will find it in their hearts at this season of the year to sit down and pen any size or shape of communication to me to be passed on to all of you, there is cause for wonder, to say nothing of cause for thanks from all of us to those who have been so thoughtful. Resurrecting acquaintanceship with you this last year via letters has been such a satisfying experience that I am sure it portends great things for all of us who can get to our 20th Reunion this coming June. I may be writing this on the 31st of December, but I can truthfully say, without benefit of eggnog, and with no feeling of being maudlin, that tis then, indeed, we'll drink a cup o' kindness yet, for Auld Lang

First, and most fitting for a new year, congratulations to Flo Brown Elton and her Sonny Elton of Brookline, Massachusetts, on the birth of a son, their first, on September 12. Our best wishes for the wee thing's health and prosperity and a sixpence forever in his shoe.

The report that Betsy Williams Gilmore's lassie was a story-book child was borne out by Betsy's nice letter containing a snap of her little Nell. Of mother, it was reported from her, that after moving to Cleveland, she found she had reached the age of discretion where her inclinations now lean heavily on doing what she pleases, ignoring the chairmanship of causes. They have bought a house and are doing it over, bit by bit. I'd forgotten that Betsy was Ruth Hasson Smith's child's godmother. Betsy also sent word of Mary Carroll from whom she hears frequently. She is in Florida for the winter. Also of Telia Barksdale Bailey of Nathalie, Virginia, who has a son and all that goes with the very busy life of a doctor's wife.

Kay Marr White from Nashville came through with reams. Kay spent a spell in the hospital last spring getting her oil changed and her brakes relined. She has two daughters who are as thick as thieves with Marty Hall Smith's two of same. Kay's Jimmy went into the war as a lieutenant in artillery and came out a full colonel in intelligence. You know, that shows progress, and I know from whence I speaketh. Now he is in the luggage business, plus 20 per cent federal tax. Kay also brought word of Kelly Clark Frost, that whiz in Latin and Math who was Kay's roommate freshman year. It seems Kelly left college because she was needed at home. Later she went to Europe. Back in Cleveland, she married Bruce Frost and now has two daughters, one of whom is 19, and all of whom live in Pelham Manor, New York.

Eunice Watters Coolbaugh from Fayetteville, New York, enclosed a cute card of her two boys and a girl, one of whom was born this last spring. She wrote that her Dick is an engineer at Easy Washing Machine Corporation, and that they spent the summer golfing and swimming and summer theatre-ing. She sent best wishes for a most enjoyable reunion in June.

Mary Burks Saltz's letter from Florida was abroil with activity. As Regional Chairman in the Community Fund Drive, Mary received the Red Feather Oscar. Her husband has a specialized children's shoe shop and works particularly with crippled children. Both of them are all wrapped up in doings with the young fry and seem to revel in it. And on the side, they have two boys of their own, all bought and paid for. Among other things, Mary organized and is president of an interesting and to me much needed organization, the Citizens' Charter Group, which is attempting to stir people up to participating in their local government. In two years their membership has gone from 20 to 500 members. Coming from Connecticut, I can wish them no better luck than our Town Meetings.

Mac MacDonald Reynold's letter was typically Mac-ish—a blast against reunions in general and a plea at the bottom of the same page that someone please stop by and pick her up. She writes for the Junior League News Sheet and has a son who is the Great American Boy—handsome, brilliant, and charming. He is entered as a candidate for President of these, our United States; failing which, a big name in the surgery world. At present he is a sixth grader and doing fine, just fine! Ruth Lowrance Street has a son in the same class.

News directly from Alice Tucker Jones Taylor who says she has a fascinating life which "listens" dull, as the life of a parson's wife is like no other—thrown as she is with saints and sinners alike and loving them all as much as she does life in Baltimore with its gustatorial appeal. She brings word that Betty Hun Mc-Allen's husband threw the headmastership of Hun's School into the discard and has gone into a private chemical business and that she has two daughters of the flirting age whom doubtless Betty will handle. And Tuck ends with a gay "see you all in June."

Since we are down at that end of the Senior Hall, let me say that after four needlings on my part to Katryne Blake Moore, lo! it was the male who replied come Christmas. Poor fellow! His joists and footings and studs have been bothering him since July when the family was forced to buy a house or go on the town. Just a chicken coop, you understand, the redoing of which had me weeping sympathetic tears into my cup until I came to the end of the letter with a drawing of the eastwing, west-wing edifice, with view attached. Well, he is weary. Katryne is weary, too, as she was flinging with the Southern Highlanders and then saw fit to throw her frail body into a Norris Dam kindergarten breach created by the evacuation of the teacher. This brave act of Little Hans stopping the leak in the dyke, no doubt inspired by their proximity to da watah woiks, was given up as a lost cause in two months. Their three boys are alive, however, which is more than can be said of the parents.

Harriet Williams Hershberger writes from San Angelo that her husband is a pathologist at the Shannon Memorial Hospital. There is a 2½ year old Junior and an older son of 14. They vacationed this summer in the East and stopped by SBC.

From Helen Smith Miller a letter saying that after returning from overseas during the war, she went back to the Red Cross and is now Field Director at Rutland Heights Veterans' Hospital for T.B. patients. She said she enjoyed her work hugely and added wistfully that she gets to her cute apartment in West Hartford only on week-ends.

Besides no few authoresses in our class, we have artists who actually sell their output. Sally Reahard, now in Del Ray with her father for the winter, vacationed in Leland, Michigan, this summer, where Sally was able to sell to—as she put it—the deluded patrons of the village gift shop some of her water colors. And Lindsay Kindleberger started attending classes in oils in 1946 and has sold two of her things "without much effort." Several dozen hurrahs!

Word at last from Boyce Lokey Martin, who says her life is-to quote Beulah-so daily, and one might well think it so with four children ranging in ages from 5 to 13. She wants to collect Augusta Porter Orr, down the street, and come down to our Reunion. Well, what is stopping her? Not just four children! Augusta has four of her own too and it is no wonder her husband directs a summer camp for boys and girls in Atlanta with kindergarten, nursery school and after school recreation programs in the winter. Smart man. Smart wife, too, to aid and abet that. Augusta said that SBC is well represented in Atlanta and a fine group from there are at college this year. As her younger brother married a Miss Catherine Tift who graduated in 1942, she has kept up on SBC doings.

Merritt Murphey Green from her letter did actually turn out to be a West Pointer by marriage. Her husband is a professor of Electricity at the Point "to our way of thinking a very wonderful duty in a very wonderful place." They and their two kids are in West Lafayette for a year while Jim does work on his doctorate at Purdue. Merritt tried to look up Betty Boone Willis in Albuquerque two years ago, but without success. I hope that Betty sees this and gives her credit and maybe even a letter. Merritt's address for the rest of this year (I suppose) is 601 Russell Street, West Lafayette, Indiana.

Then came a hello from Georgie Wilson Mockridge from Montclair, New Jersey. She often goes to Baltimore and keeps in close contact with Mary Moss Powell.

Mary Daily Dawson's letter read like a book. She graduated from the University of Kentucky and then worked for several years as a private secretary in Lexington, Kentucky. She was married in '39 to a Standard Oil chemist and together they went to live off the coast of South America on the Dutch-owned island of Aruba. In '43 she had the bad luck to be seriously injured in an auto accident and was forced to return to the U.S.A. for treatment of arthritis caused by the injury. After two years of this, she had recovered sufficiently to join her husband in Louisiana, where in '44 they bought a farm near Baton Rouge and remodeled the tenant house. AND adopted a 15-months-old baby boy. There they raise chickens, ducks, guinea fowl and have two horses for riding and several head of cattle, two litters of collie pups and 70 acres of land which they don't work but just enjoy. Our best wishes for your health, Mary Virginia LeHardy Bell is asking for word of Margaret Terrell Luther. She says her Ginny is a sophomore at Wheelock College in Boston and Joanne is 4½. Stan is in personnel at Distillation Products, Inc., a part of Koday Company, and their hobby is sailing. They have a 28' yawl which they sail on Lake Ontario and have spent the last 3 summers in Canadian waters and sailing in and out of Rochester, New York.

Lucy Shirley Otis' Christmas card was intriguing—promising a full letter in '50 and saying, "Otis data isn't printable anyhow and achievements in my household are headaches." Please note quotes.

Daisy Keen's card from Danville was abubble with the idea of our reunion. She has a part time job outside and a full time job running the house. She must belong to the union with that time and a half business. She says she saw Nancy Worthington at Camp Alleghany this summer. And speaking of our reunion, Mary Huntington Harrison writes that she has much more room in her car for people going down to SBC in June than my snggested Lib Smith Reaves and Peg Carpenter Terry. She would welcome any pickups twixt Cincinnati and SBC. There's your chance!

Jo Reid Stubbs also had a hospital seige this summer, of which I know all of us are sorry to hear, but leave it to Stephen to get her on her feet and trot her off to NYC for a spree and GET TICKETS TO SOUTH PACIFIC! Wuddaman!

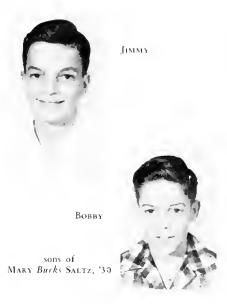

Glamour Puss Serena Ailes Henry has been leading her usual dull existence. I thought it was wonderful that she and Tom cleared out of Detroit and took a house in La Jolla for the better part of this year. As you now know, Tom flits, and Serena reasoned and rightly as it now turns out, that she would see more of her gadfly husband this year in California than in Detroit. So far, so good; but her card from Palm Springs and the Smoke Tree Ranch said that they are doing anything but staying in La Jolla. They have traveled extensively out there from Ensenada to the Grand Canyon, where they muled it down to the bottom to stay at the Phantom Ranch. This not only paralyzed them with fright but their muscles as well. Reminded me of Lowell Thomas and his trip to Tibet. However, their bones remained intact and with them is left the beauty of it all, now that it is over and the pain

Ruth Keeler has gone into business. She started in November with the contents of her own attic putting things on sale in her garage in North Salem, New York. It seems she will sell anything brought her for a small commission and says her radius of activity now is 254 miles and that the venture is amazingly successful. No advertising, just word of mouth business. And she has sold everything from matched corner cabinets to cosmetics. She enclosed a picture of a bird feeder that suction cups on the middle of a plate glass window and looks like a dilly. It is so inexpensive that no one should be without one. Best luck to her. I wish she were nearer, for she could turn over a few items for me for sure.

Had a nice Christmas hello from Lammie Lambeth Kilgore with invitations to mint julep with them and saying that Mercer Jackson Wellford and her sister were in Nashville this fall cleaning out the family attic. Lammie said she was rapidly getting inspired for this June.

Russ and I had the fun of seeing Mona Stone Green en famille in Marshfield this last Labor Day. They live in a great big hospitable rambling house, surrounded by farmlands and beautiful strong barns and a small river all their own running through the place. The small son tries desperately to extract therefrom socalled fish, but you know Mona, she is right there with the 6" rule every time the kid rakes in a minnow. Mona's two delightful daughters were almost my undoing, as Russ thought them so, too. In October we saw the elder, Anne, at SBC to which she seems to have taken like a duck to water. Incidentally, I have rarely seen so many beauties as are in that Freshman class-Anne among them. They all looked to me like Powers Models. Maybe we could have looked like that some years ago, but somehow or other I don't think we had the know-how.

Well, that is where we stand as of this New Year's Eve. May the year of 1950 bring to you all manner of good things and among them the resolution to put into effect that reunion urge for June. Things are shaping up now so that it looks for all the world as if none of us will rue a moment spent either coming or going or while we are there.

It has been more than fun to be with you all this past year, and as loathe as I am to admit it, I shall miss no longer being your class secretary. Here is a high hope that I shall see as many of you as is possible at college this June, if for no other reason than to thank you for being so very cooperative this past year in writing me. A riverderci, hasta la vista and au revoir and how!

Class Secretary: Martha McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman) 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Natalie Roberts (Mrs. W. S. Foster) Nestle Brooke, Box 576, RFD No. 3, Roanoke, Virginia.

Having had a bad conscience over my failure to get a report in the October issue, I sent out cards in September hoping to give all of you time to contact me before mid-December, but alas! the per cent of response was very low. However, many thanks to the faithful contributors, who help to keep this column going.

Ellen Eskridge Sanders has changed her address to 3216 Washington Street, Arlington, Virginia. This is due to her having moved into a larger house in Arlington which accommodates not only her own family but her sister, Elizabeth, also, who is with Ellen once more. Ellen has two children, a boy 9; and a girl 5. The latter attends coop-kindergarten of which mama is membership chairman. Ellen frequently sees Fran Sencindiver Stewart who lives fairly close.

Violet Andersen Groll had no particular news but was kind enough to acknowledge my card. Violet, let us hear something about Penny. She must be quite a big girl now.

Martha McCowen Burnet informed me of a visit with Aggie Cleveland Sandifer, when the latter stopped by Greensboro in September She was returning from a summer spent on the Cape at Marion, Massachusetts, Apparently Aggie had taken in all the auctions, as her station wagon was loaded with antiques. I missed seeing Aggie just by a few days when we came through South Carolina en route from Florida, last June.

Gill Hilton Pritchard wrote in September that her son was 9 months old, trying very hard to walk. With an additional 2 months in which to gain momentum he must be traveling fast these days.

Jo Gibbs DuBois wrote that the "five Du-Bois" spent a week with the "six Calhouns" last summer and they all had a marvelous time. Polly seems to be among the more fortunate ones who has changed very little in spite of having four active children who are simply grand. Jo's second son started to school this year, which leaves only daughter, Jean, at home. Jo and her husband were planning a visit to Peg Sproul Bush in September, with a stop off at Sweet Briar in the itinerary.

I hope Polly Swift Calhoun will forgive me when I confess that I lost her card and we cannot record all her doings here, but her very fine letter in this issue will attest the fact that she has not been idle. Much to my regret I missed seeing Polly on Sweet Briar campus when we were both in Virginia the same week-end, but she was there on Saturday and I, on Sunday.

Jane Bikle Lane and her husband left on October 29 for a trip to Mobile, New Orleans, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Dominican Republic, expecting to return in time for Thanksgiving Day. Jane and Helen Laurence Vander Horst ran into each other at the grocery, so they must be fairly close neighbors. When I learned from Helen that she now has four children—2 boys and 2 girls—I forgave her long silence. But we would like to hear more about her nice family—they must be an interesting group.

Peronne Whittaker Scott announced the arrival of a daughter born on September 1. The Scotts, including son Bobby who is 9, are thrilled to have a girl in the family.

Peg Ferguson Bennett and Joe lead a full life. Joe is Dean of Olivet College and Peg continues as Registrar. In spite of the busy life they did manage to get to Chicago to see the North Western-Pitt game. Their oldest son, Dexter, is in his second year at Cranbrook School in Bloomfield Hills and likes it very much. The younger son is in school at home. During the summer the Bennetts had their usual outing in Northern Michigan with Peg's sister, Meredith, and her family. Also present were Polly McDiarmid Serodino, Jane Callison Smith, and Sally Callison Jamison. The letter gave glowing stories of their reunion.

Marjorie Webb Maryanov keeps busy with a rush of club activities in Cambridge, Maryland. When her card arrived she had just served as chairman of a Business Men's luncheon of 70 besides being kitchen supervisor for a parish supper for 200. She topped off this with assisting at a tea for the fall get-together of the Woman's Hospital Auxiliary. Speaking of the latter reminds me that Mary Frances Westcott Hale is very active in this kind of organization in Chattanooga, Tennessee. She gives most of her spare time in promoting such good works.

Helen Sim Mellen wrote that she missed seeing Virginia Quintard Bond and her boys in Stamford but learned later that Whit Bond had had polio while there. Fortunately it was in a mild form and no serious complications followed.

Jean Colc Anderson's card left me breathless. Once more she is managing the stage production of their Theatre Guild, including doing its scenery, furniture, and drapes. She is also P.-T. A. membership room mother and working for the church auxiliary and in addition to this she teaches a Sunday School class. Her daughter, Lovat, plays the glockenspiel (bell lyre for the benefit of any of you who are as ignorant as I). Jean had to attend all football games in order to watch her daughter perform in the band. In closing Jean added that son David was a typical 6th grader, using every means to dodge homework.

Split Clark's opening lines in her reply gave me a good laugh. Namely: "Mighty smart verse, think I could do worse, I have no news, so what's the use?" Split continues to be busy with Red Cross work which leaves little time for anything else.

Iram sure that most of you know that Nat Roberts Foster and her husband are back in Roanoke. They were living at the hotel, while remodeling their farm. But they have moved in by now and think it nice to be permanently settled, after living in so many different places during the past year.

This fall has been a busy time for us with Shippy playing football. Our entire life seemed to revolve around the ungodly hours that such a schedule demands. Frankly I was not sorry to see the season end and find myself still in one piece. In early October, Ship and I went to Cleveland and Ship handled our Labrador Retriever at Field Trials out at Gates Mills. It was his first experience and while we did not take any honors it was an interesting experience and fun for all. Taking advantage of a school holiday in October, we took the children for a trip down in Virginia. Our main aim was to acquaint the children with Washington and Lee, and Sweet Briar. It was a wonderful thrill to visit the old haunts as a family. However, it was a bit disconcerting to have all the attractive young men at the Beta House addressing me as "madam" and offering to find me a chair. In spite of feeling mildly ancient I enjoyed every minute of our Saturday spent in Lexington, and our Saturday night at the Virginian, where many Sweet Briar parents were staying, it being a special week-end for parents. Since we arrived in Lynchburg rather late it was impossible to get in touch with all the people I would have liked to contact but I was fortunate in finding Nancy Worthington. As she was free for a part of the evening, the four of us spent a delightful two hours at her lovely apartment at Rivermont. Nancy has the full responsibility of running the summer camps now, which proves to be a year round job for her. The highlight of our week-end was a visit on the campus at Sweet Briar, It was Sunday and everything looked so beautiful and well kept. It was hard to believe that so many years have elapsed since I was a student there. I saw Mart von Briesen looking as young and at-tractive as ever. She writes, "Three of our classmates popped in and out of Sweet Briar within three days of each other, late in October. Jo Gibbs and her husband, Joe DuBois, were the first ones; two days later Polly Swift Calhoun appeared in the midst of Parents' Day goings-on, said she was going out on campus to round up her husband, Frank, and two children, and that was the last glimpse I had of her; the next day you, Jane and Big and Little Shippy, stopped me on campus for a few minutes. All of you ladies looked well and happy and it was a joy to see you, but a joy that was all too brief." Although there was a tinge of nostalgia for the old college days, yet I was grateful for the experience of returning with my family and the bright hope that my daughter might some day have all the advantages that Sweet Briar has to offer.

Last week Jane and I spent a night with Mary Stewart Kelso Littell in Indianapolis. She and Dr. Joe have just moved into a new home which is simply lovely. The four of us spent the evening together attending the Sonia Henie Ice Show at the Coliseum. Just now Ship is duck hunting in Stutgartt, Arkansas. During his absence I managed to get all my Christmas gifts wrapped and my report written two weeks before the deadline, which is an amazing accomplishment for one of my lethargic nature.

As the minutes of old 1949 tick away, I'll dash off a few (and precious few they are this time) notes in an (perhaps vain) attempt to get this letter in before the final deadline. I'll just have to admit this tardiness is my own fault, but the rush of the season, plus the fact that things hummed to a fare-theewell at the office, made letter writing of any kind an almost impossibility. So, without further ado—I'll get down to business.

It was wonderful hearing again from Anna Gilbert Davy, out in sunny California. Anna says there is no real news, but it was news to me to learn that she has been living in the far West for seven years now, the entire family having become ardent boosters of the state in general and the Bay area in particular. She and Hugh are not only involved in Scout work, Cubs and community center activities, but are also taking up folk dancing as fun and exercise for the "old folks." They are enthusiastic University of California rooters, attending the Rose Bowl parade and game last year, hoping to repeat the program again in 1950 (I hope they made it, too).

Incidentally, the Davy family now consists of Elizabeth, who will be 14 in March; and Hugh, Jr., who was 11 on Sweet Briar Dav.

I seem to have been all screwed up on "Flappy" Pancake's career, so it was a real thrill to hear direct from her. The letter was so interesting, that I'm going to quote it practically verbatim-and here she is: "This card was forwarded to me from Sweet Briar, which I left in July when my year was over as Public Relations Director in Martha von Briesen's leave of absence. I loved it, but it's nice, too, to be at home (Staunton, Virginia) again, and I have a most interesting job as Director of Publicity at Mary Baldwin College. It's a new department here, which means creating something and doing it in my own way, right or wrong! Needless to say, all local organizations, after a year's breather, were waiting for me, and I've spent much time with outside projects. But I'd dislike it otherwise! Had a wonderful summertwo months at our summer place at Rockbridge Baths, Virginia, except for a jaunt with Terry Shaw (Alumnae Secretary at Sweet Briar) to New England and Canada. We stopped off with Carolyn Martindale Blouin, in South Berwick, Maine, and loved seeing her, her family, her old, old (and fascinating) house, and the countryside. Recently had a letter from Bellamy-she and Peter were just back from a trip to New York. Incidentally, Mildred Hodges Ferry and I just missed each other in New England last summer. She and Jim got a U-Drive-It in Providence, and were in New Hampshire for a while. Hated to miss her, but our paths didn't cross. Polly Swift Calhoun and Jo Gibbs DuBois have both visited Peggy Sproul Bush this fall, but am sorry to say that I missed them, too." Many thanks, "Flappy."

Sarah Philips Crenshaw finally crashed through with a note, and, needless to say, it did seem good to hear from her. She writes that life is going along about the same for her and Pete. They have been doing quite an extensive job of remodeling (or adding onto) a small house which they purchased following the war, and have consequently been for a while in the proverbial reconstruction mess. They seem to have been kept on the move the past twelve months, too, with several glamourous trips-to Havana for a week in February; and then again to New York in May. Sarah also attended the Junior League conference at beautiful Boca Raton in April. There she saw several ex-Sweet Briarites, including Sue Johnson Simpson and Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle in particular. For their fall activities. the Crenshaws have been football-minded, taking in games in Nashville as well as in New Orleans.

From Norfolk, came a note from Eleanor Mattingly Littlepage, who writes that she is still busy delivering babies, but as yet hasn't done so well for herself. She also gave a clue on Betty Allen Magruder's career—a real psychiatrist, practicing in New York.

A card from Tuey Groner Moreno in Washington, contained the welcome news that Jack was expected home from the Far East for Christmas. Young Miss Suzy, now unbelieveably aged eight, had the lead in her third grade play at school—and life with Christmas was a busy one for her.

Also from the Capitol area came a brief line from Courtney Cochran Ticer, now living in Alexandria, Virginia. Although Courtney gave little or no news of her activities, it did seem good to hear again from her—and, incidentally, if any of you want to call "Nene," the number is Temple 3932, or ask the Alexandria Information operator, if you've forgotten.

Marge Ward Cross and Marjorie Miller Close both sent lovely Christmas cards, but I gather they were as busy as the rest of us this season, for there was no further note. However, I did just love the cards—and many thanks.

I talked with Mildred Gibbons the other day, and she is fine. In case any of you wonder at Mildred's rather asture address, it is her business one, as she is still living with her mother at the beach, commuting daily. I had hoped to be able to attend the Tampa Sweet Briar luncheon again this year, but at the last minute was forced to cancel as things got too hectic at the office at that time. However, I did have a brief chat with Martha Sua Skinner, this year's local chairman, a bit later, and she said they all had a wonderful time. Tampa is the first city in which we have lived where I have been able to find a Sweet Briar Club-this one is fairly active, and I hated missing the 1949 gathering. Incidentally, Martha Sue is a school marm this year, and prettier than ever.

That does about wind up the final 1949 story. I only trust it reaches the editors in time, but I will have to keep my fingers crossed on that one. For you northern readers, I'd better get in a plug for Florida, for it's heavenly down here right now, and the Plummers had a beautiful Christmas. Unfortunately, my mother, whom we had hoped to have with us, wasn't able to get here, although we do expect her soon after the holidays, Frank has been huntin' mad this season, as usual, while I have hit the golf course on every possible occasion. Except for our northern trip last September, we have been kept fairly close to the knothole in Tampa this fall. We are busy with jobs, outside social and business interests, this house and it's small but rather intricate garden- but we are both fine, hale and hearty -and want you all to remember that the latchstring is out if you ever hit this way.

You have undoubtedly noticed that the Class Notes have had more and more pictures in them, which adds a lot more interest to my mind. Our column has been lacking in them, which is too bad. The reason being that when I looked into the printing of pictures a couple of years ago I was told that they were $5.00 a piece and that we had no money to cover same. Now it is different, which is fine. Terry wrote me that the "plates cost about $2.00 each. We pay for them and are glad to have pictures—glossies or clear snapshots."

Virginia Vescy Woodward and her husband are settled in a small hut convenient apartment near the James River. Her address is Huntington Court Apts., 306 73rd Street, Newport News, Virginia. In the last few months Virginia has seen "Mickie" Murdoch Martin and her two cute little girls. Also at the Tides Inn at Irvington on the Rappahannock bumped into Ella Jesse and Bob Latham of E. H. S. with their family.

Jane Martin Person wrote me in September about the arrival of their daughter Kathryn Joan on August 20th, and says they are glad to have a prospective student for Sweet Briar. Helen Martin planned to spend a week or ten days of her vacation in Puerto Rico, but I never heard whether her trip materialized or not.

Lois Foster Moore writes that they moved last summer. Her new address is 61 Westgate Boulevard, Plandome, Long Island. Ruth Davies Young and her husband, Bob, went over to the Moore's housewarming. Lois' husband was in Texas on business last fall and stayed with Mable Hickman Flaitz and Jack in their new house in Houston and had a wonderful week-end. Texas hospitality is super. Lois had a grand day with Mrs. Lill who was up there visiting schools in October. She went to three schools with Mrs. Lill and learned a lot!

Sue Graves Stubbs wrote me in December that they are all thriving. Little Sue is 10 years old and King, Jr., is 8. King and Sue took them on their first vacation as a family and flew to Mexico City for a grand week last spring. King's sister lives there. It must have been a marvelous trip though a bit hectic. The Stubbs saw Susalee Belser Norris in November at the Tulane-Navy game in New Orleans. Sue writes on about Susalee—she has a most charming, attractive husband and a lovely home in the Garden District in New Orleans. Her daughter Eleanor has her mother's grand personality.

I heard from several Sweet Briar friends this Christmas, which was fun-Gerry Mallory and Hetty Wells Finn; Mary E. Clemons Porzelius with a picture of her two young daughters on her card; Mary Cannaday Gore from Lawrenceville, Virginia, where they have recently moved as her husband has a job there; Becky Strode Lee; Susanne Gay Linville with a picture of her house; and Dot Smith Berkeley. I also had a card from Mary Buick who writes: "am still at the same old job in a pediatrician's office and keeping busy in the same old way. Had a nice vacation last summer in northern Ontario on the Magnetawan River . . . Hetty's the only one I've heard from lately, except Dr. Ames. She spent six months in Mexico and liked it so well and found it so economical that she's returning the first of the year for another six months!' Had a note from Mary Lee Ryan Strother also, who had added to her already busy life the extra job of being a Brownie Scout leader. It is fine hearing from all these people. Christmas card time seems to be an inspiration to correspondence. I had a most enjoyable visit with Jean Sprague Hulvey on Christmas Day.

In October I started a part time job with the Charlottesville Albemarle Public Library doing bookmobile work, which is most interesting. Evelyn Mullen, '31, is my very fine boss. She and I give free book service out in Albemarle County wherever it is wanted. The bookmobile carries about 1,400 books for all ages, men, women and children.

We surely owe Marjorie Lasar Hurd a great vote of thanks for faithful service and a really grand column. Like Cinderella's stepsister, I know I can't fit into the shoe, but I'll try anyway! Please write me often. The secretary can write each of you only once a year, but you can write many times.

To all of you who missed reunion—don't let it happen again. We had a very stimulating and interesting time as well as a lot of fun. Dr. Crawford and Miss Rogers gave us a royal welcome and we thoroughly enjoyed imposing on their hospitality. We had a grand class picnic at their home.

I know you will join me in sympathy to Cecil Birdsey Wade whose husband died the last week of May. She and her two children went to St. Simon Island, Georgia, for the last two weeks of August with Lib Schener Maxwell and her family. Lib writes that the Wades came north to spend Christmas with her.

Bonnic Wood Stookey and Don celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary with a party at which Sweet Briar was represented by Dorothy Hutchinson Howe, and Lib (who says it was a wonderful party). Bonnie's only other news was that she had lost all her help, which puts her in the same boat with many of us!

Marjorie Lasar Hurd and her family went to Ephraim, Wisconsin, for their vacation. She sees Jane Forder Stribling at church every Tuesday and sometimes sees Marjorie Van Etera Lovelace there. She spends quite a bit of time with Katty James Hall.

Betty Suttle Briscoe proudly announces that Philip Suttle Briscoe arrived on September 6th. After staying home all summer, they finally got off on their vacation in November and had a wonderful time at Virginia Hot Springs.

Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlmann has increased the enrollment of Sweet Briar, "1971." Suzanne Ketevana was born November 7th. Martha Lou writes of a delightful seven weeks at Sweet Briar in June and July. She spent August working on her new house in Princeton and moved in early in September.

Kitty Marshall Hamill also has another prospective Briarite; her second daughter was born in August. Thanks to Jean Sprague Hulvey for this and other tidbits. Send some news of yourself the next time, Jean.

Anne Corbitt Little had a month at Virginia Beach last summer. She saw Frances Darden Musick and several other S. B. girls, She keeps busy in Roanoke as chairman of the Junior League Opportunity Shop and member of the board and as program chairman of her church chapter, in addition to watching over two lively girls. Two Sweet Briar girls, Mary Littlejohn and Edie Norman, spent Thanksgiving with the Littles. Anne says she felt almost like a college girl again.

Liz Mayfield Chapman tells nothing of herself (shame!) but does report that Fig Newton and Fig's son Pete had dinner with her recently. Fig is teaching at New York University. (What are you teaching, Fig?)

Dot Hussey Rockaway and family spent two weeks at Catawba Island (Lake Erie). Our plans for a reunion unfortunately went astray.

Mary Hutchinson Gordon keeps busy with her four children and a great deal of volunteer work. The Gordons enjoy many weekends near Gorham, New Hampshire.

Helen Hanson Bamford's three boys are handsome as can be, and little Susan, a darling, already has a Sweet Briar jersey.

Nancy Russell Carter is switching from being a Girl Scout leader to being a Cub Scout Den mother. She is having fun playing the piano. She and a violinist friend have been performing at church functions. All three of her boys are in the choir now. The entire Carter family is looking forward to a winter of skiing.

Eleanor Alcott Bromley writes that she is very busy with the usual round of P.-T. A. and S. B. C. activities. She is president of the Cleveland S. B. club this year.

Nancy, Elly and I were together for a week at reunion time and met again at Nancy's summer place near Buffalo in July. Much to our delight the husbands and the children enjoyed the week-end as much as we did. Only five of the nine children were present; Elly's small son was left at home, while the two oldest Carters and the oldest Strother were at Choir Boys' Camp in Alleghany State Park. Nancy thought it would be fun for Elly's Anne and our Sallys (average age, six) to "room" together. It seemed a splendid idea until four a. m. Such chatter is unbelieveable! (Anne Marvin's mother will say they come by it honestly, for she had to put up with the three of us plus Anne in June.)

We had a fine vacation in northern Virginia, but went only as far south as Charlottesville. We tried to absorb enough mountain scenery to last us until next summer.

I hope each of you will write me a lot of news before March 1.

Class Secretary: DOROTHY BARNUM (Mrs. Josiah G. Venter) Johnsons Point, Branford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: GENEVA CROSSMAN (Mrs. Edson S. Stevens) 2151 Walnut Lake Road, R.F.D. 1, Birmingham, Michigan.

Hope I can successfully fill the shoes of my two very able predecessors at this job. Must confess that I have more than a few qualms! But many thanks to you gals who replied to my post cards. I did not get out as many cards as I had hoped—partly because of the Christmas rush—partly because I'm a little slow on the new routine. Did not have as many answers as 1 had hoped either, but we will blame that on the pressure of Christmas preparations. Better results next time.

There are two new babies to report. Hester Kracmer Avery writes, "We finally hit the jack pot and had a girl, Nancy Davis, born last June 3, after three boys in a row. I'd like to know how many children Sweet Briar girls have-all I know are rearing extensive families, contrary to popular belief about college gradnates." Statistics do show that college people do not have many children, but 1 agree with Hester that Sweet Briarites seem to be doing very well. Hester's husband is a student at Command and Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Their new address is 410-9 Kearney, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. She reports that Ansley Spalding Hill is there also.

Judy HalliBurton Burnett and Mary Marks both write that Becky Young Frazer has a new son. Judy says that she had a grand summer at Wrightsville Beach, and a very busy fall with Junior League, P.-T. A. and church activities. She spent a week in New York at the time of the North Carolina-Notre Dame game and a day with Isabel Anderson Comer "admiring her handsome home and her handsome children."

Mary Marks has a very resounding title—Supervising Coordinator of Distributive Education in Danville. She has two classes in the high school and the rest of her classes are in stores or at night for veterans. She teaches everything from selling to buying with display and advertising, speech, business math and twenty other courses when requested. She sounds like a very energetic lady.

Jane Bryant Hurlbert and family have moved to 17 Cushing Road, Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts, and love their new home. Jane writes that they have plenty of room now for any Sweet Briarite to stay with them when in Boston, and hopes many will. Jane says that she very much enjoyed the morning she spent taking Mrs. Munger from Sweet Briar to visit secondary schools when she was in Boston.

Anne Baker Gerhart is happily involved with her children, Anne, 6, and Peter, 4, and her domestic activities, but also finds time for church and Junior League.

Sally Flint von Kann is still in Washington where her husband is in the Pentagon. They have a son, 7, and a daughter, 2. Sally is busy with League of Women Voters, P.-T. A., a French club and some Army volunteer doings. She hopes to get to Sweet Briar some time soon. Sally and her children go to Vermont for the summer.

Alice Laubach writes that she has nothing in particular to report, and then adds that she spent a wonderful week in Cuba this fall, and highly recommends it for a vacation. Sounds very exciting—wish we might follow her recommendation.

Gen Crossman Stevens, our Fund Agent, leads a very busy life. Her family, her Girl Scouts and other local activities keep her from having any time on her hands, but she says she loves it all.

Betty Myers Haring and Ken stopped to see us for a few hours one Sunday in the fall, on their way back to their charming home in Westport, Connecticut, from visiting in Boston. Both looked very well. Hope some more of you Sweet Briarites will come too.

Josh and I had a flying three-day trip to Vermont and New Hampshire last July. looking up a summer camp for our Mary-Lou who will be 11 in March. Josiah, Jr., who is 4, will have to wait a few years. We also managed a trip to Philadelphia in November for the Army-Navy game which was much fun because we saw lots of Josh's classmates.

Do write—all of you and let me know the news.

RUTH GILLIAM (Mrs. Earl R. Viar) 817 New Hampshire Avenue, Lynchburg, Virginia. Fund Agent: ALMA MARTIN (Mrs. Ralph A. Rotnem) 330 East Seventy-ninth Street, New York 21, New York.

Ruth and I are very grateful to all of you who took time to answer our cards or sent in information voluntarily.

Elise Bowen Mullins writes that her second son, Butler, was born October 18, 1949. Her first son, Sid, was two in August and calls his new brother "Bo." Elise and her family have just moved to Greenville, S. C., where Bill is with the Veterans Administration.

Emily Bowen Mullen writes from "White Robin Farm," her new home in Malvern, Pa., that she has a new little girl, Susan Emily, born July 14. She also has a twoyear old son named Charles. Emily says that Lucille Scott Knoke has four children, Scott, David, Paul and Sally.

Betty Cocke Winfree got home from her annual trip to New York with her mother, just in time to catch her breath and set out with Peyton for the National Newspaper Convention in Ft. Worth, Texas. While there she saw Nancy Parsons Jones and her husband, Vincent, who had come from Utica (where Vincent is managing editor of the newspaper) via California. Betty went on to Shreveport, Louisiana, to visit her sister and saw Ruth Robinson Madison whose husband is a lawyer. Ruth reported that she and her three boys, Iane Shelton Williams, Chloe Frierson Fort, Mary Poindexter Willingham, and all their children had a cottage together last summer. They really had a riotous vacation.

Alma and Pinkie were at the Council meeting in October. Pinkie had a fascinating album of snaps of her boys which everyone enjoyed.

We are both sorry that we are one year late in hearing of and reporting on the death of Connie Warner McElhinney's father, who was at the National Cathedral in Washington.

Another Briarite has been added to the lists—Marquart Harrison Doty, daughter of Mark Powell Doty, born October 13. That makes three girls for Mark and her one son, Leete, feels completely outnumbered.

Dodie Burrill Walker and son Alec flew to Mexico in November to join Basil who has a job there.

I illian Cabell Gay's doctor husband has become an associate of Dr. Kenneth H. Abbott in the practice of Neurological Surgery in Columbus, Ohio.

Ruth saw Mary Virginia Camp Smith at the Virginia-North Carolina game in November. Mary Virginia is living in Raleigh and has two little girls.

Kin Carr Baldwin has two children, Bobby, 9, and Stuart, 7. Stuart is another future Briarite. Kin works on the children's theatre in Norfolk which gives two plays a year, belongs to a neighborhood garden club and spends a lot of time driving the children to their various activities.

Carrie Young Gilchrist also has two children—Peter III, aged ten and Marshall, 7. She is finishing up two years as President of the P.T.A. of the boys' school and is also a Cub Scout Den mother. In addition to that she is taking a course in "The World's Great Literature" at her local college.

Ruth wrote a note to Mary Knouff Ghesquiere at the Naval Air Station, Kaneohe, T. H., which was the only address we had. The note was returned with the notation that the addressee had moved and left no forwarding address. Can anyone help us out with that?

Marylina Stokes Fulton has moved to Oquaka, Illinois. While she was still in Iowa City, Polly Rich visited her for a few days. Marylina was a librarian at Peoria and Rock Island, Illinois. She married Jim during the war and they have two children, Anne, who is three and a redhead, and Tommy, almost 18 months old. Last summer they had a marvelous three-weeks vacation on Puget Sound. They expect to stay in Oquaka because Jim has a law practice there.

Polly Rich has transferred to the Department of Medical Affairs at Yale. She neglected to tell us in what capacity.

Willietta Thompson Scofield has a third son, born this summer. His name is Bruce and the other two are Rolfe, 3, and Tommy, almost 6.

Capel Grimes Gurlach has two girls, Russell 7, and Lucia 4. They have been living on the Yard in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, since August. Before that they spent 18 months on Guam and I gather from Capel's description that it was rather unattractive.

We have found one of the two missing classmates. Arnold Susong Jones is living in Greeneville, Tennessee, and the address is Box 108. I understand that she is running her mother's newspaper there. Just before I started typing this today, the mail arrived with the following cute announcement:

GREGG KING JONES came to live with JOHN M. and ARNE JOHN and ALEX December 18, 1949

I am so glad it came in time for this issue.

The Lynchburg, Amherst and Bedford alumnae chapters had a joint luncheon on Sweet Briar Day and enjoyed having Miss Lucas with ns.

Ruth and I are trying to contact those we haven't heard from in some time. We will send out some cards each time, but please don't wait to get one. Let us hear from you and tell us anything you may know about any other classmates.

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 1906 Dewey, Bartlesville, Oklahoma,

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Isabel Olmstead Haynes has moved into her new home and says it's wonderful or will be when the well driller finishes and they have water. What with the eastern shortage, he's liable to be digging for quite a spell! She reports that Nat Hopkins Griggs has a new son.

Lee Hall Cramer is busy with her usual round of work. Her Kathie is "a little giant—very toothless at 6 years of age."

Fricky Charles Straub has a new station wagon of which she is most proud. She keeps busy running after her 3-year-old son while her daughter, 7, is of course in school.

Polly Lambeth Blackwell saw Gerry Fraser Griffith in October when the latter visited Polly and Peggy Hite Palmer—first time in almost 15 years! Polly saw lots of Briarites at the Carolina football games, Dolly Nicholson Tate and Julie HalliBurton Burnett among them. She is very busy as secretary of the local Junior League and with church work and her children.

Maggie MacRae Jackson and her marine husband are now stationed at Parris Island. They came east and are now living in a trailer which sounds elegant—complete even to shower, hot water, double sink, refrigerator and fourburner stove! She says it took them two weeks to make the trip but they could sleep in their own bed every night!

Frances Johnson Finley sees Lolly Redfern Ferguson at the Junior League Thrift Shop where they both work. She says Jesse Rose Harvin and family are moving to Norfolk soon. Anne Lauman Bussey received an early Christmas gift—Don, Jr., born on Halloween. With two babies to care for (daughter Carter is just 20 months old) she's running in circles—and loves it.

Peg Cruiksbank Dyer is also "baby busy" with Timothy—a 10½ months old redhead. Her girls are both in school. She works for the Garden Club and the Junior Service League. Peter Dyer Sorensen visited Becky Douglass Mapp but Peg doesn't say whether she took her three along to play with Becky's three—that would be a houseful!

Dot Prout Gorsuch has finally moved into her new home. She and Bob deserve a world of credit for the work they put in on it.

Maggie Cornwell Schmidt took advantage of Ruthie's being in kindergarten and went to business school. She hopes for a part-time job soon. She had a short trip east to visit her sister in Lexington, Massachusetts, and saw Macky Fuller Kellogg and Barbara Ferguson Lincoln.

May Weston Thompson has a third son, Paul, born October 29.

Janet Bogue Trimble's one child is in school.

Vera Searcy McGonigle had a grand vacation in October at Port Aransas. Since then she's been busy re-papering and painting her house and scouting Abilene for Alice Benet's "Gro-Tall Dress" described in the News. She says it'd be just the thing for her "stringbean three-year-old."

Wes Ward Francis is still our "Madam Chairman"—in the throes of producing a 13-week series of Junior League TV programs for WCAU, based on the human interest behind welfare, cultural and civic activities in Philadelphia. She's also Chairman of the Professional Children's Theatre. Her one son is four and she wishes he would stay that age always.

After many a year I had a nice letter from Judy Fox Smyth, written while convalescing after her third child, a daughter. The month prior to that happy event she and her other two children spent recovering from mumps.

Barbara Munn Green and family have moved into a big (13 rooms) house in Kenilworth with lots of yard and playroom space for her three daughters.

Sally Kirkpatrick Fearing also wrote of her three—that seems to be the magic number for '37! Sue Speed is 11, Joe 7, and Anne 4. Thanks to a Polish DP who has taken over the running of her house, she and Jack are planning a week's vacation in New York—"just we two."

Sue Mattheus Powell spent a great deal of the summer in New Orleans with her mother who was ill. While there she had dinner with Kay Eshleman Maginnis and sat up till after midnight talking of old times—a sign of age, she insists, but I wish I'd been in on it. Sue's oldest, Bobby, started kindergarten this fall.

Thanks to all of you who sent Christmas cards—I love getting them.

I'm afraid most of the news I have to report concerns us Nickersons, since we have just moved to the above address in the last month. And I think all will agree that December 1st is a busy time to move! However, we are very happy to be settled, and simply love our new place. Our little house-in-the woods was getting jammed in with veterans' bungalows and we had it on the market a long time, but when the move came it was sudden. Now we are settled in a 75-year-old house with an acre and a half above water and the same amount (so I'm told) under water in the cove alongside us leading out into the Navesink River-all this down along the Jersey shore. We were beginning to outgrow our other house, and it is as much a joy to me to have four bedrooms and plenty of space around me as it is for Charley not to have to face an hour's drive coming and going each summer week-end to fish! I have even taken on a new Bendix and become my own washwoman, so you can see just how domesticated I am. Peter Dyer Sorensen, Peggy Cruiksbank Dyer and Dotty Prout Garsuch are all down in this neighborhood, and I have already seen Petie. Anyway, we feel very permanently and happily settled.

We did go through one month at mother's in Cranford while waiting to get in, and during that month I was lucky enough to see Rilma Wilson Allen and Dolly Nicholson Tate in New York for lunch. They were two of the 20,000 in town to see the North Carolina-Notre Dame game. We had only a short time together, but they both looked grand and it was wonderful to catch up a little bit. And speaking of North Carolina, I noice I have a card here from Shirley Haywood Alexander saying that she had run into a few S. B. girls at Chapel Hill games in the fall, as well as at the beach in the summer. She had just moved into a new house they built in November and had the painters in the living room as she wrote. Her boy Tommy is 10, and is in the fourth grade.

Anne Walker Newton sent me along a card to say that they love living in Fairfax, even though they miss Richmond. She reports that they really have a house full since their third, Julia Benedict, born last May.

Denise duPont Zapffe sent me word that her last child was a little girl, Parlotta Karen, now over one—so she has three girls and a boy. Despite her four, she works one day a week down at the University Hospital in Baltimore as a Nurse's Aid. She and her family spent last summer in Minnesota on Gull Lake.

I also notice that 1 have to report what must seem like ancient news to Macky Fuller Kellogg—a little boy, Stephen Brewster Kellogg, born in August—giving her two boys and a girl for family.

That seems to be all my news for now for you. I had Christmas cards from the regular group, but none of them had notes to pass on to you. Maybe I'll have a fuller column next time.

Class Secretary: BETSY DURHAM (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.) 32 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Fund Agent: Leila Bond (Mrs. Joseph S. Preston) 168 Madison Road, Scarsdale, New York.

At this writing 1949 is definitely fini, and we are well on our way into the second half of the Twentieth Century. There is lots of news of us, appropriately exciting, and we will start off with none other than the engagement and December wedding of Lottie Lewis! It took place in Durham on the 17th at St. Phillips Church, and now she is Mrs. Charles T. Woolen, Jr. Congratulations are in order, and all best wishes for a happy half century.

Other new names to remember are Sandra and Balfour. They are younger, however. Miss Sandra Williams arrived just before Thanksgiving, which gives Eleanor Classin Williams four children, with the oldest being a boy. Jean Oliver Sartor's son, Ryan Balfour Sartor, is quite grown-up, since he was born last October 11. Incidentally Tommy Williams and Alton Sartor are pretty proud of their respective children, too.

I love Christmas cards with childrens' photographs and could easily see how much Ruth Harman Keiser's children had grown since last Christmas. Mac is now 21/2 and Judy is 4, both very blonde and apparently very friendly. Ruth writes that she and Art visited in New Jersey and saw Dusty Rhodes Salmon and her four children, who were all blooming. She also saw Miss Buckham last summer and caught up with a lot of goingson. In November she joined Helen Davis, who has been teaching Physical Education at Dwight School in Englewood, New Jersey, since the war, and they took in the Southeast Hockey Tournament in Plainfield. Dusty was there and Lou Lembeck Reydel, and they were very pleased to see the Virginia team play so well. The Keisers have visited Boot Vanderbilt Brown and her husband in Williamstown, Massachusetts. Boot has three children, and they are crazy about their new home town.

Young Brooke and Gracey graced the Stoddards' Christmas card, both of them sitting in what appears to be a lovely old-fashioned crib. Don't misunderstand! These are the children and not Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard (nee Luckett). Gracey says living in Columbus is "very much like back home." In fact they all spent their Christmas in Louisville and will be there for a few months while Brooke, Sr., has some work to attend to.

A pretty card from Anne Benedict Swain and Ned tells me that Anne sees practically half of our class (my figures) in Philadelphia. She sees often Ellie George Frampton, Mary Mackintosh Sherer and Doxie Dingman Cobb even if they do live a few miles apart.

Virginia Wellford Farwell has an excellent article in the January issue of the Junior League magazine. It is titled Trojan Horse, and it is an eye opener on what can be done with the old-fashioned thrift shop. Miss Sanford will be delighted with the name.

The Sweet Briar History professor was the speaker at the Christmas luncheon in Boston, and she had us spellbound. The most exciting of all her news was that in March there will be the inauguration of a Phi Beta Chapter at the college. The luncheon was great fun, and I drove in with Susan Gibson Davenport whose husband is the rector of our church in Salem, Massachusetts. He will be the visiting minister at Sweet Briar on February 19.

No more news for now, but remember to drop me a line . . .

Class Secretary: NIDA TOMLIN (Mrs. Robert C. Watts, Jr.), 2837 Sheringham Place, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.) 765 Valley Street, Orange, New Jersey.

It must be a good New Year's omen for our class that we have gone from "rags to riches" in regard to material for this column. Your post card responses were wonderful, except that I'm paralyzed at the prospect of trying to organize so many "bits" into a coherent report. First of all, please don't be insulted if you sent a card and there is no mention of it this time. Your cards arrived with the Christmas mail and I've checked all high, dark and locked places, but am still afraid that some of them have escaped, at least temporarily.

Maria Bnrroughs Livingston is "Queen of the Mothers," for the time being, with her count up to four due to Catherine who appeared September 13. Phoopy has been pretty smart about this whole deal as she has two boys and two girls all of whom look robust and attractive from their pictures.

Eleanor Bosworth Spitler's son, David Kirk, Jr., was born on October 21. Before this great event, Eleanor was in Michigan to visit Margaret Dowell Cochran.

Stuart Hensley Woodward and her husband who have been stationed at West Point for two years had a son, Charles Hensley, born there on September 2. Stuart's pretty lucky, because she can probably make a good baby sitter out of her daughter.

Ann Dawson Highsmith's child, Margaret, was born September 21.

Jane Hopkins Hanes' third child, second daughter, arrived in October.

Mary Kent Brown greeted her sister, Maria Barret in June. Their mother, Olivia Davis Brown is still alive and even has time to be on the Board of the League of Women Voters and makes speeches for said organization, although she says that she has not taken to the soap box yet! Olivia also does Junior League work and has become a square dancing addict.

Arline Simmen MacArthur's son, Brian Henry, was born July 25. His brother, Bruce, started to school this fall and Arline says that he is developing into quite a student.

On September 13, in the words of their clever card, there was "issued to Ellie (Snow) and Tat Lea, a new model daughter, Deborah Ellis."

Clara Sasscer Chandler's son is two and a half years old, but he belongs in this paragraph as I don't believe he has had proper S. B. notice to date. Clara is living in Cleveland and enjoys the alumnae and their meetings very much. She admits that she has never won a car or a television set!

At last our members in the west were given enough time to answer. Marion Phinizy Jones reports that she sees Coralie Kahn Ferro, her boy Hulse and daughter Nancy and the two wonderful redheaded Daley boys, sons of Jackie Sexton Daley as often as possible.

Barbara Godfrey is now in Los Angeles working toward her doctorate in Education at U. C. L. A. She was at Smith College for three years and got a Master's degree in Physical Education. Barbara seems happy as a school teacher and thinks that teaching is a wonderful profession.

Irene Vongehr Vincent's card has giveo me a bad case of the wanderlust, at least to go as far as Amherst, Virginia! Irene's note is so interesting and sounds so distant from the well-known Bendix atmosphere that a full quote is in order. "I arrived from China last September with my husband and three daughters, the last of whom was born July 30 in northwest China. We flew out just before the area fell to the Communists. Before that we were two years in Peiping, We left there about four months after it was taken over by the Communists. I heard from Dr. Helen Taylor who is in Anking with her father working in the Russian hospital. They are short of funds and supplies but otherwise not apparently burdened in their work by the Communists. At present, we're in a borrowed house known locally (California) as the 'Castle'—a lovely view but few conveniences."

The pattern of this may not be apparent yet, but the plan was to cover all birth announcements then to make some sort of a geographical roundup beginning with the west and ending right here at Sweet Briar where it is hoped that you all will be in June for our big tenth reunion. And now to carry on with the news of our friends who are scattered over the country from Los Angeles to the New York area.

Ann Sims is still at the Pine Tree Shop in Fort Smith, Arkansas. Her time is more than taken up with work there, visiting, cooking, baby sitting and club meetings. Ann reports that Sara Mayo Sohn is still in Cambridge. Her husband is publishing a book on World Law early in 1950. Sarah says that Janetta Smith and Jane Furniss Simpson have seen each other in Japan. Ann intends to call on Ruth Beach Robinson at her new house at 5219 P Street in Little Rock.

Connie Cleary is now Mrs. Lloyd G. Foster of Ponca City, Oklahoma. Her husband is in the Industrial Engineering Department for Continental Oil Company. Connie was dehalted to have found a house instead of an apartment. The Fosters have a lot too and hope to build there soon.

Janet Runkle Wells has moved back to Columbus, Ohio. She has heard from Benadine Newby who is teaching several history courses at a girl's school in Denver.

Parge Woods Gillette writes from Detroit that they are on the verge of buying seven acres in rural Rochester as their present locale turned into a subdivision on them.

C. P. Neel Mahoney loves Memphis and says that George is doing fine in his architectural firm and that young George finds kindergarten to his liking.

Lois Fernley McNeil and Reba Smith Gromel made me turn two different shades of green. Both expect to spend several weeks in Florida. However, both of them must deserve a good vacation. Reba had had a winter of colds, A.A.U.W., church activities, P.T.A. and lots of entertaining.

Blair Bunting Both will be a widow for about six months while Dick goes on a foreign business trip.

Peggy Caperton Ranken is still in Seaford, Delaware, and sent a wonderfol picture of herself, Miss Tucker Ranken and Bill.

Nickie Gockley McLellan says that her life has slowed down to a normal pace with both Peter and Robin in school. Nickie is active in the Freeport Little Theatre Group and the P.T.A.

Nan Dickie Neil's son Billy is in first grade and they have found their dream house in Ridgewood, New Jersey.

A perfectly beautiful Christmas eard picture of their house came from Helen Cornwell Jones. Helen is in Lexington, Massachusetts, and has three hoys, Danny, "an exhuberant first grader, Jonathan is a four-year-old cowboy, Larry is a thumbsucking angel." Helen had a large S. B. dinner party when her sister Margaret visited her this fall.

Olive May Whittington, Mrs. Louis W., Elrich in private life, has a commission in the Regular Navy and is now doing Congressional information work for the Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

From Alexandria, Virginia, Clare MacRae Causey says that she continues to lead the life domestic and has with many doubts brought a new sewing machine which she regards with mixed feelings. You can say that again, Clara! I'm in the throes of a violent affair with a Singer. It is close between hatred and fascination for the machine on my part.

Also from Alexandria is Jinny Allison Haywood who has two sons, Huber, and Bobby. Jinny says that she sees Betty Brown-Serman MacRae at the grocery store and caught a glimpse of Betty Lee Kopper recently. Jinny plans a trip home to Richmond soon. All of which leads us to that grand place where so many of our class lived or have moved there.

Ann Adamson Taylor spent Christmas with her family in Richmond. Young Sally and husband Bob are both fine too.

I saw Jane Goolrick Murrell and Mary Petty Johnston Bedell and their respective sons and attractive houses, I missed seeing Emory Gill Williams and Carrington Laneaster Pasco. Carry and her three sons spent Christmas with the Lancasters in Farnville.

Margaret Dowell Cochran visited Polly Boze Glascock recently in Richmond. They went to S. B. and enjoyed chatting with Miss Lucas, Terry Shaw and Dr. Mull.

Mildred Moon Montague is eagerly looking forward to a visit from Polly in January. Mildred was head of the advanced gifts for the Women's Division of the Community Chest in Chattanooga and made their quota.

Eve Williams Turnbull of Shadwell is in close contact with the Richmond group,

I was so grateful to Cynthia Noland Young for doing such a splendid job on this "colyum" for the fall ALUMNAE NEWS. I know that you all enjoyed the change and appreciated her efforts too. I just invested heavily in the double post cards that most of you received and will continue doing this as long as they last or at least until June when you can elect someone else. At the moment, my maid and good friend loves to write out your cards! Cynthia has some marvelous suggestions for making our Tenth Reunion a gay affair. I'm sure that it is obvious to all of you that our Tenth Reunion is a significant milestone in our lives. A class reunion can be a gummy sad affair. A successful reunion depends on the effort on the part of all class members to return to their college. Many of us have small children and it will require a lot of careful planning in advance for you to make the trip. Be prepared for broken bones, measles, etc., that might develop the day you're supposed to leave. I realize that all of that is easy for me to say because of my proximity to Sweet Briar, but please do your very best to be here in June.

Betty Frantz Roberts and I attended the Sweet Briar December luncheon meeting. Our local club had the great privilege of hearing Miss Lucas speak. She looked stunning and her informal speech was most stimulating. We not only had Miss Lucas, but Miss M. Dee Long too, So you can see that the Lynchburg alumnae were indeed fortunate,

The last card just this minute came from Aleise McMinn Young in Watertown, Connecticut. Her husband is with Scovill Manufacturing Company. Aleise has three boys ranging in age from one to five.

Our old pal, Frances Moses Turner, has been stricken with back trouble and has been in the hospital but is now back at home, Although she is still in bed, she is making progress and will snon be well enough to carry on her numerous big jobs such as Junior League Education Chairman, head of her church circle and board member of the Florence Crittenden. Frances and I get a big belt out of the mutual admiration society that our little boys have developed.

During a telephone conversation with Agnes Spencer Borke, she mentioned that she had talked with Mary Miller Naquin who was passing through Washington.

I'm sure that I have left out many details in this report but will make up the omissions next time and dream up still another reunion pep talk. I'm not trying to compete with the campus, but my bean is alerted already to serve you all a dish of tea whenever it can be worked into the S. B. schedule.

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 2719 Hampshire Avenue, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Elizabeth Doucett (Mrs. John E. Neill) 1177 California Road, Tuckahoe 7, New York.

My personal thanks for all the letters and notes I've received lately; they do help the column enormously.

I seem to have been very remiss in sending along news of the arrival of wee ones. The room at the end of second floor Gray hit the jackpot in 1949, all boys, too.

Mimi Worthington Foster had young Wheeler; Franny Baldwin Whitaker had young Martin Baldwin; Shirley Derine Clemens, John, Jr.; Eunie Foss Sneed, John, Jr. The one little lady I'm sure of is Debby Jane, who joined Pat Sorensen Ackard on November 30.

Edie Vongehr Bridges wrote me early this winter, so the west coast would have some publicity. She has seen Jackie Sexton Daley, and Anna Shunn Lennard lives right in Palo Alto near Edie. Her sister, Irene, husband, and three daughters returned from China in September after their two year's stay in Peiping and Kansu Province. They were in Peiping three months after it was "liberated" by communists, so could give first-hand information about conditions there. Edie's two children are now 334, Steve and Mary Chris, 14 months. She wrote Mary Ann Somervell Brenza and husband Bill have built a home in Miami, Florida, and her little girl Ann started to school this fall.

A picture of Shirts and Dick Daniel's house appeared on their Christmas card and a beautiful old house it is, complete with what appears to be two front doors. She saw Tookie Kniskern White while she was home from Hawaii. Mary Mackintosh Sherer and Doxie Dingman Cobb both live near her, so she is well surrounded by Briarites. Shirts claims Dickey, now 20 months, is really an active gent and keeps her stepping.

Anita Loving Lewis has been well discovered by me through a grand Christmas note. After three years in Washington Bill was sent to Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Alabama. Then in August they reported to Texas A&M and Bill is an instructor in the ROTC unit there. They are settled in a darling house, newly redecorated and are set for three more years. Her only grim comment was—no Sweet Briar news since leaving Chee-Chee and Duggins in Washington.

Lillian Breedlove White wrote that her sister-in-law, Mary Erskine, had moved to Washington and is with the State Department and loves it.

Betsy Tower Bennett's young Randy made a cute Christmas picture. He's a fat and happy fellow and definitely resembles his mother.

We are again moving in, in fact, I stole time out from packing today to get this off. This time should be the last time for quite a few years, and the guest room will always be in preparation for visitors. Class Secretary: ANN HAUSLEIN (Mrs. Thomas Potterfield) Broadwater Apartments, R.F.D. No. 2, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent; VIRGINIA BEASLEY (Mrs. Richard Holzer) 1312 E. Main Street, Lancaster, Ohio.

Another year has rolled around, we grow older, the next generation grows larger, we move and change, and, I hope, progress, and all of us keep turning back to our Sweet Briar days and friends.

Virginia Beasley Holzer asked me to thank everyone for the wonderful cooperation she received in working on the Alumnae Fund—adding, of course, that there is still time and need for your contribution. Guess you all noticed that Beasle took over the job as Fund Agent; our thanks go particularly to her.

Before plunging into new news, I have a couple of errors to rectify. To Di Greene Helfrich my apologies for calling her son David, Daniel, and to Ruthie Hensley Camblos apologies—Josh is at Lahey Clinic in Boston (not Lakey). Speaking of Ruthie, she was chairman of Sweet Briar Day in Boston this year.

Peter Botsford, Cynthia Abbot's son, had 20 stitches in his arm after putting it through a windowpane.

Jeanne Sawyer Faggi sent me a terrifically appealing letter seeking my contribution, and she added a personal note. Jeanne is completely satisfied with her lot—the scholastic life—and is taking a course in American Literature just to keep abreast of her husband's interests. Not busy enough with five-year-old Johnny, Jeanne is scribbling on children's books, and is doing illustrations and water colors. The Faggi dream? To spend next year in Italy where John can write his thesis and Jeanne can "commune with the ancients."

Before I leave Shanks Village, New York, let me tell all of you that Daphne Withington Adams has joined the Faggis in that community. Daph would love to see anyone at 18 East Greywood Avenue, Orangeburg, New York.

An amazing thing happened to me this Christmas. I heard from Virginia Duggins, no startling news except that she has emerged from silence and is with us once more.

Too late for the last issue came a card from Nancy Goldbarth Glaser announcing the arrival of their second daughter, Nancy Ward, on May 4. Beth is 4½. Milton opened a redecorators shop and architects office in Richmond.

Many of you sent me Christmas greetings with just a hello, much appreciated by me. Thanks. Jane Taylor Lowell did say she'd been seeing a bit of Jeanne Buzby Runkle. I saw Jane at Sweet Briar Day—she looks just as young as ever. Joanne Oberkirch Willis, at long last, answered my plea for news. The Willis' have a daughter, Karen, 1½2. Their summers are spent swimming and sailing in the middle of Long Island Sound. Karen did some modeling for Montgomery Ward.

Margaret Leonard Baker is moving to Cleveland, Ohio. She has been advertising manager of the Junior League Monthly magazine, "Topics," serves on the Volunteer Placement Committee, and works in the League Deaf School.

Any misinformation about Frannie Boynton Drake can be blamed on the fact that her handwriting is the same as ever. Sandy is now in the first grade—can you believe it—and Eleanor is 4. Swede has visited the Drakes and Frannie planned to spend Christmas in St. Paul.

Big News! Sally (Butch) Jackson is married. That is all I know, but would love the details so I can pass them on. The wedding was shortly before Christmas.

Another silent partner from whom I finally successfully begged news is Sally Schall Van Allen. Sally wrote that she sees Dong Woods Sprunt in Junior League work and that she is working for Beasle on the Alumnae Fund.

Susanne Hogue Deas and Betsy Gilmer Tremaine are both agog about their houses which they're building. Betsy and Mike moved into their Farmington home on April 1st. Susanne and Hap have just started building.

The Sanfords did not build, but Helen and family are living in a new house.

Anne Barrett George and family have also moved into a new home in Austin, Texas. The Georges spent the fall square-dancing and at football games, and coping with son, daughter and German Shepherd dog.

Debbie Wood Davis, Bill and the children, spent October in Europe. Deb liked Portugal best. Unfortunately she picked up a slight bug while there, the children got it, too, and they've had quite a time getting well again.

In August Edna Syska Peltier and Paul spent a week in the Berkshires, then Eddie stayed in Bronxville for a month while Paul traveled. Eddie raves about son, Peter.

Mighty good to hear from Caro Qninn Foster again. Her son, Michael, had a miraculous operation performed to save his foot. It was wired together and put in a cast, only a slight scar remains. Julie is now 7. We '42ers are getting old!

Finally, I want to apologize to New Mexico and Nevada. Ruth Jacquot Tempest informs me that neither state was mentioned as a Fund contributor—an oversight that must certainly be remedied. Congratulations, Ruth. Mark was born September 25.

After sitting in Brooklyn, when I got to Wynnewood I went wild—by wild I mean I joined an amateur theatrical group and pitched in up to my neck. I did all the props (hundreds) on the first show, and produced the second. I did a bit with S. B. local activities, went to night school to hear Duncan Spaeth lecture on "Poets of the Romantic Revival," tried to keep in touch with all of you (please reciprocate) and tend our two daughters. Now life will quiet down again. Yes, once more we have moved, this time out in the country in an apartment in a converted farmhouse. Tom has 18 months to go, then to practice and a house!

Several people wrote to me but their news will have to wait for future editions.

One thing certain, we've none of us got "Debutante Blues" and we've given up "Just Looking Thanks." We're either "dressing a shop window," or we've "forsaken all others." Thanks a million for your many greetings.

You dogs! Not a single card returned. I suppose you can alibi that you didn't know my address—but no more (see above). If it weren't for a few "orange blossom specials" at my wedding time, and Christmas cards, I would have zero to report except that the knot did get tied on schedule and I am now doing my dusting, ironing, toast-burning, etc., in Utica, New York, which we find a very pleasant and friendly town with abominable weather. Christmas shopping and getting settled in a strange town on top of thank-younoting has kept me much busier than I had anticipated so perhaps I should be glad I am not deluged with news.

Strangely enough my fullest data comes from our friends in far-away places . . Hawaii, Germany, and Guantanamo. "Tookie" Kniskern White, reversing procedures it seems to me, left Hawaii to vacation in the U.S. During her visit she saw Beth Dichman Smith (whom she classifies as an excellent chef even if she does get sick on her own cooking), Anne Woods Guzzardi, and Sweet Briar. Also while in Washington she found out from Mrs. Lee that Mary Belle and Fred had gone to Boston-how permanently, unknown. Apparently Tookie rushed around so here she was looking forward to a comparatively restful time back home amidst the confusion of three sons and all their friends who overrun the house. At least the "pitty-pat" of little clodhoppers couldn't be as bad as here, for Tookie reports that there are very few occasions for which shoes are necessary-even school.

I was surprised to find Elizabeth Munce on the move again and having the time of her life seeing Europe. She went over in September and is in Nurnberg, Germany, working with Army Special Services. She said she hopes to get to Paris and see Beanie soon.

A felicitating epistle from Marjorie Shugart Dennehy also brought a lovely account of life in Guantanamo, where "everything from silk hose to sugar bowl is kept in the icebox because of monstrous ants, roaches, scorpinns, iguanas, etc." I don't know about those ignanas but I must say I wouldn't like any of the others in either my bedroom slipper OR my hamburger. But the place seems to have plenty of compensations. We not only get the travelogue description of tropical beauty-the azure sky and water, lovely greenery surrounded by mountains treatment-but the life there is both luxurious and cheap-a combination which is very scarce anywhere near yours truly. Three-fourths of their time seems to be allotted to either siestas or cocktails, but Shug manages to fit in golf, swimming, bridge, bowling and fishing quite regularly. All this because their "very lovely, spacious quarters come equipped with a marvelous cook-maid" Shug says that it is ridiculous to be so free on such an island, but she plans to take advantage of it by going on sightseeing trips to Jamaica, Santiago, and Port Au Prince.

Others recently on the move are Snookie Campbell Shearer and Onija Adams Bush, both of whom are back in "God's Country"—where else but Kentucky and Texas respectively? Snookie and Logan had to miss my wedding they were so busy getting themselves back to the old country "to stay to the end of time," and when THEY miss a Baltimore party you KNOW it's important.

Meanwhile Ouija seems just as delighted to be settled in a nice apartment in Dallas, where she has seen Dot Long Cousins, now living there, and Mary Love Ferguson Sanders who is in Corsicana.

Other less drastic moves involve both Karen Norris Sibley and Beth Dichman Smith. Karen says they have had no new babies since Jack who is one, but they do have a new pale green house which they like very much. And Beth started off the new year with a new address, Deep Dale Road, Strafford, Pennsylvania, in a "real barn, slightly remodeled." She seemed joyous at the prospect.

Tidbits from Sandy Packard Hubhard include the news that Frances Gregg Petersmeyer and Tish Ord Elliott and families are both fine although they have been through the usual winter germ siege. She had seen Val Jones Materne, talked to Posy Hazard Potter and received "a most delirious letter from Johnnie" (Charlotte Johnson Barrett) "saying they had just adopted a baby boy who looks just like her Bill." I was sorry to hear from Sandy, too, that Nancy Bickelhaupt Harris was very sick in the fall. However, she is much better and at home now, being waited upon by her four men.

I often see Edge Cardamone O'Donnell here in Utica, and perhaps when I get oriented shall attempt in some small way to emulate her participation in civic activities. She is particularly active in the Junior League and recently very successfully took part in their Follies.

That's all except a nifty '50 to you all!

Class Secretary: Lula Sadowsky (Mrs. Terence Anderson) 133 E. 80th Street, New York, New York, SNOOKIE Woods WILLIAMSON assisted in composing this class letter.

Fund Agent: ELLEN B. DUVAL, 3211 Grove Avenue, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Snookie Woods Williamson and I are spending the day together and decided this was the ideal time to jot off a few words to all of you. By putting our heads together we may be able to gather a little news from hither and thither.

First and foremost—Thank you, thank you, thank you for the very newsy letters and Christmas cards you sent me. It makes news gathering a treat! I'm sure those of you who wrote me won't mind if I share some of it.

Anita Lippitt Clay is living in Washington, D. C., with son Stuart and husband . . . "in August on the fifth hole of the golf course at Linville, N. C., looked up in the middle of a swing and saw Anne Mitchell Betty. We were both so surprised we just ignored each other until we met again later on."

I'm just sort of picking at random from E. B. Duval's nice letter—most important and orchids for everybody, "the class of '44 tied for first place in number of contributions (to the Alumnae Fund) and was first in amount contributed!" "Betty Williams Meyer and husband are back in Richmond to live after a sojourn in New Mexico . . " "Hoppy Woodard is here too . . . doing something at the Medical College." E. B. visited Ginny Hull Teipel in August, full of raves about her new daughter Dorothea Potter and cute house. "Hannah Mallory Perkins called . . . she is still living in Warsaw . . . her daughter Ann Brooke is over a year old now."

It was nice hearing from Phyllis Tenney Dowd after so long. I wish you all could read it in its entirety, but I'm afraid our space is limited. She is very happy and married to Herbert Dowd (whom all who met adored). They are living in Cleveland "where Herb is teaching in the liberal arts end of Case Institute of Technology" with Phyllis' little daughter Mary Adams . . "fine, blonde, and when she's good she's very, very sweet."

Susic Landis Holverson and her husband, Bertram, are building a wonderfully modern sounding house in Neenah, Wisconsin. We are sorry to hear of the death of her baby, Cindy, last May.

From Anita, I hear Ann Woods Guzzardi is living in Washington, D. C., and working in a dress shop with Dougie Woods Sprunt.

Snookie has "just been accepted into the elite group in Long-Grove, Illinois, by virtue of my 'Good White Wash.' Rush is a Systems Research Specialist with Ditto, Inc. Son Rushton (16 months) is a little hellion, so my life is devoted to keeping him from completely annihilating the house and himself. We have dispossessed the cows and are living in a barn, slightly converted. I teach Sunday School and we are permanent fixtures at the Barrington Square Dancing (toujours the arabesque!) group and the Long Grove Group (name The Fortnightly). In case any one wants to get in touch with me-phone exchange is Libertyville, post office is Prairie View and I live in Long Grove (figure that out!!) Saw Barbara Duncombe Lang for lunch last week, looking very stylish with a very new look coiffure. She is living with her family while they are building (in Winnetka). Her daughter, Mary Stuart, is about 3 months old now, and gave her parents a wild midnight ride to the hospital for a safety pin X-ray one night last week. P. S. No pin in tummy.

"Ricky Rickards Bowden writes she is doing art work and furniture designing for Holbrook Co. (Custom built modern furniture). If anyone wants special revolving leopard skin television chairs, write Ricky! Somehow she manages to keep on housekeeping and even fits in an occasional trip to foreign shores. She, Sidney, Phyllis Anderson and Ray Thompson all went to Jamaica in November, and got caught in a squall while deep sea fishing in a native canoe!"

I am writing this from Chicago where my husband and I are spending a few weeks. He is stage manager for "Aune of the Thousand Days," and we have been touring the northeast with the show, and this is the end of the itinerary. We were married right after the last issue of the News. Miracle of miracles, we have an apartment in New York which we are looking forward to getting back to. I am turning my dining room into a studio and shall continue to work (Art Directors, please note!)

BRIEFLY NOTED . . . Sterling Nettles Murray has moved to Cincinnati with Bob Winifred aged 5, and Charles Vance (Tad or Pete for short) born, May 15.

Waverly, Ohio, for son Michael and new daughter born in September.

Jane Williams Wann presents Master Wann, 1-year-old.

Dorothy Tobin Ayres is looking for a house in New Jersey.

Louise Konsberg Noll introduces her son, William Taylor, born in July.

Sydney Holmes Bales has an apartment in Bayside, L. I., and more books than the public library, I hear.

Wyline Chapman Saylor sent a most informative letter and although it took several years to hear from her, it was well worth waiting for. She and her husband, Henry, were living in Washington, D. C., for the past few years and it was there that her son, Lee, was born on Labor Day, 1948. In the summer of 1949 they packed their belongings, sold their house, and beaded for Panama. But the Air Force changed their plans and Wyline and Henry ended up in Eglin, Florida.

Julie Mills Jacobson has a cute house in Wesley Heights. Wyline and Henry had supper there with Julie and Jake and Jane Lesh Spurr and husband, Frank, when they all managed to get together a while back. Julie has two children, Johnny, aged three, and a little girl born last June.

Wyline saw Lyn Dillard at the Celebrities Golf Tournament last June where they followed the Bob Hope foursome. Lyn and Lelia Barnes had just returned from several months in Europe. 'Tis said that Lyn is engaged to an attractive Army major. Ruth Longmire Wagner remains on the list of quiet '45ers but once in a while some news of her manages to leak through. She and Willard had their Wagner dividend, redheaded Bill, in August, 1948. Since then, they have bought a house in Honston where Willard, barrister, is digging away in books.

Mary Haskins King had a baby boy, John Haskins King, in August, Hilda Hude Voigt's son, Read, was born in June. Betty Avery Duff and Frank have a little boy. Ginny Decker Dudley had a baby boy, James Nicholas Dudley, Jr., 8 pounds, 10 nunces, on September 19, 1949.

Carol Cox MacKinnon and John have a little boy, Jock. Carol says he is a "merry little fellow."

Jay Skerry Tepe had a baby girl, Elizabeth, last June. Elizabeth and Johnny, now two years old, manage to keep Jay on the move. Jay's address is 2318 W. 14th Street, Wilmington, Delaware.

In New York Ginny Berrier was going to the management school of Macy's recently. Let us know when we can see your name on the glass panel, Ginny.

Elene Essary was headed for Europe last July. Harriet "Pooch" Porcher Barnwell and husband, Bob, were headed for a Jamaican vacation recently leaving daughter, Acton, born October, 1948, with grandma.

Frances Brantly Goodwin and Carl are living in Houston. Frances is "pumping oil" for Gulf and Carl for Monsanto.

Jean Ridler was married December 31, 1949, to Marvin Fahrenbach. "Mo" is a graduate of Yale and received his Ph.D. in Chemistry there also. He works at Calco in the Pharmacentical Research Section. The Fahrenbach's new address is 730 Park Avenue, Plainfield, New Jersey. When Jean was in Washington, D. C., in early summer, she saw Antoinette LeBris Maynard and her daughter. From Jean's and other reports, Antoinette's daughter is a very adorable little towhead.

Ellen Gilliam is going to be married in June or earlier "if things all go exactly as we'd like." The lucky man is Marvin Perry, a University of Virginia English instructor.

Congratulations to Catherine Smart Greer on a really wonderful job on the fall letter for the ALUMNAE NEWS. I'm sure you all enjoyed reading her letter as much as I did. I think she is doubly to be congratulated as she did all the work in the midst of preparations for her wedding. Catherine is now Mrs. Joseph W. Greer, Jr. Louise Crawford Moorefield was matron of honor and Sweet Briar guests included Bev Randolph, Pat Cansler, Sommers Booth Parker and Jeanne Crawford.

Ann Farr was another fall bride. She married John Allen Rothrock, Jr., on October 1. Jane Richardson was one of the bridesmaids. John is a graduate of Northwestern and is in law school at George Washington. They have an apartment in Arlington and Ann writes that she finds housekeeping a full-time job.

Jean Love was married in November to John G. Albert. Bobby Warner and Jane Richardson drove down to North Carolina from Washington with Tib Force in her new convertible for the affair. Jean and Jack flew to Florida for their honeymoon.

1 mile Albert Hanahan's son, Jim, was born August 23. Emily writes that her time is quite taken up with her son and League work.

Fllie Clement Littleton is the proud mother of a new daughter, Mildy Reed Hall also has a new daughter, Ellen McCoy, born June 1. Hlen Thackrav is her godmother.

It's a daughter too for the Morses. Joan Berend Morse's Ann Bramson was born in September.

Eden Taylor Persons celebrated Thanksgiving with the arrival of Henry III. Eden writes that little Eden just adores her brother and considers him her haby.

Helen Murchison Lane has a holiday baby too—a son Edward Wood III, born on Armistice Day. She and Ed are certainly thrilled over their son who weighed 7 lbs., 13 ozs. Murch writes that Florence Olive Taylor married Montgomery John Corse on September 12. Flo is now in the hospital after a serious operation. Such glad news and sad news all in the same paragraph.

Crutcher Fwld Harrison and Johnny vacationed at Estes Park, Colorado, this summer and spent two weeks at Key Largo this winter, Certainly sounds pleasant!

Tody Corcoran Hartzer and Jo have recently forsaken Chicago for Florida, where Jo is with an advertising firm. They found Chicago exciting and a wonderful focal point for seeing people, but are glad to be back in Jacksonville, especially after reading the winter weather reports. On their way down they stopped to see Jessie Strickland Elcock and her family in Atlanta. Tody also had a chance to see Palmour Holmes McIntyre, Betty Haverty Smith, and Bowdre Budd Poer while she was in Atlanta.

I am sorry to write that Rosie Ashby's father died at Thanksgiving. I know you will all wish to join me in extending our sympathy to her.

Bea Dingwell Loos writes that she and Dick are having a very busy wonderful life in Silver Spring, Maryland. Dick is Judge Prettyman's clerk in the U. S. Court of Appeals and Bea is absorbing all sorts of fascinating information about law. She saw Betsy Gurley Hewson and Tommy when they were in Washington in November. The Hensons have just bought a new house in Medfield, Massachusetts, "The Test Tube." Bea also saw Cornelia English Monthan and her two daughters who are just about a year apart. They are now in Florida where George is stationed.

Marguerite Emmert Baldwin writes that her son, John Stiles Baldwin III, is now one year old. Marguerite's husband, Jack, is with the Humble Oil Company, in Baytown, Texas. She often sees Ellen Robbins Red in Houston and saw Bertha Lee Battey when she was in Atlanta in December.

Peg Todd Fanning has moved back to Westchester. She is no longer teaching and enjoys being a lady of leisure.

I would love to compare notes with Bobby

Warner and Tib Force on our trips to Europe this summer. We all can say that we loved Italy and that Florence is one of our favorite cities. Bohby and Tib rode bikes over its cobbled streets and said they felt like natives as they rang their bells at the pedestrians. I had a little more biking as I spent two weeks riding around Brittany. We poked into quaint fishing villages and stopped often to go to the beach. I was pleased to run into Diane King and Ann Ricks on the pier before we sailed and to cross the ocean with them. I saw them again in Paris and heard about their experiences as hostelers. Bobby and Tib ran into Rosie Ashby at Warwick Castle and they had a gay evening in London together.

Tib is back in Athens, Tennessee, working on the bookkeeping system of her father's hospital. Bobby plans to go to Washington and find an interesting job this winter. I am working for the Educational Testing Service in Princeton and celebrated Christmas by coming home and having my appendix out. I feel fine now and am glad to have lost the pesky thing.

In a more cosmopolitan vein, Jane Laurence Houis and her son, Jacques, known as Butch, are back in Columbus for Christmas. Jacques, Sr., hopes to join them to take them back to France.

In a letter from Jennie Keeling to the Alumnae Office, she says: "I've been husy doing many things since I left S. B. C. I've been working on my master's degree at the University of Tennessee and have finished all the required courses, but as yet I haven't written a thesis. This past summer I took a Brownell Tour of Europe and ran into several Sweet Briar alums. Our tour was for two months on which we visited England, Scotland, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Germany, Italy and France. The trip was marvelous and the S. S. Washington on which we crossed was grand fun.

"Here in Knoxville I see Betty Ann Bass frequently as she is working at the U. T. Library and we often get together for coffee and chats. Marilyn Mandle Dick lives here now, too. Ruthie Garrett and Carter Van Deventer are on the same bowling team that I am and so we get together at least once a week."

I attended Anne Seibels' wedding in Birmingham. Anne married Troy Brannan of Brewton, Alabama, on November 10. She was a beautiful bride and I had a wonderful time. I saw a lot of S. B. C. girls. Diane Stobert Sessions of Atlanta gave a lovely luncheon for Anne and I enjoyed seeing her so much during all the wedding festivities. Mary Lib Jones served at the reception. I also saw Margaret Bromberg Williams, Shirley Gunter Ratliff and Joan McCoy. Joan is working for the Birmingham Welcome Wagon and distributes gifts to newcomers to the city.

Saravette Royster, who returned from New York to Raleigh in the early fall, has a grand job as an executive secretary with the American Medical Association here in Raleigh.

Please realize that I cannot read the newspapers of all of your cities, so if you announce your engagement, get married, increase your family, or do anything of interest, be good enough to drop me a letter or post card. Otherwise, I might hear it only via my grapevine, and months later at that.

All of your Christmas cards were so attractive and very much appreciated. Ellenor Stafford's card hore a note saying she was teaching school in New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Margaret Ellen "Birdhead" White's card told of a grand trip she and a friend took in July and August to the west coast. They drove 12,000 miles and were gone seven weeks. She visited LaVonne Wright Lebahn in Sedalia, Missouri, and heard from Laura Lee Grogan Ctane of Ft. Worth, who reports a new baby. Dale Pallow Kirkman has two children now. "Birdhead" is working for the Walton Reporter and enjoys it very much.

Blair Burwell's Christmas card bore no note, but from the clever illustration I gathered Blair was enjoying a confused, hilarious and extremely merry Christmas.

I found a note in my desk which I'm not sure whether I have passed on to you. It's from Ann Webb Moses telling me that she married George Moses of Concord, New Hampshire, on August 20. They are now living in Boston where George is studying for a Master's Degree in teaching. Ann is teaching English at Winsor, a private school in Boston.

I am sorry to be so late with the following exciting news, but word came of it after I had sent in my last letter. Ann Lile was married in July to William D. Bowden and Becky Knapp was married on October 15 to John Herbert in Dayton, Ohio. Suzette Morton was a bridesmaid in Becky's wedding. I do wish I had more details of these weddings as I know they were just lovely.

Betsy Mullen is living on Governors Island in New York. She is planning a trip to Europe in April. I expect to see her in New York next week-end.

Your little Christmas messages were so welcome and are such a help in assembling news for this letter.

Judy Perkins' greeting told me that she's engaged to one Norman Llewellyn of England. She met him while he was attending M. I. T. and she was working in the Registrar's Office at Howard College. They're planning an April wedding, probably in England.

Suzanne Hardy was married to Ira Beaufort at Sea Island, Georgia, in July. Mayde Ludington and Victor Henningsen, Jr., were married in August in Pelham, New York. Martha Sue Skinner and Martha Schmidheiser were among the bridesmaids. Nancy Vaughn, McCall, Carolyn Irvine, Mary Jo Armstrong, Nela Wattley, and I had a grand reunion at the reception. Mary Jo had somehow left Texas long enough to visit New York and

ELEANOR Potts SNODGRASS and wedding party

Washington, but was hurrying back to take some courses at the University of Texas this winter. Nela was about to sail for Europe the following week.

Soon afterwards we received word from Isabel Dzung that she had married a young doctor who is studying neuro-therapy in Montreal.

Eve Godchaux Hirsch wrote that she had recently been up north for Bea Backer's wedding to Charles Simpson of Baltimore. She saw Ginny Holmes and Ann Paxson at the wedding and Jane Shoesmith Newcomb in New York. She also reported that Sylvia Saunders was married to Dr. Davis in December and that Carolyn Rankin had come down for the wedding.

Pris Masten was married December 28 to Tommy Thurber in Madison, Connecticut.

Peggy Sheffield Martin writes, "You ask for news—well, I have the best I can think of. We have a son, born on October 31—a Halloween baby, and have named him Thomas Everett Martin III. He is really awfully cute, and looks very much like a little boy." We'd all like to see him! Peggy adds, "Since moving to Philadelphia in September I've run into quite a few Sweet Briarites. Seen most of Betty Ann Jackson, and Jane Leach Cromwell."

Kax Berthier writes that she is doing a little amateur theater work in Monterrey. Vicki Brock is living in New York with Meon and attending classes at the New York School of Social Work. She has been placed in medical social work at the Jewish Hospital in Brooklyn.

Nancy Moss Steptoe has a secretarial position with the State Department in Washington, D. C.

Elisabeth White is a secretary with the American Cyanamid Corporation in New York,

Early in December Diane King came through Washington on her way home from six months in Europe. She and Ricky had bicycled over Europe this summer and finally wound up in Paris. There they met Nancy Vaughn and McCall who were spending a couple months in England and France—Louise Day joined McCall, who decided to remain a little longer.

Nancy expects to rejoin me soon in Washington where we will both be delighted to house any and all of you who may happen through there. Please don't forget to keep me supplied with news.

Class Secretary: KATHARINE HART, 1836 W. Grace Street, Richmond, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ALICE TROUT, 1301 Franklin Road, Roanoke, Virginia.

New additions to the class of '49 include Kay Bryan Taylor's son, Ray, Jr., born last July and Lindsay Coon Robinson's daughter, Lindsay Craig, born on September 24. Lindsay is now living in Philadelphia.

This fall brought forth a new crop of '49 brides. On September 17 Emily Pruitt married Saunders Jones in Atlanta. On hand were Mimi Powell, Frances Pope, and Carolyn Cannaly Evans. Joseph Pingitore at Fort Riley, Kansas. They are now living in Louisville.

Preston Hodges, Steve Stevens, Sue Corning, Lizzy Hancock, Nancy Houriet, Bunny Barnett, Ann Henderson, Larry Lawrence, and Mary Virginia Grigsby were all present. Patsy and Sandy are living in Conneaut, Ohio, now. In Webster Groves, Missouri, Alice Dahm was married to Morton McN. Prentis. On hand as bridesmaids were Betsy Dershuck and Libby Trueheart.

Mary Henderson is engaged to Nelson Bryan of Nashville and plans a January wedding. Marie Musgrove has announced her engagement to William Pierce and plans to be married in June.

Bertie Pew left for Europe the middle of December to tour with the U. S. Hockey Touring Team. Before she left, Katie Cox, who works in the personnel department of Sage-Allen Department Store in Hartford, came to bid her a fond farewell. It turned out to be quite a reunion with Kitty Hardwick, Margaret Long, Caroline Casey, Rosie Holmes, Sally Meleber Jarvis and Lindsay Coon Robinson present. Rosie is at Temple and is crazy about her medical work and her cadaver. Margaret Long is also at Temple working on a Master in secondary education. Kitty Hardwick is going to modeling school and doing odd jobs for her father. Sally Meleber Jarvis and her husband are teaching at Episcopal School in Philadelphia. Carrie Beard also works there.

Faculty Summary of Educational, Cultural Aims of Sweet Briar

After the announcement of President Lucas' resignation in October, 1949, the Faculty drew up the following statement of what it considered to be the educational and cultural aims of Sweet Briar College with the thought that this statement might serve as a basis of discussion for future policy.

The resignation of our President, so early in her tenure of office, gives us of the faculty cause for serious consideration of its impact upon the future of the college. Realizing that the Board, Alumnae and Student Body are similarly affected by this resignation we consider the situation in which the college finds itself a matter which involves us all. Individually and as a faculty group we have given a good deal of sober thought to it, especially those of us who through long association have come to identify ourselves and our aims with Sweet Briar and its aims. We have tried to formulate and set down what seem to us to have been the educational and cultural aims of Sweet Briar College.

Sweet Briar's whole existence as a Liberal Arts college has coincided with a period during which not only education itself but the whole fabric of society in which education must function has been rapidly and drastically transformed. And this transformation continues. It seems to us that during this challenging period Sweet Briar has succeeded in keeping abreast of the times. In the academic field it has been able to maintain a sound policy. By the constant liberalizing of admission and degree requirements, by a steady increase of fields of major study, by the introduction of the Honors Plan of Study, and by the provision for foreign study Sweet Briar has kept in line with other forward moving institutions. Library, laboratory, and studio equipment have been steadily improved. As the college has grown in strength it has been able to attract and keep a loyal body of faculty members of high academic caliber who are interested primarily in good teaching, and who through this interest and their sound scholarship have brought honor to the college, and recognition both in state and national service. It seems to us that Sweet Briar has moved quite steadily toward the honorable position she now holds in the field of education. The recent honors accorded her by Phi Beta Kappa and by the College and University Advisory Committee of the Institute of International Education in granting Sweet Briar the direction of the Plan for the Junior Year in France show general recognition of her achievement.

But academic achievement has never been the sole aim of Sweet Briar. From the beginning she has recognized that her obligations go far beyond the purely academic into the realms of responsible citizenship. Looking back it seems to us that there has been always an awareness of and a deliberate effort to conserve the best of the old tradition while moving steadily toward greater individual responsibility in matters of opinion and conduct which is characteristic of the modern point of view. This moving forward is reflected on campus in the ever widening area given over to student government; in the participation of students and faculty in health and educational projects in Amherst County; in numerous clubs and discussion groups where all manner of views and opinions may be aired and freely debated; in the variety of religious meetings sponsored by the college; in the diversity of lectures and institutes participated in by men and women of different creeds and races; and in the international character of both student and faculty bodies. By the allocation of scholarships and the provision for self-help, the social sector represented on the campus has been steadily broadened and the college life enriched. So, along with sound academic training there has been and is opportunity for every student to have practice in enlightened citizenship.

Whether these adaptations of Sweet Briar to a changing world have been too many or too few, sufficient or insufficient, too fast or too slow, these are matters, we believe, upon which men of good will might reasonably differ. But they are matters of vital concern not only to Sweet Briar but to the whole social order; and Sweet Briar, in our opinion, would benefit from a concerted policy shared by the Board, the Faculty, and the Alumnae and Student bodies.

Attention Alumnae

Because of the resignation, effective September 1, of our most competent Alumnae Secretary Harriet Shaw, our Alumnae Council is now seeking her successor. If any of you know of any Sweet Briar graduates whom you would like to suggest for the position, will you be so kind as to write to Amelia Scott (Mrs. T. K.), President of the Alumnae Association, immediately. Her address is 3606 Plymouth Place, Lynchburg, Virginia.

MARTHA B. LUCAS, President.

Report From Greece

Harriet Etans Wycoft, '15g, has been in Greece for almost two years now with her E. C. A. executive husband. This is the latest of many interesting reports she has sent to The Alumnae Council of which she was a member before going to Greece.

THE DAY we arrived in Greece my estimate would have been very low. It was a bleak January day, the north wind cut us like a knife, and there was snow and ice all around. We asked, "Where is sunny Greece?" We had been told we were coming to a semi-tropical climate. The hotel room was icy; the wind howled in around the French window; there was no breakfast. Finally in desperation we went to bed, having had no sleep on the plane. The sheets were so cold it seemed they must be wet. After an hour or so of shivering we finally dropped off to sleep.

The next day the sun was shining. The part of Attica I saw between our hotel in Kiffisia and Athens looked very barren those first few weeks. The soil is red—very like Virginia—but unlike Virginia it seemed to have nothing growing on it; it looked stark and bare, the mountains in particular. They had no trees and were mostly rock. Hymettus, one of the largest mountains which is near the road, looked like a giant elephant lying on its side, dead I was sure. Mountains had always been my favorite scenery but these seemed to make me sad, with their snowcaps.

Then came spring, after even April had disappointed us by bringing a snow about the last week. As the sun warmed our backs and melted the snowcaps it seemed the sap rose in me, along with the trees. Suddenly green began to show in the fields. There had been wheat there all the time, but who would have thought it? Then one day there were the first almond blossoms! Such delicate, fragile, pale pink blossoms we could hardly believe they were real. Then each trip to town showed new beauty—peach, wistaria, lilacs, and then the poppies! You couldn't believe they could be so thick and red. There were fields like a giant oriental carpet, with purple wild flowers, blue, pink, every color; so many and so thick and big. The whole world was a flower garden. The perfume was intoxicating and you wanted to skip like a child, the air was so fresh and bracing.

About this time we left the hotel and took a small house nearby-looking like a fairy tale, so tiny with a wee walled garden in front and wonder of wonders, a grass plot, real grass, no fake moss or some such poor substitute. This is very rare in Greece. It is so dry grass rarely survives the summers and we had to be eternally vigilant to save ours. Then I learned about Greek maids! To begin with the chief national characteristic, about which they brag, is their independence. Nationally, it is probably the cause of their survival through the ages of trial and war. Personally, it is a pain. It means if you say "please wear a white apron to serve dinner," the reply can be, "I never wear an apron." Then comes the battle. With Dina, pronounced Deena, it took several weeks to really win. Her cleaning methods are strange to western eyes but I accepted them until as fall came on I realized they would continue in spite of my chattering teeth. To begin with she threw all windows and doors wide, letting our precious heat take to the breezes. Then she took up all rugs and washed the floors, which are a composition like stone and very cold, especially when wet. There wasn't a comfortable spot in the house for several hours. The question is still being solved, or is it? Even this morning, after I had lighted our wonderful circulating heatcr, I felt a gale of icy air and found I was heating the air of all Attica. She has an expression which she uses on me all the time. It sounds like "Then peerazee" which means "it doesn't matter" and you could kill her sometimes it matters so much. But she works hard and is very honest, unusual for the class. She surprised me about a month ago, when we went to Paris on a MATS plane, expecting to return in three days. Bad weather tied us up in Paris two extra days. Dina always seemed so unworried where we were concerned, I didn't try to notify her. When we finally got home, she seemed unusually glad to see us and told how she had gone to all nearby friends begging them to locate us. I said "Oh, I thought you would just say "then peerazee." She almost wept as she replied "perazee poli"-meaning "it matters very much." So you can't tell about their feelings.

All this time E. C. A. was very busy. It reaches into all sides of Greek life, except the religious. We began to see improvement all around us. The city buses which were mostly old wrecks when we came, began to be new, shiny and much more numerous. The roads were vastly improved. The Corinth Canal and the railroads were opened for the first time since the Germans' fearful sabotage made them unuseable. My husband's special interest is the farmers, the backbone of Greece. He works continually to help them to get a fair price for their wheat and other crops so they may live and pay off their debts. He advises them on good marketing methods. In agriculture there are many things happening, one is the rice program. Acres of alkali land are being irrigated and planted in rice with surprising results, giving hope to a whole section of the country. Rice is one of the staples of Greek diet and its production has been far below their needs. The Public Health Division of the Mission has done wonders in stamping out malaria, building hospitals and clinics and overseeing the general health. One division is building houses in the village so badly treated by the Germans and the guerillas. It is really exciting to see a country rising from its ashes in such a fine way. Of course, there is much still to be done, but the wheels are beginning to turn and there is optimism in the air not evident a year ago.

During this time the wives have not been idle. There is a women's club of around 400 or 500 American women, Mission and civilian, with many useful projects. We started on the most needy group of Greeks, the refugees. The guerillas had driven thousands from their farms or farming villages and they crowded together in centers where they thought they could be protected. Of course, there weren't enough houses so temporary shelters, quonset huts and tents —any simple cover was thrown up. The conditions were unspeakable. We couldn't house them so we tried to make them more comfortable where they were. Everyone wrote home begging for warm clothing or bedding. We organized sewing groups and made as many warm garments as possible. The latest distribution was to a village, recently repatriated, but badly wrecked by their gallant defense against forces vastly superior in number. So they needed everything. We took 2000 garments, over 200 CARE food packages, soap, cigarettes, and candy and toys and really brought cheer to these people who had suffered so much. The next distribution will be in January, and so on as long as we have clothing to distribute. Men's clothing is especially needed—they are pathetic, ragged, patched and so cold. People have been very generous but we begin to wonder if the American men ever give up their clothes. If you could see their joy over a pair of trousers, a coat or even a vest, you would beg every man you know to send his castoffs to Greece. Then, of course, there are the children, especially in the hospitals. Most of them are victims of malnutrition -some will never be better but many have been lovingly nursed back to health. Meantime we try to keep them as happy as possible. One group makes stuffed soft toys, so light and easy for sick little hands to hold. Many of them have their first sight of a toy-you should see their eyes

There is one family in a village near us in whom I have taken special interest. The check sent me by the Council is now worth 50 per cent more than it would have been before the devaluation of the drachma. It shall be used a little at a time for essentials. The mother, a widow, has been very ill and I was happy to be able to convince the Greek Welfare that she needed free hospitalization. It has gained their confidence, so they send for me in all weathers, when there is a family crisis. We don't speak each other's language very well, but it is fine what understanding a smile, a pat on the shoulder, a handclasp can insure. A group of my best friends at home have sent Christmas presents for the mother and four children. The youngest, a girl of five, is to have her first doll. You should see her play with an old rag rolled up; pretending it is a doll, in a single room with no heat, where the five live.

So you can see how this country of past and present glory has wound itself around my heart. The mountains now are beautiful to me, especially at sunset, when someone has called them "Athens' crown of violets." They are eternally changing. The sea is the bluest you can imagine. Sometimes it is purple, living up to Homer's "wine-dark sea." Given a few rains, as at this season, the green bursts out of everything, you forget you once thought it barren. There is a feeling of new hope and we like to feel that—perhaps we had some part in it. If you wish to take a part in all this, please send money, clothing, toys, food. Anything addressed to me, E. C. A., c/o Postmaster, New York, New York, and marked "relief parcel for Greece" can be sent at a very much reduced rate.

More Reading Suggestions

This month's list provided by Franz Bernheimer, Instructor in Art, and Ernest Zechiel, Associate Professor of Music.

Suggested for reading by Franz Bernheimer:

Andre Malraux, The Psychology of Art, 2 volumes, 1949, translated, Pantheon Books "Psychology" is meant in a broad sense, nearer to metaphysics. The two volumes contain an enthusiastic definition for contemporary art and brilliant analysis of individual works, all periods.

JAMES THRALL SUBY, Contemporary Painters, 1948, The Museum of Modern Art.

Bernard Berenson, Sketch for a self-portrait, Pantheon Books.

Bernard Berenson, Aesthetics and History in the Visual Arts, 1948, Pantheon.

EDMUND and JULES DE GONCOURT, French eighteenth century painters, 1949, Oxford University Press.

Late nineteenth century essays that are works of art in themselves.

Pevsner, Outline of European Architecture—Penguin.

Franz K. Bernheimer, Instructor in Art, will have a one-man show at the Argent Galleries, 42 West 57th Street, New York, New York, from April 3-15.

Some of the drawings to be shown in New York this spring are abstractions and semi-abstractions, which Mr. Bernheimer finds a stimulation to subsequent representative painting. His paintings he calls "figure compositions" when pressed. Figures are recognizable though they are imaginary people in an imaginative landscape. The artist does not believe in recreating the natural world and urges students who come to his advanced studio classes at Sweet Briar to paint "out of their heads" and to turn for discipline to the real works only as they find they need help in validating a symbolic expression. He works in oil on masonite panels coated with gesso rather than on canvas, which permits a less linnear technique.

ERNEST ZECHIEL, Associate Professor of Music says:

My reading of current publications gives me only two titles I can unreservedly recommend:

Koestler: Insight and Outlook. A novel and provocative theory of aesthetic.

MORICKE: Mozaart on the Way to Prague. An artfully contrived portrait of the composer in the early years of his marriage.

My re-reading of the following biographies, however, confirms my belief that they are among the very best in the language:

WALSH: Isabella of Spain.

Walsh: Phillip II—these two volumes together presenting a vivid and illuminating panorama of Renaissance Europe. The iron curtain of the "Dark Legend" is lifted.

ROEDER: The Man of the Renaissance is also tops.

A Judicial Branch of Student Government at Work at Sweet Briar

JUDITH CAMPBILL, '50, from Winnetka, Illinois, is Chairman of The Judicial Board. Judi is also this year's Manson scholar.

From 1946-48 the constitution of Student Government at Sweet Briar was studied and finally revised. In spring, 1948, a bipartite setup was adopted, putting the executive and legislative branches into one sphere, and the judicial into another.

The judicial sphere consists, first, of the lower court, the Inter-Dormitory Council, composed of two representatives elected per dormitory. Inter-Dormitory deals with those cases where there is no question of dishonesty and the offense is not serious.

The highest court is College Council, composed of six faculty, and the four administrators, with the Judicial Board. It acts on any case the Board wishes to bring before it, and in all cases of possible suspension or expulsion. Before a case is presented before College Council, however, the Board reviews it and gives its recommendation to the Council to be discussed and voted upon. Only a very small percentage of cases come before this group.

The Judicial Board, the "middle court," consists of eleven members, college elected and representing their classes, plus the Chairman and Vice-Chairman. The Board deals not only with cases, but with the honor system. It is responsible for student (and faculty) education on the honor system, and thus engages the students in discussion of it, and in anonymous questionnaires, which are used to chart the observance of the system. Through such mediums the Board learned last spring that the honor system was disagreeable to the majority because of its third point. This point made it dishonorable not to report someone for an offense which the offender herself refused to report. After long discussion it was revamped this fall, and a new honor system was unanimously adopted. As it now stands, each student signs a pledge, stating that she pledges on her honor to assume responsibility for reporting herself for any rule infractions, and for asking others to do so if they have not, and for exerting herself to the utmost to make the highest ideal of honor prevail at Sweet Briar. On the whole, though the new system must be in use longer before its effectiveness can be judged, it seems a more mature system than the former, as it gives greater responsibility to the individual, and it is not antagonistic to the students.

If a student violates the pledge (including the point of speaking to a student who has broken a rule), she has broken her word, and in such cases the Board generally suspends the offender's pledge for a certain time-length, after which she signs a new pledge. In such cases it is assumed that since a student has not accepted the responsibilities of an honor system, she cannot accept its privileges, and she is campused.

This brings us to violation of rules, which occupies most of the Board's time. Usually a student reports herself (and thus does not break the honor system) and it is through her, or another student having to report an offender, that the Board gets its cases. Probably no more than 8 per cent of the students come before the Board in a year. When a case arises, the Board Chairman talks with the girl involved, and then presents the case to the Board. The Board meetings are quite informal. There are no white wigs or black robes, no strict parliamentary procedure. The offender usually appears before the Board to answer their questions and to give the Board an opportunity to understand her attitude. After the full picture of the offense has been given, the offender's motives and attitude are always discussed before considering a penalty. If this girl is not well known by some of the Board, the Chairman has tried to learn about her from her House Mother or House President, and the latter may be called to the meeting. The focus is upon the girl's motives and the circumstances of the offense, for it is believed that the best way to prevent a reoccurance is to discover why it occurred in the first place, then aim any restriction and its severity at that and not at the simple offense—for the reason behind penalties is not to punish, but, in a sense, to re-educate. Thus, the Board has no arbitrary penalties. The Board's action in most cases is to educate the offender toward upholding the honor system by observing the college rules, for they represent minimum standard for non-policed group-living. The Board often discusses the girl's motives with her and the Chairman always does so in a private discussion. Through this approach the Board occasionally has found reasons more psychological than careless. For example, a freshman who didn't smoke was unhappy when she arrived at Sweet Briar and defiantly began to smoke in her room. In such a case penalties are usually unnecessary for they would not be helpful. However, the Chairman will inform the girl's advisor and possibly her House President as to the difficulty, and they will work with the girl. The psychologist may also be consulted. This policy has been applied on occasion even to the rare cases of cheating and stealing, and the results have been uniformly successful. Thus, there are no categorical "shipping offenses" at Sweet Briar, and penalties are geared to attitude, circumstance, and offense, equally.

Although the Board rarely feels that it has hit upon a perfect solution for a problem, it has great faith in the approach used, for, I believe, only two girls have reappeared before the Board in the last three years. The Board members often say that they have received more from their job than they could possibly give, for we probably get the best education of any concerned. It teaches an infinite amount of tolerance, of searching beneath the surface for motives and reasons, and of understanding other's problems. From this experience we learn that the only way to get the best from people is to expect the best—to have trust and confidence in students who have made even the most serious mistakes. And because a girl's college career can be ruined by an unwise or drastic decision, it becomes an exciting, challenging, and abundantly rewarding job.

IMPRESSIONS OF LONDON --- 1949-1950

By Dora Neill Raymond, Professor of History

Mrs. Raymond is the recipient of a Guggenheim fellowship, to enable her to complete work on her biography of Lord Lytton

RRIVAL in London in late July-good management And porters and Bobbies: all luggage soon assembled and piled into taxi. Surprised at passing number of theatres housing American plays—over forty shows in London, exclusive of cinemas, as contrasted with theatres in New York. Luncheon at small hotel recommended, with reservations, by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meade of Randolph-Macon; food well served, but dreary-no napkins. Trip to friendly E. S. U., still centered in Dartmouth House; advice that Crosby Hall in Chilsea would probably be best for longtime residence on plan of demi-pension; conversation with its warden; pleasure at the Great Hall, its oriel window, reception rooms with pleasant stock of periodicals; satisfaction with room "founded by Sir Otto Beit, Bart., furnished by H. M. Queen Maud of Norway"; its six-paned bowwindow, overlooking the Thames; commodious clothes closet; unpacking of trunk, suitcases, food boxes; the courteous porter, even more friendly after commission to purchase clothes hangers (no gratuity allowed!) daily trips to British Museum in August and September, regret at its scars, its loss of pigeons to Trafalgar Square, where they were better fed by U.S. troops than by U.S. students at Museum; efficiency of officials there in identifying me through 20year-old filing card and declining proffered credentials; pleasure at finding three of my own books listed in the volumes of the Museum catalogues. Conferences with Dr. and Mrs. Notestein at Crosby Hall and in their apartment in Old Buildings, Lincoln's Inn; realization of immensity of research expected of me by the gentleman; deposit of checks at American Express Office on Haymarket Street, trips for ration card, identity card, check on them by visit to my room of handsome, smartly dressed young police-woman.

Theatre-going, high standard of acting for "bit parts," glorification of the elderly, surprise at constant eating and drinking by audience during intermissions, and of smoking in some places throughout the play; contrast with earlier period in small amount of formal dressing—no change from '29 as to sale of programmes and paucity of their information as to plays and players. Two evenings of gaiety with Blair and Robert Niles on their return from Bath; the French waiters and French food at their hotel; amusement at Blair's first-day difficulties at British Museum; my failure to find good dining place for them in neighborhood; later discovery of very good "Good Intent" with pleasant murals of Chelsea notables by Halliday; R. A. visit to the art treasures of Vienna housed at the National Gallery—paintings by Rubens, Van Dyck, Tintoretto, Velasquez, Hals, the two small Bruegels, the Goya self-portrait, the Rembrandt selfportraits; treasures of the Order of the Golden Fleece: collars, dolmatics, copis, chasubles; work of goldsmiths and silversmiths of artists in crystal and lapis lazuli; treasures of Munich at the Tate: Raphael, Tintorettos, the flowers in Rubens portrait of himself and Isabella Brant, Murillo's urchins, Goya's Preaching Monk; preoccupation with suffering, its almost voluptuous enjoyment by religious painters; intoxication with colour, the sensory stimulation of voluptuous luxury, leaving one jaded and grateful for the vague greyness of a London fog. Surviving wish for a reproduction of "Titus Reading" to surmount my Chelsea mantelpiece; realization that the third person at my luncheon table at the Tate was Vaughan Williams!

Visit with Martha Jane McGrath and her younger son to Pinehurst Place, his early glimpse there into the lives of the Sidneys, "Gloriana." Leicester, his superior interest in the war memorials of Field Marshall Viscount Gort. Pilgrimage to Canterbury with a friend of Columbia days, the war-wounds of the Cathedral, the glory of its architecture, the progressing restoration, its glass; tea in the very old snug little home of a member of the E. S. U. Communication from the Public Records Office, the Commonwealth Relations Office, surprise at the continued use of previously used envelopes. Communications from the Lord Chamberlain's Office at St. James Palace (over the Delhi-Dunbar painting) and from the Librarian and Registrar of Archives of Windsor Castle. Their elegantly heavy, embossed stationery and its beautiful freshness.

Lady Astor's tea, at her Hill Street residence, for representatives of the Press and eight residents of Crosby Hall; her perennial piquancy and freshness, my distress at the ill-designed misinterpretation by two newspapers of tea and hostess; her wit and success as an auctioneer, also, for the benefit of this international hostelry for university women; her loan to it of an ancient and entailed tapestry.

The luxury of seeing the complete Cappelia performed by the Sadlers Wells ballet, regret at not being able to accept the Richmond E. S. U. invitation to meet the prima ballerina at a tea at Thalheimer's.

New friendships with archivists: Miss Mackenzie of Round Tower and Miss Midgely, historian of Staffordshire in the series of Victoria County histories. Miss Midgely's kindness in taking me to a meeting of the Institute of Historical Research and introducing me to her friends—the new pomposity and avoirdupoise of Sir C. K. Webster, whom I had met at Smith College, the glimpse of G. P. Gooch as Chairman, his hurried exit after congratulating the speaker, the favorable impression made by Professor Hancock of Oxford, who is supervising the history of the Second World War.

Windsor! The hour and a half bus ride taken four days of each week, the friendly Bobbies who let me in and out of the great doorway to Round Tower; the climb up 200 granite steps to reach another stairway, the closed door of the office of the "Constable and Guardian of the Castle," which has been assigned to me for research; the pleasant coal fire that is burning when I arrive and replenished during luncheon time; the early visit from Miss Mackenzie to make sure that I have enough to keep me busy for the day; occasional luncheons in her charming apartment within the Norman Gate; with her assistant in "Old House" of Christopher Wrenn's designing; their interest and questions as to Sweet Briar; the beautiful outline of the Curfew Tower, St. George's Chapel and the Cloisters, when I hear in the gloaming, the rapid beating on the earth of the booted feet of the lone sentry as he turns to trace and retrace his steps, the contrast with the fife and drum corps in the morning at the changing of the guards, the wait for the bus, the dampness, the cold, the darkness that blots out sight of Hampton Court and makes of Chelsea a confusion of streets leading to World's End. The effort to remember, during the wait, of the pleasure of using original materials -letters of Salisbury, Beaconsfield, of Lytton, all on devoted service to the Queen-Empress, herself mistress of statecraft and yet a gentle woman, tucking into her letters a note that the next is the best from "dear Lord Beaconsfield.'

A gala night—the Philharmonic heard with Miss Mackenzie from the Royal Box at Albert Hall, amplitude of my surroundings in contrast with the small cramped upper box from which I heard Yehudi Menuhin. Teas in the beautiful Adams home of Lytton's only surviving daughter, Lady Emily Lutyens, her reminiscences of her father in Simla, at Knebworth, in Paris; her loan of 70 letters from him, from her mother. Thanksgiving dinner at the American Women's Club, recalling feasts more abundant, the good companionship of Christmas shopping afterwards with my hostess, Helen Finch Halford, her daughter, husband and Canadian friend, tea with them at Fortnum and Mason's; the realization that for the first time in life I must refrain, through lack of time, from sending Christmas cards and keeping connection with far away friends; the hope they will forgive the lapse.

Minutes of The First Joint Council Session

THE Joint Council, with three representatives each from the Board of Overseers, the Faculty, the Alumnae and the Student Body, met at Sweet Briar House on the evening of December 6, 1949. Those present were: Alumnae—Mrs. Florence Mountcastle, Mrs. Elizabeth Scott, and Miss Ellen Gilliam; Board—Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, Mr. Archibald Robertson and Mr. Gerhard Suhling; Faculty—Dr. Gladys Boone, Dr. Ethel Ramage and Mr. Ernest Zechiel; Students—Judith Campbell, Margaret Chisholm and Nancy Storey. Present also were President Lucas, as moderator, and Dean Lyman, ex officio, at the President's invitation.

The Council agreed that a summary of questions raised and conclusions drawn should be made rather than detailed minutes, with the hope that this method of recording the proceedings would encourage free, informal discussion. It was agreed that the Alumnae News and the Sweet Briar News would be excellent channels through which these summaries could be reported to the groups the Council represents. Mrs. Scott volunteered to serve as reporter of the first meeting.

The Council accepted an agenda for the first meeting which included questions sent in by members of Alumnae and Student groups. The first question discussed concerned the relation of Alumnae, Board, Faculty, and Student groups to each other and to the college. The Council recognized the value of more exchange of information between the groups in order that we should have a basis for planning together.

With regard to the Alumnae, there was recognition of the obligation of the college to keep its Alumnae well informed and of the Alumnae to receive such information in order to interpret the college to the public, and to search out excellent new students for the college.

Mr. Robertson, President of the Board of Overseers, reviewed the Board's place in the organization of the college. He pointed out that the Board is charged with the operation of the college, and that the administrative head is the President. The President works with the faculty which, according to the bylaws, has the authority to make decisions on academic matters. It was recognized as desirable for the Board to inform itself of all phases of college activity, in view of the fact that financial and educational policy are interrelated.

The Council agreed that it is the function of the faculty to provide sound and challenging teaching, and of the students to apply themselves to learning. The students felt as well that they should participate with the faculty in planning about educational policy, since they were so directly concerned with the results of that planning.

The question was raised as to whether the present homogeneity of the student body is desirable. The question was also raised as to whether we should attempt to formulate a philosophy of our goals as a college. There was discussion on both these points, with no final decision reached.

The question of the financial status of the college was discussed. To a specific question as to what extent the college faced a financial crisis at the present time, Mr. Robertson stated as his opinion that the college now faced a financial situation no more difficult than many in earlier days of the college. While Sweet Briar's endowment is small compared to many of our standard, we have long avoided budget deficits. It was noted in this connection that it has been the Board's policy to operate on the basis of a budget sufficiently in balance to take care of unexpected expenditures. The group, however, recognized the difficulties of the private colleges in "making ends meet" and the strong competition from tax-supported institutions for both faculty and students.

The Joint Council held the second session of its first meeting on the morning of December 7, at Sweet Briar House, with President Lucas chairing the discussion. The group included all present the preceding evening with the exception of Dean Lyman. The group proceeded with discussion of the financial status of the college, which soon led to the question of the college's goals and public relations.

The point was made and agreed to that the college's geographical situation does make for a large degree of homogeneity in our student group in so much as we cannot draw upon a nearby metropolitan community for day students and, until scholarship provisions can be increased, cannot draw to any large extent from low income brackets. It was agreed that the college should therefore make a special effort to provide channels through which diversified points of view can be presented and discussed in the college community.

There was considerable exploration of controversial issues, with all members of the Council expressing their opinion freely and openly. The large problem considered was the question as to how much the college should be guided by the community with regard to its degree of liberality in many fields of interest—whether its concern should be national, local, or in what relationship to either or both. One aspect of this question was recognized to be a social policy at Sweet Briar with regard to racial discrimination. It was recognized that the Charter of Sweet Briar College and the will of Indiana Fletcher Williams prohibit the admission of Negro students to the college. Other phases of interracial policy were discussed. It was noted that there are in existence continuing committees of the Board and Faculty to study and make further recommendations on this matter. (At the February meeting it was decided to refer this question to these committees.)

As a noon closing time had been scheduled, there was not time to continue the discussions. The Council agreed that its proceedings could be fully and freely discussed in the groups represented. It was agreed that the Council should hold at least two more meetings in this college year, on February 8 immediately after the Alumnae Council meeting, and on April 22 immediately following the meeting of the Board. It was hoped that at these meetings the Council could discuss questions of importance which had not been considered this time, especially the qualifications for Sweet Briar's next President, the study of the goals desired for the college, as well as further consideration of the college's financial situation.

A Letter from China

By Alma Booth Taylor, '11g

Mrs. Taylor, her doctor husband, and daughter Helen Taylor, '40g, are still in Anking, working in the Russian Hospital.

This is a long delayed letter, but you will understand that many things have kept us from writing sooner. Since last November when our circular was sent out, the situation has changed so drastically that we feel in another world almost. Of course, all that we write is "off the record" and under our present regime, the less obtrusive we are the better.

This is sent to assure you of the continued work of the mission; parish, schools, and hospital all functioning though under many difficulties. We feel it is a privilege to help at such a moment. Those of us connected with the hospital, realize anew how truly a Christian hospital can minister to all whatever their complexion, and how many needs seem to be met by a medical setup. You would be thrilled could you see, as we do, how in time of danger and deep unrest the hospital force holds together. The great majority of the staff has been with us for years through thick and thin and trying times indeed. This is a telling factor for good at this moment, helping us hang on in the face of much that is disruptive.

From March 25 to April 23 Anking was besieged and subjected to constant gunfire. We often felt we were occupying front seats in a theatre which had caught on fire. A bit hot! Finally the city changed sides after one last long blaze of tracer bullets, naval shelling and furious din. The next morning all was quiet and to our intense relief there was no street fighting later. So entered the new regime.

Up to this time we had had a goodly number of wounded soldiers-and been very busy with civilians and soldiers alike. With the turnover, we were overwhelmed by having more than two hundred wounded rushed in as emergency cases. These stayed with us for nearly two months and filled every cranny both of the hospital and the clinic, making it well nigh impossible to serve the people of the city and countryside. Our supplies, drugs, dressings, soap, etc., dwindled in the face of such a horde as does snow in the heat of the sun. Operations were performed fast and furiously, for many patients had lain untended for days before their arrival and were in bad shape. The staff was terribly overworked but glad to show their willingness to aid all alike. Volunteer groups of mission workers and friends gave many hours for the kind of things laymen can do, helping serve food three times a day, feeding some, keeping an eye out for those who wanted hot or cold water and generally doing the little unscheduled bits of helpfulness that go far to make sick people more comfortable. When these indoctrinated wounded first arrived, the atmosphere was tense and unpleasant, but after their stay of two months they and their officers were most appreciative and grateful for all we had done for them. We were thankful for the change and hoped they understood Christianity a little. There are still badly wounded men of the former regime in the hospital and the present regime also sends us many cases, men and women.

Very soon after this strenuous and long drawn-out emergency, the Yangtse rose rapidly and a big dike east of the city suddenly broke, drowning many and making thousands homeless. This dike had not broken since 1931. Then the dike that protects the city was broken and almost immediately the water came up to the city walls on two sides. Our compound might have been flooded, but that a main drain of the city was promptly blocked at the city wall. This second dike had not been broken for a hundred and one years. The people are not only homeless but possessionless with no prospect of earning their own livelihood until the water recedes, even then it will take several months before crops can mature. Such a catastrophe calls for well organized relief, but this is not possible under the circumstances, and the regime is doing nothing. Banditry is rife, our streets are filled with refugees begging who have never begged before. People have to eat in secret, lest they be looted. We do what we can, but are hampered by the very immensity of the need. It is unwise to let it be known that some help may be expected from us, lest we be rushed and all have to stop. It reminds us of the time Harry did famine relief work in North Kiangsu forty-two years ago. The group was feeding mothers and nursing babes. When someone said "Go out and get two more," Harry dashed out but was almost crushed before he could grab those nearest the doors and get back into the temple. The countryside is harder hit than the city. From all sides come stories that tear our heart. Scarcely a family we know but . has relatives affected and in dire need, many reduced to begging.

At any one time a cross section of our patients tells its own story. Just now all show malnutrition and anemia in more or less degree. One wee babe, a foundling whom we call "Polly," came to us mere skin and bones. For some time we had high hope of putting her on her feet, but X-ray shows a well developed case of t.b. of her lungs, so we fear her days are numbered. She is only one of many desperate cases caused by famine. Our staff and servants' compounds are crowded with relatives whose houses and farms have been flooded. As last straws to this picture are the demands from those higher up for rice and money, incessant and heavy.

Necessarily hospital receipts are at a low ebb. Many patients can pay nothing and more pay only a small portion of the cost of medical care, both out-and-in patients. Of course, because of the flood and in spite of upset conditions the hospital's services are greatly in demand and we are kept busy operating and caring for ill patients. Then comes the question of currency. One kind became so inflated and worthless that under the former regime, a new kind was substituted. This went bad more rapidly than the other and when Anking was "liberated" the new currency exchanged at $1.00 for $300,000 of it. This now is rigidly controlled to our disadvantage!

Helen has not been out a year yet, but has worked in wonderfully with her father. She has quite a little reputation of her own now, though she has not been able to limit her work to her specialty, obstretrics. Her command of Chinese is fine, considering the short time she has been back and the infinitesimal amount of time she had to study. Just at present she is living in the hospital as a resident, as our other woman doctor is off on a vacation. The situation was such that when she came she was put immediately into hospital work without the usual year or more of language study.

The summer has been an unusually cool one for the Yangtse Valley, and all three of us have gotten through it well. Two of our American population of seven were allowed passes to Shanghai and were away for two weeks. They were fortunate, as in most other places, travel by foreigners has been severely restricted. Floods and bombing of river craft make traveling terribly slow and dangerous. Our two friends saw a launch just ahead of the one on which they were traveling, machine-gunned and crippled by a plane, twelve people being killed, including the captain.

A word about our other mission activities. The parish has had a good summer school for neighborhood children. The youth group has worked hard and well over this project. At this time when men's beliefs are being questioned on all sides, we are bringing all of our energies to strengthen the faith of the congregation. Our auxiliary is giving weekly instructional periods in those two wonderful services of ours, Morning Prayer and the Communion service, both so rich in spiritual strength. During the summer we have put the parts of the two services that are used by the congregation itself, into the national phonetic as well as in Chinese character. Our aim is that each member of the congregation shall worship intelligently. As for our schools, they are all planning to open, though greatly crippled. St. Paul's is having to concentrate on its day pupils at present. Fortunately the school that "borrowed" the premises of St. Paul's for the summer, has moved out and Arthur Wu is now able to clean up and get ready for his opening. The parish day school is having its difficulties also but will again open. Our school for underprivileged women is flourishing, unhampered so far by regulations from without. Since this is one of our pet projects, we are truly delighted and hope that it can continue its helpful instruction.

"We know not what the future hath, Of marvel and surprise, Assured alone that life and death, His mercy underlies."

DR. WILLIAM C. HOLBROOK

Professor Named For Junior Year Abroad

Dr. William C. Holbrook, Northwestern University, has been appointed professor-in-charge of the 1950-51 Junior Year in France group under the sponsorship of Sweet Briar College, according to Dr. Joseph E. Barker, director. Dr. Holbrook has been granted a year's leave from the chairmanship of the department of Romance languages at Northwestern in order to go to Paris next summer to begin his new duties.

Dr. Holbrook, who succeeds Dr. Rideout of Cornell as professor-in-charge of the Junior Year in France, was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, England, following his undergraduate studies at Harvard. He later returned to Harvard to take his Ph.D. in 1930. Before joining the faculty of Northwestern University that same year, he had taught at the University of Texas, Union College, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Boston University.

Current Activities In Alumnae Clubs

S EDITH MARSHALL, Vice-President of the Alumnae Association in charge of Clubs, said in her annual report to the Alumnae Council last year, "the old ark's amoverin." She was referring to the rejuvenation of club activities after the war years. Some clubs have been very interested in discussion programs, the current national one being the study of education below the college level. Others are especially concerned with helping to establish contacts between local schools and the Admissions Office through Alumnae Representative Committees. Sweet Brian slides have been from Los Angeles to Norfolk and back to Los Angeles again. They were also shown in Baltimore, Rochester, Pittsburgh, and just last week they were sent off for a meeting in Cleveland. Various members of the college community are cooperating to obtain action shots of college events as they occur. The slide collection will not be allowed to become stale!

Below are some of the club activities which have been reported through the regional chairman to the Alumnae Council this year.

Baltimore group's fall activities revolved around Mrs. Lill's visit to Baltimore area schools. At least a dozen alumnae were involved in the planning of her visit, and in helping her to make appointments and in her transportation. While there she talked at an alumnae meeting and showed slides. Spring plans of the club include a fashion show for the Manson Scholarship.

Boston reported a discussion program in the fall on the secondary schools in the Boston area. Professor Eva Sanford talked at the Christmas gathering and it is expected that Miss Lucas will speak at the March meeting. Boston's chief annual event is the sale of tickets to a Boston Symphony Orchestra Pops Concert usually held in June.

Charleston, West Virginia, one of the newest of the reorganized clubs celebrated Sweet Briar Day and met with Joanne Morgan of the Alumnae Council in February.

Chicago alumnae entertained freshmen in the fall and sent a gift to the Manson Scholarship as proceeds of a fall benefit. Prospective students at Chicago area college days could not have lacked information about Sweet Briar, if they sought it.

Cincinnati had a meeting for freshmen in the fall and met with Miss Lucas for a January Sweet Briar Day gathering.

Cleveland entertained incoming freshmen at a supper party in the fall. In December the alumnae group sponsored a performance of "Thor with the Angels." Current plans revolve around a party for interested applicants and their parents with a showing of the Sweet Briar slides.

Philadelphia held a meeting honoring new alumnae and entering students in September. Also in the fall was a tea and sale of Alumnae Office merchandise such as matches, Sweet Briar china, playing cards. Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlmann, a member of the Alumnae Committee to help find a new president, spoke at the Christmas gathering. The Philadelphia club is holding a theater benefit on March 17.

Pittsburgh club is a flourishing one. Flowers were sent to the incoming freshmen the week-end before they left for college in September and the first meeting of the season was a discussion on secondary education. In November the group worked as a unit for a day at the T.B. League Hospital and at the same time continued their activity each month at Heart House. The President reported an excellent meeting early in December when Mrs. Munger, the Secretary of the Committee on Admission, was visiting Pittsburgh. Mrs. Munger accompanied her talk with a showing of slides. Pittsburgh celebrated Sweet Briar Day and held a meeting in February when Betty Reif, '34, the newest member of Pittsburgh's school board spoke. An April meeting followed by Pittsburgh's annual benefit, a rummage sale in the Farmers' Market, are scheduled spring events.

Richmond. The Sweet Briar and University of Virginia Glee Club concert in Richmond was a presentation of Richmond alumnae in March. In late February prospective students met with Mrs. Lill and alumnae club members. Further evidence of the activities of the alumnae representative committee was the meeting for entering freshmen last fall.

San Francisco alumnae opened the season with a white elephant sale in September. Then followed a Sweet Briar Day gathering and a mid-March meeting to hear a report of Elizabeth Franke Balls' induction as a charter member of Phi Beta Kappa at Sweet Briar.

Washington, D. C. This year Sweet Briar joined with the alumnae of other women's colleges to form the Associated Alumnae Club of Washington. Besides the annual Sweet Briar Day in December, club members assisted Mrs. Lill in a February visit to Washington schools.

Deep South. In January the Alumnae Secretary visited alumnae groups in Charlotte, Augusta, Atlanta, and Birmingham. The Charlotte club meets often at small informal gatherings and has been active in alumnae representative work.

MANAGER NEEDED FOR BOXWOOD INN

Mrs. Samuel C. Cutler, manager of the Boxwood Inn since 1947, has resigned her position at Sweet Briar as of June 30, 1950, to become manager of the Manasota Beach Club, Venice, Florida. Therefore the college is seeking her successor. If you know of anyone whom you would like to suggest for the position please write to President Martha B. Lucas immediately.

In Memoriam

MARY LEE Shepherd Bradish, '29g

With profound sorrow, the Alumnae Association records the death of Mrs. G. Johnston Bradish (Mary Lee Shepherd) on Friday, December 9, 1949, in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Mrs. Bradish had been very active in the Junior League, serving on several boards, but at the time of her death had given up all activities except her church work. She gave a great deal of time to the Altar Guild, the Auxiliary, and other services connected with her church.

It is fitting that we should record Mrs. Bradish's personal qualities as they were revealed to her friends and associates. Her good judgment, understanding, and thoughtfulness were reflected in all she did. She leaves behind a shining example of fortitude and deep spirituality.

Madeleine LePine Gipson, '33g

Madeleine LePine Gipson, wife of Donald L. Gipson, died on January 8, 1950, at her home in Monticello, New York.

Born in Northport, New York, on March 28, 1911, she later moved to Pennsylvania where she graduated from Wyomissing High School in 1929. Mrs. Gipson received her degree from Sweet Briar in 1933.

Being interested in various organizations, she participated by holding offices in several of them. At the time of her death she was Vice-President of the Parent-Teacher Association, Secretary of the Woman's Club of Monticello, a member of the Dist. Com. Girl Scouts, and most active in St. Johns Episcopal Church where she taught a Sunday School class.

Mrs. Gipson is survived by her husband, five children—

Suzanne, Diane, Thomas, Robert, and Sally; a sister, Marie LePine (S. B. '34g), and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George M. LePine.

Marjorie Silvester, '37g

Marjorie died after a ten days illness, in New York on February 23, 1950. Further information in June issue.

IDA Walker CASTNER, '18g

Ida Walker (Mrs. Charles B. Castner) was born in Danville, Virginia, on August 26, 1896, and died on June 20, 1949.

Mrs. Castner's church, the Second Presbyterian, was always the most important thing in her life outside of her family and friends. She was a loyal and faithful member and always gave generously of her time and means. She loved little children and for many years she was in charge of the Beginners Department of the Sunday School.

Another charitable institution which was near her heart was the "Cabbage Patch Settlement." She was an active worker in this until her marriage and was on the board of directors until her death.

Mrs. Castner always believed that the church should be the paramount force in charitable work and she concentrated her energy on the various works of the church—its orphanage, missions, foreign work, etc. She kept informed about them and helped them in many ways.

Mrs. Castner was a member of the Junior League and Woman's Club,

Besides her husband, she is survived by three children, Ida Thames, Charles B., Jr., and Henry Walker.

Class Notes

EDITOR'S NOTE: We wish to express at this time our deep appreciation for the fine work and real contributions which alumnae have made as your class secretaries. And now several of them having competently served feel that it is time for one of you to take over. Since the class notes section is one of the most popular with the alumnae, won't someone in the classes that are being vacated volunteer to keep their class well represented in the News? The following classes are now, or will be with the next issue, without class secretaries:

1910, 1916, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1926, 1928, 1930, 1932, 1933, 1937 REUNIONS for First Students; 1910-1915, Inc., 1920, 1925, 1930-1935 Inc.; 1940, 1945

ACADEMY—SPECIAL

Class Secretary: MARGARET POTTS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams) 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Fund Agent: CLAUDINE GRIFFIN (Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb) 2514 Laburnum Avenue, S.W., Roanoke, Virginia.

If you will just raise your eyes above these class notes you will see that this is to be REUNION YEAR at Sweet Briar for the "first thirty-six" boarders, plus the Amherst students at Sweet Briar that first year, 1906-'07, and for, among others, the first six classes, several of which of course included some of those thirty-six. This is not to be a "closed" reunion, however, and also invited are the rest of you who didn't happen to be old enough to be in at the birth of Sweet Briar. So start now putting your pennies in the piggy bank and make your plans to come back to Sweet Briar for June 3-5 inclusive. for this is to be a SUPER reunion: Miss Benedict will be back, Dr. Harley is living nearby, with the Walkers, and many of your old friends will be there to welcome you and spend with you three marvelous days, exchanging news and reminiscences and enjoying the many delightful events the Commencement Committee has planned for your delectation.

What will you need? Your own smiling self, a few cotton dresses, skirts and sweaters if you're the type, and a "good dress" or two for the garden party at Sweet Briar House and for dinners. No evening clothes; but be sure to bring campus shoes. As this is to be a perfect reunion, there is no need to mention rain, but June evenings can sometimes be cool, so don't forget to throw in a coat.

What a wealth of news I have this month! When I sent out the questionnaires I must confess I did so in fear and trembling, yet with a faint hope, too. Now, bless your hearts, I find the hope more than justified, for most of you have already replied. This leads me to hope that I shall still hear from the rest of you. If, by any chance, I have missed any of you, please send me news anyway, for we hunger for it.

Nannie Claiborne Hudson writes that she lives at New Glasgow, Virginia, where she is the postmistress. Her husband is a chemical operator but is more interested in farming. They have three children, Nancy, now Mrs. Robert W. Adams; D. Everette, aged 22 and recently married to Ruth Younis of Amherst; and William Claiborne, aged 17. Nancy and her husband and their four-year-old son, "Robin," live at nearby Clifford; Everette is studying Animal Husbandry at V. P. I., from which he expects to be graduated in June, when he intends to continue his studies and become a veterinarian; and William will be graduated from the Amherst High School in June. His mother says William doesn't yet know what he will become but "he is fun." Both boys are fond of sports and played football while in high school and Everette played both at V. P. I. and during the two years he served in the Navy. Nannie writes that sewing, caring for children and quilt-making are her hobbies, and she adds that they are close enough to Sweet Briar to take advantage of the many interesting events that are open to the public and that they certainly enjoy everything. She says, "It doesn't sound very exciting, but three children can make life most interesting, especially with a four-year-(From where I sit, in noisy, waterless and dirty and too exciting New York, it sounds to me an ideal life, M. P. W.)

I have recent news of the Hensel twins, Alberta and Edwina. Alberta is Mrs. Joseph N. Pew, Jr., of Ardmore, Pennsylvania, and Edwina is Mrs. D. C. Wharton Smith, of Baltimore. Alberta's husband, a manufacturer, is chairman of the Board of the Sun Oil Company. They have three children, Mary Eleanor, Joseph N. III, and Alberta. Alberta, the younger, better known to her Sweet Brian friends as "Bertie," was graduated from Sweet Briar last June and was president of the senior class. At present she is in Europe with the International Hockey team. (According to my niece, "Pottsie," who was one class ahead of her at Sweet Briar, "Bertie" is a grand gal. M. P. W.) Alberta senior still keeps up her interest in Sweet Briar and of course was back for her daughter's graduation. Her other activities and interests include the Main Line Branch of the Red Cross, at Ardmore, and the Bryn Mawr Hospital, where she is on the Woman's Board.

Edwina's husband is a well-known pediatrician of Baltimore and he is, I happen to know, an exceedingly good one. In his free time he enjoys golf and fishing. Edwina herself is on the Board of the Mental Hygiene Society and, with Mrs. Willard Price, O. T. R., is sponsoring a course in Occupational Therapy for volunteers so that they may serve as aides in state mental hospitals. Also, she is chairman of the Dietitians Aide Corps of the Red Cross. In addition, she is a flower show judge for the Maryland Federation of Garden Clubs and is a past president of St. George's Garden Club and a past chairman of the National Flower and Garden Show.

From Texas comes news of Katharine Lanier Jones, who lives in Houston, where her husband is an independent oil operator. She writes me the sad news that they lost their only son, 1st Lieutenant Gaither L. Jones, Jr., of the Army Air Corps, in India in March, 1944. He was married and left a fine son, Gaither L. Jones III, who is now six and a half years old and a great joy to his grandparents. Katharine tells me that she had a delightful surprise visit last spring from Lucille Heggie Brown and her husband, president and manager of the textile department of the Brown Shoe Company. The Browns' home is in Malvern, Arkansas. They, too, had the sad misfortune to lose a son in World War II on Okinawa. They have one other son and two daughters, all married. Katharine adds that last March she enjoyed a wonderful visit with Ethel Shoop Godwin, in Suffolk, Virginia. (You will have to wait for further news about Ethel, for, alas, I misaddressed a questionnaire to her; I knew she lived in Suffolk, but I wrote Norfolk! M. P. W.) They went to Williamsburg and Katharine says she enjoyed every minute of it, for history has always been her love.

Virginia Lazenby O'Hara, another Texan, writes from her home in Dallas, where her husband is chairman of the Board of the Dr. Pepper Company and a director of many local and national industrial and civic organizations.

They, too, had a sad loss during the war, when their only son and child, Robert, pilot of a B-17, was shot down over Holland on Armistice Day, 1943. He is huried in Maargarten Cemeterv in southeastern Holland and they are going back to Europe for the second time to visit his last resting place. Virginia seems to have many activities and interests, for she writes that she is interested in garden club work, the Art Museum, the Symphony League and the English Speaking Union and "a few other things that keep me quite busy (when I am in Dallas)."

Margaret Leurs Thompson writes interestingly from her home in Lewiston, Idaho. Last summer she and her husband drove to Spokane, Washington, to see her former roommate, Felicia Patton, who was staying there. She writes that Felicia was just the same, except that she had lost a little of her Kentucky accent, and that it was wonderful to talk of Sweet Briar. They roomed in Manson with Rebecca Patton and Henrietta Washburn on one side of them and Mary and Frances Pennypacker on the other. Miss Morenus was across the hall. Charlotte K. Hall was her music teacher and Margaret has heard from her every year but one since she left Sweet Briar, Margaret's husband, who is a cabinetmaker, has his own shop back of their house. They ha e one son, Robert Gray Thompson, who was in the Army Air Force for 18 months, part of the time at Keeslan Field, near New Orleans, and, after hostilities, on Okinawa. He is now a mechanic at an airport across the river from them and can live at home, for which she is thankful. After leaving Sweet Briar Margaret taught violin and played in the cummunity orchestra. She says she is still interested in the violin but has no time to work on it. In addition to being a busy housewife, she makes flower pictores of pressed flowers, grasses and leaves. She is still hoping to come back to Sweet Briar, but hasn't had the chance so far. Last year she helped with the Sweet Briar Alumnae Fund.

Constance Leachman is another musician who was at Sweet Briar about that same time. Later she studied Musical Education at New York University, from which she was graduated with the degree of B.S. in 1931 and that of M.A. in 1940. In 1937 she went on a musical topr of Europe and in the summer of 1938 she studied German Lieder in Monich. She held the position of Mosic Supervisor in Warwick County, Virginia, and was Director of Choral Music at the Newport News High School until 1944. Last year she studied French. At present she is living in Charlottes-ville and is giving private voice lessons.

Mabel McWane Harrah, who is a widow and lives in Wilmington, North Carolina, writes that her interests are all civic ones. She is on the Board of Directors of the Y,W.C.A. and also of the Old Ladies' Home in Wilmington and is secretary for the latter organization. She formerly lived in Lynchburg.

It was especially good to hear from Anne Meredith, who still keeps up her interest in Sweet Briar despite the fact that she went there for such a very brief time when she was quite young. Later she went to Western College, at Oxford, Ohio, from which she was graduated, and she now teaches English at Withrow High School, in Cincinnati. She said that although she scarcely feels as if she belongs with the Sweet Briar alumnae, the Cincinnati chapter still counts her in. And because she is interested in Sweet Briar and because she is a teacher, she has sent several girls to Sweet Briar. That's what I call being a really worthwhile alumna.

Since the death of her husband, Louise Ryland Baker has left Kansas City and come back to live in Lynchburg, her former home, where she is quite active in church work and where she is on the Board of the Florence Crittenton Home.

Ruth Schabacker, who attended the New York Public Library School, class of 1920, after leaving Sweet Briar, is now first assistant in the Reference Department of the Erie (Pa.) Public Library. She has many intellectual and artistic interests, for she is a member of the Erie County Historical Society, the Erie Music Teachers Association, the Erie Art Club and the American Library Association

A nice letter from Virginia Shoop Phillips, on the back of her opestionnaire, really warmed my heart, for Virginia and I were at Sweet Briar together, when a lot of you were still in primary school. Virginia, a sister of Ethel Shoop Godwin, is the wife of John T. Phillips, president of the Billiston Implement Company, which manufactures farm machinery and equipment. Virginia lives in Albany, Georgia, but goes back to her old home. Suffolk, three or four times a year. She was very musical when she was at Sweet Briar and after she left there she studied for six weeks with Ernest Hutcheson at Chataugua, New York, but she doesn't say whether or not she has kept up her music. Her two children, John, Jr., and Sara, are both married. Sara has three adorable little girls, and John, Jr., has a son. Virginia says she has no hobbies but is interested in a church clinic for underprivileged children and in Girl Scopt activities. She adds, "John and I have just gotten back from Charlotte, N. C. I called Corrinne Fore, who was at Sweet Briar one year. She roomed with Austin Turner. I found she was not married and was teaching school . . . We met in the lobby of the hotel and after 36 years recognized each other. She is a stonning looking woman and I was very envious when she told me she wore a size 12. We had a wonderful time reminiscing over the dining table at the Country Club ' I wish I had room for all her letter.

Eleanor Stone Gates lives at Wellesley Hills, Masssachusetts, just outside of Boston. Her husband is the New England representative of the D. Van Nostrand Company, Poblishers, of New York. He spends his time securing manuscripts and promoting text books and has served on local school committees. They have two sons, Stephen, aged 22, who is a Phi Beta Kappa and a Sigma Xi (the latter an honorary science society) and is now a gradoate student at the University of Vermont, and Walter, aged 18, now a freshman at U. V. M., where he is on the Dean's list. He was valedictorian of his class at high school. Eleanor writes, "Thanks for giving me one more place in which to brag of my sons." (Who wouldn't be proud of them? M. P. W.) Of herself, she writes that the League of Women Voters absorbs most of her time and has led her into active participation in town government, although she holds no office.

Another doctor's wife from Baltimore is Berenice Thompson Wainwright, whose husband is Dr. Charles W. Wainwright. They have one daughter, Alice, a graduate of the Roland Park Country School and of Vassar College, from which she was gradoated with honors in 1949. Berenice writes that her husband's profession and interests are: "Internist, arthritis and fishing!!" (I tried vainly last summer to make an appointment with him, so I know he is a bosy man-or was he fishing with Dr. Wharton Smith? M. P. W., Berenice, too, leads a bosy life with her work for the Franklin Street Presbyterian Church, the Johns Hookins Hospital Canteen, music, interior decorating (mostly her own, she says), and last but not least, her family and friends,

Martha Valentine Cronly still lives in Richmond, Virginia, where she leads, as usual, a busy, useful and interesting life, which has included, among other things, much effective work for Sweet Briar, both in connection with the Benedict Scholarship Fund and on the Alumnae Council. Although she says that she worked for 15 years prior to and during World War II and that she is now devoting her time mostly to her family, which includes her husband John, her son, John, Jr., and a granddaughter, Jane Waller Cronly, she still sounds to me busier than three average women. Of her volunteer work she says, "I am Curator of Accessions and Costumes at the Valentine Museom, which is an all-time job although I can give only two full days a week to it. We have an Assistant Curator who does the actual cataloguing, but I make the decisions as to acceptance of the gifts. In the costume department I am in charge of keeping the costumes in good order, putting them away, potting on exhibits, training Junior League volunteers in the same job; we have four who work in that department; two who have charge of toys and two of children's clothes-incidentally, two are Sweet Briar girls, Lucy Call Dabney and Mary Gray Valentine Curtis." She says her hobbies are trying to raise flowers in a town back yard and catching fish. (Mine are raising flowers and trying to catch fish. M. P. W.)

Eula Weakley Cross writes from her home in Birmingham, Alabama, that her younger daughter, Louise, who was graduated from Sweet Briar in 1945 and who was known to her Sweet Briar friends as "Petie," was married April 9, 1949, to Ralph Bryant Tate. Her other daughter, Ellen, is Mrs. Richard Jackson. After leaving Sweet Briar, Eula herself attended the Scoville School in New York, from which she was graduated; bot she retains her interest in Sweet Briar. Her husband is president of Alabama Coals, Inc.

Helen Whitehill Kenyon lives at Setauket, Long Island. Her husband is a captain with the Eastern Airlines. They have one son, David Whitehill Kenyon. Helen continued her studies after she left Sweet Briar and was graduated from Ohio State University in 1927. She writes that her sister, Julianna, now Mrs. Edward A. Funke of Pelham Manor, New York, who was a Special student at Sweet Briar, and Julianna's daughter, Elise, are spending the year abroad, where Elise is attending the University of Geneva.

Laura Woodbridge Foster, who lives in Indianapolis, writes that after leaving Sweet Brian she continued her studies at Teachers' College, Indianapolis, and was graduated in 1918. Since the death of her husband in 1948, she has had a position as a clerk in the Social Service Department of the Indianapolis Public Schools. Her chief outside interests are the Second Presbyterian Church, Aubudon Bird Tours and attending symphonies. She has two children, Barbara, who is now Mrs. G. M. Gentile and lives in Washington, D. C., where her husband is an agent for the F. B. I., and Dudley, who was graduated with the degree of B.S. from Purdue in 1949 and is now at the George Washington University Law School.

Mary Herd Moore, who was a Special student at Sweet Briar, lives in Sherman, Texas. Her husband is a banker and is interested in the flour milling business. They have two children, a daughter, Betty Moore, now Mrs. W. B. Stowers, who was at Sweet Briar for two years, 1934-36, and a son, Tom Moore. Also, they have four grandchildren in whom they are deeply interested. Her hobbies are collecting old silver and traveling. Last year she and her husband spent three months in South America.

Mary Stewart Carter, another Special student, lives in Atlanta, where her husband is an attorney. She is a member of the Atlanta Junior League and of the League of Women Voters. She writes that her daughter, Mary Stewart Carter, who is now Mrs. H. L. Richardson, Jr., was graduated cum laude from Sweet Briar in 1943 and that her son, Frank Carter, Jr., married a Sweet Briar girl, Jane Munnerlyn, of Jacksonville, Florida, this past January. "So you see," she says, "we are a Sweet Briar family." (Could anything be nicer? Let's have more of them. M. P. W.)

I had quite a thrill the week of March 9-12, when my niece, Pottsie, whose Navy husband was off on a cruise-and I went to Sweet Briar for that wonderful Symposium that you have undoubtedly read about in the February ALUMNAE NEWS. And I am looking forward with even greater eagerness to THE REUNION, June 3-5. I hope I shall meet you all then, including my old Sweet Briar mates. Thanks for your letters, and an revoir 'til June,

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: REBECCA E. PATTON, Beechmoor Place, Catlettsburg, Kentucky.

Let no one think that all members of '14 are knitting drowsily by a cozy fire, shoulders shawled and pussy cat curled!

Responses to my appeals for news come slowly, not because of a dearth of activities but rather for a dearth of time.

Many members of '14 are taking a constructive part in world affairs, especially those promoting efforts toward a world at peace.

Laura Portmann Mueller writes thrillingly of her experiences in Europe last fall. With her son, John, she visited England, Holland, Belgium, France, and Switzerland. She says, "Being still an idealist, we spent several days at the Third Assembly of the U. N. in Paris. Another day was spent in Geneva where Louis d'Olivet had managed to have various heads of the U. N. Committees and Agencies speak to our group on the aims and accomplishments of the different organizations.

"We came away with this one alarming impression-people the world over are unaware of the accomplishments of the U. N. Organization. A resume of the results accomplished by the W.H.O., the I.R.O., the Narcotics control division and the E.C.E. are indeed impressive and inspiring.

"Earlier in Paris, Mr. Malik of Lebanon, had asked the U. N. to publicize the accomplishments of these agencies and regretted that most people are interested only in sensational news.

"The Europeans, especially the children, are old beyond their years-thin and pale. We found little fear of Communism but the great fear of German renascence. This startled us until we remembered European history.

"Later we were fortunate to spend several days in the Black Forest in Germany. Here we were told it was natural for Europeans to fear Germans, for given a little American help 'Germany would be on top of the heap again.'

"Personally, I think the U. N. is our only hope and it is unfortunate that this great power by-passes rather than strengthens it."

Laura adds, "On a trip to New York last fall I visited the sub-committee on the future status of the Italian colonies. It was quite an awakening to realize that the Anglo-American block was a minority here and that the smaller nations, the Asian block, S. American block, etc., were not afraid to speak up. We were forced to change our thinking in regard to the predominance of the white race and the superiority of the colonial powers.'

In summing up her impressions, Laura concludes, "It is a brave, new world for millions of people . . . If we could only recognize this and base our foreign policy on this fact. In a small way I am trying to publicize the U. N. in this vicinity. To my way of thinking, little else matters."

Laura has four children-Darya, though the mother of two children, is a legal secretary; Ilse has just married Philip Van Ingen Darling, Director of the Planning Division of the Housing Authority of Baltimore; Carol Alexander is one of the executives in a private housing project in Park Forest, Illinois, and her husband is with Republic Steel in a legal capacity; John has entered the forestry division of the Colorado A. and M. College at Ft. Collins.

As most of us know, "Liz" Green Shepherd has put '14 on the map in the business world. She is running a most successful and most attractive shop in Georgetown, the ELIZABETH SHEPHERD, INC., employing twelve to fifteen people. Liz writes, "This spring Randolph-Macon is having a big fashion show as a fund raising event and has asked me to do the show for them." Her younger daughter, who went to Vassar, lives in Vermont near Frances Richardson Pitcher and Mayo Thach Tarpley. Liz keeps up numerous S. B. contacts in Washington and often sees Juliet Parris Gill and Nellie Davidson Thomas.

She has four children-Henry Shepherd V., who lives in Shepherdstown, was married last year; Elizabeth Scott who went to Sweet Brian has two children and lives in Wilmington; Mary McLean Ogden has two children and lives in Londonderry, Vermont; Thomas Shepherd is a sophomore at Washington and Lee (and, as Liz says, "knows more about Sweet Brian than I do.")

Henri Washburn is "chin-deep in church and hospital work as well as Community Chest and Red Cross roll calls." I happen to know that the brevity of her reply does not begin to tell of the many and varied activities that claim her time and talents.

Dorothy Wallace Ravenel writes from Edgewater Park, Mississippi, where she is vacationing while her husband attends a medical meeting. Dorothy has two sons who are married and live near her in Charleston. She boasts of two wee grandsons.

Alice Swain Zell is living in Roseland, New Jersey. She writes, "I have just returned from Chattanooga after visiting my third grandson, Daniel James McKay. My fourth grandson is on the Pacific coast and I have never seen him. We are planning a fall wedding for the youngest of the Zell children."

Hallie Everett Russell, too, has brought pride and glory to '14. Quoting from the current brochure which announces her candidacy for Historian General of the National Society of the D.A.R .- "Because of her dynamic leadership, diversified experience and unbounded enthusiasm, Hallie Eterett Russell is well qualified for Historian General." Continuing in her charming, gracious way which identified her at Sweet Briar, Hallie has held many important offices in the D.A.R., among them being State Regent for Kentucky, when many outstanding projects were accomplished. And too, she is National Vice-President of the C.A.R. and National Treasurer of the Colonial Daughters of the 17th Century. Hallie has two sons-Hugh Everett is in foreign service of the State Department. He has served as Vice Consul in Birmingham, England, and at present is an attache of the U. S. Embassy in Paris. Henry Clay was Flight Officer in World War II and is finishing engineering at University of Kentucky and Marshall College, Huntington.

And, thus '14 moves on! To those who fail to cooperate in our plea for news of yourselves (to prove '14 is still agile and alert), we may think of you with "shoulders shawled, knitting by a cozy fire while pussy purrs." Protect yourself in the June issue of the NEWS.

A sincere effort is being made to encourage gifts to the Alumnae Fund from each member of '14 during the year '49 and '50. The response has been most gratifying, though some ef our loyal defenders have failed to prove their loyalty.

Class Secretary: Frances Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Fund Agent: ANNE SCHUTTE (Mrs. Leroy H. Nolt) 1301 Homestead Lane, Lancaster, Penn-

This is our reunion year and I hope that a large number of our class plan to return to Sweet Briar for this big event. It should be a particularly interesting reunion for us not only hecause it is the thirty-fifth anniversary of our graduation hut also because under the modified Dix system all the classes which were graduated before us will be having reunions and among those returning for the event will be our own "Miss" Benedict. It will be a chance to see friends in other classes as well as in our own.

When I wrote my last letter I had not yet heard that Louise P. Weisiger as well as Margaret Grant had been named to Phi Beta Kappa. Aren't you all thrilled and proud that 3312 per cent of the graduates of 1915 have been so honored? I for one am delighted to bask in their reflected glory!

Recently I have received the announcement of the marriage of Elizabeth Spahr Lytle's daughter, Elizabeth Spahr, to Captain John Arthur Rushlau of the United States Air Force Reserve on Jaouary 13 in St. Johns Cathedral, io Deover, Colorado. Betsy had a position in Germany prior to her marriage.

My sister, Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes, writes from Florida that she rao into Louise Hammond Skinner in Palm Beach and they fell on each other's necks in true Sweet Briar fashion. Elmyra, who is spendiog the winter at Lake Wales, is taking up golf and enjoying it tremeodously, although she feels she will oever prove a meoace to the girls in the upper hrackets.

Class Secretary: Cilla Guggenheimer (Mrs. Bertram Nusbaum) 517 Graydon Park, Norfolk 7, Virginia.

Fund Agent: GIRTRUDE KINTZING (Mrs. James M. Wiltshire) 3409 W. Grace Street, Richmond, Virginia.

Cornelia dropped this little job right in ony lap. Now many of you know in spite of my many good intections I am a champion procrastinator when it comes to writing letters . . . but you are in for a surprise. The minute I return from Florida in March I intend to write to each of you and I am going to expect an answer, too. You don't want to put me in bad with the Alumnae Office!

My news of you is limited to a Christmas card from Vivieone Barkalow Hornbeck. I am sorry more of you wereo't in Norfolk oo October 22 when Cornelia Carrall Gardner's daughter, Frances, was married to John H. Curtis, Jr. It was such a pretty wedding and Cornelia looked just like the mother of the bride should. It was so oice to see Mrs. Carroll again. Isabel Luke Witt came from Richmond and of course the Hammonds were there. Mattie's daughter was a bridesmaid.

Please gather news of yourself for me. I must do better than this next time.

Class Secretary: BERNICE HULBURD (Mrs. Raymond Walo) 3120 Martha Custis Drive, Alexandria, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Mary Rich (Mrs. R. E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17, Maryland.

This should be called the "Florida Special," as all the news I have this time is from there.

Ray and I are down here for a month, being very lazy, and thoroughly enjoying ourselves. We are outside of St. Petersburg on the Gulf of Mexico, with the most heavenly view on both sides.

We hope to see a couple other Sweet Briarites that are down this way.

Dodie Von Maur Crampton and her husband drove down the East coast, stopping in Palm Springs to visit friends and then went on to Key West. They will drive up the West coast on the way home.

Eleanor Harned Arp and her husband were in Miami and are now at the Naples Beach Club in Naples.

Probably some more of you are vacationing, too, and I wish you would write me. Forgive this brief news column—I'll do better next time if you gals will just come across with some news!

"When spring unlocks the flowers to paint the laughing soil."

We think of May Day at Sweet Briar and the beautiful spot it is. One of the loveliest I've ever seen! Spring time, too, brings new dreams to our hearts—vacations, gardens, and always the thought of a new bonnet.

This year to us of the west it won't mean the joyful thaw as we have had a most mild winter. Regular winter resort weather, though we did have enough snow to have the famous ski races at Aspen in February.

From San Antcoio comes word from Frances McCamish McNeil that they have had very mild weather, much to her disgust as she dislikes hot weather. I wish she would carry out her wish to come to our state of Colorado every summer. She writes that her daughter, Sara, has decided to go to Mary Washington College at Fredricksburg, Virginia, which is now a part of the University of Virginia. I can see where that would all be a thrilling experience. Frances plans to take Sara back to school next fall and says she is planning to take a look at Sweet Briar-her first return in many years. It was wonderful to get such a prompt reply from her. If she keeps all her New Year's resolutions as well as her writing to me, I think we will be reading about her in "Who's Who in America." Her eldest son, Albert, Ir., is a budding young lawyer, and her "baby boy" is 13 and has all the enthusiasm and liveliness of The Great American Boy. She, herself, is active in P.T.A. work and church activities.

Ellen Newell Bryan writes the news at "Bryans Burlesque" is that she is taking their son, Billy, age 9, to Grand Rapids, Michigan, for his fourth plastic operation since last June. The operation is on his face. All of our good wishes go to Ellen that this will be most successful and the last operation needed. She was a peach to take time out to write me with all this on her mind. Newell, her daughter, is a Junior in High School and is going "you know where" to college, her grades permitting. If Newell inherited her mother's brains, as we all remember them at Sweet Briar, we will have another class daughter there, I know. Ellen's husband, Wright, went to Europe last year with former war correspondents on "Beachhead Revisited." Sounds like Daddy has plenty of brains, too. What a terrifically interesting experience that must have been! Wish we could hear more about it. Ellen writes that she is still Girl Scouting and is a member of the National Board of that region. I hope she can make their next meeting here in Denver. Dot Keller Iliff and I would certainly love to see her.

Speaking of Dorothy Keller Iliff, she was in for a small luncheon I had for Valentines Day. Dot has had a bad bout with the flu but is feeling much better. She is doing a great deal of work with the Radio Group of the Denver Junior League, and we are all very proud of the job they are doing in the Children's Field. They put on programs every week that are very professional and take a lot of "doing."

Dot told me of the "super trip" Dorothy Hamilton Davis and her husband are having. They sailed on February 7 for a 50-day cruise around South America on the Nieu Amsterdam. They go down the west coast of South America, through the Straights of Magellan, up the east coast, stopping at fifteen ports, using the boat as a hotel, except at Buenos Aires where they have a three-day stop. They also have a three-day stop at Rio de Janeiro. Dot is simply agog over the trip. Doesn't it sound positively marvelous! They plan to be home about April 1. Dot said that the only objection Allan had to the trip was that he couldn't take along his ice skates. She said she hopes he wouldn't get so restless that she would find him with his overalls on helping them down in the engine room. Allan is such an active person, but it sounds to me as if they would both be pretty busy just looking with all those fascinating places to see. Dot writes that her mother was with them for Christmas, and they were like debutantes, they were so gay.

Dot Keller Iliff also brought news of Helen Finch Halford. Helen's daughter, Helen, is 16 years old and has just passed with very high honors her exams for matriculation in a girl's school in London. She says her son, John, age 14, is taller than she. Cecil's brother and his four children were with them for the Christmas holidays and the Halfords had a large dancing party for the children. What a grand party they must have had as "Mill House," Helen's home, is like one out of the story books we read of English country life. The youngest daughter of Helen's sister, Woodis, was married in February. Helen had seen Dr. Dora Raymond, Professor of History at Sweet Briar, while there doing research work in England. Helen writes that she had a most interesting visit with her and that Dr. Raymond told her all about life at Sweet Briar. Helen and Cecil were planning to go to Paris this spring for a holiday. When they were in Denver in October, 1949, Cecil was much intrigued with our Western Life. Wish he could have been here for Stock Show in January. He would have loved all the cowmen in their big hats-the real Western Rodeo and all the beautiful horse classes!

Speaking of the west, my husband, Hank, and I had a grand week-end last week in Douglas, Wyoming. Wyoming is my husband's home state. Like all men raised on horseback, he cannot remember not to turn off the road and take out through the brush when he wishes to inspect a flock of sheep or a herd of cattle, so our car is always gray with the dust of the range and our shiny paint a scratched up job. On our trip up, we stopped at The Plains Hotel in Cheyenne and ran into Buck Harding, a cattleman from Chugwater, Wyoming. He was literally loaded with Saturday Evening Posts, as an article about him was appearing in the February 18 issue. He is all the article says about himmost fascinating. Seems to me I've been doing a lot of plugging for our western country -like the gal on the radio who says, "Hello, Aunt Susie," after being told by the announcer that it is forbidden.

Eleanor Reebl Birchall writes, "Not much excitement in the Birchall family this past year with the exception of the arrival of the first grandchild, a Sweet Briar possibility—red haired and blue eyed and granny's darling." I'd say this was front page news and excitement. The baby sounds like she's headed straight for being May Queen. Eleanor didn't say to which of her three lovely children the baby belongs. Congratulations from all of us. We are so thrilled for you and this great happiness.

Had a perfectly wonderful letter from Frances Dunlop Heiskell and can't say enough in my appreciation of her taking so much time and writing such a long and newsy letter. I know it will bring as much enjoyment to all of us as it did to me, so I'm writing it in toto. She writes she has been living in Washington for the last fifteen years. She has no children. Her husband is an attorney with the government (General Accounting Office). She says she would love to see any of the Sweet Briarites that get to Washington.

My! would I like to be one of them. I dream often of that beautiful city and would so love to see it again. She says she attends the Sweet Briar Alumnae meetings but seldom sees many of 1926. She sees Cornelia Wailes quite often and saw her at the Christmas luncheon and said she looks wonderful. Frances feels quite in touch with Sweet Briar recently for this fall she and her husband stopped by on the way from Williamsburg to Hot Springs. They went down to The Homestead the last week in September for a tennis tournament. While at Sweet Briar they had lunch at the Tea House which she says was just as much fun as it sounds. She said Sweet Briar seemed very large and modern compared to our day, but the same warm hospitality prevails. The campus looked very much the same, with of course the addition of the new buildings. It made her most homesick for the college days again. At the Washington Club Christmas luncheon Frances was fascinated with the attractive senior (Dolly Clark) who spoke to them and brought them up-to-date on campus life. I felt the same about the darling girl that spoke at our Christmas luncheon. She is a freshman from Denver, Janet Neale Martin. In January, Frances drove our Mrs. Lill, Director of Admission (whom she describes as terribly attractive and interesting) to Mount Vernon Seminary to interview the girls there interested in Sweet Briar. Frances stayed with Mrs. Lill and thoroughly enjoyed hearing her talk with the different girls and iron out their problems, all of which was very enlightening and brought her much more up-to-date. She promised to try and help out and be Alumnae Representative of Admissions out at Mount Vernon. Good for Frances! Her letter was a complete joy. I'll certainly ring Emerson 1147 if I ever hit Washington.

It was good to hear from Edith McKelvey. I was intensely interested about her being elected Class Secretary of Pennsylvania College for Women group last June. I can see why people have conventions as I would surely like to get together with you and talk shop and find out if you could give me some ideas as to how to inspire the gals to take pen in hand more often or any new methods of collecting news. I surely would appreciate any inspirations. Edith writes that she sees Margaret Laidley Smith quite often when she comes to Pittsburgh. Marg is now in her new home (winter) in Palm Beach, Florida. Edith writes of herself, that she has been attending some wonderful concerts this winter and playing Canasta for recreation. She finally managed to take her summer vacation Christmas week and enjoyed it very much. She is still working and very busy.

Congratulations to our beautiful Elizabeth Rountree Kellerman for being one of ten Sweet Briar College alumnae to be given Phi Beta Kappa membership. When Lib wrote me, she was very modest in listing her achievements. I'm sure you read about her in the February issue of Sweet Briar ALUMNAE NEWS.

Edna Lee Gilchrist's excellent article on The Sweet Briar Farm was especially interesting to me for I compared Virginia farm life and it here in the west, as farming and livestock is my husband's business at the bank. As one farmer to another, Edna, we were terribly interested in the price of Virginia alfalfa.

FREDERICK T. III, surveying Father McGuire's lumber yard (1947 photn)

Your price is much higher than out here. Good grazing to you, Edna and Joseph.

Looking forward to hearing from you each very soon. Cheerio!

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: Elizabeth Forsyth, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham 5, Alabama.

A happy spring day to you and many happy returns! Isn't it wonderful that each of you do your part and thus make a proud column of news for '27?

Babe Albers Foltz has been redecorating her house, has no S. B. news she says, but we are glad to hear from her anyway.

Ed and Camilla Alsop Hyde spent two weeks at Ponte Vedro, Florida, in March.

Martha Ambrose Nunnally will attend the A.C.E. Conference in Asheville on April 9-15. When school is out, Martha and the children will go to Chattanooga where Jim is working. They hope to go to S. B. for a day or two show it to Alice who may enter in '51. Alice was recently inducted into the National Honor Society at Central where she is a Junior.

Evy Anderson Tull and her family were in Montgomery the week after Christmas on their way home from Florida. They visited Anna Patton Thrasher and Tom. They had an afternoon of chit-chat with Billy Quisenberry Marks.

Madeline Broun Wood and Mac are expecting a transfer this summer but don't know where as yet. A friend of Madeline's in San Francisco met Catherine Johnson Brehme in an upholstery class. The friend said that she had enjoyed Tinker a lot and suddenly discovered that they had a mutual friend in Madeline. "Small world."

Elizabeth Cates Wall expects to go back to Europe in April. Her niece, Mary Love Cates, is a freshman at S. B. and incidentally will be in the May Court. Cates modestly adds that we would never believe that Mary Love is kin to her!

Mary Lib Close Gleason's children are at various stages of their education. Cathryn, second grade; Clifton, a freshman; and Harrison, a senior in High School. The Gleasons usually spend their summers at their home in Madison on Lake Erie.

Bebe Gilcbrist Barnes answered my questions about her landscape architecture business by saying that she has closed her office and with the exception of Sweet Briar and lecturing she is becoming domesticated rapidly because the welfare of the menfolk in her family limited her profession. She was at S. B. in March for the planting. Would love to know if she is available for lectures at garden clubs, etc. How about it, Bebe?

Emilie Halsell Marston is active in the Red Cross in Baltimore. She and John are going to California to spend the spring holiday with their daughter, Nancy, who is attending Scripps. Emilie tells us that Dottie Hamilton Duts is on a fifty-day cruise to South America on the Nien Amsterdam. How green can we got?

Edie Van Horn Everest, who went to Europe with some of you in '27, visited in Charleston. Libbo Mathews Wallace says that the many parties have ruined her figure for all time. Which reminds me—particularly for those of you who have "toured" Europe, please read a book just out entitled "Your Amiable Uncle." It is a compilation of wonderfully amusing letters by Booth Tarkington. For sheer fun and relaxation you must read it. Would love to hear if you get as big a kick out of it as I did.

Among the Junior League workers on the opening of the Charleston Children Museum are Libbo Matheus Wallace and Diddy Matheus Palmer and Ginny Faulkner Mathews.

Beck Manning Cutler wonders if it is news that she and Howard went to Jamaica for a vacation? I'll bet I'm not the only one who wishes she had such news. They went to Spartanburg before coming home and saw Cates of course.

Tootie Maybank Williams and Joe spent

Christmas with Anne Maybank Cain in Columbia, South Carolina. Tootie saw Sally Callison Jamison between planes when Sally passed through Atlanta for the Chicago Furniture Mart.

Bettie Miller Allan saw Tony Whelan Horan recently but Bettie couldn't recall Tony's address in New Jersey so we are still in the dark about that.

We are sorry to hear that Pauline Payne Backus' mother fell in January and broke her hip and her arm. We hope that when this comes off the press that she is quite fit again. Those of us who know Mrs. Payne have a special soft spot in our hearts for her.

Billy Quisciperry Marks enjoyed having Tootie Maybank Williams and Joe as her guests one week-end in February.

A fine long letter from Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach. In February Jerry, Mrs. Dreisbach, Sr., and Eloise (Jerry's sister-in-law) drove to Bloomington to Indiana University to see Georgia initiated into Kappa Kappa Gamma. Jerry said it was quite a thrill to pin her own golden key on Georgia and quite a thrill for Mrs. Dreisbach because just 50 years ago this spring she was initiated into the same chapter.

Would just like to whisper quietly that Jo Snowdon Durham says that Ken enjoys the S. B. News more than his own Alumni magazine. Can we believe it? Jo is now busy on Red Cross plus her usual billion activities.

Beth Williams Cadigan is very busy working full time as Art Librarian, plus secretarial work, plus all the mounting and matting for the department of Fine Arts. Jeanne is in her second year at Wheelock and Dick and Judy arc both on the Honor Roll in Junior and Senior High. They have recently moved to their new home in Amherst, Massachusetts.

Virginia Wilson Robbins and Ned ran into Mary Gladys Brown Moore at the Blue Rider Ball in New York. She reports Mary Gladys is as attractive as ever.

Connie Van Ness spent a glorious week in Bermuda in February. She stayed at "Cambridge Beaches" in Somerset.

We, the Cranes, are planning to take the children to Bermuda on their spring vacation. Just under the wire before Billy's 12th birthday (if you know what I mean). We will take the boat over and fly back. Can't help crossing my fingers when I even think about flying. However, since we intend to give the offspring the works, as well as our aged selves, perhaps it would be more fitting to worry about deep sea diving or the hazards of a bike. Which reminds me, we never heard from Elizabeth Cox Inman about how she came out on her hunting trip. How about it, Elizabeth?

Thank you one and all for your many items of interest.

No doubt most of you realized that the cards mailed to you this time were not in my handwriting but came from Chattanooga. As usual, I found my time running out and who but one's own mother would do all that work in longhand?

Ginny Quintard Bond, bless her, carried my September card all the way to Florida and answered it while basking on the beach at Miami. Eddie was sent down on business the latter part of January and Ginny accompanied him. She planned to return home in mid-February and back to her duties as President of P.T.A., Secretary of Woman's Exchange, Junior League work and serving on Education Committee. I was glad to have Ginny confirm the report that her son had suffered no ill effects from the case of polio he contracted last summer.

Another very busy person is Ginny Cooke Rea. She continues to serve as Chairman of Welfare Service, Junior Service Guild—the organization having just made $4,400 last week with its "Follies of 1950." Also Ginny is interested in the Kindergarten for Children, which is under the auspices of the County Child Welfare Program and a truly worthy project.

Polly Swift Calhoun is busy with the Government's Fact-finding Commission on Education, which involves a survey of local elementary and secondary schools with the sole aim being to add to the school and improve curricula.

When Charlotte Kent Pinckney wrote, she and Tom were planning a trip to New York expecting to see Jessie Hall Myers and husband in Pelham. Charlotte had seen Mary Leigh Scaton Marston in Richmond and related that "Seaton" had built a darling house and become quite a gardener.

She also reported that Sue Haskell Harrell writes a column for the local paper about Country Life, and was given a Book Review before the Tuckahoe Woman's Club.

Charlotte has seen Virginia White Tucker when both were chauffeuring their respective children.

Gill Hilton Pritchard sends news concerning the most recent antics of her 14 months old son. He has now reached the climbing stage —with the ceiling as his present goal.

Jane Bikle Lane says she can scare up no news but mentions having seen Marion Jayne and Carlos Berguido at a ship launching in January. Also she told of the arrival of Helen Laurence Vander Horst's fourth child which I reported in the last ALUMNAE News.

Mary Stewart Kelso Littell maintains an active interest in her Marionettes and Red Cross work. Also she is busy completing the interior decoration in her new home. Later in the spring she and Dr. Joe hope to head for Tryon and Sea Island, Georgia, for an outing.

Helen Sim Mellen's life is full just keeping up with 7½ year old Johnny. Helen had also received a card from Ginny Quintard Bond from Florida. I neglected to mention that Ginny's mother was staying with the boys in Dedham and this was a well deserved vacation for Ginny, it being her first in four years.

From West Monroe, Louisiana, came a card telling me that Mrs. Montie F. Cone (Eleanor Faulk) is now living in Paris, France. She is married to a Lieutenant Colonel in the regular Army who is attached to the American Embassy in Paris. They live in a lovely old house on the Seine with their 2 year old son, Michael McKoy. Col. Cone's tour of duty is for three years.

Peg Ferguson Bennett continues as Registrar and Joe as Dean of Olivet College. The older son, Dexter, is enjoying his second year at Cranbrook School for Boys and is doing very well. Steve, the younger, who is 9 years old, is in the fourth grade at the local school.

The Bennetts are hoping to make a journey back to Sweet Briar in the near future as it has been seven years since they were there. And that brings me to one of the main points of this class letter. What about reunion? Maybe some of you, like Peg, will be planning trips in early June and will include Sweet Briar in your itinerary. Having been there so recently, I can assure you that you will not be disappointed in your surroundings for the place is more thriving and beautiful than ever and there will be none of that let down feeling that often comes with trying to repeat a pleasant experience and finding your happy memories were only a pipe dream. At the present writing, it looks as though I will not make it as our son graduates on the night of June 2 and it would take some very close figuring to get there even for the last day.

I wish I could list a number of worthwhile causes that I belong to, but in all honesty will have to confess that I have only one small church job, and find most of my time well occupied just keeping up with the children's activities and getting them where they are supposed to go at the proper time.

Here's hoping that many of you make reunion—and have a marvelous time!

Class Secretary: Anne E. Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: GERALDINE MALLORY, 169 East Clinton Avenue, Tenafly, New Jersey.

The class will be very sorry to hear of the death of Madeleine LePine Gipson. She died very suddenly on January 8 at her new home in Monticello, New York. Your secretary wrote a note of sympathy to Madeleine's husband, Donald, and her sister, Marie. Madeleine has left five wonderful children—three girls and two boys. The girls are all hoping some day to be Sweet Briar graduates.

Frances Powell Zoppa writes that Warwick Rust Brown, Joe Rucker Powell, Norvell Royer Orgain and herself all have daughters in the same class at St. Catherine's. Sounds like more Sweet Briar material!

Jeannette Shambaugh Stein has three daughters—Nancy, 11; Susan, 10; and Carol, 6. She says that Parent's Association jobs come thick and fast, and that the League of Women Voters keeps her busy when not in school activities. Modern dance class on the side for recreation.

Gerry Mallory wrote me a nice letter, which just missed the February issue of the NEWS. Let me quote from her letter-"Imagine our great surprise at having practically a 1933 reunion at the Sweet Briar Day cocktail party at The Beekman Tower-Lois Foster Moore, Marjorie Ris Hand, Elizabeth Dawson Birch. Hetty Wells Finn and I had a merry time catching up, believe me! It seems to me every one of the gals looked prettier and happier than ever before. Then on Wednesday, January 4, Lois Foster Moore, Hetty Wells Finn, Margaret Ellen Bell Hare and I were together again at the Alumnae Representative luncheon meeting at the Waldorf with Mrs. Lill and Terry Shaw. Of course on this occasion we didn't have much opportunity for idle chitchat." Gerry also sees Gert Dally Massie. Gerry is an enthusiastic golfer and plays practically every week-end. Her letter of early January said that 30 of our class have already contributed to the Alumnae Fund, which is splendid and I agree with her that it would be wonderful to have 100 per cent representation for once if the rest of the class will only crash through. I guess it is a bit futile to put in a plug for the Alumnae Fund, when this issue is not even received by noncontributors!

Mary Kate Patton Bromfield and Carolyn Wilson Hont had a grand "catching up" time together last year when Carolyn visited Mary Kate. Mary Kate goes on about her own family—her girls are almost 12 and 10 now and are busy with Scouts, plano lessons, jun'or cho'r, dancing school, and skiing. Bill is 3 and doing very well at holding his own with two big sisters.

Marion Porter Ure wrote that she had moved around so much she has lost track of everyone except the girls from Atlanta. She visits her family there every spring. She, her husband and two daughters, 7 and 10, have lived in Oak Park nearly 4 years and love it there. Marion adds, "I'm involved in several things here in Oak Park and my life is busy . . . school, church, and infant welfare. Say hello to all the class for me."

Connie Murray Weller, Elizabeth Gray, and Helen Martin wrote that they had no news of themselves to give me, but I enjoyed hearing from them very much, as it is so much more satisfactory than no answer to my eards.

To those of you who have answered my cards—thank you very much. It's great fun to hear from all of you and, of course, the more news you send for this column, the better I like it. Nothing is so saddening as a card from a real crossroad saying, "No one ever passes here and there is no news at all," unless it is the card that never returns— PLEASE WRITE.

Mary Ann Page Guyol and Alec have moved from Alexandria to Washington, Having given up her job in 1945, Mary Ann has been a busy volunteer ever since. Currently, she is VP of the Washington Junior League, is active in the League of Women Voters (working hard for home rule for the District of Columbia) and is on the I. V. N. S. Board. Last spring she saw Sis Bailey, who was married in April tn Ernest Hesseltine and lives in Arlington, Massachusetts. Helen Hanson Bamford and Bill and two of their sons stopped to see the Guyols last June. M. A. says she and Jean Sprague Hulvey were the only '34 Briarites at the S. B. Day gathering. Jean tells me that Mary Ann looks exactly as she did when we were in school. The highlight of their S. B. luncheon was the very interesting talk on S. B. doings by a senior. The Hulveys went to New York for a few days last September and "saw a couple of shows but not 'South Pacific," They go to Charlottesville (Charlie's home) occasionally and, of couse, have good visits there with Anne Marvin.

From the same area, Mary Walton McCand-lish Livingston sent greetings but no news. I cannot imagine her any way except very busy with many worthwhile projects and hope that, before June, she'll tell us just what she is doing.

Serena Coe Paine lives in Durham, N. H. Her daughter, Sally, is ten. Her husband is with the New England Food Council in Boston. Mary Ann Page Goyol and Alec go to see the Paines every summer. Serena sees Debbie Gale Bryer (Hampton, N. H.) once in a while and keeps in touch with Sis Bailey Hesseltine.

Ruth Myers Pleasant has a son who lives for Cub Scouting and football. Her girl is feminine—loves dancing school and dressing up in mother's clothes. Ruth is president of the Winston-Salem Junior League. Although the climate is not too favorable, she and Cliff have had some success in raising a variety of camellias. As I look out on last week's snow being covered by "rain, changing to snow," growing camellias sounds wonderful. Ruth reports that Cecil Birdsey Wade and children did get to New York City for Christmas with Lib Schener Maxwell.

Lib writes that the ten-day visit was a great deal of fun for everyone. The Wades stayed at a hotel close by. It was the girls' first visit to New York City, so everything was particularly exciting. On the Monday after Christmas the Wades, the Maxwells, and Lib's sister's family all went up to Hastings-on-Hudson to spend the day with Bonnie Wood Stookey and family. Lib saw Fran Weil Binswanger briefly when Fran was in the city to see the shows. All the New York Briarites are busy making plans for the Iren Marik concert on April 8.

Mary Lewis Nelson Becker corresponds with Lib and Jo Fink Meeks but rarely sees them. She lives on the same block in Logansport, Indiana, with Helen Closson Hendricks and her three girls and one boy. Marcia Morrison Curtis and family were home (Indianapolis) from Texas for Christmas but Mary Lewis did not get to see them. The Beckers visited Betty Carter Clark in Pasadena a few years ago and were recently paid a return visit by the Clarks at the Becker cottage on Lake Maxinkuckee (East Shore, one-half mile south of Maxinkuckee Landing-if any of you get near Culver). As for herself, Mary Lewis met her husband at Illinois and they were married in 1936. Eddie is in manufacturing and she is "the personification of the housewife," doing everything according to form except listening to soap operas! She is a Cub Scout Den Mother and Eddie is in both Cubbing and Scouting. The boys are 11 and 9; their sister, 5. Two dachshunds complete the family.

From Indianapolis, Virginia Fosler Gruen writes that her husband was 4½ years in the Army and was with the 7th Armored Division which had rather rough treatment in the Bulge. Their David is two years old. The past year they have spent remodeling and redecorating their house. She is very active in civic affairs: Children's Museum, Children's Bureau, Orphans' Home, Council of Social Agencies, Juvenile Court, Citizens' Committeee, Community Fund, and is on the board of the local Kappas. They are planning on going to Epworth Heights, Ludington, Michigan, for several weeks of sun and water next summer.

The Oklahoma girls are loyal to S. B., even though they ha e no organized group. Margaret Linebaugh Davis tells of a lovely December 28 luncheon in Muscagee given by the Cook girls-with pink and green posies for all, Margaret's husband, Glenn, is a U. S. Probate Attorney. They have two children. Reuben started school last fall. Mary Margaret is 21/2 and is already bent on going to Sweet Br.ar. They stopped at S. B. on the way to visit Oia Point Comfort last summer. They have a cabin at Wauhillau where they spend must of the summer when they are not away. Margaret, too, is busy with community activities, 'on board of League of Women Voters, sustaining member of Service League, YWCA nominating committee, Garden Club, Study Club, Sewing Club-is enough!" She would like to see any of our classmates who go her way.

Emma Hedges Clark would also like to see all of her old friends. Her family consists of Sam, who does engineering work for the county—boys, 8 and 2½, and boy and girl twins, 6. They live in Charlottesville with her parents. The youngsters spare her no time except for Mother's Club and Sunday School but she expects to become engaged in Cubbing soon. She sees Connie (Fowler) Keeble occasionally. The Clarks are hoping to get a good beach vacation this summer.

Those very active people include Ede Knox Bogaard. Public relations seems to be her field. After serving two years as president of the Cedar Rapids Junior League, she is now on the board as public relations chairman, and is doing the same sort of job for the League of Women Voters and for the Children's School P.T.A. Her children are Bruce, 9, and David, 7. She, too, is a Den Mother and a Sunday School teacher. The Bogaards spend their vacations at Hunky Dory Farms Resort at Balsom Lake, Wisconsin, and recommend it as a grand olace for active boys.

In San Marino, California, Eleanor Cooke Esterly finds herself busy with the customary mother-of-three children activities, P.T.A. board, Assistance League of Pasadena board, and does volunteer occupational therapy at the Huntington Memorial Hospital. I was terribly sorry to hear that Madeleine LePine Gipson, '33, had passed away. Madeleine was Eleanor's S. B. roommate and sister of Marie Le-Pine, '34. She leaves five children.

Elizabeth Collier Wardle sent me a grand letter. She has two boys and a girl. Margaret, 81/2, is in the third grade and Charles, 5, is in kindergarten, while Robert III, 3, stays home. "All are blondes and all are normal hellions who nearly drive me crazy most of the time." Her husband was in the Army 41/2 years, 2 of which he spent overseas on Eisenhower's staff. Now he manages a division for the Georgia Power Company. The Better Home Town campaign of his Community Development Division won national recognition. She is a Brownie Leader and is busy helping her P.T.A. carnival c.mmittee raise $2,500 this year. In April she will bec me president of the Garden Club after serving as chairman of its Civic Project and Program committees. She works on the Community Fund and the Red Cross Fund. Their vacation last summer unfortunately was over quickly. They started to New York to see the senior Wardles but the first night out, Bobby fell from a fifth story hotel window and broke his leg in two places! This year Lib says they will leave the children with a trained nurse and take a week alone in the mountains to celebrate their 15th anniversary. The Wardles played canasta recently with Bettina Silva Callaway and Ed. The girls had a delightful reunion after 18 years. The Callaways have a boy, 8, and a girl, 3, and live in Decatur, Georgia. Lib hears from Cleo Scott Allen who lives in Kirkwood, Missouri. Cleo has a girl and two boys "who at last are all in school." She is enjoying her new-found freedom.

The weatherman has been a great disappointment to Nancy Russell Carter and family, for a winter without skiing is unthinkable. Their third son is now in the choir and his two brothers have been confirmed. Jim is on both Cub and Scout Committees. Nancy has a den in which Jerry is Den Chief. Nancy continues to have difficulties in trying to train a successor to lead her Girl Scout troop. Nancy, with 3 friends and 2 pianos, has a wonderful time playing quartettes. The coal shortage gave the boys a week's vacation which they spent profitably washing walls.

Julia Sadler de Coligny is teaching school this year—3rd grade at St. Catherine's Episcopal School in Richmond. She says it is a busy whirl but she loves it. Illness in the family made her miss the October Alumnae Council meetings but she attended the February ones. (I think we'd all like to join her on a trip to the Briar Patch—it's quite rejuvenating!)

The Toledo Briarites seem to be full of pep, according to Helen Hanson Bamford. They put on a rummage sale which was quite successful and a great deal of fun. "The club is made up of the nicest group of gals, a few grandmathers, a few mothers of teen-agers, a big group of us a bit younger, and the young ones." "The boys adore little Susan and are very cute with her." Helen says that they have had a winter like ours—.

We practically run with our tongues hanging out a large part of the time. Right now I am trying to teach my Brownies a square dance for our Juliette Low rally. The crepe paper costumes we made are rather cute—I just hope they stay together! Our Pointe school district just finished a hard-fought election over the issue of more schools where the new homes are being built. Our doorbell ringing was rewarded by an unexpected but decisive victory.

Congratulations to Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlmann and Connie Burwell White who became members of Phi Beta Kappa at Sweet Briar on March 3. 1935

A nice note from Jackie Strickland Dwelle says that she is having a busy year as President of the Jacksonville Junior League, but is looking forward to more leisure after April. She also reports that the Jacksonville Sweet Briar Alumnae group is sponsoring the St. Augustine Players in March, so they will be busy selling tickets. Jackie occasionally sees Jane Mitchell Robeson who she says leads a very busy life.

A card from Isabel Scriba says that she had a wonderful trip to Europe last summer. She was in Dublin for Horse Show Week, then she and a friend hired a car and drove all over Ireland. After that she went to Edinburgh and was there during the Music Festival. She stopped in the beautiful Lake District, and toured in Devon and Cornwall. From there she went to France where she met a cousin who drove them about in his Renault. She visited Switzerland, returned to Paris, and then sailed for home. Sounds heavenly, Isabel—wish you had given us a few more details! Isabel says that at present she is looking for a job.

Mary Willis Kempe writes that her life is without incident except for teething—that young Willis is cutting his last. She says that church work and the farm occupy what little spare time she has left.

Frances Adams Jervey reports her marriage on March 11 in Tryon, North Carolina, to Mr. Louis D. Simonds, Jr., of Charleston, South Carolina.

Had a very nice note from Betty Myers

Harding giving me all the news of her family, and regretting that she had no Sweet Briar news.

That seems to be all the news for this time. Hope to hear from more of you before the next issue.

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 1906 Dewey, Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Jane Collins Corwin's mother was nice enough to answer my card and inform me of the birth of Janie's third daughter. She also wrote of Ellie Snodgrass Park's new job with a woman judge, a Mrs. Matthews, but I know no other details.

Isabel Olmstead Haynes wrote to say hello and add that she's finally getting settled in her new house. She says there has been entirely too much "news" in her family for the last several years so she's really rather happy to have nothing to report.

From Seattle Syd Gort Herpers writes that their winter wasn't as bad as the papers said—nothing like an Eastern one! She is busy with a Cub Scout den, a cooperative nursery school, and orthopedic group "on the side." She is also taking a course in Scout work and handicraft.

Lee Hall Cramer says she has gotten more active than ever, and I don't understand how that's possible! Besides her business she has joined an executive woman's organization, Zonta International, has taken over quite a bit of church work and is also helping with the Sweet Briar Representative Plan. She has also taken up teaching her little girl. She saw Terry Shaw early in January and spent 3 weeks in California in December.

Peg Merriti Haskell went pheasant hunting in South Dakota last fall and was thereafter too busy having dinner parties with the results to find any further news.

Afraid 1 haven't much news for you all again. Either you fellas are getting lax about returning my postcards, or I'm not sending out enough. Please return them when they come to you, as they are my only lifelines and the rest of the class would like to know about you whether you think so or not!

A delayed Christmas card from Marion Brown Zaiser came through with a darling picture of Brownie and her two boys. They are really getting to be young gentlemen, Alan almost 8, and Kent 4½. Brownie had been to New York and talked to Kay Hoyt on the phone several times, and had lunch with Judy Bemis Wills, and spent two days with Lew Griffith Longstaff and family at their Moss Lake Camp; so at least she had Sweet Briar on her itinerary.

Janet Macfarlan Bergmann reports that her family life is dull and unexciting. She did get in to the Alumnae Representative meeting which Mrs. Lill and Terry directed, though, and she does still see Adele Letcher Harvey and Georgia Black Kievit.

Janet gave me my first news that Dolly Nicholson Tate had had pneumonia—said that she was in the hospital right before Christmas but is all right again now. We all surely hope that her siege is completely behind her now and that she's feeling fit again.

My card to Dottie Grpe Clement caught up with her in the hospital, where she had just had a son, John Keller Clement, Jr., born February 3. Gipe reports that "he's a plump contented little cherub . . . looks just like his father," which compliment I'm not sure daddy would appreciate. Dottie had had word from Janice Wiley Adams, evidently, since she said she sounded well established in her new home.

My card from Barbara Ferguson Lincoln said she was doing the same old stuff, but it didn't sound very routine to me—three youngsters, driving to nursery school, teaching Sunday School, helping with Brownies and Cubs, but "hardly any skiing, darn it!" Fergie said they had had a grand evening when Maggie Cornwell Schmidt was visiting her ister, Helen Cornwell Jones. Macky Fuller Kellogg and "Phoopy" Burroughs Livingston were there with husbands, and Fergie said it was really a grand bunch. She hopes to see Mary Ann Housel Carr at the beach again this summer, and also that Janet Macfarlan Bergmann will contact her.

My last news was very exciting: an announcement of the marriage of Mary Alice Berekmans Canby to Mr. Robert Stevenson Smith II, on the 11th of February. 1 am sure we all wish Mabbie a very wonderful life there in Wilmington, Delaware.

That's all for this time, but I'll be writing you all again!

For this roundup of news about all of you "fortys," I've decided to report alphabetically according to the cities in which you live. All of which brings us to Atlanta and Anne Warmg Lane, who has two children, Mills IV, and Anita Waring. Anne is on chauffeur duty, marketing and working at the new Cerebral Palsy School. She regrets that at the present time our tenth reunion is impossible for her to attend.

Georgia Herbert Hart writes from Columbus, Georgia, that she is involved with the Junior League, the Golf Association and church activities. Janet Runkle Wells is still delighted to be back in Columbus, Ohio, Her son, Robin, will be three in April. Excuse me. Chattanooga! Mildred Moon Montague has moved into a new house atop Lookout Mountain. Ruth Mealand of Cleveland is hopeful about attending our reunion. Ruth is going to Graduate School for Nursery and Elementary children's training. Ruth says, "At present I'm at my Senior High School's library in Shaker Heights, but upon receiving my degree, would like to travel, write children's books and perhaps help the unfortunate children overseas." Ruth is costume mistress for the "Shaker Players" and belongs to a World Affairs Forum Group, Parge Woods Gillette's card was postmarked Detroit, but the Gillettes have recently purchased 71/2 acres of "heavenly rolling country complete with gurgling streams near Rochester, Michigan." Her husband, Lou, is godfather to Maria Burroughs Livingston's new daughter, Katherine. Parge expects to be on deck for the tenth! Bettie Itins Haskins finally fell for my "penny bait" to the extent that she wrote a long colorful letter. Ivy likes Groton, Massachusetts, but says that it is not lurid. The Haskins are country bound, too, and plan to build a one floor house amid their apple orchards. Ivy says that they have acquired a black Newfoundland pup. Haskins had dinner with Maria and Hank Livingston not long ago and saw Connie Currie Fleming in her new house in Chatham, New Jersey. lvy took a Singer Sewing Machine Course which didn't make her into a seamstress. However, she does enjoy her current events class in Cambridge. Ivy's S. B. roommate, Blair Bunting Both, is settled in her new ranch-style house at Kennettsquare, Pennsylvania. Her husband, Rich, left January 5 for a three months trip to South Africa. Blair says that he is having a marvelous time and that she had a fascinating conversation with him four days after he left. Her youngest son, Stephen, is very much in the family picture now that he is walking. Blair actually heard from Benadine Newby who plans a trip to Europe this summer.

Next, we come to Long Beach, California, where Elizabeth Conover is teaching kindergarten. Libby has been from Canada to Mexico on the coast roads and expects to go back to Portland and Vancouver for the summer. Barbara Godfrey is still in Los Angeles teaching part-time at the University of Southern California, and studying there for her Ph.Di in Education.

Anne Conant Weaver and Nancy Haskins Elliot are both established in Marblehead, Massachusetts. Anne has given her daughter, Nancy, aged 4½, her own boat for this summer. Nancy says that the Elliots lead a quiet, academic life while David works on his Ph.D. thesis and instructs at Harvard. The Elliots have a two-year-old daughter and a brand new son.

Connie Chalkley Kittler wrote a grand letter some time ago which was read, appreciated and now lost. Her last card from Port Washington. New York, reports that all the Kittlers are in grand shape.

Ridgewood, New Jersey, is the present lo-cation for Mary K. Warren Griggs and Michie Mitchell Gillis. M. K. says that she is a real suburban housewife, does no good deeds any more! She has two stepchildren, aged 14 and 12, and a 17-months-old son. She was a WAC officer in Intelligence, was overseas for a while and was married in 1945. There is an error to report-Michie's letter was postmarked Ridgewood, but she actually lives in Glen Rock. Her daughter, Susan, is now 18-monthsold and is a partner in crime with a cocker

There is a new man in Richmond, Virginia, Mary Johnston Bedell's second son, Wood, Jr., arrived on February 12. Polly Boze Glascock came to the Symposium of the Arts at S. B. C.

This will make you all green eyed, but it is a perfect "very light coat day" here this March 5 and I'm going to whip this off and take it to Sweet Briar this afternoon.

Marion Phinizy Iones is still crazy about San Francisco and tells me that Coralic Kahn Ferro was elected Vice-President of the S. B. group there. Katherine Hill Apperson is surrounded by three feet of snow in Schenectady, New York. Katherine is indeed busy with two boys, Junior League activities and a traveling engineer husband. There was a most attractive picture of Beth Thomas Mason and her children-Laura Beth, Ann, and Tate III -in the Seattle, Washington, paper. Beth's husband, Tate, is on the staff at the Mason Clinic which was named for his father. Beth loves Seattle and her new house. Her activities include mostly the usual home routine, but she does enjoy Sunday School work and a Senior Girl Scout Troop. Beth sees Polly Poe Richmond who is now on a flying trip to Guatemala. Kathleen Ward Allen is teaching at Syracuse University and making ties and popovers for her husband.

Marion Daudt McBride resides in Union, Missouri, and is president of her county A.A.U.W. and Secretary of the Saddle Club. Her three-year-old Patsy received a pony for Christmas, so is now keeping pace with the rest of the family.

Mary Sue Kilham Davis lives in Washington and has three children, Landon, aged 5; Susan, 2; and "Chad," 1. Mary Sue hopes to attend reunion. There is no more pep talk from me this time on that subject, except that it would be such fun if a lot of you could be here.

Last but not least I want to quote in toto the interesting letter received from Irene Vongehr Vincent. She begins, "Your card asking for info finally caught up with me, having circled the country first.

"I returned to the U. S. last year in mid-September after two most interesting (if hairraising at times) years in China. We spent most of that time in Peiping, one of those cities you fall in love with-like Paris or San Francisco. My husband and I both studied Chinese. I learned not only to gossip expertly about babies and the high cost of living, but even learned to read-less expertly-newspapers. I had just about learned the nationalist terms when the communists took over the city and we all had to learn such new terms as 'the people's liberation army,' 'the feminist movement,' 'reactionary' and so on. Our two daughters had no such difficulty with the language. The oldest went to a Chinese kindergarten (at a school called 'Confuscian Virture') and our youngest could speak nothing else when we returned.

"In the summer of 1948 we made a most interesting trip to the northwest of China, and managed to drag our children (via horse, truck, and airplane) to the Tibetan monastery at Kumbum, the Buddhist Caves at Tun Huang, and to Tihwa, capitol of Chinese Turkestan. We returned to Peiping (riding as cargo in a wool plane) just before the city went under seige. My husband had gotten assigned as a 'special correspondent' for a British chain of newspapers, and we dug in for the seige, which lasted forty days, during which time the electricity and running water went off, and food costs soared. A dramatic moment was the entry of the Red Army into the old Imperial capitol. About five weeks later, correspondents were barred from filing 'until further notice,' and three months later we left, hoping to reach the States before the arrival of No. 3 so that 'he' might have a chance to become President. At Hongkong it became evident that we could not get on a ship for several months-so many people were trying to get out. We flew back to the Northwest (which was not supposed to fall to the Communists for another four months) so that the baby would be born in a cool climate, and spent a most pleasant six weeks in Shandan, a small walled city about two days truck trip from Lanchow, Kansu. Reports from Lanchow about the rapid approach of the Communists became so urgent we thought we'd better get out before we were caught in that desolate area with three small children. We did in fact leave three days before air service was suspended, and about ten days before the city fell. During our stay there my husband returned to the caves under most difficult circumstances and took about 80 color pictures of the lovely frescoes in the caves.

"We're now temporarily settled at Palo Alto, California, happily tasting the joys of living in America. Daughter No. 1 attends public school, No. 2 (Chinese all forgotten) nursery school and No. 3 is cutting her first tooth. I should love to see any Sweet Briar girls who get out this far. I certainly hope to get back for our tenth reunion."

How long, how interesting, and how newsy this column is depends upon all of you. If you do not drop me a line, if you ignore my cards of reminder, then the class notes will be slim. It is such fun to hear from you, and more particularly to pass word of you along to the rest of the class and friends that I cannot urge strongly enough that all of you try to keep

Our "round robin" which had been to Europe and back, finally reached me in time to pass a bit of news along. Hank's and Helen's (Betty Hanger and Helen Sanford) letters describing their trip should be printed in full to give you the enthusiastic, colorful picture of Europe that they gave us. Martha Buchanan Wadsworth and family have moved from Lexington Avenue to Park Avenue in New York City. Anyone going through New York give Martha a ring. In the fall, Gege Moomaw Hall became the proud mama of a daughter, Elizabeth Jarvis, born October 13. Elizabeth for one grandma and Jarvis for the other-that's playing it smart! Wish you could see the picture of Margaret Becker Schiltges' second daughter, Margaret. She is darling. She's such a husky one that her grandfather calls her "Block Buster." Among those fortunate enough to get to White Sulphur Springs this summer were Elsie Diggs Orr and Sudie Clark Hanger. Another mover (glad someone else moves besides me) was Jean Hedley Currie who left her elegant home in Southport, Connecticut, to live in Riverdale. New Jersey. Jim's business took them there. Jean says that it is still country, and they are happy as long as they do not have to be city folk.

Eight pounds and fifteen ounces-that is a real baby! That was Griffen Plummer Affel, born December 30-Eugenia Burnett Affel's second son. Another son to arrive before the first of the year was Sally Walke Rogers'. Si already has two daughters. Despite three children, she keeps occupied with club work, church, choir, garden club, and library work . . . hardly seems enough. Was surprised to learn through Si that Betsy Chamberlain Burchard is now living in Orangeburg, New York, the village where Jeanne Sawyer Faggi and Daphne Withington Adams are living. All they need is a fourth for bridge.

Have any of you noticed Barbara Freking's picture in Life Magazine. I haven't, but Si has seen it and says that Freking is in Hollywood. Penny Lewis is teaching at the University of Pennsylvania while getting her M.A. Toppin Wheat will be graduated from the University of Virginia Hospital in the spring. Come July, Lucy Hodges Fuller and Allen will move back to Richmond where Allen starts a five-year surgical residency at the Medical College of Virginia.

Stephen Wady Owen Reams (Steve, for short, I presume) arrived on January 4— Anne Morrison Reams' second son. The other day I had luncheon with Grace Bugg Muller-Thym's mother-in-law quite by accident but most enjoyable. Mrs. Muller-Thym told me that Grace is president of the combined Women's Auxiliary of Havre de Grace, Maryland. Grace and Harry have their eyes on a 135acre farm which boasts a 100-year-old house.

A most welcome letter came from Mary Ellen Thompson Beach. Tommy loves Madison, Wisconsin, and is leading an active life there. You can imagine, with two small boys-Bobby, 3; and Tommy, 1. Phyllis Sherman Barnes wrote that Edie Syska Peltier and Paul are hoping to move back to the New York area, in fact they've been in Bronxville since Christmas. Phyll participated in a song and dance show given by the League for Service.

Bye now. Everyone write, and I do mean

WOODY and CHUCKY ANGST, sons of Louise Woodruff Angst

Having just returned from a business trip with Worth (that is: he goes on business and I go on him . . . but I have to eat somewhere, I keep telling myself), I have a few bits to pass on which I picked up en route. In Philadelphia Mary Lau Taylor and Stuart have bought a house in Chestnut Hill. I guess a lot of us like to picture Mary in a doll's house, which is just about what she was in before, but she says they have expanded too much. And speaking of expanding, it seems Eugie Burnett Affel's family has expanded. She has a new son.

A friend from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, gave me wonderful news of Sally Bryan; she recontly married Albert Allen, Jr., from there and Harrisburg is delighted to have the pleasure of her company, which evidently they are enjoying thoroughly.

In Baltimore I found out nothing about Baltimoreans except that Frances Taylor Trigg and Locke have just become same. Locke is working there as a salesman for Western Electric. I also picked up an amusing piece on Camille Guyton Guething from a friend of hers who married a Baltimore boy. It seems Camille and Ted went to New England to ski on their vacation, but after three days at the slopes with no snow they decided to motor to Florida instead. As Liz (friend) said, who else but Camille would think of such a drastic change of plan, much less actually undertake it? Well, at least they could water ski.

In New York, in spite of a cold I wouldn't wish on anyone, I contacted Jane Findlay Tate who was in the same boat, so we had a grand time sniffling, coughing, and waving kleenex at each other for a couple of hours. In between sneezes I found out that Muie Grymes, now back from a five month's visit with Nancy Bean White in Paris (she had planned to stay five weeks), is studying speedwriting, in N. Y. C., and job honting, too. Beanie, by the way, evidently doesn't take to heavy doses of housekeeping, and has gone back to working at a desk job for Life. Mu says the baby is a real butterball. Janie misses Libby Corddry Jones since she has moved to Morristown, but has managed to get that far out only once. She says their baby girl is very cute and their house in the country very nice, but it sure is a jaunt from New York. Jane had also seen Brooks Barnes, looking very sylphlike and attractive. Brooks wrote me that she was still in New York working for the same four pediatricians. Apparently she has drummed up some trade for them among the children of some '42 Briarites. She also said she had seen Lucy Lloyd who is working in New York. Jame herself has a nice little apartment just off Fifth Avenue and is currently taking lessons at Singer. Meanwhile, her material for slip covers sits patiently on the shelf.

In answer to some of my cards, I was pleased to hear from Dot Stauber Anderson, who says it looks as though they are in Havana to stay, since her husband is now a partner of her father. She has two boys now—Gary, 4, and Marc, 8 months; and had recently seen Ann Jacobs Pakradooni who had looked her up while on a trip with her husband. Dot said Ann looked wonderful.

A card from Harriet Pullen Phillips tells of her move to live with Ormsby's father and brother. She says she may have three men to darn socks for, but there are compensations such as a resident baby sitter (grandpa) and a cook. She has been enjoying the Sweet Briar group there in Pittsburgh.

A nice newsy epistle from Diddy Christian Mulligan brings news of a fat blond daughter already 13 months old and not yet reported to you through this department. Her name is Mellinda Whitten. Diddy and Stu have bought a house in Westmoreland Hills, and this Diddy claims is a clear indication that they will be residents of Washington, D. C., for ever and ever. She reported recent glimpses of Elizabeth Shepherd Scott and of Barbara MacNeil Blessing who was on her way to visit Ann Jacobs Pakradooni, Louise Woodruff Angst and Camille Guyton Guething. Diddy also thought several of our class would be interested in news of one of the male "members" of our class, namely "Presh," or maybe he prefers to be known only as Henry Shepherd these days. Anyhow, he is married and living in Shepherdstown, W. Va., where he and his wife are attending Shepherd College, and doing very well. He is studying agriculture and applying what he learns on his grandmother's farm.

All of which reminds me that perhaps 1 should have told you that "Paka" Barnes has a 3 months' old son.

Frances Gregg Petersmeyer writes joyously of their January vacation in Florida. Wrede's firm had leased a beach cottage for the season on a small island off the Gulf Coast and by a fluke the whole Petersmeyer family was able to stay there most of the month. Evidently they all benefitted immeasurably and are completely sold on winter vacations.

Nancy Pingree Drake sent me a dear picture of her two boys, and the big news from Anne McJunkin Briber is the arrival of her son, Frank E. Briber III, on January 25. Sister Jane visited her right before and her mother at the time so what with keeping up with our Fund collecting she has been quite busy.

The reports are that Fay Martin Chandler is much better. I received a post-holiday note from her containing news of her children and friends but no information on her own health. She says her younger daughter, Mimi, is most amusing and has quite a way with her which includes a wicked wink, used only at the most advantageous times. She told me that Lou Moore Nelson is in Iowa with her year-old daughter, Beverly, and husband, Bruce, who is studying for a Ph.D. in Physics. And for brief squibs we find Tish Ord Elliott rejoicing at the idea of moving east again and Karen Norris Sibley's pretty face impressing people as much as ever. Fay had lunched in Norfolk with Byrd Smith Hunter who is waiting to move into the new home she and Henry are building. Everyone says it is a perfect place. Meanwhile, Esther Jett Holland and Hugh are living in Suffolk. Esther wrote me earlier of this plan but I lost the letter temporarily (wedding time again) and so forgot to tell you that and also her good news of Caroline Miller McClintock's baby girl, Rosemerry, born on Caroline's birthday, September 24.

I have talked with Elsie McCarthy Samson who seems quite busy keeping care of her children and a cold. I myself am disgracefully slow at routine domesticity and don't seem to have all the time on my hands everyone expects me to, but nevertheless I have started going to Art School a couple of days a week. I don't know what it's proving but it's fun, which is what is most important. Our first assignment was to paint the town, and I haven't been back since . . .

Class Secretary: Martha Holton (Mrs. Donald George Glesser) 1128 Shelly Drive. Manmee. Ohio.

Fund Agent: AUDREY BETTS, 211 West Fisher Avenue, Greensboro, North Carolina.

My news is meagre again but this time I have an excuse for not taking more time to find it. Don and I became proud parents of a 7 lb., 14 oz. boy, Gary Lloyd, on Friday the 13th in January. All is fine, but I'm keeping busy, hence not much news-chasing.

Mia Hecht Morgan had her second boy, George Sear Morgan, on Valentine's Day, February 14.

Frances Bickers Pinnell spent a week-end in Roanoke with Edith Page Gill Breakell and Stan not too long ago. Their apartment is adorable and hospitality wonderful. Frances adds she saw Rosemary Neuby Mullen in Richmond. Rosy has a cute little boy.

Ellen Dodson Wrightman is reported to have had a baby but the size and variety is unknown—to me, at least.

Deen Brugger Wetzig has two children, Carl, 2 years, and Dorrie, 6 months. They're living in a nice house which is quite a welcome change, says Deen, from a two-room apartment with no kitchen sink. Paul has started his new residency in Opthalmology at the New York Hospital.

Louise Cross was married April 9, 1949, to Ralph Bryant Tate.

Don't forget this is reunion year! I'm hoping to get there one way or another even if I have to strap the young 'on on my back and walk. Come on back if it's at all possible.

1946

Class Secretary: ARIANA JONES, 38 Wiggins Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: Polly Vandeventer, 1101 Graydon Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

My heartfelt thanks to all of you who started the New Year right by sending replies to my post cards. Let's begin with the last one I received—an ingenious card announcing the arrival of Joan Eldredge Hewson on February 18. Tom and Betsy Gurley Hewson are the proud parents.

Eleanor Myers Cole's daughter, Anne Louise, was born at 1:27 a. m. New Year's Day, the first 1950 baby in Broward County (Ft. Lauderdale) Florida. El and Walt are making plans to build a house on a lot on the beach of Ft. Lauderdale. El writes that the tourists are flocking to their town and the "old crackers" like the Coles are almost afraid to go downtown it's so "trafficky"! One visitor they wanted to see but missed was Nolly Thompson who was down for a vacation after Christmas.

A wonderful and newsy letter from Ellen Robbins Red says that she had just returned from a trip to Dallas where she saw Ann Atkinson Keever and her two-year-old daughter. Ellen often sees Phyllis Exall Galbraith and her family. They have a cute little house with a tiny back yard which they converted into a swimming pool last summer. You can imagine how popular that was with the neighborhood! Ellen and David are in the midst of building a very modern house and expect to move in about the middle of May. They will hardly be settled before they are off for Mexico again. David will teach a history of Mexican architecture with the University of Houston Extension Course in Mexico City. Ellen describes Mexico as "the most fabulous place" and is looking forward to the summer.

Virginia Wynn had a wonderful trip to Europe last summer. She was gone three months and saw just everything. She is now busy taking a business course in Louisville.

Martha Witherspoon Brannan moves around so fast I have trouble keeping up with her. She is now living in Birmingham where her husband is a resident in surgery at T. C. I. Hospital.

On April 5, Betty Ann Bass will marry George Norris and then spend her honeymoon in the Carribean. George graduated from Yale in 1939 and is affiliated with a flour milling company in Knoxville. Ellen Thackray will be Bass' maid of honor.

Mary Lou Holton writes that she enjoys being a student again. She is working for her M.A. in French at the University of Michigan. She is thrilled over her new role of aunt to Marty Holton Glesser's son who was born in January. Mary Lou has received a picture of Caroline Rudulph Sellers' daughter, Susan, and says she looks like a Dresden doll. Mary Lou also sends the sad news that Ellen Thackray's father died this winter.

Helen Graeff sounds very busy with all her duties as Minister of Music and Director of Yooth Activities at a Methodist Church in Danville. Her title certainly is a mouthful and her activities left me a little breathless. She directs four choirs, plans the music for all the church services, arranges supper meetings and programs for young people, and presents special musical services as well. Helen sent the program for her recital of Christmas music. She is also busy arranging all-Bach programs which will be broadcast over the local statiun this winter. She writes enthusiastically "the job gets better all the time."

Alice Eubank is working in New York and likes it very much according to reports. The reports did not say what she is doing, however.

The class of '47 is still making its way down center aisle. Stu McGuire, I believe, was our first bride of 1950. She was married in February to Bates McCluer Gilliam who teaches English at V. M. I. They are making their home in Lexington, Virginia.

The Fitzgeralds, Sue and Kay, are engaged. Sue is planning a June wedding. Her fiance is from Washington, D. C., where Sue has been working. Kay's wedding will take place during the summer. She is engaged to Lewis Booker of Delaware. He is a med student at Virginia. Kay is working for Glamonr magazine.

Cindy Converse is marrying Al Asch, who is a New York architect. And speaking of New York, I heard via the grapevine that Irving Brenizer has a very exciting and glamorous job in New York City. I think she is secretary to a Broadway producer . . . and speaking of Broadway, Saravette Royster has, not just a part, but the role of the leading lady in "The Hasty Heart," the spring production at the Raleigh Little Theater. In addition to rehearsals every night, Saravette is holding down her very fine position with the North Carolina Medical Society and house-keeping in a darling apartment with three other girls.

Ernie Banker is going to California this summer with her family.

Katy Street Sharp wrote me a very fine letter which I received just after the last letter was sent in. Unfortunately, I have lost that letter, and I am so sorry. I promise not to lose any more!

Many thanks to those of you who answered my cards, but I would still love to hear from more of you. After all, regardless of what you say, I am dependent on you for news of our class. Pat Brnwn is now assistant art editor at Allan & Bacon in Boston. She is living with her family in Milton, Massachusetts. Flip Eustis is also working for a publisher in Boston. Carolyn Cannady Evans is working at the Harvard Observatory while Hervey is finishing Harvard Business School. Nancy Jones is at Katherine Gibbs in Boston this year.

Dot Bottom Gilkey has an apartment in New York. She keeps hoose, audits a few classes at Union Theological and does social work for her church. I had a long chat with Dot on one of her visits home.

Alice Dahm Prentiss now has an apartment in Baltimore. June Eager Finney is teaching second grade, dramatics, history and athleticand keeping house for Bill! June is still as efficient as ever! Trip Corddry is working at Johns Hopkins Hospital. Tat Aubrey is teaching fourth grade at Mount Washington public school in Baltimore. Judy Baldwin Waxter is teaching third grade in the Baltimore schools.

Judy Easley is working as copy girl for the Washington Post. She has had several articles on her trip abroad published.

Jody McCarthy is at the Winnetka Secretarial School. Ann Henderson is attending the American Academy of Art in Chicago. Dot Wallace is judging soap contests in Chicago. She and Jane Taylor joined Betty Wellford, Mag Towers and me at Sweet Briar for a hilarious Faculty Show. Suzanne Edwards is at modeling school in Chicago.

Preston Hodges married Eugene Hill on February 18 in Petersburg. Stevie Stevens, Larry Lawrence, and Katie Cox were bridesmaids. Bill and Judy Baldwin Waxter, Jody Becker, and Bunny Barnett came south for the occasion. Bunny stayed with me and we commuted to Petersburg along with Caroline Casey, Betty Wellford, Margaret Towers, and Francis and Ann Doar Jones. Stevie caught the bouquet and got the ring in the cake. Bunny could do no better than a bulldog's face! It was certainly fun seeing so many of our class together again. Katie visited me after Preston's wedding and attended Stu Mc-Guire's ('47g) wedding to Bates McCluer Gilliam. Marie Musgrove spent several days in Richmond in February. What fun we had rehashing our trip to Europe. Alice Trout spent several hours here en route to Florida. On her way back to Roanoke, Alice visited Stevie in Charleston and who should show up but Preston and Gene Hill. Stevie is now going to business school and working for the Charleston Gardens.

Mimi Powell is giving piano lessons in Houston now. She has about fifteen pupils.

Libby Truehart spent several weeks in Florida this winter with her sister.

Maggie Woods Tillet has an apartment in Charlotte, North Carolina. She keeps busy keeping house and looking after her new dog, Jigger.

Alice says that you all contributed to the Fund and now I ask you that you all contribute news to me.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE PRESIDENT-ELECT

Mrs. Pannell paid a visit to the College on May 30, when she was introduced to faculty, Staff and Students. She will take over on July 1, and Miss Lucas will leave for Europe shortly thereafter.

A Greeting to Alumnae

by Dr. Anne Pannell

It IS a very happy thought to be coming home to Virginia and to have this opportunity to thank you for your hearty welcome to the Sweet Briar family. On this occasion I want to make a very earnest plea for your help for the college and myself. I feel that Miss Glass and Miss Lucas by their splendid contributions have paved the way for the kind of objective thinking on the part of the students and faculty at Sweet Briar which will make it an institution ready to play a constructive role in these baffling but exciting days. A college can only be successful when it is based on cooperation. A college does not consist merely of the faculty and students but of the long line of previous students. For a college to be successful it must have the united support of all its students past and present. It is an honor to follow in the footsteps of such distinguished predecessors as Mary Benedict, Emilie Watts Mc-Vea, Meta Glass and Martha B. Lucas. Your former presidents have accomplished much because they have been fortunate enough to have the kind of constructive cooperation which makes a great college. May I ask for the same kind of whole-hearted support in the days ahead so that together we may see visions and build them?

Commencement Address, June 5, 1950

by Martha B. Lucas

The seniors chose President Lucas to be their speaker for the forty-first annual Commencement. Their gift to the College is to be a portrait of Miss Lucas. Graduates of 1947, 1948 and 1949, and members of past and present alumnae councils, gave the college $722 for the Nan and Nancy Askew Foreign Student Fund, begun by Miss Lucas.

STUDENT publication at the Brooks School in North Andover, Massachusetts, recently addressed inquiries to several hundred famous people asking them what advice they would like to give any student on the occasion of his graduation. Mr. Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the United Nations, replied: "Understand and support the United Nations in its work of preventing a third world war." British Author Evelyn Waugh said (with tongue evidently well placed in cheek) that men should be admonished to go to the university, read philosophy, history and the classics, and ride horses; that women should go to Europe, learn the French and English languages, study architecture and modesty. Professor and Author Henry Steele Commager professorially advised: "Keep an open mind and an experimental attitude . . . Don't be perfectionist. Avoid the doctrinaire and the purely theoretical . . . Damn the absolute." Mr. George Bernard Shaw replied that he would not give a graduate any advice unless he asked for it, in which case he would warn him that the adviser was not infallible and was, at best, a generation out of date. There's considerable wisdom in these various suggestions, and I trust that the notice recently given them by the American Press has served to stem the flood of commencement oratory by which helpless school and college graduates become inundated about this time of the year.

Of course, for today's commencement address you have only yourselves to blame. For better or for worse you chose me as your commencement speaker and courteously demurred when I recommended other and far more distinguished names for your consideration. The intimate truth is that you knew that I knew that commencement speeches should last no more than half an hour. And that's not something you can say to a visiting dignitary who comes with a brief case full of manuscript and an eager-beaverness to bring you up to date on his life and works, and state of the universe, in just 50,000 well chosen words.

Howsoever that may be, you have invited me to be your commencement speaker; and I therefore, wish to speak directly to you, on what I believe to be the most important and essential matter for us to consider together on this significant day. I intend to speak "within the limit," pointedly, and with solemn emphasis, for I believe that very great issues are at stake. I want to talk about the future of free minds—and the meanings, true and false, of American conservatism.

Long before you came to college you may have repeated aloud with your class at school—or read to yourself from a post office wall "The Freedom Pledge." I saw it recently framed and hung on the wall in a government building in Washington. This is the pledge.

"I am an American
Free to speak without fear
Free to worship God in my own way
Free to stand for what I think right
Free to oppose what I believe wrong
Free to choose those who govern my country
This heritage of Freedom I pledge to uphold
For myself and all mankind."

That is your pledge, as an American. These are your freedoms as an American. Freedom to speak without fear, to stand for what you think right and oppose what you believe wrong. But the searching and all important question is will you do it, will you exercise these freedoms: will you oppose what you believe wrong, will you uphold this beritage of freedom for yourself and all mankind?

We in America are thinking and talking a great deal these days about preserving our freedoms, about protecting the individual under our form of government from authoritarian encroachments which might limit his freedom of thought, his freedom of worship, his freedom of speech, his right to live as he wants to live, in friendly cooperation with his fellows. But these are troubled times when widespread conflict rages between sinister forces which are contending in the field for the control of the minds of men, and for the ultimate negation of all that our spiritual heritage of Democratic freedom represents. Contending doctrines in politics, economics, and religion are aligning themselves for what would seem to be a war-to-the-death against man's onward march toward freedom. Communist dogma, fascist dogma, authoritarian religious dogma are throughout the world driving with determination and self-righteous fanaticism for the control of human destiny. These are indeed days when we must understand much more clearly than we have in the pist the spiritual foundations of our democracy, for it is the spiritual content which gives democracy its essential substance and which alone can enable it to survive in this battle for the hearts and souls of men.

This college, in the liberal arts tradition, and the graduates of this college cannot but be vitally concerned with these contemporary threats to freedom and their responsibilities in enabling freedom to survive. This kind of education which we call "liberal" education is, traditionally and essentially, that kind of education which liberates the mind and frees the mind from bondage. Your college education can be judged successful to the degree that it has served to free you from prejudices and misconceptions, from ignorance and narrowness of mind, to the degree that it has really enabled you to gain perspective on the nature of man and the values by which men live. Liberal Education, by its very nature, should be a towering bulwark in defense of freedom. To whom should we look for courageous leadership in the defense of American Freedom if not to the graduates of our liberal arts institutions? It is you and other liberally educated people throughout our country who must defend the American Dream. If we are to conserve the principles of freedom which inspired the birth of our nation, you and other free human beings must stand firm against the oncoming forces of authority and tyranny, whether those forces originate in communist, fascist or ecclesiastical dogmas, in defiance of the inalienable rights of man. You will find, as we who are your forerunners have found, that the forces of authority most frequently hide behind the cloak of what they call "conservatism," a word of their own special make, designed to confuse the issue by insinuating that the opponent's position represents a radical change from "what has been." The Philosopher, Ernest Hocking, commented in one of his books on religion a few years ago that it is impossible for a person to be too conservative. The important question is what he wants to

It is of the utmost importance in these difficult days that we keep the record absolutely straight, that we recognize as basic to our American way of life the principles of freedom, equality, and justice upon which our nation was founded. If we believe in the principles of the founding Fathers, if we work to conserve these values of the past for the benefit of the future, we are true conservatives, in Hocking's vital sense of the word. We must also have the courage of our conservative convictions, to stand forthrightly for principles of individual liberty and to oppose uncompromisingly all radical authoritarianism, from whatsoever quarter.

But first we must have quite clear in our minds the nature of our heritage of liberty and its meaning to our forefathers and to us. In 1864 Abraham Lincoln said, "The world has never had a good definition of liberty, and the American people just now are much in need of one. We all declare for liberty; but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing."

Today, with the crucial political conflict of our century centering in the struggle for individual liberty, many of our people are still confused about the meaning of the word and its relation to our democratic heritage. The confusion, I think, comes more from our ignorance and indolence than from any lack of clarity in the thinking, speaking, and acting of those from whom we have inherited America's great liberal tradition. Their record is clear. It was a young gentleman from a nearby county in this state of Virginia who at the age of 33 wrote one of the most justly famous political documents of all time, the Declaration of Independence. "We declare these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness." To secure these rights, our thirteen original colonies broke away from the British Commonwealth to become free and independent states. Basic to this declaration and this rebellion against authority, was a spiritual conviction reaching far beyond the authoritarianisms of nationalistic or tribal point of view. The Declaration did not say that Americans are born free and equal but that all men are so born. It was for the entire human family that Thomas Jefferson and his fellow patriots asserted the equality of human rights and not for one nation or one group alone. Here was indeed a higher faith, a spiritual conviction of universal implication, which challenged the dogmatic exclusiveness, the tribal, racial, limited viewpoints common to the old evaluation of human personality. Here was a faith, born of deep religious conviction, looking toward a world of freedom and brotherhood without exclusiveness.

Only from a free mind could such a statement of faith come forth. It was from free thinking men, with the courage of their intellectual vision, and spiritual conviction that we have inherited our great tradition. Jefferson once wrote, "I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man." Ben Franklin voiced his faith as forthrightly: "God grant that not only the love of liberty but a thorough knowledge of the rights of man may pervade all the nations of the Earth, so that a philosopher may set his feet anywhere on its surface and say 'this is my country.'"

Holding spiritual convictions similar to those expressed by Jefferson and Franklin were most of the leading figures in the founding of our democratic form of government: such men as Washington, Adams, Madison, Mason, and Monroe. (A disproportionate number of Virginia gentlemen in the lot! Only slightly appropos of this was a comment recently made in a Washington paper on certain aspects of the system of public education in our state. Said this particular gentleman "Virginia is proud of being called the cradle of democracy." But the State Constitution has prevented the infant from growing up.") It was inevitable, of course, that these Founding Fathers should be condemned by the authoritarians of their day, in both Church and State, as rebels, heretics, atheists, infidels . . . and all the other colorful verbiage with which the defenders of authority have been wont to defend their positions. Just as you, if you actively ally yourselves with America's liberal tradition, may on occasion be slandered in our time by such "fighting words" as "nihilist," "communist," or just plain "radical."

But time and the American Dream of responsible freedoms under God have gone marching on. The great American tradition has had courageous and celebrated spokesmen among the religionists, philosophers, poets, legislators, and teachers of every generation. One of the greatest of America's prophets, Ralph Waldo Emerson, expressed bluntly his belief in the importance of the individual as opposed to authority: "Whoso would be a man must be a non-conformist." Emerson condemned religious creeds as imposing the opinions of some upon the minds of all. Such formulations of ideas, he believed, profaned the sacredness of the mind's integrity. For Emerson the nature of man and the nature of God were such that each man has the freedom and the responsibility to think through his own religious beliefs, free from the dictation of any institution or tradition.

But what about our individual integrity, as related to this American tradition of individual freedom? If we deeply believe in the sacredness of human personality and are inwardly compelled to ally ourselves with those who, like Jefferson, have sworn eternal hostility to every form of tyranny over the human mind, do we simply become "yesmen" to a tradition? In other words, if we admit to ourselves what we actually are—the true conservatives of America's freedom tradition, do we thereby lose faith with the very spirit of independence and free inquiry upon which this tradition rests? The question is a highly "academic" one and easy to answer for you accomplished academicians! It's really almost a nonsense question; but the more sophistic souls among the radical authoritarians do press the point from time to time. One of the best answers ever given was that of Edward Everett Hale in his "Foundations of the Republic," when he wrote:

"For your life and mine, today, and tomorrow, if we wish to maintain a Republic, we must keep in mind our own part in living up to the ideas of the fathers. This is not because they were the ideas of the fathers, but because they are infinite ideas. They represent the eternities . . . they rest upon absolute religion, the religion in which all men are of one blood, every man is a son of God, every man bears his brother's burdens."

The ideas of the Fathers, yes, but not because they were held by great men of earlier days but because they are godly ideas. When you were a child you thought as a child . . . you perhaps accepted the ideas of your parents because they were their ideas (unless you had the rare good fortune to grow up in a truly democratic home). But now that you are adults, you probably consider and evaluate the opinions of your parents in the light of all that you have learned and all that your searching, intuitive intelligence has discovered in "the mind of God." For the mature mind, there is a reference beyond parental dictation, beyond creedal formulations, beyond institutional authority. And I should be quite frustrated, as I believe many human beings are, if I had to try to define this further source of inspiration without reference to Divine Reality, the love of which I believe to be perfect freedom.

The record of the past is clear. Through the years of our history as a Republic, those who have worked to make the American Dream a reality have shared distinctive qualities of mind and heart, which were these: Freedom of thought, persistent search for truth, unfettered ethical insights, a profound respect for human rights, humility before the ultimate Mystery which some revered in silence and others called God. But permeating and essential to all was freedom, freedom to think and test traditional truths and new truths, freedom apart from the dictates of tradition, to seek the meaning of God in human life. The history of our American experiment with freedom and democracy has been shaped by liberators, whose first loyalty was not to any dictation but to the truth which affirmed itself in their own spiritual experience and sprang from their own moral insights.

But where do we stand today? It sometimes helps to see ourselves as others see us. Andre Siegfried, a distinguished French academician, (with whom many of our Junior Year in France group have studied in Paris, both last year and this) has just published a book "L'Ame des Peuples," in which he attempts an analysis of the national elements in the synthesis which we call "occidental civilization." In the section on America, he points with alarm to the current trend toward conformity in our country, to our deliberate destruction of whatever varies from the norm. The individual in America, says Siegfried, is sinking into a job-conscious mass-man, who sometimes still tries to talk like a frontiersman or pioneer but is the more incongruous therefor.

It is helpful to have Professor Siegfried's evaluation; Lut we have only to look about us on every side in America to see widespread suspicion and mistrust of the very principles upon which our society rests. Nor is it our society alone which is threatened at its very foundations.

Throughout the world, the struggle for individual liberty is the crucial conflict of our day, a struggle in the last analysis, between the brotherhood of free men and the institutions of servitude. Our American ideal of democracy is on trial everywhere in the world. What we in America think and do about individual freedom directly or indirectly affects the policies of every government and the people of all nations. If we desert the way of freedom here, the ideal will suffer immeasurably everywhere.

One member of our United States delegation to the United Nations recently suggested that "the best way to solve world problems was to make democracy a success in this country so that it would be respected throughout the world." Twice within the last two years, I have had occasion to represent this country in international educational conferences. And at each conference I have been questioned closely by delegates from other countries about those aspects of our American practice which continue to belie our democratic ideals. Most frequently do they comment on discriminatory practices against minority groups, particularly the American Negro. "Our people," they say, "are confused about your American democracy. You in America preach equal rights for all without distinction of race or creed; but only in Russian Communism do we see this ideal put into practice." Such comments perhaps reflect inadequate knowledge or prejudiced distortion with regard to the actual practice both in this country and in communist-dictated countries.

We in America know perfectly well that some progress is being made in some places in working toward the realization of our democratic ideals. For example, I go from your commencement today to give the commencement address at the North Carolina College at Durham, a co-educational college for Negroes, supported by the state of North Carolina. And well supported! The college has a handsome campus with a number of new and capacious buildings. In addition, the state legislature has made available about 41/2 nillion dollars for permanent improvements. Five new buildings are now under construction and two more will begin going up this month. Just a week from today, I shall be participating in commencement exercises of the university of my own home town in Kentucky, the University of Louisville, which happens to be the oldest municipal university in our country. Just this spring the Board of Trustees of our university has voted to open the doors of the institution to Negro students. A few days ago, the director of the Fulbright Program at the Institute of International Education told me of a recent conversation he had had with a student from Germany studying this year at the University of Oklahoma, another southern university which has within the last year admitted Negro students, to the graduate school. This German student said that America as she was seeing it at the University of Oklahoma was quite different than she had been told in Germany it would be. "It's not true," she said, "that some American citizens are segregated from others just because of their race or color." She continued "I have a brother in Germany who is a Communist and feels that America is a dangerous and undemocratic country. But I know that he will feel differently when I tell him how the faculty and students here at Oklahoma feel about the racial question."

The picture is fortunately not entirely dark. There are glimmers of hope and beacons of promise on our horizons. And for our own part, we know full well that it is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness. But we cannot and must not lose sight of the fact that if freedom fails, the darkness will overwhelm us. And this new and greater darkness, if it comes, will be filled with the sound and fury of destruction and human suffering such as our troubled planet has never seen. In this half light of the world's present uncertainty, we must above all else hold fast to our principles; or we are lost. These are days when all with vision and courage must dedicate themselves to live for a great cause. Many have fought and died for this cause of human freedom. But it is even harder in many ways to live for freedom. There have been other periods in our own nation's history of particular stress and strain, when the Great Principles were being challenged, as they are now, from many quarters. I have often walked along the little park of Commonwealth Avenue in Boston and always loved to stop beside the seated statue of William Lloyd Garrison. On either side of the base of his memorial statue are written these words:

"My country is the world
My countrymen are all mankind
I am in earnest, I will not equivocate
I will not excuse, I will not retreat
A single inch. And I will be heard"

Another defender of the Great Principles, Thaddeus Stevcus, disposed of a lot which he had owned in an exclusive cemetery and made arrangements for his own burial in a cemetery whose gates were open to all and then wrote the words later inscribed upon his grave marker:

"I repose in this quiet and secluded spot not from any natural preference for solitude; but finding other cemeteries limited by charter rules as to race, I have chosen this that I might illustrate in death the principles which I advocated through a long life—equality of man before his Creator."

These two defenders of human freedom were especially concerned with one aspect of the over-all problem with which we today are faced. But the important thing is that such men as these dared to live courageously and even unpopularly for the principles in which they believed. It is this courage, this sense of high purpose, this uncompromising devotion, to one's highest ideals which we now must make manifest in our daily lives if mankind is to survive. In your homes, in your communities, in the organizations which you join, in the schools and offices in which you work, continue in the active service of freedom. No matter who calls you what, dare to stand for what you think right and to oppose what you believe to be wrong. Expect to be ridiculed, lambasted and exacerbated by the ranks of apathy, ignorance, and entrenched intolerance. But to the very best of your energy, training, and liberal mindness, keep faith with America's great tradition of freedom.

Mr. Dwight Eisenhower last week sent out invitations to the 200th anniversary of Columbia University . . . In 1954 (four years' deadline for responding to an invitation gives you lots of time to think up reasons not to go! But in this case I am sure that everyone will want to be there.) The only definite plan to date for this important birthday party is the theme of the occasion. The theme is "Freedom." This theme has been chosen because freedom, in Mr. Eisenhower's words, is the "one principle which all free universities unfailingly must defend."

Certainly no more suitable subject could have been chosen for that celebration four years hence. But the application of the theme must be made now, in all of our colleges and universities, as well as in the daily lives of everyone of us. This college can play an important part in the defense of freedom if you who are its Alumnae (or soon will be) will put conviction and persistent effort into making it so. In announcing our next President, Time Magazine, that far from accurate arbiter of public opinion, recently referred to "fashionable, forward-looking Sweet Briar, where everything will go right on running just as smoothly and amiably as ever." As usual, they could not have been more wrong, about either the past or, I believe, the future. The quest for truth never did "run smooth"; and as long as there is living space for honest differences of opinion, never shall. Freedom is a rocky, uphill course, with slippery shale and obtrusive boulders to make the footing difficult. But, be that as it may, it would appear that only free human beings, with free minds and the love of freedom in their hearts, can do the work which must be done. What we have proudly called the American Dream, but which we know is the dream of free men everywhere, must, I believe, become the World Dream of all the peoples, if mankind is to survive. America's way is freedom, freedom to find an ever greater and more abundant faith. Freedom can be won and held only with our defenses constantly on guard against encroaching tyrannies over our minds and hearts and persons. Such freedom and such faith can be won for the world, I deeply believe. It must, if man is to know what he may yet become!

Miss Long Leaves Sweet Brian

by Martha von Briesen

Miss Long was the speaker at the Annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association June 3, after which she was presented with our gift of a Sheffield tea tray.

IN THE fall of 1919, a young woman joined the faculty of Sweet Briar College. In June, 1950, this same woman, still young in spirit, is retiring from the faculty, taking with her the good wishes and gratitude of students, alumnae, and staff colleagues.

Miss M. Dee Long, who has been professor of English since 1930 and acting head of the department on four different occasions, likes to recall with a chuckle how very close she came to leaving Sweet Briar in 1920, instead of 1950. When she was asked to chaperone a group of students to a dance in Lexington after she had been at the college only a few weeks she decided to go "because I thought I would probably never have another opportunity to see Lexington. I didn't like Sweet Briar and I wasn't going to stay longer than a year."

But somehow, Miss Long's first feelings about Sweet Briar changed, and she remained to become one of its most loyal supporters, giving to the development of the young college her critical interest and hard work. Thirty-one years of such service, by no means confined entirely to committee work even though she has at one time or other been on almost every major committee, is bound to have results.

For one thing, there are the returning alumnae, who remember Miss Long as a wise counselor and friend, whether they ever took her courses or not. For 17 years Miss Long was a resident in one of the dormitories. Former students come back to Sweet Briar and almost without exception they make a point of looking her up, feeling assured in advance that they will get a warm welcome, a chance to learn something about the latest developments of importance at Sweet Briar, and an opportunity to tell about their own work or their families. That the alumnae will miss her when they return to college is unquestioned.

As for the present student body, they showed how they felt about Miss Long by dedicating this year's Briar Pafeb, the college yearbook which came out a few days ago, as follows: "Here is a true First Lady of Sweet Briar, a gentle and enthusiastic friend, a beloved professor... She lives up to the minute, yet is one of the few people in our community in whom tradition is integrated with the present day... So it is in remembering this delightful lady, her generosity and understanding, her keen wit and the impish sparkle in her eyes, and her great love for Sweet Briar and its people, that we dedicate with pride and appreciation the 1950 edition of the Briar Pateb to M. Dee Long."

Miss Long's colleagues know her as a tireless worker for whatever will contribute to the strengthening progress of the college. Being a member of the Committee on Admission for 30 years, for example, has given her one opportunity for such a contribution. In the beginning, she recalls, the committee only met two or three times a year to find out how registrations were coming along, but in recent years the committee members have had an increasing load of meetings and discussions and careful deliberations. To her, this committee's greatest achievement was its successful promotion of the adoption, in 1948, of the full program of tests administered by the College Entrance Examination Board as a requirement for admission.

Looking back over her years as a member of the English Department, Miss Long points with some satisfaction to its initiative in promoting two academic developments which she feels are of major importance in a liberal arts college: the Honors Plan of Study, a form of tutorial instruction for students with initiative and ability to do independent work, adopted in 1931; comprehensive examinations for all seniors majoring in English, adopted in 1941.

A fondness for history, legends, and folklore has led Miss Long to discover for herself much interesting data about the early days of the college, the historical background of this region and of the Fletcher and Williams families, and the founding of Sweet Briar plantation.

Throughout Amherst County, Miss Long has many friends, people she has met and worked with, aided and encouraged. She helped in the establishment and growth of the Amherst County Health Association, she was active in making the annual Amherst County Day at Sweet Briar an occasion for uniting the college and the county, and she served as president of the local chapter of the American Association of University Women in 1945-46 when it made and published a pamphlet on The Status of the Negro in Amherst County. Out of this study grew a scholarship tund for annual aid to a graduate of the Amherst Training School who needs such help to go to college. Miss Long has helped with the selection of each successive scholarship winner.

Much more than that, Miss Long has become well acquainted with many individuals in the county. For example, she knows most of the employees of the college and she knows and follows with interest the progress of their families as well. When she was told about a project to honor some of the long-time employees at Sweet Briar she said at once, "Oh, let me help, too."

In a lighter vein, Miss Long has taken great delight in her participation in the faculty shows, given at fouryear intervals "for the enlightenment of the students." She has helped to originate skits, and she has been one of the star performers in quite a number of these frolics. Her performances are invariably received with gales of laughter.

Plans for next year? Miss Long smiles and says she is going back home to Kentucky, probably to Lexington, in order to be near the academic world in which she is at home, and in order to be near several members of her family who live "just down the road," near Paris. She says she is not going to join organizations which have committees, but neither is she "just going to sit down." Those who know her well agree that would be entirely out of keeping with her active spirit, but they hope she'll have plenty of time to indulge in two of her long-postponed enthusiasms, working double-crostic puzzles and going to horse shows and races. About the latter, Miss Long adds that she likes "just to look at beautiful horses."

Much could be written about Miss Long's academic interests, her studies in this country and abroad during her various leaves of absence, offices she has held and other phases of her career as a teacher. But such facts are not now foremost in the thoughts of those who know Miss Long and who are sorry to see her leave Sweet Briar. Miss Long was the center of many parties given during the last few weeks of the semester and she enjoyed that. True to form, she also took great pleasure in helping to honor others on several occasions. She was the leading spirit in raising a fund to honor the late Miss Mattie Patteson. On Sunday afternoon, May 28, Miss Long presided at the brief program to dedicate a small terrace, surrounded by newly planted shrubs and large enough to hold a garden bench and two chairs, on the lawn beside Miss Mattie's House (Faculty House 1). Mrs. Dew, Miss Howland, Dr. Harley, Miss Sparrow, and Dr. Rollins also shared in this ceremony, bringing to life remembrance of the past.

Then there was the occasion on June 1, when members of the community, old and young, joined to honor the 17

DON C. WHEATON RESIGNS

TO BE A VICE-PRESIDENT AT KENYON

Alumnae who have been graciously entertained at the Wheaton home at Sweet Briar will be sorry to hear that due to Mr. Wheaton's appointment to the newly-created post of financial vice-president of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, they will be leaving Sweet Briar on June 30. Mr. Wheaton will be responsible for all business and financial affairs of the college.

Second treasurer of Sweet Briar College, Mr. Wheaton succeeded the late William B. Dew in that office eight years ago. He is a director of the Lynchburg Trust and Savings Bank and of the Ferro Enamel Corporation, Cleveland.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Kenyon, Mr. Wheaton has been a member of its Board of Trustees since 1933. The following year he was appointed to the Board's committee on investments and has been its chairman since 1935. He is the author of the plan for managing college investments known as the Kenyon Plan, which has been in successful operation there since 1941.

The Lynchburg Daily Advance commented editorially upon Mr. Wheaton's resignation from Sweet Briar as follows:

"Since coming to Sweet Briar College in 1942, to be treasurer of that institution Don C. Wheaton has made many friends in the Lynchburg community and those friends have considered him to be a permanently adopted son, highly cherished. Therefore it is distressing to learn that he is leaving this summer to become financial vice-president of Kenyon College, at Gambier, Ohio.

"Besides being a graduate of Kenyon and a member of its Board of Trustees, Mr. Wheaton is an alumnus of the University of Virginia. With that, and his eight years of residence here, he has all the necessary attributes to be considered a Virginian and is so considered.

"Sweet Briar College and the Lynchburg-Amherst community will suffer a serious loss in Kenyon College's gain but perhaps Mr. Wheaton will retain his Virginia loyalties and at least a periodic resumption of residence with us.

"In congratulating him on his new distinction in accepting so responsible a post, we grieve at his going."

His successor at Sweet Briar has not yet been named.

women and 12 men who had served the college for 25 years or more. Miss Long's special delight was in being able to greet all of her old friends as each came forward to receive the certificate of gratitude and a gift of silver presented by Miss Lucas in the name of the college. Miss Long had some amusing incident, some personal reminiscence, some bit of homely, helpful philosophy to relate about each one, to the evident enjoyment of the whole company. Surely there could have been no higher tribute to her skill than that made the next morning by Cris Thompson, one of the recipients, who said, "Miss Long sure knows how to keep an audience goin'."

MRS. LYMAN HONORED

In honor of Mrs. Lyman, graduates of the classes of 1941-'49, and members of past and present alumnae councils, presented the college with a gift of $722 to the Eugene Lyman Lectureship. Mrs. Lyman was the speaker at our alumnae banquet at which time the presentation was made. She plans to spend the summer at her home in Massachusetts, and will then assume her duties at Union Theological Seminary.

News from Our Foreign Students, Past and Present

I came over from France to Sweet Briar College in 1918. I arrived just before the close of the World War I with other exchange students. President Woodrow Wilson was then at the White House. The American soldiers were fighting abroad; all over the world was great talk of their exploits.

Miss Emilie Watts McVea was then President of Sweet Briar College. I spent 5 years in that wonderful institution. After the first 2 years I got an A.B. degree and I remained 3 years more as an instructor.

Everything a girl could dream of was in the college—students from all over the United States, an able faculty, a perfect equipment and a fine campus. Everybody was a real friend. Studying, reading, playing was made easy and profitable. Entertainments were numerous; everyday life comfortable and interesting. One did learn a new language beautifully.

Here was peace and liberty. Victory could spread her wings to heaven.

All the problems of a girl's life were handled through the students' self-government. One did acquire a sense of responsibility towards the community. The glory of youth, the respect of elders went hand in hand.

My vocation was to be a teacher. Leaving Sweet Briar I taught 10 years in several schools in different parts of the country. Everywhere I met fine pupils, cordial people and made a good living. America, a land of opportunity was true to her word.

The United States is a fine country. I am proud and happy I have lived with the finest people of the universe.

Now I am at home in France. The World War II has taken place. The American soldiers returned to lead France to victory.

Here everybody is enchanted about American education. The land of skyscrapers holds the French imagination and everybody talks about the country of George Washington.

-- Antoinette Malet

As I officially belonged to the class of '48, collected my noise warnings in Grammer with '49 and took my exams along with a group consisting of '46 and '47 people, greetings to you all because in my memory we were one big happy family.

On coming home from the United States in September, 1946, I enlisted at Amsterdam University where I go to my classes in the daytime or haunt places like the University Library, the Institute for History of Art, etc., while living at home with my parents.

For our universities do not have a campus and the difterent buildings are scattered all over town with the result of 5000 odd students moving about on bicycles.

The fact that Dutch students don't live together in special student houses is a great disadvantage as they are apt to lose contact with each other. Sororities and fraternities are plenty but however active they may be, unable to produce the intensive student life of the American College.

This is one of the main reasons why I consider my year at S. B. C. of such high value to me whatever my future destination, as I have been able to live amongst the young generation of Americans for a year and therefore to experience how they think, act and study together under the most enjoyable circumstances to prepare themselves for their individual task in society.

Apart from the courses I took at Sweet Briar which proved to be of great help to my present studies, I found that one can learn more at a liberal arts college in the United States for which no immediate "credit" is given: a sense of responsibility, efficiency and sound friendship which form the base of any true democracy.

That's why I think I am a very privileged young woman and whenever old friends from S. B. C. come over to Amsterdam do we talk about the fun we had at college!

-ELIZABETH JANSMA.

First of all I want to voice my deep gratitude to those who have made a great effort to make my studying at Sweet Briar College possible. My appreciation is far beyond description.

It has always been my wish to see America, to learn and to understand the American way of life. My elder sister who had studied at

Rockford College (Rockford, Illinois) since 1946 had applied at schools for me practically all over America. In 1947 the admission was granted by Bryn Mawr College but I could not go because my mother just passed away and I had to take care of the family. A year later, I was accepted by Sweet Briar College, Rockford College, and Lake Erie College. My sister was strongly advised by the dean of Rockford College to choose Sweet Briar College for she understood that Sweet Briar College is not only a school of high academic standard but also an ideal place for girls to develop their personalities and characters as well. Both my sister and I were impressed by what we had heard and what we had read about Sweet Briar. Immediately we accepted the kind offer of scholarship with great joy and deep gratitude.

During the past two years of my stay in this country and through my personal contacts with the student body and all the friends that I have met here, I feel that I have been treated more as a welcome guest than a mere stranger from a foreign land. The Americans are so open-minded, cooperative, very friendly and on top of all these, they are ever ready to help others at all times with open arms. Wherever I go their courtesy, assistance and companionship make me feel like an American myself.

I am so happy to stay at Sweet Briar College. Personally I believe that it is a very good school, the exact kind for foreign students who can easily adapt themselves to the new environment. In a small liberal arts college one can easily get acquainted with the whole student body and the faculty members as well. Moreover one can receive a general education to be a well-rounded person and enjoy a real school life. I was so thrilled as I came over to see the Americans showing great interest in foreign students and doing their best to make them feel at home. The genuine friendliness surely did kill all the homesickness and fear.

There are several things by which I have been greatly impressed. First of all, it is the honor system that applies to every phase of school life. It gives us a chance to enjoy the freedom of the honor system and accept the full responsibility for ourselves and to create the highest ideal of honor at Sweet Briar.

The second amazing thing is the huge library where one can spend endless time absorbing what she wants—especially those numerous magazines in the Periodical Room which attract the full attention and interest of a foreign student, especially a Chinese who never in her life had an opportunity to read the magazines. In China, due to the dearth of paper, books are awfully expensive and limited. After the war many precious books were destroyed and burned.

The system of having faculty advisers for each student is wonderful. They are not only so kind to help you at any time in academic problems, but also in personal matters. This is especially valuable for a helpless foreign student who needs all kinds of help and advice.

The cheerful spirit of step-singing wins my great admiration. It surely is the most valuable part of a school life. It assures each one of us that we are a member of the big family where we share our joy, trouble and thoughts.

I do love Sweet Briar and the school life here. The fine thing is that I have not felt that I am an observer, an outsider coming from a foreign country, but a member of the student body. Taking part in the well organized community is not very difficult though I am somewhat inhibited by my imperfect knowledge of the English language. In spite of this handicap I still have a blessed life at Sweet Briar. I must give my sincere thanks to those who made my stay at Sweet Briar so successful.

—Tsun-hsien Kwan

Having studied two semesters at Sweet Briar it is fun to look way back to the facts that made my year of studies in Sweet Briar possible.

It was the dream of my childhood to go for a trip around the world. But the years of war and German secludedness interfered quickly with those dreams.

But nevertheless I was curious to see other countries—to meet other people. I hoped to get an idea about Americans by the occupation troops in Germany—but I found out that you only can get acquainted with people if you meet them in their own country, if you observe their way of living and thinking.

I badly wished to get an objective view about America and the Americans—so the offer of an application for an American college just came in time. Really, I was never so surprised as a few days before Christmas, 1948, when my Dean of high school in Stuttgart asked me whether I would be interested in filling in a scholarship application for U. S. A. I just could not believe it because I had not yet passed my final exams and I have never been a "brain" either, except that I was good at English.

I think I spent my whole Christmas vacation to cope with all that paper business: health form, academic records, reasons for studying abroad, curriculum vital and lots of different things.

Frankly, I was not very hopeful to make the race, for only 100 students among around 400 applicants could be awarded with a scholarship and I grew the more skeptical as I did not hear anything from the Military Government for ages.

Finally in February I got an invitation to a so-called exam to the M. G. in Stuttgart. It was anything but an exam—it was a nice conversation with an American and a German gentleman about my study plans. The only horrible thing was that I did not know anything about American history as I was asked for it. But obviously that did not make any difference. The day I finished my finals I got a Sweet Briar catalogue and a letter telling of my scholarship at Sweet Briar.

The educational and cultural branch had a very good idea: a great student meeting was arranged in July for all the scholarship holders as to give us some information about college life in America. Besides instruction by American professors we met the Yale Glee Club this week-end to get somewhat acquainted with American students.

On the 21st of August, 100 German students started from Frankfurt to Bremerhaven where the passports were checked once more.

The last day in Germany came. What a strange feeling. And on the 24th of August off we went on the troop transport, Cellan. 1 wished the voyage would have taken more than 9 days for it was just wonderful.

On the evening of the 2nd of September we arrived at Staten Island. There was New York with millions of many colored lights—looking rather like a fairy tale city than like the greatest city of the world. Everything was so incredible that I only came back into reality the next morning when we went on land, into the rush of New York on Labor Day week-end.

We all would have been lost if the Institute of International Education had not prepared such a well organized welcome.

Indeed, here we were, becoming conscious of the fact that we students now had the responsibility of German ambassadors.

New York brought innumerable new impressions—bewilderment, for it surpassed all my imaginations, but I learned to love it!

Except having had some tragic-comic language experiences I had a wonderful time with friends until I started to Sweet Briar.

The Sweet Briar Orientation Committee sent a student to meet me at Penn Station in New York to travel south with me. You can imagine what our conversation consisted of—questions and answers all the way down.

The nearer we came the more exciting and afraid I became. Would Sweet Briar be like I thought? Would I get along with American girls? How would I get used to my second home, where I was going to stay for one year?

There we were, and Sweet Briar was just like I had so often looked at it in the catalogue. The welcome was grand. From the first minute I did not feel like an observer but as an active member of Sweet Briar. This was wonderful and made me feel at home at once and helped to overcome the language difficulties and the few days of homesickness.

The problem of choosing the courses was a difficult one. Finally I solved it quite well under this point of view: I would want to study things I cannot study in Germany as well and subjects that are especially good at Sweet Briar.

I am very satisfied with my schedule—but I certainly was kept busy during that year with courses, tests, clubs, meetings, speeches, and sports.

Three things at Sweet Briar were most impressive to me: the student government with its honor system that really works marvelously, the "institution" of faculty advisers to whom you can come with any need, and the enormous college library.

My new-gained American friends prepared the nicest vacation for me at Christmas and in springtime. It was very nice and interesting for me to stay with American families, too, and in addition to that having the fine opportunity to go sight-seeing all along the east coast.

This rich year passed unbelievably fast. As happy as I am, going back to see my family in Germany again I am very sorry to leave Sweet Briar on the other hand. Sweet Briar meant a lot to me with its wonderful student body and faculty and not at least with its personal spirit.

I fulfilled my purpose over here in the U. S. A. through Sweet Briar: I learned about the people in the original environment, I made many very good friends and I will be able to bring many valuable experiences back to my country which needs badly to get an objective view of America and Americans.

On the other hand, it was a pleasure for me to be a German ambassador and it was not difficult at all to give impressions of Germany and its people to open-minded Sweet Briar.

When I am leaving Sweet Briar now I will still feel like a member of it, and I will never forget Sweet Briar, for the year at this wonderful place was a most important and fertile one in my life.

I am now living in Long Island City with my family. We have a small but comfortable place. My two daughters, the older one, Vickie, is four years old and the younger one, Virginia, is two years and eight months old. With two small children around, you can see I am a very busy person at home.

Last Christmas I opened a Chinese Gift Shop with some friends in Great Neck, Long Island, selling Chinese embroideries, oriental lamps and pictures, flower vases, figurines and many other beautiful Chinese arts and products. I worked in the store with my friends but had to quit recently on account of my health and the children. At the present time, I am not doing anything outside of my home. My main interest is my family, so I really do not have very much to tell you.

My husband is working for the Baketile Corporation which is a chemical concern manufacturing plastic raw materials. We planned to return to China after we were married, but our plan could not be carried out because of the conditions in China.

It has been quite a long time since I left Sweet Briar in 1944. I have wanted very much to come back to visit the school and all my dear friends, Dr. and Mrs. Wallace Rollins, Dean Mary Lyman, Miss Marie Reynolds, and many other dear ones. Their kindness and friendship have meant so much to me and have made me very happy during the years I spent in Sweet Briar. My very best wishes to all the dear ones in school.

A Sweet Briar-St. Andrews Exchange

On the list of foreign students at Sweet Briar next year will be Janet Graham, the first St. Andrews University student to come to Sweet Briar under a new exchange-student plan. For many years, two or three Sweet Briar girls have been permitted to spend their junior year at the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, and now, after some years of planning, a Scottish girl is to spend a year here. This scholarship has been made possible largely by private contributions, including some from Sweet Briar alumnae who have attended St. Andrews. At the same time that this full-expense scholarship has been provided for a St. Andrews girl, her university has offered a similar award to one of the two Sweet Briar girls chosen to attend St. Andrews next year.

Miss Graham, whose father is professor of botany at St. Andrews, has been attending the university there for two years. Botany and chemistry are her chief academic interests but she also plays badminton, cricket and tennis, and she is a member of the United Colleges first hockey eleven, a fact which is of particular interest to hockey players at Sweet Briar. Her chief hobby, she writes, is stamp-collecting and others are reading, country-dancing, bird watching and gardening.

Excerpt of a Letter from Janet to Dean Lyman

I am so thrilled to have been appointed as the exchange student to Sweet Briar, and I am looking forward very much to what I know will be a wonderful experience.

Having only been once out of Scotland before, I think I shall find America quite different to anything I have ever known and from all that I have heard Sweet Briar seems to be a really lovely place. Everyone has been so kind and helpful, that as yet I have no problems or questions to ask.

May I again say how much I am looking forward to seeing and to taking part in the life at Sweet Briar.

In Memoriam

MARY Chantler HUBBARD, '23g

Mary Chantler Hubbard died on Sunday, June 4, 1950, at her mother's home in West Virginia.

Mrs. Hubbard had been working on a special nutrition or health study at Brookings Institute in Washington, D. C., for six or eight months and had gone home for a a visit. She had a very detailed and useful study of health facilities in eight or nine states outlined and projected when her death occurred.

Mrs. Hubbard is survived by a son and her mother.

MARY CLEMENTINE Carter MURRAY, '40g

Mrs. Mary Clementine Carter Murray, wife of John R. Murray, died June 8, 1950, at her home in Orange, New Jersey, after a long illness.

Mrs. Murray was born in Topeka, Kansas. Aside from studying at Sweet Briar, she also studied at Columbia University and two summers in England and in France.

Mrs. Murray was a member of the Orange branch of the League of Women Voters and of the Friends of Orange Public Library.

Surviving besides her husband and parents are a son, George Edwin Patrick, and a brother.

Dr. Dora Neill Raymond Resigns

by Martha von Briesen

ILLNESS has forced Dr. Dora Neill Raymond, professor of history and a member of the faculty since 1925, to resign her post. Dr. Raymond became ill while she was in England where she has been studying and writing this year on a grant from the Guggenheim Foundation. News of Dr. Raymond's illness and of her resignation was received with sorrow at Sweet Briar.

Recognized as a scholar and teacher in the fields of British and modern European history, Dr. Raymond has for the past few years been devoting her summers and also a sabbatical leave in 1946-47 to the pursuit of her research for a biography of Lord Lytton, one of Queen Victoria's imperial emissaries. Three other books published by Dr. Raymond also grew out of her specialized interest in British history. They include: British policy and Opinion During the Franco-Prussian War, 1921; Political Career of Lord Byron, 1924; Oliver's Secretary—John Milton in an Era of Revolt, 1932.

In 1940, however, she published a biography of Captain Lee Hall of Texas which had as its setting her native state and reflected her keen interest in its history and folk lore. This book was acclaimed as the Texas book of the year by the Texas Institute of Letters.

A graduate of the University of Texas, and a native of San Antonio, Dr. Raymond also took her master's degree at that university. She holds a Ph.D. from Columbia University. She came to Sweet Briar as assistant professor of history in 1925, after having taught for two years at Smith College. In 1927 she became associate professor and two years later was promoted to professor of history.

She was head of the history department at Sweet Briar from 1937 to 1942, when that department became incorporated into the Division of Social Studies. Dr. Raymond retained the chairmanship of the history sub-division, and she served as chairman of the division from 1944 to 1946.

When the interdepartmental major in International Affairs was formed at Sweet Briar in 1938, Dr. Raymond became the chairman and she has retained this chairmanship since that time.

Experimental Theatre at Sweet Brian

ELEANOR M. RINGER, '42g, Instructor in English

Brooks Atkinson recently made a plea for more and better plays by contemporary dramatists, lamenting the fact that good revivals have predominated the current Broadway season. Whether or not Sweet Briar eventually can offer positive gratification to this noted critic's request is not ours to say, but we have taken a small step in this direction. We are trying to give the student playwrights (in English 285-286) the opportunity to see their plays in production.

It began this year with the production on May 12, 1950, of four one-act plays produced in the "arena" style in Grammer Commons.

Experimentation was the keynote of the evening, in all aspects. First in importance was the fact that the student-written plays came alive that night for the first time. These plays were good beginnings. Written in the first semester, they were reworked and reworked until put into production. The playwrights learned the trials of re-writing. I hough naturally nervous and hovering, their objectivity toward the plays was mature and thoughtful, and they have all stated that they learned more from the production than they could have learned from any other method of criticism.

All four of the plays dealt with family groups and problems with which the playwrights were familiar. Three were serious in nature and one was a satiric comedy leveled against socialized medicine. Each bore the unmistakable stamp of her author.

The second experimental aspect was the presentation in arena style. It was the first time this has been done at Sweet Briar, and all of those involved were wondering what kind of an audience would appear, and what this audience would think of this popular and very intimate style of theatre. The response was excellent. A few of our audience had seen it before, but to many it was a new experience. Over two hundred faculty and students jammed into Big Commons and their reactions were warm and enthusiastic. The majority enjoyed the strange feeling of "being a fly on the wall." Some were averse to it, and that is natural. (May I say here and now that I do not think the arena or ring theatre will oust the proscenium stage, but it is an interesting and wonderfully exciting method of production which can frequently be used alongside of the traditional modes of presentation.)

For the actresses and technicians also, it was a new experience. The actresses, fearful at first, enjoyed the new style of playing necessitated by this style. The technicians, though they would never admit it, really enjoyed being seen by the audience between the shows.

To me, as instructor in playwriting, and the director of the shows, it was a very successful beginning. I hope it will become a regular feature of our dramatic endeavors: to see as the natural result of a course in playwriting the production of the student-written plays; to see these plays directed by students who are drama majors, (incidentally this drama major is an interdepartmental one which in essence allies at least two fields of cultural study); to see more done in the arena style when suitable, or with mininum scenic effects on our little stage in Fletcher. For always 1 believe these shows should be done as simply as possible, so that playwright and audience will be able to judge the merits of the scripts and the actors for closer understanding and contribution to a constantly demanding and active theatre.

Sweet Briar's Earliest Days

Excerpts from an article by First President Benedict, which was printed in the ALUMINAE NEWS in December, 1937

I came to Sweet Briar on the sixth of June, nineteen bundred and six. Sweet Briar was to open the following September. The appointment of a president was late because it had been expected that Dr. J. M. McBryde, President of Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, and a niember of Sweet Briar's first Board of Trustees, would be the first president. But, because of failing health, he had given up his work at Sweet Briar.

Dr. McBryde had planned to live at St. Angelo which belonged to Sweet Briar as a part of the bequest of the Founder. The old home of Mrs. Mosby, Mrs. Williams' sister, had been completely changed and made over in the plan to make it a presidents' house. The house looked, when I first saw it, as to its exterior, very much as it does now. It was a possible residence for me, but it was too far away, and I decided at once to live at Sweet Briar house where I occupied the rooms that have been used by both succeeding presidents.

The Board had adopted a set of entrance requirements those recommended by the College Entrance Examination Board. This was, of course, the first step toward making the institution one of collegiate grade. So, before the college opened, before its President and faculty were elected, or its students enrolled, the standard of work was set. It was the task of all of us, faculty and students, to carry on toward the realization of the purpose of the Board.

A strong foundation for the educational work had been laid in the years preceding the opening. The Board had determined that the school Mrs. Williams founded should be a college. Bishop A. M. Randolph was President of the Board during the first decade. His visits were always delightful. He preached for us whenever we could get him during the first years and his sermons were inspiring. It was his wish as well as the wish of the other clergymen on the Board that the college should be non-sectarian, and it was so established. Mrs. Williams had named three Episcopal clergymen as trustees, and it would not have been surprising if the institution had been made a church school.

When I came, one student only was registered to enter. She was Lillian Lloyd, the daughter of the Reverend John Lloyd of Lynchburg. She had been registered for two years, and was waiting for the opening and she has the distinction of being Sweet Briar's first student.

At a meeting on June 8th, the Board put into my hands an appropriation of five thousand dollars to be used in advertising the school. During the summer we had announcements in newspapers and magazines, and we sent out several thousand booklets describing the prospective college in general and many copies of our books of views and requirements for admission and statements of our courses of study. This advertising was supplemented by as much personal work as possible. Dr. McBryde made a trip through the state visiting school officers and persons likely to be interested in the college, and I made a trip of the same sort southward and through Georgia.

We opened the first session with fifty-one students, thirty-six of them being boarders, fourteen of them day students from Amherst, and one a resident of Lynchburg who came out twice a week for music and English. We lost one girl at Christmas time and gained one so the number remained the same throughout the year.

We had a very happy opening. The girls liked the college and each other at once, and the college liked the girls at once. I doubt if a college ever started with a more joyful group. The fact that Dudley Powers came from Michigan, Margaret Eaglesfield from Indianapolis, Ina Larkins and Helen Schulte from New Jersey, Adelaide Schockey from West Virginia, Ellen Haynie from Ohio, while too many for me to name from the southern states from Virginia to Texas, made us a broad-minded community from the beginning. Each girl carried home her enthusiasm for Sweet Briar, and from the outset girls have come from all over the country from contacts started through the girls of the early years.

Some persons thought "Sweet Briar" was not the right name for a college. Just about everybody who knew Sweet Briar liked the name, and those who lived there loved it, but outsiders thought in many cases that it was unfortunate. I asked a number of outsiders about it. One educator head of one of the large colleges, said she would rather have her degree from an institution called "Lily of the Valley" than "Sweet Briar." Because of the possibility that the name might not represent us satisfactorily, I once recommended to the Board that we get another name, and suggested "Fletcher College" as there is a Williams. But no one connected with the college really wanted any other name, and it was not very long after we started that we stopped thinking about it, and knew that it would be Sweet Briar—forever.

ALUMNAE SECRETARY APPOINTED

Margaret Cornwell Schmidt, '37g, will succeed Harriet Shaw, as of September 1, 1950. Margaret and daughter, Ruthie, 6, who have been living in St. Louis, will reside in Garden Cottage. Margaret's husband, W. Clark Schmidt, lost his life during the war.

Class Secretary: ELIZABITH GRAMMER (Mrs. Donald F. Torrey) Alden Park Manor, Philadelphia 44, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Sue Hardir (Mrs. William T. Bell) 50 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

A splendid letter from Sue Slaughter in February gave me news of many of our class. I'll pass it on though many of you, I hope, will have been to Sweet Briar for commencement and reunion and will have already heard it before this June Alumnae Niws is published. Sue wrote on February 28 from Virginia Beach where she and her mother were spending a spring vacation with Sue's brother, Charlie.

Mary Pinkerton Kerr changed jobs last fall. She is now teaching in the Blue Ridge Industrial School in the mountains near Charlottesville. She lives there all week and goes back to her Charlottesville home for week-ends. Her son is still at the University of Virginia, having lost several years of college because of the war.

Our class should be very proud because we had two of our thirteen members chosen for Phi Beta Kappa. They are Elizabeth Franke Balls and Margaretta Ribble. Bessie Franke came from Berkeley, California, for the installation. Afterwards she came to visit her doctor son, his wife and child near Philadelphia and phoned me. I was sorry not to see her but we had a long chat. Sue tells me Margaretta paid her a brief visit in Norfolk. She drove the 500 miles from N. Y. C. to Sweet Briar alone except for her English boxer, "Patsy," who looks fierce (but isn't) and protected her on the trip. says Margaretta is very handsome, and of course, very successful as a psychiatrist in private practice. Margaretta's adopted daughter is married to a doctor who teaches in the medical school at Ann Arbor, Michigan. They have a daughter, Margaret, one year old, who is a joy to her grandma.

Rebecca White Faesch and Ernest plan to spend part of the summer in Honolulu, Hawaii, with their son-in-law and daughter, Captain and Mrs. Harry Hambleton. On their way home they will visit another daughter, Mrs. Milon Bullock, in Ames, Jowa.

On March 25 I flew to Spartanburg, South Carolina, to visit Eugenia Buffington Walcott. She and Russell drove from Tryon, North Carolina, to meet me. It was a soul satisfying visit. We hadn't been together for 11 years and talked for hours on every subject. I enjoyed Russell so much also and rejoiced to see him in better health. I was fortunate to meet both young Walcotts, Betsy and Johnny. Eugenia is busy with her farm-the dairy end and chickens and pigs. We had some warm sun and I could sit on the terrace and gaze at the beautiful Blue Ridge Mountains. Eugenia is very active in local politics. While I was there they were in a midst of a vigorons campaign to get the old gang out and get their man nominated on the Democratic ticket in the primaries. I hear they were successful in every precinct. Eugenia is a born politician. She is a committee woman on the State Democratic Committee-quite an honor. Also she works for recreational facilities in Tryon for both white and colored. I was amazed at her energy, for she can go all day long apparently. She seems to be blessed with good health I am happy to say. While I was with Eugenia who should arrive in Tryon for three nights and two days but Frances Richardson Pitcher! She and her husband "Pitch" stopped off en route to Charleston, West Virginia, from a motor trip through the south to New Orleans. They were visiting Daisy Pitcher at a hotel in Tryon. Sunday afternoon they came to the Walcotts and on Monday we all went on a picnic in the mountains and spent the day together. It was simply perfect. We showed each other pictures of our families. I'm so proud of my four year old granddaughter, Ellen Lea Torrey. We talked of Sweet Briar and old friends of course. Jack Pitcher is now doing law work in New York City, "Sissie" Pitcher and her husband have both been teaching in a school in Connecticut and will spend the summer in the barn next door to Frances and "Pitch" in

I deeply regret I couldn't return to Sweet Briar for reunion. My arthritis has been very toublesome this past year and my legs aren't good. I was afraid to risk the three strenuous days at S. B. I can't do much walking or standing and a rainy spell would be very bad for me. If I can ever get cortisone or ACTH maybe I'll be made a new woman and able to join you all some other time. I hope so. I thought of you all and hope for a full account of our class particularly. I hope many were able to return.

A last word I must add. My niece, Polly Croyder, will enter Sweet Briar next fall. We're all so happy, She is my sister Dorothy's only daughter.

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: REBECCA E. PATTON, Beechmoor Place, Catlettsburg, Kentucky.

Catherine Bosson Taylor writing from her home, "Justamere Farm," in Greensboro, North Carolina, seems to express the theme song of all '14ers when she says, "Life is always full to overflowing and I love it." Catherine paused long enough midst her preparations for a trip to Richmond to attend the National Council of State Garden Clubs and back to Charleston for a Regional Audubon meeting, to prove her loyalty to Sweet Briar by answering an appeal for news of herself. She writes, "My three children are all happily married and successful enough not to worry me and yet not so much so that they do not have to watch their steps. All will have given us grandchildren by midsummer and I have had the present three in the house all the past week.

"The library blossoms out with all the old children's books and nursery songs. I have reestablished the nursery and play groundseven removed the fish and lily pads from the swimming pool."

Catherine's husband is a neuro-psychiatrist, spending a few hours a day in his office five days a week. She writes that she is at present trying to dodge committees and the like and just enjoy the farm and family—"Getting gray and somewhat on the plump side slows me down, of course, but I still manage to work young folks onder the table.

"Justamere isn't too elaborate. It's a real farm with grain, cattle, hogs and sheep and we enjoy the birds and the open spaces."

In reminiscing, Catherine continues, "Remember how we thrilled at Lucile Schuolfield's brother's visits? He lived here for a few months and we all enjoyed them so much. I heard from Liz Green Shepherd last year and saw Mattie Welch Logan Heefner some ten years back, Otherwise silence from my past of 1910-11." She concludes, "I'd love to renew old acquaintances and I do hope any who come to Greensboro will look me up."

In answer to my appeal for news, Julia Berille Yerkes (Mrs. Jonathan) writes from her home on Ortega Point, Jacksonville, Florida, "Mary 'Kitten' Merritt Merritt, Meta Bryan Graves and I see each other often and Sue Hardie Bell stops to see me when she is south and, of course, our love for Sweet Briar is as great as ever." Julia's daughter, Rebecca, is a sophomore at S. B. this year and as her mother says is "enjoying every minute of it." Her niece, Catherine, is also a sophomore, so she keeps closely in touch with Sweet Briar activities. Civic duties occupy much of Julia's time at present. She is President of The Woman's Advisory Board of the Children's Home Society of Florida and Honorary President of the Colonial Dames in Florida. She has been active in Red Cross work as well as Garden Club programs. She adds, "Just now we are completing a summer home at Ponte Vedra Beach and there will be lots of room for our friends."

Further items of interest to members of '14 are as follows:

Hallie Eterett Russell was elected Historian General of the Daughters of the American Revolution at their recent national election in Washington, Alice Swain Zell's daughter, Frances Swain, will be married in the early fall to Robert Ramfo of Germantown, Pennsylvania.

Laura Portmann Mueller is considering another trip to Europe this summer with her young son.

Henrietta Washburn has recently accepted the chairmanship of the Episcopal Hospital Board in Philadelphia.

Grace Callan Bond has agreed to be the Fund Agent for '14 for the coming year. Beulah Norris in commenting on her acceptance says, "Mrs. Bond certainly writes a delightful letter and sounds so full of pep! She wanted to come for reunion but two grand-children were due to arrive in this world about that time so she couldn't be certain of getting back."

Concerning the contributions of '14 to the Fund this past year, the silence of members did not indicate failure to contribute as Beulah Norris reports a most gratifying response in the way of gifts.

Perhaps we are like the little nephews to whom a young uncle refers when he observes, "Do not think children are always planning mischief when they are quiet, they have doubtless already done it!"

May we continue to "do it," even though we insist on being quiet!

1924

Class Secretary: BERNICE HULBURD (Mrs. Raymond Waln) 3120 Martha Custis Drive, Alexandria, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Mary Rich (Mrs. R. E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17, Maryland.

Another year of school is about over and I know you all feel as I do, that our children are growing up much too fast.

A note from Betty Guy Tranter from Florida said she and her husband and son were in Bradenton, helping her father celebrate his eightieth birthday. I wish I had known you were there, Betty, so we could have gotten together. Betty said on the drive down they cucountered more snow between Lexington and Roanoke than they had had all winter in Pittsburgh.

Dodie Von Maur Crampton wrote me a grand long letter all about their trip to Florida and Key West. Her four children had just been home for their vacation—quite a novelty to have them all there at the same time, and a thrill. Dodie asked me about several of the girls in our class but I'm sorry to say I have no news to report.

Had a grand long letter from Kay Klumph McGuire. She seems as busy as ever. Their six year old "Rory" has been asked to be ringbearer in Tommy Watson's wedding, but as no one has satisfactorily answered "How long is an aisle" he refuses to say he will do it, Tommy is Mary Klumph Watson's son and is marrying Lois Warnshins in New London, Connecticut, in June. Lois graduated from Vassar, and got her M.A. in Drama at the U. of North Carolina. She is now head of the drama department at the Henry Street Settlement in New York. Kay and Fritz will go to the wedding in June, and hurry back home to embark pronto on the A. A. A. convention on a boat going up to Mackinac and back. It is similar to the one they took last year on the ill-fated "Noronic," and Kav says she is not overly enthusiastic about it.

Edna Lee Gilchrist and husband and the twins have been in town (Cleveland) a couple of times and Kay has had nice chats with her.

I had just about given up getting any replies from my notes, when along came a wonderful letter from Carolyn Flynn Eley which I was thrilled to get. She is living in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and loves it. Fred graduates from high school in June, and the first of July is flying to Europe for a month. In September he enters engineering school at the U. of Virginia. Carol says the biggest moments of the "winter season" were seeing Byrd Fiery Bomar at Delray, and "Shiney"

Bodine Mountcastle and Frank, who were cruising with friends, and anchored at the new, big yacht basin called "Bahia-Mar." Carol is to have a six weeks vacation, which she says she needs after her busy winter as a "working gal" five days a week at Burdine's, a gorgeous, new modern store.

I talked to Eleanor Harned Arp who was in Baltimore with Louis, Jr., and his fiance, and saw them for dinner—the following day they drove to Lynchburg so that "El" could attend the Council meetings at school, and Louis and Pat saw some of the Virginia spots. They are to be married in August, and live in Baltimore while Louis finishes medical school.

We finally had a wonderful Sweet Briar meeting! Helen Schneider decided she would try once more, and lo and behold, about fifty girls arrived. Terry Shaw came up from school to talk to us and we elected officers for next year. Neither the District nor the Virginia suburbs have done much alone—perhaps jointly we can have more luck.

I wrote scads of notes begging for news, but I'm afraid '24 is afflicted with writer's cramp. Thanks a million for those I did get and if any of the others arrive, I'll have them for next time.

Best of luck for a grand summer to you all!

1925

Fund Agent: Jane Becker (Mrs. John Clippinger) 1263 Hayward Avenue, Cincinnati 26, Ohio.

It's still a chore getting news for our class letter, and most of you seem very reluctant to answer my pleas, but Mary Nadine Pope Phillips and Jane Becker Clippinger have been wonderful. They voluntarily wrote, which was a delightful shock! Mary Nadine has a ten-year-old son, who she says keeps her busy, along with her home, church work, and Woman's Club activities. Mary Reed Hartshorn was on a motor trip with her family and stopped to see Mary Nadine. Mary has a daughter in college and a son who enters college next fall.

I've just come back from a grand visit in Chicago, and Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Saw Ruth Pratt Jones real often while I was in Chicago. We both admitted we wouldn't have recognized each other if we'd passed on the street. It must be the hair-dos along with the accumulated years! Ruth's daughter, Judy, finishes at Nutrea High School in June and plans to go to Mary Washington in the fall. Larry, her only son, is at the University of Virginia. Her house is adorable and she and Paul perfect host and hostess.

Several weeks ago Sue Hager Rohrer and her husband stopped by on their way back from ten days at Pinehurst and I drove home with them. While I was there Sue had a card from Deedie Kirkendall Barricks saying she was definitely coming for our 25th reunion. I hope many of us will be there and I promise you I will pass on every detail in my next letter.

Class Secretary: Helen Dunleavy (Mrs. Henry D. Mitchell) 4707 East 7th Avenue, Denver 7, Colorado.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA TAYLOR, (Mrs. George F. Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montelair, New Jersey.

Happy summertime days are here again! I'm hoping the months ahead will hold for each of you all those jolly times one has in the summer, when you greet each day with "Oh! What a beautiful morning — Oh! What a wunderful day!"

It sounds like Pelly Cary Dew Woodson has an easy summer coming to her as she has devoted most of her winter to politics. Her card sent this message to each of us: "Those of you I haven't seen since 1926 will be amazed to hear that most of my winter has been devoted to Republican politics. A bunch of us around here got together and ran a man named William Widnall for Congress. He won by 186 votes and it was the wonien who put him in. Let me recommend 'Grass Roots' politics to some of the rest of you gals. It is both exciting and worthwhile" Last year. you know, Polly was 6th District Legislation Chairman of the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs. How about us recommending Polly Cary for Congress? We could all certainly guarantee that she would do a bangup job of it.

I'm always as tickled as the child that gets the prize in the cake when I get an answer from someone "long time no hear from," and I know you will all join me in delight in hearing from Dot Booth Cockrell. Dot writes that she is still teaching in the country high school. She says this is her fifth year at it. She started as an emergency teacher and just loves it. She says she is still an emergency teacher and teaches many different subjects, but for the past two years she has been teaching business and prefers this subject to others. Dot has been in the throes of teaching a group of children a dance for May Day, sounds familiar, doesn't it? Her little boy is eleven years old and her days sound full and very worthwhile, what with making a home plus a career.

Page Dunlap Dee's cards, thanks to the dear she is—always so thoughtful in writing, are always full of the wonderful and exciting things she and her family are doing. She writes they had a wonderful trip last summer. Page, Roy, and Roy, Jr., (Roy, Jr., graduated from high school at St. Leo Prep School, St. Leo, Florida, last May) left after his graduation for Ireland, England and France. They went over on the Mauretania and came back on the Caronia. Like everyone else they didn't have nearly enough time to spend so they flew from Ireland to England, from England to Paris, and from Paris to Monte Carlo in southern France, toured southern France in a car, then flew back to Paris, where they took the boat train to Le Havre, there boarding the Caronia for home. just getting back in time for Roy, Jr., to enter Notre Dame University in September as a freshman. I'm all goose pimpley just copying Page's card. Doesn't it sound just too, too divine! She continues that they have been back just a week from St. Petersburg, Florida.

She also says that Katherine Van Clere Van Wyck and her husband, George, flew down to see his mother who was wintering at the Pennsylvania Hotel. "Kippy" and George were there overnight and came out to the Dee's house to see them. George has acquired a mustache which makes him even more distinguished looking than ever. "Kippy" George's home address is Apshawa Lodge, Apshawa Lake, Butler, New Jersey. I think that address sounds very thrilling and being a good old Isaac Walton-ness, I wonder if they have good fishing, and what kind, on their Page's next sentence sent me off on another of my favorite dreams-from fishing to horses. She says they were going to the Kentocky Derby, As always Hank and I were glued to the radio on Saturday, May 6, wishing like mad that we were in Kentucky, too. Once more underlining that plan to make it some time. Page writes they were meeting Aunt Mary Adams from Lynchhorg at the Derby. She and Roy were planning to see beloved Sweet Briar. Her next sentence was a bit mutilated by the Post Office and I hope I read it correctly as it sounds as if it is her bestest and most exciting piece of news. 1 think she writes that they bought a lovely home in Mount Carmel just the day before she wrote the card. Now you see what I mean when I say that the Dee's lead most exciting and thrilling lives!

Speaking of far away places and enchanting sounding names, Dottie Hamilton Davis writes that their cruise was wonderful and they were sorry to have the 50 days draw to a close. The weather stayed simply marvelous-even through the Straits of Magellan. Dot and Allan thought the West Coast more interesting than the East Coast though both were perfectly beautiful. She writes that now she and Allan are busy inflicting their friends with their colored slides of their trip. She says they have to bribe their friends by inviting them to dinner. Can't you hear us disagreeing lustily to this remark? She and Allan were going to Emile Halsell Marston's that night for dinner and she says, believe it or not, Emilie asked the Davis' to bring along their slides. My! I wish they lived within shouting distance of the Rocky Mountains and they would have some avid customers in the Iliffs and the Mitchells.

From the Denier Post Society column 1 clipped the following item: "Week-end visitors in Aspen included Mr. and Mrs. Seward Iliff and their daughters, Susie and Bambie." Dot told me they all had a super time of it. Dot and Seward also had a marvelous time when Margaret White Knobloch and her husband. Illis spent the week-end with them, "M. E. and Ellis were returning from a glorious vacation in all parts of California, including Santa Barbara, which she loves so dearly, The Knoblochs also had a grand visit waiting for them in Rock Island on their return trip to Trie. Dot Keller Iliff tells me that "M. E. W," looked terrifically snappy as always. I was so disappointed that Hank and I were down in Phoenix when they were here as we had been so looking forward to seeing them.

Hank and I made our "Spring Treck" to Phoenix to see Flank's mother, who lives there. I always am completely enchanted by Arizona and the weather man smiled all the time we were there. It certainly is easy to slip into the relaxed tempo of the people and the clime. And added to the fascination of the desert and its curious vegetation is the glamour of the perfume of the orange blossoms! Well, it's at least mighty dreamy.

Twice this spring I wished fervently that I could be in two places at the same time. First, I wanted so much to see "M. E. W." and Ellis, and then I missed our Sweet Brian tea for the gals interested in S. B., as that week-end Hank and I were at the Broadmoor in Colorado Springs. This year we again had our S. B. party in the lovely home of Eddina Neuby Adams and again it was a beautiful party with marvelous food. We were all a trifle disappointed that more of those who accepted couldn't come, but the fourteen mothers and daughters who were there were choice and anyone of them (daughters) would be a great addition to Sweet Briar's campus. When the pictures of Sweet Brian were shown, the "young dears" all agreed that Sweet Briar would be a delightful place to be at any time, and all the S. B. alumnae most heartily seconded it. One of our outstanding aluminae in Denver is Benadine Newby, Eddina's charming sister. Benadine teaches at Kent, our private school for girls here in Denver. The girls all love her and through her and due to their admiration for her there has been terrific interest in Sweet Briar.

Martha Close Page writes that they have been transferred to Cincinnati. Lody, her husband, has been there since February 1, Fritz, Martha's 13-year-old, and Martha are keeping things humming in Birmingham, Michigan, until some time this summer when they will all move to Cincinnati. Lowell, Jr., otherwise known as Butch, was home from Michigan State for three months this winter undergoing eye treatment, but he is now able to return to college. He is scheduled for another eye operation in June-his fourth, poor kid. We all certainly hope that this will be the last he will need. Martha says that Fritz has gone in for theatries this winter, and right now has the lead in a church play. Martha, with her many interests, is also busy with church and community doings. Right now she is working hard on the Cancer Drive, plus knitting a dress or, I should say, dresses for herself. It was good to hear from her and we all appreciate her taking time out of her busy life to write.

It was wonderful to hear at long last from Peggy Denman Wilson who lives in Cranford, New Jersey. Peggy writes she is kept busy making a home, cooking meals, etc. (how well we all know the endless details that "etc." covers), for her husband and two boys, ages sixteen and thirteen years, and her invalid mother. For outside activities she is on the Board of Visiting Nurses Association and the Mental Hygiene Society of Union County, a little work in the Junior Service League and an occasional game of bridge. This all sounds like an interesting as well as terribly worthwhile menu for life. I wonder if she ever sees Polly Cary Deu Woodson as Ridgewood is in New Jersey, too. It sounds as if you gals in New Jersey really are doing things in a big way. We all are cheering for them and wishing them luck.

Dot Keller Iliff, bless her dear heart, dug op a letter dated December 14, 1949, from Margaret "Peg" Krider Ivey which I thought you all would enjoy as it tells about "Peg's" darling children. To set the scene I think the address at the top of her letter sounds most intriguing - Mrs. M. C. Ivey, Mardon Flouse, Teignmouth, Devon, England, 1 am ashamed to confess, I had to make a dive for my geography to place Devon, and found that it is in a lovely part of England. To get on with Peg's letter she writes, "My family are quite grown up as you see Jim, age 18, is deferred from National Service to enter Langhborough College in September, 1950, for a five-year Engineering course, Harry, age 14, has been away for one term at public school and loves it. He says he wants to be an engineer, too, and is quite good at mathematics. I think Gordon is wearing very well for fifty. He is basy with a wholesale agency he developed. No one has any money here-taxes are too high, but in spite of it all we do enjoy life. I am thrilled I am coming over for a short visit, arriving in New York on February 13. I will go out to Buffalo and have a week in New York before sailing back to England on the Queen Mary on March 23 as I have to be back before the boys come home for Easter holidays in April," I hope some of you got to see Peg when she was in this country, and will drop me a line as to how she is,

I know you were all thrilled to read in your Sweet Briar Newsletter of the naming of Dr. Anne Gary Pannel as the new President of Sweet Briar. What a wonderful place to fill in life—President of Sweet Briar College—and what a wonderful person to fill it.

Hank and I are just back from attending the New Mexico Bankers meeting. They put on a super meeting and we had a grand time. And there was a very serious side, too, and as I listened to the stimulating speakers they had it struck me how each of us who has had the privilege of attending college has a responsible role to take in this exciting, wonderful, but serious age, not only in our own little sphere, but in the affairs of the world.

Upon our return I found a letter waiting for me from Mildred Gribble Seiler saying that she and Carl were passing through Denver on their way to the Shrine Imperial Council meeting in Los Angeles. I talked to Dot Keller Iliff this morning and we hope Mildred will be able to have some time for us in her busy itinerary.

That's all for now. Happy summering to each of you!

Class Secretary: Margaret Cramer (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH FORSYTH, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham 5, Alabama.

Get out the sun tan lotion or get in the shade but settle right down in a comfortable spot to read this fine news which you have so generously sent in.

Eleanor Albers Foltz is busy with the Red Cross and is in the throes of organizing a League in Fort Smith.

The Hydes (Camilla Alsop) have taken a cottage at Virginia Beach for six weeks.

Camilla, Jr., graduated from St. Catherine's

The Nunnallys (Martha Ambrose) hope to find a house on the mountain in Chattanooga for the summer. They also plan to visit S. B. so that Alice may see how beautiful it is. Martha says she already knows how good it is. Alice would be in the class of '55. Doesn't that give you a start to think how far away from '27 that is?

Evelyn Anderson Tull and her family have many plans afoot for the summer. Bob, 13, is going to the Boy Scout Jamboree in Valley Forge and all the Tulls may come East to visit in Florida and Maryland. It is a long way from Denver, but they are courageous.

Marjorie Atlee Parks went to White Sulphur in April and hoped to get to S. B. C. but says that the snow in "them there mountains' stopped the Florida car.

Ruth Aunspaugh Daniels came to New York last April with Frank for the Associated Press meeting. Virginia Wilson Rob-bins and Maggie Leigh Hobbs had lunch with her at the Barclay. It happened to be Maggie's wedding anniversary which made the occasion even more gala.

Get out your address book, the MacFarland Woods (Madeline Brown) are on the move again. Mac will be commanding officer of a Naval Ordnance plant in Louisville, Kentucky. Their address after July 1 will be Quarters A Naval Ordnance Plant, Louisville. Beth graduates from High School this June and may go to William and Mary.

Janie "Tabo" Brown Hood's eldest, Sonny, and Ruth Aunspaugh Daniel's eldest, Frank, are both D. K. E.'s at the University of North Carolina.

We send our sympathy to Daphne Bunting Blair whose mother passed away in May, 1949. The Blairs have been busy moving and fixing up their new home in Worcester. They went to Larry's 25th at Amherst. Daphne tells us that she is back in dramatics and is having a lot of fun with it. She joined the Drama Group of the Worcester College Club. She and Larry belong to the "Gay Nineties Players" which, and I quote, "puts on corny acts and group singing of by-gone days." Daphne group singing of by-gone days." visits her sister, Dot, in Toronto quite often, Dot teaches in a nursery school and loves it. She and Daphne's brother, Bill, recently bought a lovely house in Toronto.

Elizabeth Cates Wall is still enjoying being in Europe.

Elizabeth Cox Johnson was at S. B. during Virginia Garden Week and said the campus was truly beautiful.

Esther Dickinson Robbins and her family are going to the Pocanos for the month of July. They plan another trip to California in '52. Dickie is very active in the S. B. group in Wilmington where Emily Jones Hodges is a regular, too.

Virginia Franke Davis and her husband, Walter, will reopen the Skaneateles Summer Theatre, Skaneateles, New York, for a season of 12 weeks starting June 13 (Born Yesterday, Harvey, Light Up the Sky, Life With Mother, The Silver Whistle and Clutterbuck-each one to run two weeks) Virginia will play in one, "Mother"; her husband directs and their son, David, has charge of lighting and directs some plays when Walter has a heavy acting role.

Emilie Halsell Marston and her husband had a wonderful trip to Texas and California, They spent the spring holidays with their daughter, Nancy. Emilie had the pleasure of attending a class at Scripps with her. When Emilie wrote she was up to her cars in Red Cross work—planning a course for Baltimore Gray Ladies. She hoped to see Mary Sturgis at Virginia Beach in June and to spend the rest of the summer on Silvern River.

After the Arnolds (Claire Hanner) recovered from their winter of virus bugs they went to Vero Beach and drove home via Garden City, S. C., where they have a big project in tow-they are building a beach cottage there.

Louise "Dickie" Harper and Peg Reinhold have been talking about going down to Baltimore to see Dottie Hamilton Davis. "Dickie's" business keeps her pretty tied down but she did manage a vacation in Northern Pennsylvania during Decoration Day week.

Sally Jamison will come to the Furniture Mart in New York in June. I hope to see her.

Margaret Lect Briganti and her husband drove up to New London to see their son, Dan, before he sailed to Europe. Their eldest boy has a job in San Antonio, so both children have left the nest. When Mrs. Lill was in Washington Peggy enjoyed taking her to her many meetings, etc.

I received a wonderful letter from Ruth Lowrance Street from whom we haven't heard for ages! Gordon, Jr., is finishing 6th grade in June and next fall will enter Baylor Military Academy. Frances who is a Junior at S. B., has been elected Business Manager of the Briar Patch and will also be on the staff of the Sweet Briar News. She was one of 10 sophomores elected to Bum Chums and was recently chosen to be president of the group. She stayed over Commencement to hood Betty Wright from Chattanooga. Bess and her family live in Chattanooga and Tavenner "Tab" Hazlewood Whitaker lives across the street from Ruth. Remember Ruth's brother, "Pres" who visited his sisters at S. B at the great age of 11? He is at Presbyterian Hospital, New York City, with Dr. Bradley, heart specialist. He will be back at the University of Virginia next year, where he will be in the department of Internal Medicine and will teach and practice clinical medicine. The Lowrances have good reason to be proud of his success. As for the Street's summer doings, they expect to spend July at Ponte Vedra, Florida.

We are very proud to report that Maggie Leigh Hobbs' daughter, Peggy, will enter S. B. this fall. The Hobbs vacationed in Florida and Raleigh in the spring.

News of the Wallaces (Elisabeth "Libbo" Mathews) is that Dolly is now a sophomore at S. B. and Wally graduated from Junior High and will be, much to his joy, a bat boy again. Billy, the youngest, has been very busy with the measles. "Libbo" enjoyed lunch with Gretchen Orr Swift in Charleston when Gretchen was visiting one of her twin daughters.

Theodora "Tootie" Maybank Williams will be in New York soon. Virginia Wilson Robbins and Maggie Leigh Hobbs and I are planning to have lunch with her. We certainly are looking forward to the day!

The Finks (Elise Morley) had an enviable vacation last February, March and April. They packed up their entire family except for Peter who is at Taft and went to Palm Beach. The three younger children attended the Palm Beach Private School-hours from 9 to 5 with $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours off at noon for lunch and swimming, etc. Elise reports that the children seemed to have kept up very well with their own schools. Back in Detroit Elise and George have been rooting for the Detroit Tigers at every opportunity. The children are going to camps in northern Michigan this summer but all the Finks will be at their home in Grand Bend the latter part of August.

Elva "Billy" Quisenberry Marks says that it looks as if she is trying to make all the hot spots. She was on her way to Dallas when she wrote and expected to see Marjorie Stone Neighbors and planned a trip to Florida with her two boys in July.

Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach was Fort Wayne's delegate to the Kappa Convention at Murray Bay, Quebec, the last week in June. The Dreisbach daughters continue to be tops, Georgia was elected Social Chairman of the Kappa House for this semester and next. Jerry, Jr., was salutatorian of her class with an average of 96.75 and placed first in the State Speech meet for the second successive year. She will enter Sweet Briar this fall, we are happy to report.

Jane Riddle Thornton took 15-year-old Mimi up to S. B. during her spring holiday and again for May Day. Both Mimi and Frances Tabb will be at camp Alleghany this summer and Jane and her hushand plan a trip to Canada in September,

News of the Durhams (Jo Snowdon) - Taylor has a job lined up in the sports department of the Register and Tribune-the three youngest are going to camp at different times and Jo and Ken, at this point are trying to figure dates so that they can take the whole flock to a Wyoming dude ranch.

Jo gives us some real local color which was about as terrifying as anything she has ever experienced. She left for Chicago with Ken the day of the tornado when they thought it had died down. They thought they were going their usual 55 or 60 m.p.h. but the speedometer registered 95—they had a tail wind of some magnitude. They found themselves in Waterloo, some 120 miles away in 90 minutes. Radio towers were lying around like twisted chicken wire and big corn storage bins were blowing around like balloons. Hardly anyone's roof was intact and billboards were crumpled like match boxes-not to mention huge trees uprooted and live wires down everywhere. Lake Michigan looked like the Atlantic during a terrific storm even two days after the storm. What an experience!

Mary Elizabeth Turner Baker sends news of her oldest, Betty, 16, who left Ouebec on June 20 on the Samaria (a Youth Argosy boat) to Europe. She will return September 9. She will visit Claude Degueldre in Belgium (the exchange student who lived with the Bakers last year) and Merika Waseimus in Finland whose parents her father visited 4 vears ago.

Sara von Schilling Stanley expects to spend the summer at home with week-ends in Mathews County teaching the children to sail. Their oldest, Jimmy, 12, is a student at Fay School in Southboro, Massachusetts.

Connie Van Ness and I had a night out together—went to see "Caesar and Cleopatra" which we thoroughly enjoyed and highly recommend.

Nice to hear from Peggy Williams Bayne. Her children are quite grown up now. Charles, 15, and Margaret, 13—I regret that she didn't tell us more about herself and her family.

Kitty Wilson Garnett and her husband will spend the summer at Camp Greenbrier where he is director. The camp will have between 150 and 175 boys. Young "The," 16, will be a junior counselor there. He won the right to go to the National Science Fair in Philadelphia, by building a model of the Norfolk sewerage disposal plant. Maria, 11, will be at Camp Alleghany of which many of you are alumnae.

Virginia Wilson Robbins is busy redecorating her house with summer plans only in the making.

My head is in a whirl with all this—but I will tell you that through recommendations of "Billy" Quesenberry Marks and "Babe" Albers Foltz we are terribly excited about sending our Billy, 12, to camp Round Up in Colorado. Bill Marks went last year and loved it. We are testing Cathy on camping at Girl Scout camp for 2 weeks. The rest of the summer we will have the welcome mat out and a trip west to pick up Billy.

Many, many thanks for all this news.

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: KATHERINE LIADBLATLR (Mrs. Howard B. Bloomer, Jr.) Shore Acres, Lorton, Virginia.

(Editor's note: Because Katherine Lead-beater Bloomer did not want to see her class left out in the class notes section, she generously contributed a letter for this issue of the magazine. Since she is already the fund agent for her class she, as well as the Alumnae Office, would appreciate someone accepting the job of class secretary.)

We are getting old enough to be nostalgic about Sweet Briar or perhaps I am aging faster than the rest of you. The first thing I look for in the NEWS each time it comes is some news of my class and I am interested in each name and what they are doing. When the last two issues appeared without anything I felt cheated so I sat down and wrote a frank S.O.S. to ten of you asking if you wouldn't please send in a little something about yourselves so that we might have a June report. The response was overwhelming, but not the way you might think. But believe me I am most grateful to Connie Furman Westbrook who took time out from what appears to be a very busy life of participation in Church work, Garden Club, P. T. A., and Junior League to write that they have just moved into a new house in Atlanta. Connie's love of Virginia is reflected in her choice of her new home which is old brick, Williamsburg or Georgian architecture carried throughout even to authentically copied interior woodwork. Connie's next door neighbor is Marguerite Hodnett McDaniel. Connie has a daughter aged seven, and Marguerite has four children so perhaps we have some potential Sweet Briar '28 daughters coming along to add to the start we have made with Betty Prescott Balch's daughter.

Connie writes that there are quite a few Sweet Briar girls near-by and that she frequently sees Augusta Porter Orr and Boyce Lokey Martin of the class of '30.

Not too long ago while shopping in one of the larger grocery stores in the suburban Washington area some one behind me said, "Isn't this, etc." and I turned around to see a face I recognized but for the life of me I couldn't put the name to it. And it was Alice Webb Nesbitt, who really hadn't changed a bit in all the years since I had seen her. She gave me news of Adaline Beeson. Alice moved into this area about a year ago. Her husband is with the Veteran's Administration. And she told me Adaline was living around here so when I got desperate about this letter I called Adaline and she came forth with a lot of aid. She is working for the Federal Reserve and tells me that she occasionally hears from Evelyn Claybrook Bowie who has a boy and a girl to add to our '28 daughters. Adaline also hears from Alice Bubbitt Hackley who, she tells me, has four sons, and lives in Corpus Christi, Texas.

This concludes the news for this time and believe me it was gathered by the hardest. I know you think you have little to say and that it probably wouldn't interest anyone else but weren't you interested in hearing about each of the above girls?

Hi! girls. I have been thinking about you but apparently few of you have been thinking of me—at least not in a literary way. Where are your letters bursting with all your winter news and summer plans? Come, now, better write to me or else I shall just make up things (and I promise they will be outrageous).

A nice note came from Mary Archer Bean Eppes proudly telling of her son Bennett who sang this winter in the Boston production of Benjamin Britton's opera "Albert Herring." Best wishes to him.

I had dinner with Peggy Timmerman Burlin last week. She looked mighty pretty and has a splendid job with Conde Nast as Production Manager of Glamour magazine. Peg said she had recently seen Adelaide Henderson Cabaniss who was in town buying things for her newly opened furniture shop in Denver. She is going in for the very modern and also does interior decorating. Those of you in the vicinity should certainly go by and see her. Adelaide's husband is an engineer.

Emily Braswell Perry was here for a few days to do a bit of shopping and see some shows, however, she was so busy we only had time for a telephone chat.

A really fascinating letter came from Peggy Guthrie which I would like to reprint in full.

She has had such a busy life the past few years I can only pick out the high spots. Just before the war, on a short visit to Puerto Rico she fell so in love with the island that she decided to stay! The war came several months later and there began her army career which has taken her all through the islands of the Antilles, to Washington and finally with the International Military Tribunal to Japan. She went by way of Panama and Honolulu arriving in Yokohama after 52 days at sea! She tells of interesting visits to Hong Kong, Shanghai and Manila. As Peg has been in Japan for three years she is looking forward to a visit back to the States. I do hope some of us will see her and hear more of her interesting experiences at

As for yours truly—my daughter Sallie had the chicken pox; my husband flew to England for a month this spring, while I stayed home and made doll clothes for the church bazaar and collected rummage for the Youth Consultation Service and other such things trying to keep from feeling sorry for myself at being left behind.

Don't any of you gals ever come to New York? I know visits here are usually hectic but I'm sure you could find time for a wee telephone call . . . my number is Atwater 9-5507. Do it next time.

Since I was rather slow getting my cards out last time, several replies reached me too late for the March issue. Among them was a card from Nancy Worthington who had just returned from a trip through the vicinity in the interest of camp affairs. Bad weather and limited transportation facilities kept her from getting to Troy much to my regret. She forwarded news to me concerning Bet West Morton and I pass it on to you as Bet had written it to Nancy: "We are stuck here for another year (meaning Scattle). Jere leaves in April for the Aleutians; then up to the Behring Straits when the ice breaks. He'll be gone for six months. Our two big girls are in Junior High-Barbara in her last year and Bruce in 8th grade, and Ann has one more year after this in elementary school. Charlotte is three and a half, so we still have a few more years before she starts to school. They are growing up fast and we are growing oldperiod!" With our nineteenth class reunion having come up, I don't think any of us can dispute that last statement of Bet's, but I feel certain that for any who were fortunate enough to get back for those three carefree days, the years shed rapidly, even if it were only temporary. And speaking of reunions I am sure all agree that Phoebe Rowe Peters' letter concerning it was extremely well done and it seems to have brought results. Although Phoebe had a son graduating in June, there must have been no conflict with the S. B. reunion as she was there. Ralph, Jr., is going to Amherst in the fall where he will stay for 3 years, then on to M. I. T. for his last 2 years.

A card in late January from Jo Gibbs Du-Bois mentioned the fact that she had had a serious operation on December 1 but was recovering nicely and was struggling to keep the two younger children well enough to have badly needed tonsilectomies. A second card arrived the last of May containing the news that she and Polly Swift Calhoun hoped to attend the reunion together providing Jo's seven-year-old, Laury, who had developed nephritis, was well enough for her to leave him. Also Jo had heard that Trudy Lewis Magavern was coming back and was trying to persuade Fanny O'Brian Hettrick to accompany her. In the meantime I received a newsy letter from Fanny which certainly made up for her long silence. She told me that she would be unable to attend as she had to drive up to New Hampshire that week-end and pick up her oldest boy who attends school there. Polly, Jo and Trudy did get back.

Fanny has been on campus twice this year, once in February when she spent a week with Gert Prior after her mother's tragic death, and again in late March when she and Ames and the three boys were returning from Florida. Ames has been abroad three times on business this year. Fanny serves on the Altar Guild in her local church, also is Recording Secretary for the Plainfield Field Army of the American Cancer Society and gives one day a week at the Cancer Information Center. She saw Trudy last summer and hopes to see her again this summer when she takes the boys up on the Canadian Lake shore for July and August. Speaking of Trudy, Fanny says she is unchanged-not even a gray hair! Oh me! Fanny saw Mary Katherine Pape Whitney in New York and visited her new apartment.

A brief card from Dot Ayres Holt told me of a West Indies cruise that she and Jack had taken on the Italia, soon after Christmas.

When Agnes Cleveland Sandifer last wrote, she was planning to take her two girls to Deland, Florida, for spring vacation and spend a week-end at Sea Island en route. "Aggie" has served as Finance chairman of the Board of League of Women Voters and not to appear too frivilous she has also been on the Board of the Home for Aged Women.

Violet Andersen Groll is planning to take her daughter, Penny, to California this summer. I hope she contemplates a stopover at Sweet Briar on her way to the west.

Harriet Wilson McCaslin attended the reunion coming from Philadelphia via Richmond in order to pick up Virginia Tabb Moore. Harriet had seen Virginia in March when the whole McCaslin family went to Florida and extracted a promise from her then to return to Sweet Briar.

Nat Roberts Foster was torn between a Western trip when she would accompany Walter who attended an AAF reunion, and returning to Sweet Briar, but she turned up at Sweet Briar.

Charlotte Kent Pinckney was moving around June 1. She has been elected to the Alumnae Council which means that she will be taking some trips to Sweet Briar, Peg Ferguson Bennett and Joe didn't make it as their own Olivet College baccalaureate and commencement took place on June 4th and 7th respectively. Peg has been ill for the last three months with an arthritic infection but hopes that spring and good weather will improve her condition.

Helen Sims Mellen did not return for the reunion but sends greetings to all her classmates. Her son Johnny is now transferring his interest from cowboys and guns to baseball. Wait until it is cars and dates!

Jean Cole Anderson regretted that she couldn't be on hand for the festivities. She had just "trod the boards," to use her expression, as Miss Skillern in "See How They Run." Not only did she star in the Little Theatre production, but also managed it. As though that project was not enough she is "supply teacher" which covers everything from 3rd grade through High School. After traing to answer some of the questions in my Janie's scholarship tests I should hate to try to qualify for such a job.

Ship and I spent a week-end in Cincinnati recently and called Polly Woodward Hill. We were shocked to hear the news of her father's sudden death on Easter Sunday. Funeral services were held in the Woodward's winter home in Palm Beach, Florida, and the burial was in New York. Polly and Bob had just returned that morning from the East. Mr. Woodward was a familiar figure on campus during those happy college days, and I know that you who knew him will join me in extending sympathy to Polly at this time.

Jane Mublburg Halverstadt was back for reunion as well as Ginny Cooke Rea.

Jean Countryman Presba reports that the Presbas experienced a winter of quite good health and, taking advantage of the break, painted the whole of their upstairs, leaving the paper hanging to more experienced hands. The Presba children are growing fast and Paula has fairly bloomed since having her tonsils out.

Ginny Quintard Bond writes that she was unable to attend the reunion this year but that she sent all kinds of data and snapshots for the Scrap Book. Ginny, who is never idle, was busy arranging a "circus party" for 28 boys, ages eleven and twelve. They were to follow this with a more educational jaunt the next week-end with a bus tour of historic Boston. Ginny says there are only two jobs that she has not undertaken. They are Den Mother and Sunday School teacher but how she could fit any more into her busy schedule is beyond me.

Jane Bikle Lane was busy running a benefit card party and fashion show when her card was written. She regrets not getting back for reunion, but she was attending a wedding at Annapolis on June 3.

Since Gill Hilton Pritchard and her husband were planning a trip from mid-June, Gill also had to miss reunion. Gill reports that son, Johnny, has just about reached the peak of his wall scaling—having attained the highest cupboards, with only a few scratches and no broken bones.

I was out in Chattanooga in late April and spent ten restful days with my family, with a limited amount of social activity thrown in. Had lunch with Mary Westcott Hale and Mary MacDonald Reynolds. Westcott's pet charity is the Hospital Auxiliary of which she is president. She and Earle were hoping to get off for a few days and enjoy some fishing at Ocra-coke Island off the coast of North Carolina.

A nice, newsy letter from Mary Stewart Kelso Littell says that she and Dr. Joe were completely demoralized after an elegant vacation at Ponte Vedra, Florida. Since their return they have been busy finishing the decorating of their new home in preparation for celebrating their second wedding anniversary. Since Caroline graduated from Grier School in June, Stewartie ran into the same complications that I did in trying to be in two places at once. We made the "pilgrimage" together in '41 and it would have been lots of fun to repeat that pleasant experience, but we will have to content ourselves with getting all the news concerning our classmates by proxy.

Since Shippy is going to Washington and Lee next year, Virginia will become my old stamping ground again. I intend to visit every corner of that lovely state that I did not cover in my youth. So classmates, beware! Don't ever say that I didn't warn you.

Best of luck for a pleasant summer and I'll be back with you in the fall with the biggest and best report ever—I hope.

1932

This will be one of the shortest letters we've ever had for 1932, for I said I would be Class Secretary just a few short weeks ago. Several of you answered my call for help and I do thank you from the bottom of my heart. Wanda Jeusch Harris and I drove to Sweet Briar for reunion. We went two years ago and came back feeling so gay and carefree that we thought we'd try it again.

Letha Marris Wood writes that the Woods are going on much as ever. Their daughter, Lee, is now thirteen and is hoping to go to Sweet Briar in the not too distant future. Their other daughter, Nancy, is nine. Letha says that she and Jack have had a busy year, doing a lot of work in the community. Next year, and I quote, "We're going to retire and stay home for a change and relax."

Frances Sencindiver Stewart, who lives in Arlington, Virginia, couldn't make reunion this year. Fran lives near Ellen Eskridge Sanders and sees her quite often. She also sees Ted Clary Treadwell once in a while. Ted and Fran hope to have Lib Doughtie Bethea visit them in June before Lib sails for Europe. Bobbie Bennett Cullum visits Fran about once a year, but this summer a new son will keep Bobbie in Texas.

As you will remember, Jane Hays Dowler and her husband have bought a hotel at Point Chautauqua, New York. I wrote asking Jane to come back to reunion and this is her reply: "Wish I could get back for reunion, but we open for Decoration Day, and I do not expect to get away for anything from then until September. Summer is hard work and we do our vacationing in mid-winter. Lots of fascination in this job. Maybe I'll write a book some day—three children, a twenty-room house and a four month's job provides lots of material." Anyway, I wish Jane would write that book, or at least a long letter telling us more about her experiences.

From Pittsburgh, Ruth Kerr writes that she is still Store Superintendent at Jonasson's and has just moved into a new apartment. She sees Betty Uber Fby frequently.

Alice Weymouth McCord says they have just moved into their new home in Allendale, New Jersey. The whole family just loves the house, town, and the people. Alice is up to her neck in Girl Scout work, P. T. A., hospital work, etc., but thinks it's fun.

My 1932 class list has five graduates listed with NO ADDRESS. Won't some of you please help find the following: Trudie Buist (Mrs. Cavette Roberts), Jessie Fisher (Mrs. Benjamin Gordon), Emma Green (Mrs. Emma G. Moore), Hazel Stamps (Mrs. Charles Collins), and Nancy Wilson (Mrs. John M. Drewry). The non-graduates have many girls with no addresses: Mary Caswell (Mrs. James G. Burr, Jr.), Eleanor Cooke (Mrs. William R. Brown), Nell Colgin, Barbara Davenport (Mrs. Karl Stromsen), Mary Gregory, Elvie Hope (Mrs. J. L. McClennan, [r.), Sarah Islon (Mrs. Louis A. Hawkins), Frances Jeffers (Mrs. James W. Haymore), Margaret Johnson (Mrs. William Knorr), Margaret Joynes (Mrs. Margaret Hamilton), Lucille Kinnan (Mrs. Clifford Lewis), Elizabeth Ladd, Sarita Lomax (Mrs. W. M. Scott), Myrtle Lowder (Mrs. James D. Bush, Jr.), Edith Marshall (Mrs. Arch S. Martin), Virginia McGehee (Mrs. Walter M. Ross), Cornelia Mathewson (Mrs. Herford T. Fitch), Sara Moore (Mrs. Randolph M. Palmer), Olivia Nolte (Mrs. Burton W. Armstrong), Martha O'Brien, Irwin Reay (Mrs. Henry Cuscaden), and Marguerite Smith.

There isn't much news about the Crosses. Our sons are growing up. Howdy is twelve and consumed with love for all forms of athletics, not one bit like his mother. Ward is five and finishing up kindergarten in a few weeks. To my great amazement last fall we learned that his teacher was Ann Porter, who went to Sweet Briar for two years and then graduated from Miss Wheelocks in Boston. My days are filled with chauffering the whole family, Junior League work, two entirely separate P. T. A.'s, the usual drives, fetes, and fairs that come along every month it seems, gardening in a very small yard, lots of sewing and quite a bit of activity for Sweet Briar. Our club in Wilmington meets faithfully once a month for lunch and recently we have been involved in some volunteer work. Last fall Mrs. Lill visited the Wilmington Schools and we thoroughly enjoyed her visit. This spring we had a tea for prospective students and showed the grand slides nf Sweet Briar which the Alumnae Association loaned us.

Bea Stone DeVore comes to our meetings, but we are the only ones from our class. We see Janet Bince Bailey, Dottie Eaton Johnson, Lay Dillon Wintzer, and Lib Lankford Miles.

Do write me this summer and tell me all about your vacation so that the October letter will be nice and long. I expect we will be home most of the time, but may be in Rehobeth Beach for a while in August. Please look me up there at 38 Oak Street if you should happen to be there.

Class Secretary: Anne E. Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: GIRALDINI MALLORY, 169 East Clinton Avenue, Tenafly, New Jersey.

Mary Bess Roberts was married December 27, 1949, to Mr. Don Waynick. They live in Roanoke, Virginia. Mary Bess writes that she is active in the Garden Club, A.A.U.W., and church.

Hetty Wells Finn wrote me an enjoyable letter. Her only news item is that she and her family had a lovely vacation skiing at Skytop, Pennsylvania, in March, which must have been fun though it hardly seems possible to think of skiing in this summer weather. The Finns are going to spend the summer at their summer home in Shorehan, Long Island.

Virginia Vescy Woodward writes that Joe often has business in Norfolk, so she gets home now and then to see family and friends, and they often go to Richmond for concerts and the like. Virginia enjoyed the Deep Run Hunt Races at Strawberry Hill and ran into several Briarites there. She planned to play in the Women's Southern Golf Tournament at the Cavalier Country Club in May. I never heard if this came off or not and do hope if Virginia did play that she covered herself with glory.

Langhorn Watts Austen keeps busy with three children, age 14, 11, and 9, plus church work, soliciting for Community Fund and Red Cross, and work for the auxiliary of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. Her husband is one of the many busy doctors in Boston and they don't get away very often. Langhorne sees Mary Moore Rowe a great deal as they live near each other. Mary also has a doctor husband.

Louise Woodward Hurtt says that her sister, Amelia Woodward Davier, was with her in April and had had dinner with Kitty Gochnauer Slater after the Warrenton Gold Cup. Amelia said that Kitty's young daughter was adorable. Louise has two boys, 7 and 10 years old, no help, two dogs and a cat, and their life is a merry-go-round. She hears from Marietta Derby Garst, whose oldest is her Godson, and also from Anne Brooke.

Jean tan Horne Baber and her husband vacationed at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Virginia, in April (recovering from the children's bouts with chicken pox and mumps, going on the theory that they needed the rest more than the children).

Mary Brooks Barnhart Carlton has three very lively Toy Fox Terriers. Her life of housekeeping, church and Garden Club work keep her far from idle.

Mary Buick wrote that she had no news, but it was good to hear from her anyway.

This is my last issue as your secretary. I have enjoyed hearing from you and writing our column very much, and hope my successor will find pleasure in it, too. Before ending—I am still bookmobiling and find it most interesting. Evelyn Mullen, whom I have been working with and find a splendid boss, is leaving and I shall miss her very much. She goes July 1 to her new job as Rural Library Supervisor with the North Carolina Library Commission.

I see Jean Sprague Hulvey occasionally, either here in Charlottesville or in Washington, D. C.; spent a delightful week-end with her June 3 and 4th in Washington. We went to the zoo, which is my favorite occupation in the nation's capital.

1934

Class Secretary: MARY LII RYAN (Mrs. Porter Strother) 798 Pemberton Road, Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan.

Fund Agent: JEAN SPRAGUE (Mrs. Charles Hulvey) 1910 Kalorama Road, N. W., Washington 9, D. C.

Will any of you who went to reunion please write me all about it? I surely wish I could have gone to Sweet Briar as I did a year ago.

As a member of the Alumnae Council, Julie Sadler de Coligny of course was at Sweet Briar. She had to do a bit of fine planning, for the final exercises at St. Catherine's came about the same time and she couldn't well neglect her third grade pupils. Julie said that she found teaching very enjoyable-"there are days when I think it would be so peaceful and simple to be just a school teacher, but there are others when I see life from so many points of view that I hardly dare express a conviction in any direction." She wrote most enthusiastically of Sweet Briar's new President, Mrs. Pannell-"She sounds like a perfect combination for Sweet Briar." Julie sees Becky Strode Lee all the time; with their husbands and a total of eight children they often go on Sunday afternoon outings, Lydia Goodwyn Ferrell and family have moved into a new home in Westhampton, Virginia.

Helen Hoffecker Roehm's daughter, Susan Lee, was born March 3. Helen is having a bit of difficulty getting used to baby schedules since it has been seven and a half years since her boy was an infant. She says she has no time for other activities for a while.

Fleanor Alcott Bromley had a rugged spring. After a six weeks bout of flu and mumps for Chips and Ann and flu twice for "Elly," she managed to gather herself together and go to Atlantic City with Harry for a medical convention. Within a few hours of her destination she developed another case of flu. The hotel where they have always stayed had misunderstood about their reservations. After considerable searching they found a place for "Elly" to lay her aching head and she holed-up for the entire "vacation," with nothing to break the monotony except the penicillin shots. The Cleveland Briarites apparently enjoyed their group activity (could Detroit but say as much); they took over one of the Amateur Players groups for a night and cleared $140. They had a nice luncheon on S. B. Day and in April had a tea for prospective students-showed S. B. slides. "Elly" is quite evidently doing a grand job as President of the group.

Thelma "Mitzi" Hanifen Fried and her husband were in Salem, Virginia, in April for the inauguration of their friend, Dr. H. Sherman Oberly, as sixth President of Roanoke College. "Mitzi" was in the figure at the dance. She said she was sorry not to get to see Dean Lyman who was there to represent Sweet Briar.

Helen Bean Emery's description of her house sounds intriguing—three acres around an old stone house which has recently acquired electricity and which has had to have a great deal of painting and scraping. Helen says that by now they are very good at stone floors and terraces. I don't believe that is meant to be a situation-wanted-ad, for Helen is very busy with gardening, singing with the Women's Chorus at Nativity Church, being secretary-treasurer of the Altar Guild of Trinity Church and program chairman of her P.T.A., and taking some part in the Occupational Therapy Department the Junior League has started at St. Luke's Hospital.

Jean Sprague Hulvey expected Charlie's family to come for a visit during Washington's cherry blossom time but scared them away by having a thorough case of the mumps, which Jean says was impressive but not interesting. They went to Charlottesville quite recently to visit the senior Hulveys. Jean occasionally sees Mary Ann Page Guyol who lives only a few blocks away.

Jean will get lots of sympathy from Julia Shirley Patterson's husband who caught mumps from a patient. When Julia wrote she was momentarily expecting Shirley, 6½, and Susan, 2½, to begin to swell. Julia is active in the Woman's Auxiliary, the Medical Auxiliary, and the P. T. A. She talked to Elizabeth Ogilby Sands in February. Elizabeth's second boy had just arrived. Julia (and family, I presume) will spend two weeks at Pawley's Island this summer with her sisters Alice and Lucy. Sounds like fun!

Elsa Gerstacker Allen graduated from Oberlin in 1934 and taught nursery school for two years. Elsa lives in Midland, Michigan, and has two children—Gail, 13, and Jim, 7. Last winter they spent a month in Florida and a year ago they stopped at Sweet Briar on their way to Williamsburg.

Mary Krone is Deputy Commissioner, Department of Taxation and Finance, of the State of New York. She has been with Governor Dewey's administration since 1943—"a wonderful experience." Mary appeared recently on the John Crossin Interview Program "Women in Politics" over television station WPIX, New York. She did some work for Bonnie Wood Stookey on the recent concert in New York and hopes to be of further assistance on Sweet Briar projects.

Virginia Bronn Lawson writes that after she left Sweet Briar she spent a year at Villa Brilliantmont in Lausanne and traveled in Italy and France. The next five years she had a job in the Compensation Department of West Virginia's State Capital. She was a counselor at a children's camp in New Hampshire for two summers. In November, 1938, she married Bob Lawson who is a lawyer with Steptoe and Johnston in Charleston. Bob was in the Navy for two and a half years. Their three boys ages nine, eight, and three, keep Virginia busy. She would like to see any 1934 Briarites who come her way.

A similar invitation is extended by Estelle Fariss Marsh to come to Amarillo, Texas. She wishes some S. B. girls would move near her.

Stanley is in the natural gas business. Stan III, is 12; Tom, 9; and Mike, 5—and they keep her on the run.

Nancy Butzner Leavell is looking forward to a summer visit from Jane Morrison Moore and her two daughters, Allison, 9, and Jane, 7. (Jane's three-year-old son will help his father keep house.) The Leavell girls, Anne, 8, and Lucie, 3, are making great plans for this visit and for spending the month of July on their grandfather's farm. Nancy and Byrd are planning a two week trip through New England in the early fall.

Tinka Strauss Solmssen's three daughters, ages 12, 9, and 6, all hope to go to Sweet Briar. Tinka is occupied with P. T. A., her house and her garden. "The dogwood is especially beautiful this year and I often think of the first dogwood I ever saw when I came to S. B. C."

Dorothy Hutchinson Howe says that her particular "rat race" includes work with the Red Cross and Children's Aid. Julie will be 11 in August, Tom is 9, and Doria will be 2 in July. Dot was in the process of having her house redecorated and about to go mad with trying to keep the children's fingers off the woodwork. (I sympathize—we arrived here four years ago with moving vans and children ages 3, 5, and 7, to find that the decorators had yet to hang paper in nine rooms and give three dozen doors two coats of nice (?) white paint—of course it rained steadily for two weeks—ah me!)

Jane Forder Stribling would like to round up all present and past den-mothers for a conference on the relative merits of various projects, including kite flying contests and paper chases. (May Brownie leaders audit your course? I could use several dozen new ideas before September.) She claims that her own two cubs, Carroll, Jr., 9, and Jim, 10, "are easily the wildest children west of the Missis-sippi." Jane had her den make fudge for Jane had her den make fudge for Mother's Day; the success of the undertaking is questionable, for when it was time to put in the nuts there was not a kernel to be found and when it came time to beat the fudge there was not a Cub to be found! Jane's Anne was 14 in January and is 5 feet 81/2 inches; she is finishing the ninth grade and wears lipstick to school and high heels to parties. Jane is beginning to be appalled by the fact that in just three years Anne will be ready for Sweet Briar. Jane says she spends every waking moment attending meetings and working on drives. At this time she is beset with annual teas, luncheons, and so forth. (Who else wants to sign my petition that all adult groups have their fiscal year begin in February? It does seem a pity to crowd all the ladies' annual affairs in with all the children's recitals and various "final doings" at a time which, in Michigan at least, the outdoors is at its love-

Ruberta Bailey Hesseltine went to Secretarial School in Boston and then worked for an Insurance—Real Estate company there. She married in 1940 and went to live in Texas for a while, first in Dallas, then in Fort Worth. Her daughter, Joanne, was born in 1941. "Sis" returned to Boston and went to work as secretary for a piano teacher. She remarried a year ago and she, Ernest, and Joanne live in Arlington, Massachusetts. "Sis" was Commissioner of the Arlington Girl Scouts for three years and was on the Board of the Arlington Visiting Nursing Association; she is now Treasurer of the Women's Aid Association of Arlington Symmes Hospital. She is enjoying having a Brownie Troop except fur the fact that she can't get to Sweet Briar meetings because they always fall on Brownie day. "Sis" goes to the yearly Sweet Briar "Pops" concert. She was expecting a visit from Martha Green Day whom she hadn't seen for 15 years and who is visiting in Lowell, Massachusetts.

Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman went to Philadelphia for Sweet Briar Day, Betty Suttle Briscoe met her at the station and they talked a mile a minute before the luncheon. Betty has two daughters and a son. Her husband is an obstetrician. Gail Donobne Owrey was also at the meeting; Gail was a Wave during the war and was one of the few who won the privilege to wear wings, as an instructor of navigation. Her husband died about a year ago, leaving her with a small son and a daughter, Sonny and Abbie Ann. They live in Wallingford, Pennsylvania, and Gail's mother spent the winter with her. Lou often sees Connie Murray Weller who, as president of G. R. Murray Company, is one of Princeton's prominent business women; she sells real estate, her husband sells insurance, and they both take care of an enormous Great Dane and a most attractive home in the country. In addition to this great batch of news, Lou enclosed a letter from Delia Taylor Sinkov. "Dee's" Judith is 3½, Michael is a little over a year. The rest of the family consists of a dachshund, Ja-Ja, and a canary named Dickybird. "We are still living on our five acres and are beginning to feel more or less settledin. We find life in the country most agreeable and at present writing are prepared to spend our declining years at "Pinwillow." (Vienna, Virginia.)

Nancy Russell Carter reports that they got in some good skiing early in March. "Sally loves skiing (she's 6) but has no fear, no sense, and no idea of steering. However, she goes straight down a 1200 foot hill with only three or four falls. The boys are getting pretty fair now and we hope to take them East to Cannon Mountain again next winter." (To fully appreciate this statement you must take the aerial tramway to the top of Cannon Mountain. From the dizzying heights of the summit lodge, the wispy clouds floating all about, we were all too impressed with the skiing ability of the Carter family.) The three boys will go again to Camp Carleton in the Allegheny State Park this summer.

My two boys will also go to Carleton and are looking forward to seeing the Carters again. In taking them there I will stop by Nancy's. Dick is in the choir now and is ever so pleased to be like big brother. David is singing one of the leads in the sixth grade operetta this week so the air here is filled with his warbling. Dick practically burst with joy at winning first place in his section at the school's Field Day; however we were-more pleased with non-athletic David's tying for third place in his group. I am very busy on the membership committee of Grosse Pointe's newly organized League of Women Voters and have taken on a few more jobs for the next two years—Treasurer of P. T. A., A. A. U. W., delegate to the Grosse Pointe Motion Picture Cooncil, and member of the A. A. U. W. newsletter and yearbook committee. Sally is laid up with a germ and I am stuffing her with penicillin. I hope that she is completely recovered by morning, for this is the beginning of a hectic ten days with the children needing to be ferried in different directions to all their closing ceremonies and all the committees I belong to having their zero-hour conferences preparatory to the annual meetings. Saturday night is the season's big ball; I hope the orchestra will play more waltzes than sambas!

Our deepest sympathy goes to Helen Wolcott whose father died very suddenly in the middle of January. Woolie writes that her father did not suffer, for which they were thankful, but that her own world has been topsy-turvy. Our love to you, Woolie.

Barbara Benzinger Lindsley has had a busy winter being a mother and a Den Mother, and doing Junior League work. She says she had ten days off when she went along on a business trip with her husband to Chicago, Cleveland, Salem and St. Louis. As soon as school is over she and Herb are going to take a trip west with all the children, to see the Indians and point: of interest, then on to Los Angeles. Sounds like fun, Barbara. We hope to do that trip one day, too, but are waiting until our youngest is a little older. Barbara saw Betty Klinedinst McGavran in Columbus. Betty had just moved into a new house, and Barbara reports that she looks as young as in Sweet Briar days.

Gen Crossman Stevens writes that she had a vacation in Houston in January. She keeps busy at home with her two children, her Girl Scout troup, being vice-president of P. T. A., church work, her garden, etc. The Stevens have a new blonde cocker puppy "Suzy Butterscotch" to go along with the father "Penuche." Gen says that Cynthia Harbison Heye has a new daughter, Cynthia, born April 20.

A note from Gretchen Geth Troup says, "I do wish that I had something fantastic to report but the truth is that I am just a typical suburbanite." The Troups have just bought a new home and Gretchen says that it seems as if she has done nothing but weed. Delighted to have that news, Gretchen.

From Kansas City Genevieve Howell Gist writes that her time is completely absorbed by her family. She has five children now "including two year old twins, who are double trouble, but certainly worth it."

To you who answered my cards—thank you very much—All of you who attended reunion please write me lots of news for the fall issue.

Class Secretaries: RUTH GHILIAM (Mrs. Earl R. Viar) 817 New Hampshire Avenue, Lynchburg, Virginia. MARGARET SMITH (Mrs. John R. Thomasson) 1514 Arrow Street, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: AIMA MARTIN (Mrs. Ralph A. Rotnem) 330 East 79th Street, New York 21, New York.

The nicest thing about the cards and letters we have received this spring is that so many of them came from those of you who have been missing for ages and you can't imagine how wonderful it was to catch up on the years between. We wish we could hear from everyone before this year is over.

All the way from South Devon, England, came a letter from Anne Farr Foot, who was in the middle of Easter Holidays and company—one visitor being Amy Williams Hunter, who is living in Wiltshire, England. During the war Anne lived in Bryn Mawr for 3½ years with her 2 children, Kate, born in 1937, and Winslow, born in 1939. In 1943 she returned to England, where her husband was sent home from the Atmy in Germany to stand for Parliament. John stood again as a Liberal candidate in the recent election. His law practice is keeping him busy. Kate and Winslow go to Dartington Hall, a progressive school.

Alice Andrews Fackert and family moved this winter to University City, Mississippi, They have two boys ages 10 and 1. They are busy fixing up their first house and from experience we know that is no small job, although there is no thrill in the world like it.

Jane Moore Johnson has two boys also—Tommy, 11, and Jimmy, 7. Tom has bought an interest in the Pittsburgh Pirates and Jane writes that naturally they are all very baseball minded. All of our boys will certainly envy Jane's two and their chances to see the big league games. Jane hears frequently from Phoebe Pierson Dunn who keeps her up on the New York news.

We were so glad to get a long letter from Sophie Campbell Brown who is living in Hyattsville, Maryland, Sophie lived at Sweet Briar and was one of our year-round Briarites. After she left us she went to the University Nursing School in Charlottesville and finished in 1937. During the war Sophie worked at The Washington Sanitarium on Obstetrics and found time to take care of her home and three girls. Mary Douglas is now almost 12; Mildred, 10; and Rebecca, 8. There is some real material for Sweet Briar and they are all three very attractive. The pictures were wonderful. Ed is in metal work and is a volunteer fireman, which, Sophie says, creates some excitement at times.

Anne Thomson Smith also wrote a long letter from Cincinnati. She and her husband are both pilots, Anne having received her license in 1947, and they get around more than most of us. Bud is in the flying business and also insurance. Anne belongs to the Red Cross Motor Corps and is vice-chairman in charge of training. She also works one day a week in the Surgical Clinic at the General Hospital and takes an active part in the United World Federalists Organization. Besides that she takes care of her home and son, Michael, who is 6 years old. Witham, Jr., (Pete) is 14 and goes to Cranbrook School in Michigan. In March Anne and Bud took him and flew to Guatemala for a grand vacation. When on these trips they stop in to see Liz Tomlin Jewell, who is living in Franklin, Tennessee, and also get together when Liz comes to Cincinnati to visit her mother. She also sees Kay Ferson Barrett occasionally as they both belong to the same dance clubs.

Another new home has been claimed by Annette Harley Chappell who is now living in Silver Spring, Maryland. Annette finished at the University of Arkansas where she received her Phi Beta Kappa key. For a while she worked in Senator Caraway's office until she married another senator's secretary. Joe is now in the State Department as Assistant Chief, Technical Branch of the Visa Division. They have three children-Annette, 10; Joe, Jr., 8; and Harley, 2. All are very frisky and happy in their new home. Annette is the newly-elected President of the Washington Alumnae Chapter and she and Joe are joint presidents of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church Parents' Club.

From Poughkeepsie came the long-awaited news of Parker Goodwin Breen, complete with pictures of herself, Bill, Parker's horse, and Great Dane. They have a charming little cottage over one hundred years old and plenty of grounds for riding. They belong to the Rombaut Hunt Club and Parker says fox hunting is their main activity, especially on week-ends when they have time to entertain. Bill commutes four or five days a week to New York where he is an account executive in the advertising firm of Sherman-Marquette, and handles accounts for Colgates mostly. They get into New York occasionally for fun and are among those lucky enough to have seen "South Pacific." Miss Rogers was up there summer before last teaching classes and I'arker took her course. She passed with flying colors because she "managed to back her horse in sections." She has also learned to ski, Bill being a very good teacher. Frances "Chicky" Gregory has accepted a Frances "Chicky" Gregory has accepted a position at Westhampton College as a member of their teaching staff to start next fall. She will teach American History and the Survey in European History. She has just recently delivered a speech for the Lowell Historical Society.

Corinne Fentress Gray has four children-Braley, Jr., almost 9; Alexander, almost 7; Mary Marshall, 4; and Lendon, 1, a girl. The whole family spends much of their time on horseback and Braley, Jr., won a blue ribbon at his first horse show last year. Braley is still making boats and canoes, you know Old Town, and his pet sport is water skiing. Apparently all the Grays play in the water in the summer and the snow in the winter. Corinne was in Richmond this spring recuperating from an operation but managed to see a lot of the Richmond Briarites. She saw Logan Phinizy Johns, who is building a new house in Richmond. We're very sorry to hear that her father died suddenly. Corinne also saw Jacqueline Moore Hoofnagle, Lydia Goodwyn Ferrell, and Marion Cox Luck.

We're hoping to hear from lots and lots of you telling us about your summer vacations, I am planning to go to Philadelphia for a short visit to my father and sister, but that will be the extent of my summer tripping. Ruth has no plans either, so be sure to let us both in on all the exciting things the rest of you are doing. That's what I call living vicariously.

Class Secretary: LUCY TALIAFERRO (Mrs. Charley C. Nickerson) 80 Battin Road, Fair Haven, New Jersey.

This seems to be Boys' Month for the Class of '38. First off, with apologies but to explain my own activities, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Clark Nickerson announce the arrival of a son, Paul Moreland Nickerson III, April 10, 7 lbs. 10 oz. (Nice to have our two boys about two years apart.) Then a letter from Llewellyn Griffith Longstaff said that I must have given her the idea, because the day she got our announcement, she set off for the hospital for the arrival of a young son-George Geoffrey Longstaff. Since Papa George was in Chicago, Lew took off in the "Stork Taxi Service," and made the hospital room if not the delivery room! Since her doctor didn't make it either, Lew says she really feels this is ber baby. Next came an announcement from Adele Letcher Harvey of her fourth son, Alan Richard, 7 lbs. 21/2 oz., May 4-no other details. And a card from Jessie Silvers Bennett in answer to my inquiry about her baby brought forth the news that it was a boy, too-William Russell, born February 9, weighing 7 lbs. 13 oz. Her older Jimmy is 21/2 and is, she says at the bike-pedalling, wandering age. All this doesn't sound like much future for Sweet Briar, unless we can send all these young gentlemen over from the University to court the Sweet Briar lassies!

Aside from birth announcements, I did gather some other news for you gals. I had a nice letter from Marion Martyn Zimmerman, the first in a long time. She said that she had started out working with her husband, but it was soon decided she did a much better job at home. Since she has a household of her father, her sister and son, besides her own two children and husband to look after, it sounds as if her decision were wise. She was especially pleased that her son had passed and been accepted for the Episcopal High School there in Alexandria this fall. but also wanted me to be sure and mention her wonderful daughter of 11 years. Marion was planning to attend the Washington-Virginia-Maryland S. B. Alumnae Group meeting this month.

Then I had a card from Cornelia "Dee" Armfield Cannon, bringing me up-to-date on her family. Her husband is a pediatrician—which "Dee" says is a wry comment since they have a son, aged 4, a daughter of 3, and another son of 5 months. She says it is strenuous, but fun.

Frannie Bailey Brooke says they lead too quiet a life there in Lexington to report much news but that while her husband was taking some oral exams toward his Ph.D. in Chapel Hill, she spent a morning with Shirley Hay-u ood Alexander in her new house. Kitty King Corbett Powell writes that she seldom sees any of the Texas gang from our class. But her roommate, Janet Forbush Fead, had recently visited them with her husband, and since it was the first reunion in 10½ years the girls had a wonderful get-together. Kitty also reported that Helen Walton Andrae's third daughter was born in January.

Of course our new son brought forth congratulationse from lots of girls, among them Kay Hoyt and M. J. Miller Hein. Kay says that she is still working at the Kimberley School, which has just recently moved to new quarters. Besides her school work, she is back to working in dramatic club there in Montclair, has been bowling with some of the younger teachers, and had recently played in a faculty-students basketball game (the kids only won by three baskets, so the faculty considered it a moral victory!), so she sounds busy enough. M. J. reports that she stays busy as ever with just her own household of a boy and a girl.

When I wrote to get the Class Scrapbook I had a card from Dolly Nicholson Tate. She wanted me to be sure and tell you all how nostalgic she gets remembering all your nice communications—and please drop her a line again one day. She has been elected to the Alumnae Council, so she is looking forward to return trips to Sweet Briar.

That's all for this trip. My husband is out fishing this evening and I must go down and iron a bit—I've gotten to that stage! Write me any news you have please.

Class Secretary: BETSY DURHAM (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.) 10 Cliff Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Fund Agent: LEILA BOND (Mrs. Joseph S. Preston) 168 Madison Road, Scarsdale, New York.

Many apologies for the absence of an April letter for our class. There was great news, with which I was left holding the satchel.

There was an exciting addition to one of our class families. Ned and Anne Benedict Swain were the proud parents of a 7 lb. 7 oz. boy who was born January 29. Edward Swain III, is now a grown boy of 4 months or more, and our best to him.

We are a class of children and Kay Richards DeLancey with baby Stephen and 2½ year old Diora is being kept pretty busy in Keene, N. H. Their new house of concrete blocks is the last word, and Bob's business is in a most attractive and modern shop, which is pine-panelled throughout. Kay says the customers come from all over New England—and I expect to be on my way soon.

She says Evelyn Gibson "Gibbey" Emmerich has 2 children, David and Eve, and that they have moved to Baltimore from Orange. New lersey.

Boot Vanderbilt Brown has had a horrible session of measles with their 3 children coming down at once. She says she feels shades of the University even in Williamstown for the Browns have a St. Anthony member being their male baby sitter!

Helen Cary Stewart and Dr. John and their 3 boys are moving from Hohokus, N. J., out west, where John will be associated with a new hospital. He has been Resident Doctor at the Veterans Hospital in the Bronx—quite a commuter, we think!

Kay Ortel Osborne's house is now well seasoned by its Duxbury, Massachusetts, winter, and she and Bob have completed all of the inside work—with the expert advice of 9 months old Miss Lura Osborne. Kay took Lura home to visit and saw Leila and her two girls. The Osbornes are looking for the Bonds to visit them in June.

Martha Hodill Smith and husband, Vey, have started a new business in Pittsburgh. Besides taking care of their 2 children, Mardi is also helping Vey in their new enterprisemore power to her.

Marguerite Myers Glenn and Frank moved back to their farm at Long Beach, California, after studying at the University all summer. They now have 3 children, their youngest having been born last June on a ferryboat! Kay said that the Glenns have sent their famcus cranberries to Leila and herself, and that they are wonderful.

Yvonne Leggett Dyer and Danny have been on one of their frequent and glorious sugar trips. They went to Aruba, Cuba, and Jamaica and have been the envy of all.

We did go the great distance of 10 miles to celebrate Tommy and Eleanor Claffin Williams' tenth anniversary. It was a very clever party, based on the idea of becoming a shell-back when you cross the equator. They became Tin Backs passing over the 10th year, and Albie and I still remain only Jelly Backs.

INTERMISSION

Now for the immediate and June news, some of which is of the same persons—same song, second verse.

A letter from Yvonne, who unbelievably had laryngitis, says that Fritz and Mary Treadway Downs and 3 year old Susie spent Easter week-end with the Dyers in Bronxville. The two young matrons were leaving the children in fathers' care and tooting into New York City's Town Hall for a Marik piano concert.

Jean McKenney Stoddard and Johnny and Jenifer and Diana have moved to Santiago, Chile, from Connecticut. Johnny is attached to the U. S. Embassy there and McKen writes that they have a charming, but "much-too-big house filled with many-too-many servants"—(such is life!)

Lucy Gordan Jeffers had lunch with Boot in New York in April. Bitsy is now working with Standard Brands, Inc., and likes it very well. She says Lee Martin is taking a course to become a C.P.A. and hopes to live in New York in the fall.

A nice letter from Kay Bonsall Strong, who reports the birth of their third child, Robbie, who spent eight weeks in an incubator at the hospital before he could come home. He now weighs over 11 pounds and is "really darling—can turn over and coos."

The Louisville Courier-Journal had a long and splendid write-up of Jean Scott MacNair, Van and Van III, 7, and 3 year old Scott. The MacNairs were visiting Van's parents and from the looks of the handsome picture of Van and Scottie, their 2 years in Cuernauaco, Mexico, was perfect. Scottie is quoted as saying that wearing shoes again is the only difficult thing about visiting. Van has been writing in the "fictional storm center" and neighbor to Dorothy Parker, Martha Gelborn and Nina Putnam—an interesting time in the old Mexican village. One of Van's stories will be in the June issue of Argosy, so be on the watch.

Mary Mackintosh Sherer and Joe are living in a large apartment house in Philadelphia and have seen Betsy Camphell Gawthrop and Bob. Joe has another year and a half residency before he is a full-fledged practicing doctor. He and Mary have many hobbies to provide variety—and I hear their favorite is salmon fishing in Newfoundland, with tennis next.

Eleanor "Conne" Wallace Price and her family moved to Wilmington this spring. They have a new ranch house, with the unexpected problem, that their boys love to climb out of the windows when they are meant to be asleep.

Betsy Gawthrop is the most voluminous correspondent of 1939-and many thanks to her and the others who write the news to me. She talked to Betty Frazier Rinehart who flew East for a short visit. Frazier called up and said "Guess who this is?" and Betsy knew. Betsy writes that Ann Parks is working at Luria Brothers, a steel and scrap metal company in Norfolk, Virginia, and also took care of Diana during her vacation, when the Parks family was stricken with measles and flu. She plans to keep up her Naval Reserve work in Washington and will be visiting the Gawthrops there. Betsy writes of her children, Emily, 9 months old, and 7 year old and roller skating Robbie, and dainty Beth, and all sounds well in West Chester.

In April 1 took the children to Virginia and saw Julie Saunders Michaux, who presided at the S. B. C. Alumnae meeting, introducing 4 of the foreign students who are now in college. Julie and Dick were making plans then for a motor cruise and are probably off by now.

And so am 1-Happy summer.

Class Secretary: Nida Tomlin (Mrs. Robert C. Watts, Jr.), 2837 Sheringham Place, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Eleanor Snow (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.) 765 Valley Street, Orange, New Jersey.

The chips are going to fall where they may this time—no organization, and no style and absolutely no time left. There certainly were a lot of people present at reunion. However I won't list them all—your new class secretary can cover reunion in the fall issue. I honestly, will be sorry not to be hounding you anymore. The mechanics of this job have become as casual as emptying an ash tray and as routine as a gas bill. Besides, I have enjoyed hearing about everyone first-hand and feel as if I knew a lot of you better now.

Hortense Poucll Cooper has been in the spotlight, all over the country. She was married to Former Tennessee Governor Prentice Cooper on April 22 in New York, The Coopers are living in Shelbyville, Tennessee, at the present.

Mildred Moon Montague wrote while nursing her older son after a tonsilectomy. Mildred said that Nancy Haskins Elliot's little three year old had quite a bout with pneumonia last winter and at this time Naney has been in Bermuda trying to recover. They are heading for California in July. David has a professorship there for the next three years. Jackie Sexton Daley will be leaving California just about when the Elliots arrive. Her husband is going to Philadelphia to take a three months' course in hospital work. Jackie will visit there a while and then go on to Florida for the rest of the time. Jackie's redheaded daughter was born April 6. The Daleys see quite a bit of Marion Phinizy Jones and Coralie Kahn Ferro.

One of the December cards turned up in the shuffle of spring cleaning. As a matter of fact, it was located in a six months size McCall pattern envelope. Boot Vanderbilt Brown's card doesn't make me feel too awful because on it she admitted losing Christmas presents in her household upheaval with Johnny, five years old; Julie, three and a half, and Allison, ten months old. The Browns are living in the Berkshires and love it.

Avon Park, Florida, is a far cry from the Berkshires, but that is where Mariana Bush King is still located in a new house with her children, Mary, seven; Ann, five; and Robert, twenty months old. All the small Kings are expert swimmers and are eagerly looking forward to a visit from Aunt Jane Long and her family.

Becky Pannill Gwin is now living in Houston, Texas. Her husband, Lawrence, is practicing law there and Miss Ann Torrey Gwin is the nineteen months old queen of the house. Kathryn Lubs Furber and husband, Harold, live in Wilmington, Delaware, with their two-year-old daughter, Louise.

Louise Pugh Worthing has been traveling a lot, Mexico, the Caribbean, and has just returned from Canada and is living in Wellesley, Massachusetts.

Janet Runkle Wells reports that Benadine Newby has already gone to Europe and says that she hopes to see her when she returns. Janet is looking forward to her summer vacation at Point O'Woods, Fire Island.

Now for the "so sorry" group-sorry on their side and mine, too, that they couldn't be present at reunion. Mickie Mitchell Gillis is still in Ridgewood, New Jersey, right behind twenty months old Susan. Mickie sees M. K. Warren Griggs and Janet MacFarlan Bergmann occasionally and hopes to see Nan Dickie Neil before long. Connie Currie Fleming is expecting a strenuous summer devoted to her men folks. Her new son, David, was born May 11. Dick will be four soon and Dong is two. I don't know how she can even write a post-card with all those young fellars! The Hardy boys of Grand Rapids, Michigan, are still going strong, too, according to their mother, Helen Schmid Hardy, so reunion was out for her, too. Mary Miller Naquin is also involved in Washington and recently saw Agnes Spencer Burke. The Naquins will be in Washington at least two more years as Dr. Naquin has a residency in Opthamology there.

The list of those present at reunion included Lois Fernley McNeil, Blair Bunting Both, Reba Smith Gromel, and a good Richmond group consisting of Emory Gill Williams, Jane Goolrick Murrell, Clara Call Fraver and Polly Boze Glascock. I certainly loved seeing them!

The Glascocks are moving to Washington where Jim has taken a position in the office of the Chief Council, Bureau of Internal Revenue. It was wonderful to see Peggy Caperton Ranken a few weeks ago and her vivacious blond daughter, Margaret Tucker. Peggy is still composed and Tucker duesn't need a Toni and neither does Ramona Ward Fite, number three daughter of our former Miss Spurlock. I didn't see Jane Goodrick Murrell's blond brute son on my last Richmond trip but undestand that he is up to no good.

Well, back to the Salt Mines with a few nocturnal chores. I'm ready and waiting for more news of reunion in the next issue of the magazine. One of you gals please write the Alumnae Office and say that you'll take over. We don't want our class left out!

Class Secretary: Joan Di Vore (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 2719 Hampshire Avenue, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: BETTY DOUCETT (Mrs. John E. Neill) 1177 California Road, Tuckahoe, New York.

"Let's take a trip to Niagara . . . Let's get away from it all; We'll travel 'round from town to town, etc., etc. . . ." That song is appearing on the radio again (I guess the young fry would call it a revival, oh, woe!) and it never fails to remind me of nine years ago this time, so let's see what we can do on paper. My southern correspondents almost failed me so I'm afraid we'll have to stay above the Mason-Dixon line most of the time.

From Ft. Plain, New York, in the early spring I had a wonderful letter from Pi Douling von Wellsheim. Her fourth child, Patricia, was born February 19 and Pi says Ingrid, 6, Alfred 4, and Margaret, 2, all adore their new baby sister. Isn't that a grand family? She says they are so happy with their growing family and she's beginning to feel like a responsible parent with four of them. Her Al is president of the local P. T. A. and she is busy with church groups, a bridge club and community activities, but mostly with her brood.

Pi hears often from Meach who is happily settled in Hudson, Mass., with husband, two sons and a lot of domestic talent like sewing sport shirts and making Irish lace. Cynthia Falkner McConnell had written a long letter to Pi. Her son, Anthony, is old enough for boarding school and Amanda is at home. They have been living in Tunbridge, Wells, but are about to move to an air base near Kent. Cyn had another daughter, Fiona, born December 28. Her address is No. 6 Officers Married Qtrs., R. A. F., Manby, near Louth, Lincolnshire, England.

Piney Martin Patterson had a little boy last summer, who had a hard time at first because they were unable to find what he was allergic to, until they discovered it was milk, put him on soy beans and he seems to be fine now.

Next, we'll whip down to Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and surprise Lillian Breedlove White. Lil, in her usual way, wrote me a letter at 12 midnight, the time she used to get most of her correspondence done. She was leaving early in the morning for Richmond with her family (the little one is Log, the big one Logan, to avoid "junior" if possible.) She said she and Logan were feeling mighty "settled down" and "old-marrieds." He's progressing in the building business and they have a house which is in a development of houses he started.

Dot Bennett Black, Ken, and their two boys drove up from Baltimore to see the Whites; and with H. A. Littleton Hauslein, Jack and their two, Jackie and Beth, they had a house full and a reunion. Lillian hadn't seen Dot for 2½ years and said she literally hadn't changed a bit, in spite of her two hefty boys. She has seen Shirts Shau Daniel since she is near enough for reunions, too. Lil did have some news of Janie Loveland Byerts on a Christmas card. Her husband had just been transferred from a wonderful base in Florida to the wastelands of Georgia, with the Army Air Force, which didn't seem to please any of them.

Mary White is working for the State Department of McCarthy fame and has to be most secretive about the work, but from scant information the job sounds fascinating and she seems to be enjoying Washington apartment life thoroughly.

Washington is also the birthplace of Edward Marill Stanchfield, son of Gertrude Marill and Paul Stanchfield. We're a little late with this news as young Edward made his appearance on January 28.

Tenth-hand information has it that Lucy Lloyd is off for Europe this summer (lucky girl) and is planning on teaching or administrative work in a girls' school come fall.

Helen Watson Hill's chief news in Rochester is housebuilding and after July 1 her new address will be 416 Oakridge Drive. It's a Cape Cod, story and a half on an acre of wooded land, which sounds divine. Her Jeff is 3½ and Leni 1½, and coupled with them Helen is busy with two crippled children's groups, church chapter and book club.

In Fredericksburg Decca Gilmer Frackelton and her family are house builders too, having moved in March. She was trying to get everything done when she wrote, before taking Nick, age 5½, to Charlottesville to have his tonsils and adenoids out. She said the doctor said it was harder on the mothers than on the children. Mary Scully Olney had been ever from Winchester; her Jamie is now 2 years old. Decca sees Bebo Chichester Hull at Sweet Briar meetings and reports her Sarah is almost 3 and a cute one.

Edna Shoemaker Packard in Schenectady has had a daughter, Wilma Louise, since last report. She's blond, dark eyed, chubby and tireless (aren't they all?) Edna says, and very neat, everything must be in its place. Her Johnny is $7\frac{1}{2}$ and in second grade, which he hates. He's a cowboy most of the time with a rope over one shoulder and pockets full of Hop-a-long Cassidy cards. They're in the throes of redecorating and with summer coming up, with baseball and fishing, Edna expects to be a summer widow.

From Utica a letter from Edge Cardamone O'Donnell informs us she had a daughter a year ago in May, an adorable blue-eyed, curlyhaired demon, named Jean, bringing her family number to three. Margaret Craighill Price had her third daughter, Deborah, in March. Charlie Davenport Tuttle and her family are now living in Oneida, not far from Utica, and had been to the O'Donnell's for dinner. Edge said she looked wonderful and hadn't changed a bit either. Edge was the "brave and handsome prince" in their League's spring play "Sleeping Beauty." They tronped it 21 times in all the Utica schools. She's finishing her two year stint as chairman of trouping and is preparing to take over placement in the fall. She had Joanne Lilly Abbott working with her.

Evie Cantey Marion wrote her son Andy, Jr., was born January 23, and a beautiful little boy with red hair. His sister, Evelyn, is 2½ now. The Marions are living in the'r own house, a tiny brick bungalow in a development, which they hope will do until they can build a bigger one, though I can't imagine Evie in anything but a cute tiny house.

A card from Shirley Devine Clemens arrived just in time to end this tour. She was in Philadelphia with Clemie on business but later they were going down to White Sulphur for a few days. She said her mother was battling with 8 months old John, a handful, who's upright and travelling all over his pen.

Back to Cincinnati and the domestic scene—the house is painted, the garden planted, and I hear rustlings in the bedroom; nap time is over and so is the peace and quiet, so I'll have to stop. Have a happy summer, let me hear from yon, and I'll see you in the fall.

Class Secretary: ANN HAUSLEIN (Mrs. Thomas Potterfield) Broadwater Apartments, R.F.D. No. 2, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA BEASLEY (Mrs. Richard Holzer) 219 N. Broad Street, Lancaster, Ohio.

H'ya there everyone. Before launching forth on the news of the day I'd like to take this opportunity on behalf of all of us to welcome our new President, Mrs. Pannell, and to wish a successful future to Miss Lucas.

A letter from Virginia Beasley Holzer says that her hunter has gone to Sweet Briar and that she will attend his graduation perhaps in '52, our reunion year.

Babies and more babies. Sudie Clark Hanger now boasts 3 boys and 1 girl, the latest, James Edward, born April 26. A third child for Cynthia Abbott Botsford, also a boy, Andrew Miller, born March 11. "Cyn" and "Bots" celebrated Andrew's arrival by taking a holiday trip to Sea Island. April 17 is Florence Adele's birthday. She's the pride and joy of Florence Gillem Pressly—no wonder, a gal after 2 boys. "Flussie" loves Gadsden, Alabama, where she does Service Guild work and spends the rest of her time waiting to catch a fleeting glimpse of her doctor-husband. Believe it or not, Dottie Hutchings Price was so anxious to announce Richard Barker's birth that she sent me a card the same day that he arrived, May 16. Two days later Letitia King became the first born of Alice King Harrison. Alice and baby were in a Memphis hospital, so that Vive Walker Montgomery was a daily visitor. Vive and family have just moved into their own home there. One more future Briarite, Elizabeth Gail, was born April 28her mother, Phyllis Sherman Barnes. An announcement came from Eloise English Davies, mailed from Seattle, Washington, telling of their third son, Ronald. Not many months ago the Davies settled down comfortably in their own home in D. C .- wonder what happened-unpredictable Navy. Frannie Meck Young always writes the newiest letters, this time supplementing the birth notices with the news that in February Sally Schall van Allen produced a 9 lb. 1 oz. buy, George Humphrey, and that in April, Diana Stont Allen had a daughter, Helen Barnes, At this rate, I am going to have to start a column of Stork Notes. Frannie claims she has spent her time stuffing aureomycin down recalcitrant children.

Since our last get-together, via the newsletter, Betsy Gilmer Tremain and Susanne Hogue Deas have moved into their new homes. Plenty of chit-chat from Lncy Call Dabney who sent tidings of one more child, the fourth for Virginia McGuire Brent. This was the first boy so it's really big news. She informed me that Sally "Butch" Jackson's married name is Mrs. Ernest C. Mead, Jr., and that Ernest is a concert pianist in Richmond. Sally plans to spend the summer at her hotel, the Chalfont, in Cape May, New Jersey-plug. Doug Woods Sprunt and Worth had a trip to Cuba and Haiti, I guess to give Worth a rest before starting to practice ophthamology. Another traveler is Polly Peyton Turner. The Turners, including twins, are going to Honolulu for one of Carol's tours of duty. As for "Poose," she claims that she leads the usual happy housewife, volunteer worker life. The Dabneys expect to spend a month in Gloucester this summer. Swede (Alice Sureney Weed) says that nothing has happened to her except that they are trying to sell their farmhouse for another one with 10 acres of ground. She also said that Betty Brown Sweney and Bill have moved into a beautiful new home.

The potentially famous member of our class, Ruth Jacquot Tempest, has had a short story accepted by Charm magazine. Look for it around June or July, entitled "The Round Table." "Rut" writes as Ruth Tempest. Life in the sonthwest has been rough this spring with a lot of wind and dust and rationed water, but "Rut" says that they have planted a garden and hope it survives. Diana Greene Helfrich's husband, Harry, has been made a full commander, and they celebrated by purchasing a dishwasher and electronically controlled garage doors.

Jeanne Buzby Runkle is still in Baltimore, and spent a week-end with Jane Taylor Lowell in Washington and ran into "Di" Greene Helfrich. Jeanne tells me that Mabel Sheldon is now Mrs. Francis, wife of an Episcopalian rector, in Summit, New Jersey. The Fosters, Caro Quinn and fam ly, have bought a cottage at Breezy Point, where they will spend the summer. A fellow resident's wife, Pat Potter Roach, writes that her husband starts a 5-year surgical residency at Passavant Hospital in Chicago-blessing on thee, brave girl. My Tom has 13 more months to go, and to us it seems an eternity. Davy Roach, Jr., attends the University of Chicago Nursery School, progressive, yes. Pat works at the Public Administration Clearing House across the street from her house. Needless to say, she checks in at the last gong of 9. Despite the hectic life, Pat sounds mighty happy.

JANIT and ANN, who belong to the JOHNSON-DALL families

Here's wishing you a wonderful summer. Drap me a card from your vacation spots,

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER (Mrs. A. D. Matthai, Jr.) 20 Clinton Place, Utica 3, New York.

Fund Agent; ANNE McJunkin (Mrs. Frank E. Briber, Jr.) 6640 N. Elm Tree Road, Milwaukee 9, Wisconsin.

Long awaited Spring which I had almost come to believe a myth in these parts has finally arrived "up-state" so while batting out my meagre paragraphs I am trying to catch up on the sunburn I would have had two months ago if I had been anywhere in the proximity of Sweet B's arcades. Actually I liked the winter up here but evidently Mary Belle Lee Aldridge didn't agree with me. In my first direct communication from her in five years she wrote joyfully that she was leaving Boston where Fred has been teaching the Harvard R.O.T.C, unit, He is now being sent to Quantico, and, having discovered over the winter that she is definitely a southern gal, Mary Belle is delighted in spite of the fact that they have no place to live.

A letter from Elizabeth "Snookie" Campbell Shearer seems to indicate great bliss at being back in her old stomping ground, too, though for the sake of my own home state I must add that the epistle was inspired by her nostalgia for Maryland at Hunt Cup time. Anyhuw she and Logan have unpacked all their wedding presents for the first time so they must be pretty well settled. Fayette McDowell Willett and Roscoc visited them for an evening, most of which seems to have been spent with "Snookie" gawking at Fayette's ever increasing beauty while Fayette and Ros indulged in one of their giggling fests after another. I have heard before that they are the greatest pair of gigglers in North America and you always have a good time with them. "Snookie" says they have a little girl almost three and a boy one. She had also been seeing Norma Bradley and Joe Arnold quite a lor.

My card to Betty Braxton "Brac" Preston caught her in a state of excitement over a trip to Figland this summer. She sailed June 8 for six weeks summer school at the University of Oxford and then two weeks of looking around the British Isles. She had seen Peggy Roudin Foster with husband and child, all three looking very attractive, and also told me that Nancy Earle Smith Kimmich is now living in Madison, Connecticut, and has three small children, Her husband teaches some subject with a fancy big name at Yale.

"Brac" complained of not hearing from Beth Dichman Smith for months, which might be explained by her crashing through with one to me instead. Beth was in the process of raising six ducks to decorate their stream, but two had just been killed by a dog and I think her emotions were mixed on the subject because even though they were cute, she was "so glad to get the things out of the kitchen where they languished for two weeks" that she hardly cared what happened to them. She had seen Helen Ann Littleton Hauslein and Ann Hanslein Potterfield, both of whom live nearby.

Chesley Johnson Dale wrote that she was spending her spare time "gardening and beatwhich struck me as awfully ing on copper' peculiar until I found out she has started a copper shop where they sell all sorts of handmade gifts-evidently quite successful as the proceeds helped her get a washing machine and new refrigerator. She had seen Sloan Hawkins in New Orleans, where she is working as secretary to the head of the physics department at Tulane. Chesley also wrote me some amusing incidents about her oldest daughter, Ann. Her other daughter, Janet. apparently spends more time on all fours than Sweet Pea and has developed real speed at it,

I understand from Jones' relations here that Valerie Jones Materne had a son, Russell Kirk, in January, According to a previous report from Merriam Sands "Sandy" Packard Hubbard this gives her the green light from her husband to further increase the family—had it been another girl 'twould have been the end.

Here in Utica Elsie McCarthy Sampson and her husband have just bought a little house. I haven't seen it yet, but Elsie sounded delighted to have a home of her own and was very busy getting settled. Also, by the way, Charlie Davenport Tuttle has moved to a nearby town. I saw her at Angela "Edge" Cardamone O'Donnell's a couple of months ago and she looks marvelous.

Worth says my cooking has improved and my art hasn't, but that might be a biased opinion as he has always subjected himself more frequently and enthusiastically to the former.

Sorry, everybody, but there was a mix-up as to the deadline date for last issue's column. Everything is straightened out now, however.

On with the news . . . or what you will. Was just commiserating with my neighbor, Mary White Hollander, that so few of you trip up to New York these days. The Biltmore used to look like Big Commons in our salad days. I guess it's the lets-stay-out-of-the-cities fever that's in the air. Mary and Preston have a beautiful site of 40 acres up in Pawling, New York, and are starting on the foundation of their house this summer. Preston III, one year old in June, has cooed his approval of the plans. We all had a delicious dinner with Jerry Cornell Means and husband, Tom, a few weeks ago, and they are househunting in the wilds, too.

Mimi Ethridge Wood was up visiting her family in New York. Unfortunately she had to cut her visit short and go back to house-hunting in Georgia. However, she, George, and little Renee will be back later in the summer for George's vacation.

Had a nice letter from B. J. Rodgers Hammond, now living in Maumee, Ohio, saying, "We are becoming country folks having saddled ourselves with a veritable estate. Two acres and a big old house and no help but a cleaning woman . . . anyway, it's a nice clean life . . .!!" B. J. has a new little girl, Leslie.

Connie Sue Budlong very thoughtfully forwarded me a most newsy letter from Dykie Watts, which unfortunately, I have to cut:

"29 December 1949 "Port Swettanham "Malaya

"Another girl and I are on our own for a while now. We left Yokohama the 10th of December. We weren't very sad over the prospect of ten weeks on a British freighter with twelve stops between Yokohama and Genoa. Our spirits were slightly dulled, however, a day or so out of Yokohama when we ran headlong into a typhoon.

"We had three days in Hong Kong during which we shopped and sightsaw and ate where you are supposed to eat... and the total purchases for the day amounted to a box of cough drops! We took a cable car up to the top of Victoria Peak and the view was breathtaking. We left Hong Kong in a cold raining wind and by afternoon we had shorts on and were playing deck quoits on deck.

"The (ship) Sondan is a P. and O. ship and a very lovely one, in case anyone wants to make a nice trip. There is room for twelve passengers. Chris and I and one other woman are the only female members aboard. The rest are all attractive young men. It's a hard life! The food is delicious (and plentiful. They get about 7 meals a day! L. S. A.)

"We arrived in Singapore and were met by people we had met in Shanghai the year before. We were in Singapore over the Christmas holidays. The parties started early Christmas eve and continued on through the day after, called Boxing Day.

"We had a unique experience aboard Christmas night. The stewards are all from Genoa. Christmas is quite a day for them but I am afraid it has lost some of its significance. They set up an altar, the oddest conglomeration of crepe paper, festoons, statues and figurines representing the Nativity-flanked on one side by a collection plate and on the other by a bar . . . In the background a fiddle and guitar played sambas and "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow" and similar religious tunes. They celebrated by themselves after we had gone until 2:30. We were in Singapore for five days. While we were there we met Dave Kowalke who knows Tina White and Leslie Herrick Danford. Also a Bob McClintock whose mother attended S. B.

"We have been in Port Swettanham for two days . . . Penang tomorrow morning . . . from there we go to Columbo and Bombay, through the Suez to Cyprus and on to Genoa where we plan to spend what little money we have left seeing Europe . . .

"Love to all, Dykie."

BRIEFLY NOTED:

Got an announcement of Elizabeth Hartman's marriage to Laurence Clark. I have been trying to get her on the phone but no luck. Will have news of her for the next issue, I hope.

Sydney Holmes Bales and I have hour long telephone conversations but we haven't been able to get together in months. She claims the only news she has is she is starting a garden and has gained weight (most becomingly, I hear).

Annabelle Forsch caught sight of Emily Ann Wilkens Macon on the Madison Avenue bus a month or so ago. Where are you now, Em?

I saw in the New York Times that Tina White was engaged to William Jordan, lawyer. I misplaced the clipping. I'm sorry to say, or I'd be able to tell you more.

Susie Somertell Griswold has had a very pleasant winter in Paris, and is now apartment hunting for the summer. The situation over there is altogether too familiar sounding! We will have to do the same. Susie ran into Nancy Bean White.

DON'T FORGET TO SEND ME THE NEW'S!

To those of you who did not get back to reunion, we can only say we are very sorry because we all had a grand time seeing familiar faces and places, and discussing everything from the King of England to diapers.

From the few information blanks that I managed to get through, I was able to gather a few tidbits. I'm sorry I didn't get through more of them but here's the little I did get.

Mary Perkins Trangott Brown had a boy, Townsend, Jr., born on November 16, 1949. Perk's main interest outside of her insurance salesman husband and little boy is being chairman of the Junior League Thrift Shop for 1950-51.

Jeanne Skerry Tepe is a member of the Junior League Board, editor of the Junior League News Sheet, member of the G'rl Scout Board and chairman of the area's International program. Her husband is a doctor of Chemical Engineering and her two children are John 3, and Peachy, 1.

Mary Kritser Miller is living in Grosse Pointe, Michigan, with her little boy and husband who is with the Armstrong Cork Company.

Louise Cross Tate has a little girl born within the last two months as nearly as I can figure it. Her husband, Ralph, is an attorney.

Isabel Gaylord is now working in Maryland as a laboratory technician in the Respiratory Lab at Johns Hopkins.

Ann Bower is out in Colorado Springs where she and a friend are opening a handicraft shop where they will make silver jewelry and blockprint materials.

Jane Lesh Spurr got back to commencement and said we had never let it be known that she had a son, Steven Robert Randolph Spurr, born June 15, 1947. Jane has been the assistant business manager of the Junior League Newsletter.

Dale Sayler Hull is in Washington, D. C., with her parents and 3 year old daughter, Diana.

Harriet Whitehurst Brownett is in Neptune Beach, Florida, with her five year old daughter, Maria Whitehurst.

CRUTCHER Field HARRISON and baby, JOHN

Virginia Whitaker Shelton and her husband are followers of the tobacco market.

Ginger Osborn McNabb has a boy, John, Jr., now about 20 months old. Ginger is treasurer of the Burtonwood Nursery in England where they are now living.

Anne Warren left museum work after two years and is now devoting her time to good works and fun in Greenwich. Anne went to Bermuda last spring as part of the crew for some international sailing races.

Frances "Pani" Matton Williams is moving from Durham, North Carolina, to Louisville, Kentucky. Husband Hugh has three more years of training and then will practice there.

Peggy Jones Wyllie has a son born about the first of May. He has been named Ashton Robert Jesse Wyllie.

Dede Enright is now touring Spain by car. Anne McLean Loomis has a boy Gilbert Brainard III. Anne Carter Walker Somerville had a boy, Atwell, last November. Jo Livermore Faust has a boy. Her husband is a dentist in Plymouth, Michigan.

Gloria Luoton and her mother took a world cruise on the luxury liner Coronia. One of the incidents that I heard about is worthy of repeating. When the boat stopped at Tristan, a small island in the mid-south Atlantic where boats can only stop every 20 months or so when the tide is right, Gloria and a friend went ashore. They had to sign a statement relieving the company of any responsibility if the tide should change and the boat have to leave without them. While they were on shore, the ship only changed position in the harbor but those on shore lost a few years of their lives due to the anxiety aroused. If the boat had left, Gloria would probably still be sitting in the mid Atlantic eating potatoes along with the best of the Tristan natives. Fortunately for Gloria's mother, she didn't know they had signed any statement until they were safely back on the boat.

It is always wonderful to hear from you and I do appreciate the replies to my cards, I was especially thrilled to receive a card from Mrs. Randolph—maybe I should write to the parents instead of the daughters. Mrs. Randolph wrote that Bev sailed on April 14 on the Alcoa-Pioneer to spend three months in Italy, France, and England.

Bev's many thousand mile trip sounds wonderfol, but I imagine that Barbara Hond Sprunt's eight hundred mile drive from Memphis to Wrightsville Beach with her one-yearold son will be about as exciting and eventful.

Ruth Houston sent a newsy letter telling of her trip to Florida last winter. She bumped into Helen Murchison Lane in a fishing resort at Marathon. Ruth says that the fish have gained in weight and number greatly since that day!

Adelaide Butler Maxwell's second redheaded daughter was born on May 19. Carroll Cone Cozart's daughter arrived just a spec too late for my last letter, Carroll Robin was born February 19 and weighed seven pounds. Peggy Todd Fanning's daughter, Margaret Winchester, was born March 8. Peggy says that she is blond and blue-eyed and has a lovely loud voice! Elizabeth Fruit Metzenthin's son arrived on March 26. Of interest especially to '46 mothers will be the news that James Edward never even asked for his two o'clock feeding. A most obliging baby. "Libba" and her family are now all settled in a new apartment. When they moved in they only had a stove, refrigerator, bed and chest of drawers, and now it is quite complete. Crutcher Field Harrison writes that John Cowles, Jr., made his bow on February 20-and looked six weeks old the day he arrived. Crutcher still has P and P on her mind and has been "Story Lady" for the Miami Children's Theater. Crutcher acts as a MC and introduces such acts as the elephant mascots-costumed elephants, that is, and leads the children in song.

Two daughters, Mary Frère and Charlotte, Feep Charlotte Sprunt Murchison quite busy. The Murchisons have recently moved into the house which they built. Char is also in the throes of helping organize a volunteer service boreau in Wilmington. Mary Vinton has been an interior decorator and from all reports is quite an authority on china, silver, and antiques. Mary wrote that Barcy Kennedy is engaged to a boy from Indiana and will be married this fall. The name of the lucky man is not included in Vinton's note. The name of another lucky man is Robert Burton who will marry Nancy Dowd this fall. Adeline Jones Voorhees, who talked to Dowd, said she was beside herself with excitement, Nancy's fiance is a Harvard man and also lives in Glendale, Ohio, where Dowd has been work-

Pat Arms Brown had a son in March. He is Ashley, Jr. I understand that Alice Eubank is working at Lord and Taylor which sounds like a fascinating place to be. Hallie Nixon and Jack Powell attended the Fiesta in San Antonio in April. The Fiesta sounds on the order of Mardi Gras and very exciting. It is in the Peggy Coffman when I was in New York the end of May to see the Cocktail Party. Peggy is working for Metropolitan and looks like big city life agrees with her.

Have a nice summer, everybody, and do write to me in the fall.

(Editor's Note: A group of '48ers while on campus for reunion composed an anecdote to be added to this letter. Lack of time prevents us from checking closely for "double entries" so some of the news may be repeated. We thought you'd enjoy hearing it all anyway.)

As I write this letter, it's nearly two years to the day since we clutched those diplomas in our hot little fists and set out in the wide, wide world. I can only believe it's possible when I view the collection of news about jobs, engagements, weddings, and new babies spread out before me.

April seems to have been quite an eventful month, at least as far as the younger generation is concerned. Ned and Ardis Fratus Mc-Bride have a daughter, Robin Thayer, born April 14. From the looks of her picture, taken at the age of one day, she's going to have her mother's dimples, too! It's a boy, James Allen, at Dick and Ginny Wurzbach Vardy's. His birthday is April 30.

We also received word of Judy Perkins' marriage on May 6 to Norman Webb Llewellyn in London, England.

Harriotte Bland was married to James Guthrie Coke III, in Louisville on December 22. Polly Rollins married Richard Maurice Sowell on October 1.

Martha Garrison is secretary to the Dean of Men at the University of Cincinnati. She and Chuck Anness are planning a June wedding. Liz Barbour was also a June bride when she married Don Beggs on the 17th in Alexandria, Virginia. When I saw Liz recently at a meeting of the Sweet Briar Club, she was very excited over fixing up their new apartment.

Nancy Vaughn is engaged to Daniel Morris Kelly of Washington and Atlantic City, although no date has been set for the wedding. In the meantime, Nancy is back in Washington and working at the State Department again. We've recently been visited by Lyn Irvine who has an interesting sounding job with Time, Inc., in Rockefeller Center.

Kax Berthier also paid Washington a surprise visit a few weeks ago on her way to a job-hunting expedition in New York. She reports having seen Mary Jo at the University of Texas in Austin, and Steve and Janie Leach Cromwell in Philadelphia, where Steve is in med school.

Louise Day is working for Congressman Smathers of Florida. She finds her work particularly interesting because of the recent primary elections.

The Sweet Briar Symposium held in March was a veritable reunion for the '48ers, Among those who attended were Anne Ricks, Martha Owens, Eleanor Potts Snndgrass, Wayne Stokes, and Martha Frye Terry. Martha and Harold have a daughter, Barbara, born in September.

Ricky has a part-time job with the United World Federalists in Richmond, I am particularly indebted to her for the following bits of news:

"Tate McArthur Todd and husband, John, are living in Greeley, Colorado, where John is a lawyer. They like small town life.

"Ann Harris Bellows and her husband, who is the brother of Alice Ann Bulman Bellows' husband, are living in Houston and getting ready to build.

"Helen McKemie Riddle and husband are living in Wichita Falls, Texas, since his graduation from Texas A, and M.

"Skipper Mattison is doing field work in the Youth Guidance Center in Worcester, Massachusetts. She's also going to classes and writing her thesis.

"Anne Street Lautz and Bob live in Yonkers, New York.

"B'Lou Bruton Lyons and Ed are settled in their own place in Memphis and having great fun fixing it up."

Stu Taylor Hough is the proud mother of a nine months old son, Mark. She and her family live in Sheldonville, Massachusetts.

Girls who have become Richmonders in the past year are Connie Tunnell Bond and husband Bob, who is a lawyer working for an insurance company, and Sally Smith Williams, whose Tom is a native of Richmond.

Jody Vestal Lyon, Bob, and their two-year old son, Robert, live in the little settlement of Laorel, just outside of Richmond. Bob is in construction work.

Nela Wattley is studying political science in Paris and finding a student's life there fascinating.

Vi Whitehead Morse and Monk have a small apartment in Greenwich, Connecticut, and love it.

Mary Colson Comstock writes that she and Stu are house hunting in Folton, New York, where he is assistant superintendent of a woolen mill.

Betty Kernan has recently returned from spending April in, of all perfect places, Paris,

I have one final plea, in addition to the incitable request for news, of course. Some of cor classmates have disappeared. At least letters addressed to them have been returned. Does anyone know the addresses of the following girls? Betsy Anderson Douglas, Betsy Garrison, Eleanor "Petie" Johnson Cox, Joyce Raley, Elizabeth Stevens, Pam Terry Stoutenburgh and Barbara Hepler Jefferson.

Have a nice summer, all of you, and don't forget to write.

The following was written and arranged by Meon Bower, Vickie Brock, Anne Ricks, Pat Goldin, Mary Louise Lloyd, and Maddin Lupton.

Rumor hath it that:

Although this June wasn't a reunion time for the Class of '48, some seven of us happened back to the Patch. We seven got to talking—'Twas at an exclusive '48 picnic at the boathouse that Meon, Vickie, Rickie, Pat Goldin.

Weezie, and Maddin got all these rumors to add to the class letter. Martha Shmidheiser was on campus but we only caught glimpses of her because she was hooding a senior. Now some of 'em may be old tales, also false rumors, and a lot of hot air but here goes-

The Eiffel Tower and London Bridge keep calling our class. Jennie Belle Bechtel and Sally Davis sailed on the Queen 'Liz May 31 for some fancy touring. Pat Cansler sailed June 23 but this time she is planning to see the continent, instead of the British Isles. Judy Perkins met an Englishman at M. I. T. and went over to England to become Mrs. Norman W. Llewellyn living at 122 Ness Road, Shoeburyness, Essex, England. Ynes Yova is in Rome, we hear, where her brother, Hank, has been awarded the Prix de Rome in architecture. Jo Neal sails for Europe in the fall after getting her degree at the University of Chicago. Sally Pearre is studying in Europe and Nela Wattley at the Ecole de Science Politique. Louise Day joined McCall Henderson and Nancy Vaughn for a time on that trip last winter.

Richmond has become a '48 center for Constance Tunnell Bond and her husband Bob who have a home there. Connie works in an insurance office (wonder if she draws those "planeria" things in policies?).

things in policies?).

In the diaper department of our class, Jodie Vestal Lyon and Bob have two sons, Robert, Jr., and Billy and they, too, live in Richmond. Murray Armstrong James has two young fry. Stuart Taylor Hough lives in a cute red farmhouse outside Providence and has a year old son. Lydia Henderson Barr has a redheaded young son we hear. Jane Miller Wright way out in San Gabriel, California, has a son, Howard III, and a grove of avocado trees in her yard. How about that? Suzanne Hardy Beaufort lives in North Augusta, South Carolina, with her brand new daughter, 'Zanne.

As consolation to us who're not busy housekeeping and formula fixing there are many career girls in our midst. Martha Mansfield is a recreational director at Fort Knox. Diane King does Child Welfare Work in Shreveport after studying at L.S.U. Betsy Plunkett works long hours for a wholesale druggist in Norfolk. Blair Graves continues her grand work in teaching music in the Roanoke schools, after her marvelous musical trip to Europe. We even heard that Sylvia Schively was secretary for Arthur Godfrey.

Westray is an interviewer in the personnel department of The Royal Liverpool Insurance Company and lives with Ces Youmans who's working in the textbook division of McGraw Hill Publishing Company. Frances Robb is working for B. Altman in New York after taking a training course there. Rosie Gugert teaches music in New Orleans. Anne Paxson has a job as a traveling saleswoman and Martha Owen works for TVA.

Can you feature this-Caroline Rankin is teaching hockey in Louisville and Connie Hancock sells Avon cosmetic products. Mary Pierce is doing something in the Library of Congress. At the gala fiesta celebration in San Antonio in April Cynthia Harding reigned as queen in a regal blue velvet, ermine, and rhinestone gown. Mary Jo took time off from the University of Texas and her sister Pi Phi's to visit Cynthia for the week. Mary Jo is working on something like a Master's in Business Administration.

Jane Luke is in the top ten in her class in med school at U. Va. and is the only girl. Lyn Irvine looks grand with a cute curly short bob. Betty Ann Jackson is working in the Little Theatre in Philadelphia for the Innior League.

Isabel got married in the summer to a neuro-surgeon named Dr. Choh-luh-li and they live in Montreal. Jane Johnston married Warner Kent, Jr., a physicist at Columbia. Ann Harris and Sanny Butman married brothers, George and Frank Bellows. Janie and Steve Cromwell are still in Philadelphia, Polly Rollins is Mrs. R. M. Sowell and lives on Main Street in McAllen, Texas, in the Rio Grande Valley. Allen Hobbs and Charlie Capps had a quiet wedding after Allin's mother suddenly passed away. Martha Frye Terry has a little gal, Barbara, and they will live in New York while her husband studies at Union Seminary.

Felicia is at this point planning an early fall wedding to Ed Dunlap in Gainesville, Georgia. Beezie is marrying this month. We hear Liz Beltz is engaged to a Virginia boy. Lois Gale is Mrs. Wendall G. Harris and lives in Providence. Martha Rowan Hyder and Elton live in Fort Worth, Jeanne Morrell married Henry F. Garlington and lives in Las Vegas. Mary Barrett Robertson was a census taker in Augusta. Petey Johnson is working in New York and Kax is back in Monterrey. Phil Thorpe Miller and Judge live in Arkansas 'tis said.

Anne "Tommy" Porter has finished her nursery school course at Simmons and is living in Providence.

Vickie Brock, after studying at Columbia all winter, is going to spend the summer in a camp in Massachusetts as a counselor. "Weezie" will work at S. B. until November when she will probably go to N. Y. and study. Pat Goldin's plans are indefinite after her two years' work with Mrs. Rollins at S. B. Meon is now doing job analysis and specification work for the vast number of Chase National Bank employees. Maddin has mainly spent her time going back to Alumnae Council meetings and traveling around elsewhere.

We six, Meon, Vickie, Rickie, Weezie, Pat and Maddin hope you all have enjoyed our picnic chatter. We hope we haven't been too presumptious and too far off on our rumors.

Spring again, and many members of our class are married or making plans to do so in the very near future.

Carter Van Deventer was married to Herbert Harrison Slatery, Jr., on April 22. Ruth Garrett and Ellen Ramsey were among the bridesmaids. After a trip to Ponte Vedra, Florida, Carter and Herbert settled in Knox-

Also married on April 22 were Eugenia

"Gene" Rose and Joel Cheatham in Henderson, North Carolina.

On May 19, Deborah Carroll was married to Charles Ziegler, Jr., in New Orleans. Mary Lou Wagner was married May 20 to Keith Wilkin Cramblet in Flossmoor, Illinois, Camille Moss was also married in May.

Kitty Hardwick's engagement to Hugh Martin Efrid of Charlotte, North Carolina, was recently announced. Kitty is planning a September wedding. Bunny Barnett and Walter H. Brown were married early in June. Mary Virginia Grigsby is engaged to Gordon Mallett of Evansville, Indiana. They plan to be married June 21 and live in Battle Ground. Indiana, while both are working on their Masters in Bacteriology. Ann-Barrett Holmes is engaged to Robert Connor Bryan. Zola Garrison and Carolyn "Tat" Aubrev were present for the announcement party. Ann-Barrett is now taking a business course in Short Hills, prior to getting married.

Alice Dulaney Sheridan, who is now living in Florida, has a young daughter. Sally Ayres Shroyer's young son, Louis Walls IV, was born April 30. Sally and Lon are living in Arlington, Virginia.

The news from the working girls finds Frances Pope living in an apartment in New Orleans and working at Ochsner's Clinic. Sally Legg and Jackie Tappen have an apartment in Greenwich Village, New York. Jackie is assistant art editor of McCall and Sallie is going to interior decorating school. Sally Melcher Jarvis is an assistant first grade teacher at Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia. She says her pupils first thought she was John's mother-now think he is her father!

Ellen Ramsey came to Richmond after Carter's wedding. We had several Sweet Brian reunions while she was here. Ellen and I went to S. B. for spring step-singing. We got real sentimental when the Q. V.'s and Bum Chums were chosen. On her way home, Ellen picked up Ruthie who was going to visit Ellen for the Cotton Carnival. Ellen said Mary Ann Craft O'Neal and her 18 months old son, Emmet, Jr., had visited Memphis. Mary Ann also had with her plans for her new home to be built in Birmingham, Alabama.

The following news was sent to Dean Lyman from Goode Geer who is in Germany: "Many greetings! I am here for the 4th European Youth Leaders' Conference and will stay on in Austria for May 1-the Day of Whitness-I will go to Graz for it. Church World Service is to be taken over by WCC and I hope that I will be able to stay on and continue my work with the Protestant and Orthodox Churches in exile."

June Eager Finney and husband, Bill, Susan Corning and her fiance, Skip Whitla, and Peggy Quynn Maples visited S. B. for a gala May Day. They revisited all the old haunts!

Anne Fiery spent her spring vacation visiting old classmates. She and Susan Corning visited June Eager Finney in Baltimore and also saw Trip Corddry and Alice Dahm Prentis. They stopped by Philadelphia and talked with Bertie Pew and Lindsay Coon Robinson. Bertie returned from her European tour early this spring and now has a research job in Philadelphia, Maggie Woods Tillett is moving to Philadelphia in June for two or three years while John is working there.

Education and Human Rights

Dr. Anne Gary Pannell

This is the first speech of Sweet Briar's new president. Mrs. Pannell spoke before the International Federation of University Women at Zurich, Switzerland, August 8.

May I raise several issues and questions here ton ght which no speaker can evade today in speaking to an international audience on so serious a subject as education and human rights. Have such words as freedom and education and human rights a content transcending place and time? Or are they mere names which all people and all societies can interpret without regard to any universal principles, subject only to the limitation—which may become compelling—that the interpretation must conform to the law of the strongest?

First of all I want to question: essentially what is education? Does it have eternal meaning? Is it apart from the community or a part of it? Is it possessed by individuals? How can we define education? Can it be defined—if so, where and when have universal concepts been effectively and rationally established? Then I wish to consider the contemporary challenge and framework of education. The basic question involved here is how to create and maintain a desirable form of education for the midtwentieth century, when time is short if there is to be any freedom or education worth the name—especially freedom, which has so many political ramifications in our world of conflicting ideas.

Thus in attempting to describe how education today can provide an answer against destruction, material and spiritual, I am confronted with another series of questions. Does education follow in the list of human needs after security, (political and economic), or can it survive without security? How do we develop empathy—the power to see others as ourselves? Are all men to be left free to state their views equally? What do we do about what we regard as error? How far is an individual state committed to freedom in education to go in regard to censorship of ideas it regards as bad or in the other direction, how far is it to go in inculcating its conception of the good, the truth?

A Chinese philosopher, (Wu Ting-Fang), has warned that education of itself is not always beneficent, that unless its purposes are good it can be dangerous. "The more a man is educated, the more is it necessary, for the welfare of the State, to instruct him how to make a proper use of his talents. Education is like a double-edged sword. It may be turned to dangerous usages if it is not properly hundled."

Another comment (Appadorai) is that "free and compulsory education is not sufficient; it must also be suited to the requirements of democracy. It must help to produce thinking human beings, men and women, who will take an intelligent interest in public affairs and will be critical of the government, who will be tolerant of views different from their own, and who will not pervert public power to private interest. If, instead, the educational system produces fear, an uncritical herd instinct, selfishness, and indifference to common affairs, the government will sooner or later be turned into a dictatorship, open or veiled."

Among the twentieth century Americans who have emphasized the value of freedom and questioned the role of every institution in emphasizing freedom was Woodrow Wilson, who early wrote that he sometimes feared universities could make men forget their common origins, forget their universal sympathies and join a class, and declared that he had dedicated every power to bring colleges with which he had been associated to an absolutely democratic regeneration in spirit, and declared that he would not be satisfied until America knew that colleges and their students were saturated with the same freedom, the same sympathy that pulsed through the whole of humanity.

I feel that freedom does have an ideal meaning that must be reasserted with other great ideals if education is ever again to have real meaning or value, and I also want to challenge what I regard as one of the great modern heresies, namely, the conception that mankind cannot seek freedom in education, the ideal of the good, the true, the beautiful, until the more basic needs of security and economic welfare have been satisfied. As Alfred North Whitehead said:

"Mankind is now in one of its rare moods of shifting its outlook. The mere compulsion of tradition has lost its force. It is the business of philosophers, students and practical men to recreate and re-enact a vision of the world... penetrated through and through with unllinching rationality."

Education is the foundation of a free world. Without the right kind of teachers and teaching, the right kind of schools and colleges, there will be no freedom. There are those in the world today who believe, on the contrary, that a government can produce and form the education it desires. They oppose universal concepts of justice, freedom, and human rights. The concept of freedom, a comparitively short and rare phenomenon, was created in the Mediterranean-Atlantic world by ideas, and passed on by education. Through the study there of the Graeco-Roman classics the idea of the "good man" developed as the pursuer of virtue and excellence with discipline, will, and a desire to distinguish between good and evil, standing above interest conflicts and reflecting the ideals of truth and justice to which humanity constantly aspires. Plato wrote:

"It is not the life of knowledge, not even if it included all the sciences, that creates happiness and well-being but a single branch of knowledge—the science of good and evil. If you exclude this from the other branches, medicine will be equally able to give us health, and shoe-making shoes, and weaving clothes. Seamanship will still save life at sea and strategy win battles. But without the knowledge of good and evil, the use and excellence of these sciences will be found to have failed us."

Barbara Ward has suggested that if we substitute "mass production" for "shoemaking and weaving" and "atom bombs" for "strategy" Plato's words could define our dilemma today.

Christianity, the other great source of western thought, countered the Greek pride in human reason and achievement by teaching the prevalence of sin and the need for humility in seeking virtue, and so in the west produced ideals of freedom based on law, the worth of every human soul, the existence of the state for the individual, and the necessity of practicing tolerance, admitting the possibility of error, and the right of opposition. There are few national cultures which do not owe much to this heritage, and it was upon this foundation that most human rights were developed. These were the underlying ideas behind the rise of European and American governments and education.

Today this vision of good is increasingly replaced by emphasis in education on science, which is ethically neutral, and on vocational and specialized training to attain material welfare—all unsatisfactory answers to the need of our troubled world. Purchasing power is not the measure of a great society. Wisdom and culture are not the inevitable consequences of an increased capacity to consume. Civilization cannot be "bred to greatness and splendor" by science. This is another part of the heresy of seeking security materially rather than at the spiritual and rational level. It is one of the reasons our age is not satisfactory for freedom. Industrialism and authoritarianism are dragooning the thinking of the world. The conflict of our day can be determined only at the ethical and social level and by a search for moral wisdom. A victory for freedom can be achieved only through enlightened humanism and the acceptance of rational and ethical values. We must try to measure what is new, unfamiliar and frightening in our society by some yardstick other than newness—by a return to basic values. Unless we can reach the rational, humanistic and ethical plane we are likely to meet defeat in the search for true freedom in education.

What are some of the definitions of education which reflect the vision of the good life? Thomas H. Huxley, writing on education, compared life to a game of chess—the chessboard, the world; the pieces, the phenomena of the universe; the rules of the game, the laws of nature; with the other player hidden from mankind. To Huxley education, like chess, consists of rules—the goal is "the instruction of the intellect in the laws of Nature . . . not merely things and their forces, but men and their ways; and the fashioning of the affections and of the will into earnest and loving desire to move in harmony with those laws." Huxley contended that throughout life Nature continues

"her patient education of us in that great university, the universe, of which we are all members—Nature having no test-acts... The object of what we commonly eall education—that education in which man intervenes—is to make good defects in Nature's methods; to prepare the child to receive Nature's education, neither incapably nor ignorantly nor with wilful disobedience; and to understand the preliminary symptoms of her displeasure, without waiting for the box on the ear."

Huxley wished to produce the individual

"whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of Nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of Nature or of art, to hate all vileness, and to respect others as himself."

Huxley's definition of education provides the keynote of my thoughts on education and human rights, as he believed, I think, in the kind of education a free world must have.

"The primary aim of education is the attainment of inner harmony, the integration of personality. Without such an integration, learning is no more than a collection of scraps and the accumulation of knowledge can be dangerous. To be educated an individual must have achieved that inner calm which enables one to look out with clear eyes on other human beings—the most interesting of all objects of study." That is the kind of education—free education—that I think teachers and students should seek. My thesis is that a true education, a really free education, is one that should be deep enough and broad enough to produce individuals who "respect others as themselves" and indeed respect the rights of others more highly and are more tolerant of others' mistakes and weaknesses than of their own.

Education, to be free, must stress the growth of knowledge as an inspiring record of international effort and achievement. Education, to be free, must train educators, citizens and parents, distinguishing truth from falsehood and seeing the world in time, space and the perspective of history, and seeking to develop throughout the world the qualities of tolerance and empathy—that projection of one's self into the imagined consciousness of another. Teachers, parents and communities must strive to inculcate in children from their infancy a recognition of indebtedness to the great and good of all nations. Only then can education be free and true tolerance develop in both adolescents and adults.

A truly free education means the practice of virtue by individuals who cannot close their minds to the value of rival points of view, however much they clash with prejudice. Such freedom grows out of a profound conviction of the worth of each human soul. It must be instilled deep inside individuals by a free education or it will not exist at all. It must provide emphasis on Goethe's ideal of putting the standard of judgment on a truth inside every man instead of outside him, and it must be practiced, not merely preached.

The majority of mankind would have the world awake into this "heaven of freedom." The difficulty of our day is—as the world comes to know better each day the high price of such freedom—to create such a world without fear, where knowledge is free, where walls do not divide us, where the clear stream of reason has not lost its way. The creation of such a world society under law and freedom will require our constant effort.

"The basis of the freedom we want should be neither the state nor the individual human being, but the human person participating in social life and working toward national and international cooperation." The greatest danger to this vision of the good lies in any suppression of free ideas.

Somehow we must try to give to everyone the ability to put himself in the place of every other person in the world. In this way an individual would have the education which comes of the highest quality of the imagination. It is the quality which has inspired, and been exemplified, in the vision of the poets, philosophers and leaders of the race. It is the ideal of Plato's Republic, of the wisdom of Aristotle, of Francis of Assisi, of Gandhi, of Joan of Arc, of Galileo and Copernicus, of Pierre Dubois, who in 1305 suggested the idea of a world court, of William Penn, who in 1693 urged the establishment of an international arbitration tribunal, and of the great English social reformer, Lord Shaftsbury, who worked to mitigate the evils created by the primary impact of the Industrial Revolution.

The record of our own times teaches that there are still liuman beings to whom wisdom is courage in living, who prize freedom above safety, and who wish to help break down the sloth, selfishness and apathy of our world. I prefer to reject Mr. T. S. Eliot's gloomy forecast that the world may end "not with a bang but with a whimper," and to recall instead the great modern example of teacher courage in upholding the freedom of education which occurred on April 9, 1942, when the teachers of Norway read to their students a manifesto of faith and courage—the Norwegian Teacher's Declaration, made in protest against their German invaders' introduction of Nazi educational procedures. It stated:

"(the teacher) must also teach the children to believe in and desire that which is true and just. He is therefore unable to teach anything which is in conflict with his conscience without betraying his calling. Anyone who does so is committing a wrong both against the pupils whom he should lead and against himself."

In defense of this principle 12,000 of the 14,000 Norwegian teachers resisted attempts to introduce Nazi methods and over 1300 of them went to concentration camps.

The mid-twentieth century offers a particular challenge to teachers in this connection. If from infancy they could instill in their students a recognition of human indebtedness to the good and great of all nations by citing the examples of those courageous leaders who were able to feel and suffer what others were feeling and suffering, then students might begin to be oriented in time and space and the perspective of history. If at every level of education students could have emphasized the feeling of "world-belonging," that all peoples of all ages have human kinship; if, as has been suggested by the National Education Association of the United States, the poetry of Robert Burns could be used everywhere to interpret Scotland; if films were available to show how Indians raise tea and hemp, Argentines, cattle and Canadians, wheat; if music instructors could point out how Chopin's mazurkas reflected the folk music of Poland and how Rimsky-Korsakov's Russian music interpreted Arabia and India to the West; if chemistry classes explaining the process of pasteurization could lead to a discussion of the contribution made to the health of all people by a great French scientist—cultural interdependence could be rather concretely illustrated. It is particularly striking today to drive home in science classes the point that current scientific and technological advances are the outcome of the discoveries and inventions of many workers who have done their part throughout the world in many periods.

There are other telling points we can use in striving to point out that cultural differences can be beneficial. For instance, as Arthur H. Compton has written:

"It is noteworthy that the diversity is of the kind that nature employs to gain its greatest strength. It is the highly uniform organism, dependent on a single type of food, or fitted to a special climate, whose days of survival are numbered. The versatile organism lives under changing conditions. Diversity is thus nature's way of ensuring life and strength."

It thus becomes encumbent on teachers as well as citizens generally to inform themselves and their students to the fullest possible extent on geography, customs, habits, and environment, the value patterns of societies, the problems, hopes and fears of nations, and to try to shift from their own point of view to that of others, to destroy sterotypes about differences and to understand culturally-induced motivations, to disengage themselves from their own cultural conditioning and build up perspective, balance, detachment, self-criticism and self-understanding.

The basic purpose of a free education must be to insure a clear and accurate picture of the world as it really exists. I am grateful to President Vibert Douglas for sending me a copy of Youth Challenges the Educators, the report of the Canadian Youth Commission of 1946. This report offers a comprehensive view of what Canadian youth had to say on its desires in education, and was based on the principle that the opinions of young people should be taken into account in any plans developed for their welfare, and that improvements necessary in social institutions can only be achieved through a working partnership between the generations. The main emphasis demanded by Canada's young people was for an education with meaning—for more knowledge about the structure of society and the economy and about the various forces which impose stresses and strains on civilization—for a dispassionate, fair study of these matters, designed to arrive at unbiased conclusions. Such education is a precondition of peace in the modern world, because most conflicts are basically caused by contradictions between popular conceptions and twentiethcentury realities. Education must be free to develop the understanding and activities essential to the twentieth century. The task of enlightening children to adapt themselves to the requirements of our rapidly changing world is great. Here is a great challenge to teachers to be the interpreters of our new world.

There are manifold obligations for society and teachers to equip youth with an understanding of the nature and complexity of our problems and to train them in the art of judgment—in essence to give them a chance for survival. The essential work here lies at the elementary and secondary level of education—the basic preparation—where the duty is to make students aware of the nature of the world, the relationship of nations, the forces that motivate actions, the differences in the institutions of nations, to develop qualities of world-mindedness and empathy.

If teachers and citizens believe that society—including government and all other social institutions—exists for the good of individuals, if they want a world in which all people collectively are devoted to the welfare of all persons individually, if they believe such a world must be one in which individuals are assured of freedom and justice, they will consider freedom and justice to be the expression of ultimate human values—they will want individuals to be free masters of their own destiny, free to seek and secure happiness in accordance with personal schemes of value. They will teach that justice is designed to protect individuals against arbitrary and capricious acts of government and other individuals, and to forbid individuals to exercise freedom in ways encroaching on the freedom of others.

To develop tolerance, understanding—Huxley's ideal of education—there must be concerted opposition to the world wide tendency to judge others by our own values and to view the world only in terms of our own immediate surroundings.

All too often the most friendly diplomats, or historians, belonging to different nationalities, find somewhere or other the place where they cannot enter into one another's point of view. Members of one social class, even if unselfish, are liable to be limited in outlook by the fact that they see things from the point of view of their own class. We may think that we have a spacious vision, a wide horizon; but in reality each of us looks upon the world from a special peephole. Where actual interests complicate a question and a certain amount of wishful thinking may give a bias, it is doubtful whether it is possible for anyone to survey a problem comprehensively. It is certain that many of us fail to realize our incompetence in an art that is of the greatest importance for human relations . . . the simple art of putting ourselves in the other person's place.

For instance as an American, like many of my compatriots, I tend to think of the world in American terms. It is difficult for us to understand and take into account death by famine or public opinion control or imprisonment for a free expression of beliefs. Furthermore, we often fail to realize that such conditions exist as a constant threat in other sections of the world and that a great portion of the world's people live in a climate of opinion alien to our conceptions. No human mind can compass all the factors or command all the complexities or predict all the forces, all the currents of unforeseeable, uncontrollable change. Here is precisely the reason for freedom of education and a free flow of information.

In efforts to develop the quality of tolerance and belief in freedom, the central educational problem is one of teaching and utilizing the processes of critical thinking. Specifically, the task is to guide all to select relevant evidence and draw valid conclusions from assembled data. This takes more than mere verbalization and memorization of the desired conclusion. The study of history can provide many fruitful leads in this connection. For instance the constitution of UNESCO contains the statement, "Wars begin in the minds of men." If students could be asked for their reaction to this statement and their attention could be directed to such points as that although many of the people of this peace-loving democracy are closely akin to the German people, who have fought a number of wars in the last 100 years, yet they have followed another course in international relations. Then perhaps a study of Swiss history and education could point the way for other nations to follow peace.

One of the great problems of our time in this connection is that of censorship. All education, to be free, must emphasize the importance of people having free access to information and truth, of their being able to translate ideas into action, and of the critical role of developing values by which we can give direction to this understanding through social action—by following ideas of the good which have been of importance to mankind in every age.

Education in a shrinking world, drawn closer together by modern transportation and communication, must be education related to the problems of the world. Our world is divided by cultural antagonisms—but then the world has always been divided-but today the problems of one area more quickly become world problems affecting the fortunes of all. We must use education to integrate and harmonize. This is difficult in the face of many vigorous, conflicting ideologies, but the content and processes of education provide the most promising possibility of reaching common ground if education is free. The facts of science and mathematics, except for attempts to fit them unnaturally into a particular ideology, are universally taught in varying degrees. Even in many of the social sciences, there is often a substantial agreement on the intellectual plane. Our great need to recognize and solve an increasing number of mutual problems may force us to explore them through education. The fullest and freest access to information is necessary to effect this.

There are many pathways toward this goal, notably UNESCO. Also there are other valuable voluntary organizations, such as the World Organization of the Teaching Profession, and the projected International Association of Universities to stimulate such action.

There are also other avenues of promise in textbooks and teachers. Anyone who has ever compared descriptions of the same events in the school texts of various countries is amazed at the relative importance assigned by different nations to the same events and the conflicting facts and interpretations encountered. While distortion comes sometimes from dictatorship or nationalism, democracies also offend. For instance, American textbooks have long belabored the British lion and an American Council on Education study showed gross neglect and condescension toward the Latin Americans in many textbooks used in United States schools.

Students should learn from their teachers how to analyze learning materials. If international groups of scholars could be found tolerant, impartial, and anxious enough to write an unbiased and international history of the modern world, one great step toward a free education could be achieved. I have found that my own American history students in five colleges and universities have grown in understanding by comparing history textbooks used in England and Canada with their own with respect to the treatment of the American Revolution and the Napoleonic campaigns and by comparing Mexican and American texts treating the Mexican-American war of 1846. If the need thus exists for clarification and fairness in regard to American historical treatment of relations between Canada and the United States, where 3000 miles of undefended frontier exist, where friendly relations are the order of the day, where there are many parallels of historical evolution and where a similar language is used, how much greater must be the need for revision in historical writing and mutual understanding among peoples far more widely separated in space, perspective, culture and development?

The Scandinavian schools have long pointed the way toward understanding and greater friendship through a mutual examination and criticism of textbooks used in their respective countries.

But incomparably the most important channel for action is the teaching of individuals. Teachers must, therefore, try to free themselves from unnecessary anxieties and unreasonable fears. Society must make all feel secure and possessed of a clear understanding of basic purposes. They need opportunities to keep informed. They need the experience of travel, inside and outside their own countries. But like other citizens, teachers are influenced by the government policy and the public opinion of their community. Moreover, the quality of teachers, even in the most advanced countries, is not such as to challenge either the best intellects or further intelligent study—frequently because of inadequate compensation.

Furthermore, just how much can teachers or others do as individuals in the world of 1950? Many individuals feel repressed or hemmed in by community or nation or by fear or persecution. Freedom must be sought in the world we live in, not in a vacuum. If we are to achieve freedom it must be built out of the materials of our times, the midtwentieth century, not in isolation. We have to build freedom and a rational, humanistic education constantly anew in the midst of the special dangers of our day. There were even fewer right in other days. The attainment of freedom of any kind has always been a constant, bitter fight. Consequently we must each do our part. Supporting the principles of the Declaration of Human Rights is first and last an individual responsibility. Ever since the Renaissance many people have persisted in trying to define human rights and have been interested in attaining the establishment of a society in which these rights were practiced. What we must strive for is to join them and seek not liberty in isolation and freedom outside society but as a cooperative endeavor.

Unfortunately there is in the world today a distressing growth of censorship of ideas and information. Freedom of the press and education is more restricted today in some sections of the world than at any time in this century. This poses a great difficulty in the attainment of world-wide education which is truly free because if children in any country are taught nothing but lies, are given no chance to argue or question, read no books that show another view, read nothing about the great past seekers after freedom, the adults such children become will believe lies and never hear the truth.

What are we to do about this problem? Are we to allow the perpetration of wilful error? How are we to answer it? The only effective reply is the teaching of the ideal of the good man, the rebuilding of the spiritual unity of our civilization and the solidarity of mankind based on a revival of true humanism, respect for the roots of human culture and belief in the possibility of human cooperation. World opinion is diseased with a belief that power is the great reality. If mankind is to survive we must go back to belief in law and freedom. All of us are both products and makers of our world. We must exercise both a detached judgment on its conditions and make an active commitment on behalf of its improvement.

From the East a Hindu poet, Radindranath Tagore, has expressed our hope for the kind of world we want to create so that education shall be free when he wrote:

In Our Hands

Where the mind is without fear and the head is held high;

Where knowledge is free;

Where the world has not been broken up into fragments by narrow domestic walls;

Where words come out of the depths of truth;

Where tireless striving stretches out its arms toward perfection;

Where the clear stream of reason has not lost its way into the dreary desert of dead habit;

Where the mind is led forward by thee into everwidening thought and action—

Into that heaven of freedom, my Father, let my country awake.

From the West an English historian, Arnold Toynbee, stated the same challenge for all of us to use every effort to build this new world when he said, "We have it in our hands to give history some new, unprecedented turn."

We cannot hope to reach such a world if we persist in either an impatient or unitary approach of any type to this common world problem . . . the search for freedom through education. We must learn, for the very existence of mankind, tolerance through pluralistic patience and perspective. Since diversity, empathy, tolerance are the fruits of the good education, the pathway will be as always long and hard.

Truth cannot be confined within a frontier and intolerance is a disease. The atmosphere of freedom is necessary to the maintenance of all human rights. This is particularly important because modern inventions enable governments not only to control the actions, but give direction to the minds and emotions of their citizens. These new powers, the potentialities of which are only beginning to be realized, enable governments to invade human souls. By education and propaganda through schools, press, radio and films men's thinking can be moulded to a dangerous conformity. Access to sources of information which might lead to the formation of contrary opinions can be denied. By the use of such means would-be dictators can go a long way toward depriving mankind not only of the capacity, but even the will to resist.

To be neutral over the question of whether education shall be free means the surrender of a priceless human right, which has been struggled for through centuries up to and including the writing of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration of Human Rights. Suppose this right disappears? Suppose no final power remained to defend it? Suppose it disappeared everywhere and no one could tell, no one would be permitted to tell, how long a period must pass before it could begin again? We can only assure freedom in education through meeting error and combating it with the idea of the eternal and universal good and a free and rational education.

To the Members of the Alumnae Association:

DEAR FRIENDS:

I want you to know how very grateful I am to you for the generous gift which so many of you have contributed to the college's Nan and Nancy Askew Fund for World Understanding. I had hoped in establishing this fund that it would enable us to have at Sweet Briar additional students from other countries, particularly from the Far East.

Since the fund was established in 1946, it has been so generously supported that it has already enabled us to bring a student from China to our campus and will bring next year a student from Viet Nam.

Many, many thanks for your most generous gift to the Fund!

Yours faithfully,

MARTHA B. LUCAS

ALUMNAE ELECTED TO BOARD OF OVERSEERS

Mary Huntington Harrison, '30g, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was elected to membership on the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar College. The Board voted to increase its membership to include one more alumnae member bringing the number of alumnae serving on the Board to three. Mary is the mother of four children and is active in many civic affairs. She is past president of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association (1944-1946) and served on the Council from 1940-1948. We congratulate Mary on her election and are confident that she will make a real contribution to the Board.

Dr. Anne Gary Pannell

This is the introduction of Sweet Brian's new president made by Archibald G. Robertson, President of the Board of Overseers, at the opening convocation, September 22, 1950

As President of the Board of Overseers of Sweet Brian College, it is my privilege to present the Fifth President of the College to this Convocation.

Among women's colleges in America, very few have a woman as President; and when a college such as Sweet Briar has grown and developed, and has won recognition which is increasing in the academic world, the Presidency of that college offers a challenge and an opportunity for service which can attract and hold forward looking women who have already attained pre-eminent distinction in the field of education and will advance high scholarship and will further the search for truth.

Since Sweet Briar College opened its doors to fiftyone students in 1906, it is no accident that its five successive presidents have all been women, just as it is no accident that the college has always been free from denominational control.

The first Board of Directors, though composed predominantly of Episcopalians, determined at the outset, under the leadership of Bishop Randolph, that the college should always be free from denominational control.

Likewise, the governing board of the college has adhered to the concept down through the years that the President of the College should be a woman; and the thought of the Board of Overseers is now that the ideals of this college in the education of young women in the liberal arts should in some measure be set forth in a woman as President; a woman with gifted intellect and steadfast purpose, actually proven by academic accomplishment; a woman of abiding religious convictions with liberal outlook and many sympathetic interests; a woman who, if need be, can meet and overcome sorrow and difficulty with dauntless spirit; a woman who loves to work with others in harmony and good will; a woman who will win and hold the love and affection of all those who hold Sweet Briar near at heart; a woman every Sweet Briar student, consciously or unconsciously, will emulate in the pattern of her life.

When announcement was made last May of the election of the Fifth President of Sweet Briar College, it was said that her election would bring to the College the person the Board of Overseers had been seeking to give the type of leadership the Board believes will best advance the ideals of the College.

It was said also that the Fifth President would find many friends awaiting her on the Board and at Sweet Briar, and that the future of the College was never brighter than it was then.

The Fifth President of the College is already giving the type of leadership which was expected of her; and already she has made new friends everywhere; and I repeat now that the future of the college was never brighter than it is at this moment.

In the name of your Board of Overseers, I take great pleasure in presenting to you the Fifth President of Sweet Briar College, Dr. Anne Gary Pannell; and I bespeak for her your best scholarship and your loyalty and good will.

CLASS OF 1954

From 28 states, the District of Columbia, and six foreign countries, 164 new students have come to Sweet Briar this fall. Of the seven whose homes are in foreign lands, three are entering as freshmen and four as upper-classmen, on scholarships. Two freshmen come from England and one is from Nassau, Bahamas. Scholarship students include Brigitte Guttstadt, a DP who has recently been living in Berlin; Yoshiko Ota, Tokyo; Lilliam Pham (Pham Thi Thu), Hanoi, Viet Nam; Janet Graham, St. Andrews, Scotland.

Virginia, with 25 representatives, has the largest total on the geographical list of new students. Fifteen come from New York, 13 from Texas and 10 from New Jersey. Six new students have transferred to Sweet Briar after attending other colleges.

Eleven alumnae daughters are included among the 46 entering students who are related to former students of Sweet Briar. Among these is Susan Scott, daughter of Amelia Hollis Scott, '29g, president of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association.

New Treasurer Appointed

CTANLEY OMWAKE has been appointed treasurer of Sweet Briar College by the Board of Overseers. Mr. Omwake, now assistant treasurer of Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa., will assume his new position on Nov. 1.

Mr. Omwake was graduated in 1931 from Ursinus College, of which his father, the late Dr. George I. Omwake, was president for 24 years. He was awarded the degree of master of business administration from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in 1933. Prior to 1934, he also engaged in public accounting work, participated in an economic survey for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and acted as assistant track and cross-country coach at Ursinus.

Joining the administrative staff of Ursinus College in 1934 as assistant to the president, Mr. Omwake was in charge of the general business management of the institution for eight years. Since 1942 he has served in the treasurer's office.

A member of the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers, Mr. Omwake is associate chairman of its special committee on training and placement. He is also a member of the National Association of Educational Buyers. In 1935-36 he served as secretarytreasurer of the Association of Pennsylvania Colleges.

Through his interest in athletics, Mr. Omwake served for several years as a delegate to the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference. His other interests include Boy Scout work, in which he has been active for some years. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution and of the United States Naval

Mr. and Mrs. Omwake and their two children, a boy, 6 and a girl, 4, will come to Sweet Briar to make their home late in October.

As third treasurer of Sweet Briar College, Mr. Omwake succeeds Don C. Wheaton, who resigned after serving eight years to become financial vice-president of Kenyon College, his alma mater. First treasurer of Sweet Briar was the late William B. Dew, who held the office from 1906 to 1942.

Fabian Bachrach

Sweet Briar's Utilities

LLOYD R. HOILMAN

Editor's Note: Lloyd R. Hoilman, B.S., M.S., Architectural Engineering, came to Sweet Briar as Director of Buildings and Grounds in August, 1947. A certified architect, he is experienced in field supervision of construction. He served three and one-half years in the Army and was discharged as a Captain.

I wonder how many alumnae of Sweet Briar have ever realized that Sweet Briar owns and operates its own utilities; and that these utilities are essentially and of necessity the same as those of a small municipality.

To the casual thinker, the buildings are warm, the lights burn, there is always plenty of drinking water and water for bathing, the laundry is picked up and delivered; in fact, all the comforts of home are provided, so why worry or give a thought to utilities at Sweet Briar.

What then are these utilities which dub Sweet Briar a city? The college owns and operates a water filter plant, a central boiler plant, a complete electrical distribution system, a sewage disposal plant, a laundry, an ice manufacturing plant, and an incinerator for trash dis-

The operation and maintenance of these utilities is the responsibility of your department of Buildings and Grounds. Other duties and responsibilities of this department are the repair and maintenance of all buildings, and the maintenance of grounds and roads. For extracurricular work, various sections of the department lend a rather heavy assisting hand in getting ready for opening dances, Founders' Day, Parents' Day, Mid-Winter Dance, The Symphony, May Day, Amherst County Day, and Commencement. How familiar these occasions must sound to you alumnae, with their pleasant memories that flash momentarily through your minds.

Let us briefly scan the utilities and see their relationship to the administration of the college.

Everyone knows where the lake is, and to all it is a beautiful spot long to be remembered at Sweet Briar, but how many have realized it is the main source of water supply. There are three sources of water supply: three free flowing springs, a deep well which delivers approximately 37 gallons per minute, and the lake. The water requirements during the school year range from 113,000 to 115,000 gallons daily. The major part is, of course, drawn from the lake. The lake water undergoes a complete treatment; solutions of soda ash and alum are added, and the water processed through a sandbed filter. From the filter the water goes to a clear well pool where it is combined with the well and spring water, lime solution added, and it is chlorinated as it is pumped to the mountain tank (a 97,000 gallon reservoir). How many of you have ever seen or wondered about the mountain tank? It is located on the hill very close to the Monument.

Our entire water system and supply is routinely checked by the State Health Department, and water samples are regularly sent in for analysis and check.

The Power House may also sound familiar to lots of you; its location no doubt has been signaled by the occasional bursts of steam from the pop-off valves or blasts from the power house whistle, or to those of you who were here before 1930 the rhythmic chugging of the exhaust from the steam engines as they generated electricity, which was then the only source of light and power. The power house is now as it has always been, the central source of heat for all the main buildings and dormitories. It also supplies steam for the operation of the laundry, and for cooking purposes in the refectories, and for heating water for all dormitories.

You may not even dream that the annual coal requirements are approximately 2400 tons of coal and that last year, a very mild winter, the cost for coal was $22,645.

Since 1930 electric power has been purchased from the Appalachian Electric Power Company. From the power company's sub-station located in front of the power house, the college becomes the utility company. The main distribution panel board, all power lines, transformers, motors, electrical installations of all and every kind are college owned, maintained, and operated. The old electric system, an obsolete two-phase system too small and inadequate to permit further plant expansion, was replaced in 1948 with a modern and up-to-date three-phase system adequate for all future planned buildings at a cost of approximately $19,000. Those of you who take a severe look at your electric bill each month must surely breathe a sigh of relief when you pause and realize that the electric bill here at Sweet Briar is approximately $1,000 per month.

The sewage disposal plant, unnoticed and unthought of by almost everyone, is of course a vital link in the chain of utilities. An up-to-date Imhoff system with trickling filter and sludge drying bed was built in 1931. The system requires daily supervision and operation. Where is it located? Near one of the riding trails in the ravine along the Farm Road.

The laundry is a Sweet Briar institution of long standing, and though it has changed from its original all hand laundry, the quality of work is still very high and. compared to the quality of work performed and services rendered at other similar institutions, owes apologies to no one. It will be surprising to know that the actual cost for the laundry operation in labor and supplies last year was $17,731.

The ice plant and incinerator though essentially minor operations are none the less important. I wonder how many alumnae know that Sweet Briar has its own ice manufacturing plant located under the carpenter shop, and that daily deliveries of 300 to 400 lbs. are made to the Refectory and 100 lbs. to the Boxwood Inn. Deliveries are also made to some faculty and staff members.

The alumnae and those in authority of formulating over-all policies must fully realize that as the buildings get older their maintenance becomes more extensive and likewise more costly. As an illustration of this problem, it has been necessary this summer to replace 520 feet of underground steam distribution main and return supplying heat to Reid Dormitory and steam to Reid Kitchen. This is by no means an unreasonable replacement when one realizes it has been in operation now for 25 years, yet the cost involved was approximately $5,000. Other underground mains will soon present a similar situation.

It also became an absolute necessity this past summer to renovate completely three of the dormitory bathrooms, one in Manson and two in Carson; and there are others in need of similar renovation at a cost which will range from $2,500 to $3,000 per bathroom.

A note on a more cheerful side, I am sure, would be to let all the alumnae, students, and parents know that a very complete and modern fire detection and alarm system has been installed in all dormitories and the refectory.

This DUPLEX, "rate-of-rise" system operates on the basic principle of the expansion of air when it comes in contact with heat. The system is so designed and adjusted that any sudden change in temperature due to heat sufficient to change the temperature in a room three degrees in one minute, will immediately put the system into operation.

It must be fully realized by all concerned that Sweet Briar needs an adequate, well-equipped, neat appearing physical plant.

Early Days At Sweet Brian

by Helen F. Young
Head of Department of Music 1906-1925

Excerpts from an article which formerly appeared in the March, 1936, issue of the Alumnae News

To one who had never before been south of the Mason and Dixon line, arriving in Lynchburg in September, 1906, en route to Sweet Briar was something of an adventure. Dinner at the Carroll (then the elite hotel of Lynchburg), the steep hill down to the station, the numbers of colored people, the lilt of southern voices, the train that chugged along so unhurriedly through the darkness—all held a note of strangeness and added to the natural trepidation incident to the facing of life in an entirely new environment.

Everything that happened was a First Time, and what a thrill there was when the entire community assembled in the Refectory to see the electric lights come on! That was only a couple of days before the students began to arrive—the historic thirty-six who were the vanguard of the thousands to come. Undoubtedly Sweet Briar owes much of its early success to the splendid organizing ability of President Benedict and of Mr. Dew (Treasurer and Business Manager), and the place seemed to have a strange power to win the unselfish devotion of those connected with it.

In 1906 the only college buildings were Academic, Gray, Carson and the Refectory; it was President Benedict s happy thought to name the buildings after members of the Board of Trustees. Then, and for some years afterwards, Faculty Row consisted of four houses: the first, the Apartment House; the second, occupied at the opening by Mr. and Mrs. de Launay (Art and Music); the third by Dr. and Mrs. Humphreys and their children (Modern Languages); the fourth by Dr. and Mrs. McBride (English). Sweet Briar in those days was a small community thrown much on its own resources, for it was difficult to get away from the campus; roads deep in mud were impassable much of the winter. A northern visitor who drove out from Lynchburg said: "Roads! do you call these roads? They are impediments to progress." Trains on the Southern, then a one-track road, wandered along usually hours late. Great excitement one day when No. Nine and No. Fortyfour were seen to go through on time. It turned out that they were twenty-four hours late!

There was remarkable executive ability in that small student body; they petitioned the faculty for permission to organize a student government association, and formulated a constitution. Even that first year a May Day celebration was held, and very pretty it was with Anne Royall as Queen, crowned in the Boxwood circle, the students all wearing simple summer dresses and getting up little dances themselves.

From the beginning of Sweet Briar music held a prominent place in the community life, and the very first concert set a fine standard, for it was given by a Boston string quartette on tour through the South. There was a surprising amount of talent on the campus among both faculty and students, some with excellent voices, two violinists, a cellist, and several good pianists. A choral club was formed which served both as church choir and for secular singing. A dramatic club also came into being that first year and was given the name of "Paint and Patches," the name it still keeps. The Board of Trustees gave permission for the Apartment House to be run as a boarding house and Miss Gay Patteson persuaded her sister, Miss Mattie, to come and take charge. The result was that the faculty had a real home and under Miss Mattie's guidance, the Apartment House became the social center of the community and northerners made the acquaintance of such delectable delicacies as beaten biscuit, batter bread, Virginia ham, etc., prepared by Signora, the cook, of happy memory. Early in the autumn the family was increased by the arrival of Mrs. Dew and Polly Carey, the latter spending most of her time asleep in a baby carriage on the front porch. Dr. Harley had a couple of rooms in the Sweet Briar House reserved for sick girls. Meals were carried over there by a little colored messenger boy. He was heard often to murmur as he enered the walk, "Miss Indy, if you do nothin' to me, I'll do nothin' to you." The founder of the college, Mrs. Indiana Fletcher Williams, "Miss Indy," as she was locally known, had died in 1900, but she was a very real person in those early years, and her home, the old Sweet Briar House, had been kept as nearly as possible as it was in her day.

The tower rooms were a source of deep interest; the one, reached by a tiny, narrow spiral staircase, had belonged to the thin Miss Fletcher who (the legend ran) had it built so that her fat sister would be unable to invade her privacy. There were the portraits of the Fletcher family, the old music box, said to play in the dead of night, Daisy's harp, her toys and her books reverently kept as mementoes of the young girl to whose memory the college is an enduring monument.

From the beginning Lynchburg had been interested in Sweet Briar, largely through the devotion of Mr. N. C. Manson, whose services to the institution can never be estimated. The house of Mr. and Mrs. Manson was always hospitably open to Sweet Briarites, as was that of Mr. and Mrs. Hutter whose daughter, Claudine, was one of the original thirty-six, as was her cousin Eugenia Griffin, now Mrs. Burnett, a member of the Board of Trustees.

That events which happened nearly thirty years ago should remain so vivid and fresh in the memory is perhaps because they took place in difficult, pioneering years and could never be duplicated in any other spot in the world; and because they have, unconsciously, been cherished as memories of what has proved to be a very noble undertaking.

On the Resignation of Mrs. Raymond-

by IRENE Vongehr VINCENT, '40g

HAT ARE little girls made of? runs an old rhyme.
Besides such hoarded items as sugar and spice, an important ingredient is the influence of former teachers.

Almost all of us remember with gratitude and affection certain teachers, who, by their personality, wisdom and kindliness, profoundly influenced our patterns of thinking, perhaps even our lives.

For me, and for many another Sweet Briar girl (if we tottering ladies of the class of '40 can be so called), Dr. Dora Neill Raymond was just such a "philosopher, guide and friend." Her friendship will always be one of our sweetest college memories.

All friends of the college must feel sad to hear that Mrs. Raymond has been forced to interrupt work on her book in England and to retire from Sweet Briar College because of ill health. But we hope that this rest from professional duties, so well earned, will bring happiness of another kind.

How many of us remember, as we wrestled with the complexities of history and government in her classes, that she always urged us to discover the facts for ourselves, and insisted (kindly and firmly!) we form our own conclusions. These twin disciplines involved us all in intellectual growing pains, but they were eased by Mrs. Raymond's tactful encouragement and the fact that, always, she treated us as adults, whose opinions were to be respected.

It is difficult to say exactly why we remember certain teachers with an especially warm affection. Is it their personality? their work? the way they taught? their treatment of us as individuals? their interest and encouragement when we needed it?

It is all this and more. In writing of Mrs. Raymond, her charming personality, her importance to Sweet Briar and her students so much will be unexpressed. It might sound trite but it would be true to say that Sweet Briar was privileged to have this fine scholar and remarkable woman for twenty-three years.

Mrs. Raymond came to the college in 1925 as an assistant professor of history. She was born in El Paso, Texas, in 1888, and left college to be married in 1910 before she had received her degree. Divorced five years later and having a small son, she returned to the University of Texas and received her B.A. and M.A. degrees simultaneously. At this time, her mother, Dora Fagon Neill, cared for her son while she attended classes, and, in gratitude to her mother, Mrs. Raymond later, with the aid of friends, established the Dora Fagon Scholarship at Sweet Briar.

After further study at the University of Texas and Columbia University, Mrs. Raymond received her Ph.D. and became an instructor in history at Smith College until 1925, when she came to Sweet Briar. Mrs. Raymond was made a full professor in 1929, becoming head of the Department of History and Government in 1937, a position she held until 1942. She was visiting professor at the University of Texas during the summers of 1927, 1934 and 1935.

Throughout, her academic career has been distinguished. And she has published several books: British Policy and Opinion, during the Franco-Prussian War in 1921; The Political Career of Lord Byron in 1924; Oliver's Secretary John Milton in an Era of Revolt in 1932; Captain Lee Hall of Texas in 1946 (which was awarded a silver plaque as the Texas Book of the Year by the Texas Institute of Letters). Besides this she has contributed to scholarly journals and written a number of book reviews.

During the past year, she has been in England on a John Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship. There she was gathering material for a book on the First Earl of Lytton, Owen Meredith. This book she had planned to dedicate to her son.

Mrs. Raymond wrote me that she planned to keep house with her son for six months, starting in late September. Her son, she added, has been a "very real help in keeping her at her work and in strengthening her love for Sweet Briar."

For those who would wish to write her, she gave her present address as 1603 North Springwood Drive, Silver Spring, Maryland.

The affectionate good wishes of many scattered students go out to her now—"for she's a jolly good fellow."

Ruth H. Kerr, '32g, who has been Store Superintendent at Jonasson's Specialty Shop in Pittsburgh since 1946 when she came out of the WAC, has resigned to operate Hamilton House, a mail order firm specializing in distinctive gift items.

Ruth has arranged a tie-in with the Alumnae Association by which the Alumnae Fund can be swelled. The Fund is to receive a percentage of all orders that come in to Hamilton House from Sweet Briar alumnae.

An attractive brochure will be sent out to all alumnae members in plenty of time for you to make your Christmas selections and at the same time help the Alumnae Fund.

Richmond, Va.; Susan Otis, Nashville; and Gabrielle Maupin, Portsmouth, Va. Other guests included President Pannell, Dr. Mary Lane Charles, assistant to the professor-in-charge, and Nicolle de Messieres

Alumnae Fund Report 1949-50 And List of Contributors

In June 1950 the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association turned over to the college $13,356.80 which had been contributed by members of the Alumnae Association to be used for faculty salaries. We wish to express our thanks and sincere appreciation to Beulah Norris, '22g, for her wonderful job as Fund Chairman, and also to the many class agents who assisted her.

Another year is starting and another fund. The fund this year will again be for faculty salaries. May it be even more successful than 1949-50.

ACADEMY—SPECIAL

Class Secretary: MARGARET POTTS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams) 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Fund Agent: CLAUDINI GRIFFIN (Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb) 2514 Labornum Avenue, S. W., Roanoke, Virginia.

First of all, let me commiserate with those of you who were not able to be with us at Sweet Briar for the reunion of Sweet Briar's first students. All of us who were fortunate enough to be present agreed that we had a truly wonderful time. We spent much time over reminiscences and in trying to catch up with what each has done since last we met, and we spent some more time asking and talking about all of you who were not there; and of course we spent as much time as possible with our own Miss Benedict, although we had to share her with her many other friends. As you who were not at Sweet Briar will want to know how time has fared with Miss Benedict, let me tell you, surprisingly well. Except for graying hair, she looks little changed since those early days, and-you timid souls, read this-she drove her own car down to Sweet Briar from New Haven and back again! Even more important, she is still youthful in spirit and interests

After commencement, Alumnae Fund Chairman, Beulah Norris and I, who stayed at Sweet Briar for a day after the others left, along with the ret'ring Executive Secretary, Terry Shaw, had the great pleasure of a tour of Sweet Briar's farm with Miss Benedict and under the guidance of the capable farm manager, Joe Gilchrist. We saw the great barns, the fine dairy herd of Holsteins, the orchards, the fertile fields and many other things of interest.

Members of the "First Thirty-Six" (the thirty-six boarding students who were enrolled at Sweet Briar the first year) who stayed at Sweet Briar for the reunion events were: Loulie Antrim Mason and I. Academy: Eugenia Griffin Burnett, Nan Powell Hodges, Adelaide Schockey Mallory and Claudine Hutter, class of 1910 (Sweet Briar's first graduating class); and Jennie Hurt Torner, class of 1911. Two other members of that first group, Margaret Waddey Boxley and Eloise Hirst Couper, Academy, were on campus for a short time during reunion, and two Amherst day students of that first year, Nell Dearborn Reed and Ella Rodes Hutter, Academy, made brief visits during the commencement festivities.

Other early Sweet Briar students who came for reunion were Claudine Griffin Holcomb, Special, Mary V. Parker, class of 1911, Sue Slaughter, class of 1913, Henrietta Washburn, class of 1914, and Louise Weisiger, Anne Schutte Nolt, and Frances Pennypacker, class of 1915.

All of us who were at Sweet Briar under Miss Benedict joined forces at the boat house Spinday evening for our class picnic, which proved to be an especially delightful occasion, with Miss Benedict, Miss Sparrow and Miss Morenus as our guests. It gave us a real thrill at that time to be able to present to Miss Benedict, for an addition to the Mary K. Benedict Scholarship Fund, the sum of $200.00 given by sixteen of the early alumnae,

Dr. Harley, who has been living with the Walkers, off the Lynchburg road south of Sweet Briar, was on campus during some of the festivities and of course had her many friends around her, but she was not able to come to our picnic. But she is still wonderful despite her advancing age.

Loulie Antrim Mason, who stayed at Sweet Briar during the reunion, lives in Lynchborg. It was a joy to see her and she seems much the same. After she left Sweet Briar she continued her voice lessons and for many years she has been a soloist in St. Johns Episcopal Church choir. She is active in the church service league, the Red Cross and garden club work, and she has held many offices in the Lynchburg Garden Club and the Garden Club of Virginia, including chairmanship of the Virginia Narcissus show. Her husband, who died in 1948, was first in the investment and then in the real estate business. Loulie has two daughters and two young grandchildren.

Margaret Waddey Boxley and her husband live on a large farm just outside Roanoke, Virginia, where her husband is interested in the crushed stone business and active in many organizations. Margaret herself is interested in church and garden club work and in some other clubs in Roanoke. She and her husband have four children. item of interest to many of our early alumnae is the recently announced engagement of her son, William, to Sweet Briar's Manson Memorial Scholar for the coming year, Peggy Ann Chisholm, of Mississippi. Margaret looked so young and well that I almost felt as if I were meeting her coming from chapel during our student days, Eloise Hirst Couper, whom I saw briefly on campus, lives in Lexington, Virginia, where her husband is a business executive at V. M. I. She has two children and two young grandchildren.

Bessie Jackson, a member of the "First Thirty-six" and the president of student government during the second year, was not able to come to our reonion but wrote me that her heart and thoughts would be with an every minute. Bessie took courses in business and finance after she left Sweet Briar and held many responsible private positions. In addition, she was the first woman auditor on the payroll of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and during World War 1 she sold about two million dollars worth of Liberty Bonds and in the thirties she did field work in a campaign to raise funds for the Children's Home Society of Virginia. During World War II she was with the O. P. A., part of the time making surveys of the grocery stores in five Virginia counties. In between all these activities—enough for several busy women—she did some traveling and spent some time camping in the Canadian wilds. At present she is the assistant secretary for the S. P. C. A. No one was more missed at our reunion.

Dudley Powers Waggaman wrote how sorry she was she had to miss reonion, but she had already planned an extensive trip that she couldn't change. She wrote that she lives in a rather picturesque house that served as a hospital for Confederate soldiers during the War Between the States. Her husband, who was president of Waggaman-Downey Company of Washington, died in 1944, but her son lives with her. With her letter Dudley enclosed two snapshots, one of herself showing her to be still a very lovely looking person, and the other of her hoose, which is quite romantic looking and gives the appearance of "Arlington" itself.

Aylette Henry Peery had planned to come to reunion but at the last minute was obliged to change her plans. She has had an interesting life restoring old houses and is now consoltant for Historic Houses, Inc., and has held offices in the Red Cross and National Society of Colonial Dames. She writes that she always thinks of our "Original Thirty-six" as being "something more than Very Special People-all of us part of something that was really rather wonderful -more wonderful than we realized at the time. And I always think of the gentleness, wisdom and understanding of a Very Great Lady-our own Miss Benedict. Aylette has one daughter and two grandchildren, aged four and two. Aylette lives in Philadelphia.

Patty Hobson Eaglesfield writes that she was very sorry to have to miss reunion. She has just returned from Mexico City, and brought with her directly from a Mexican hospital, her daughter, "Towny," and the latter's small son, both of whom nearly lost their lives there from typhoid fever. She writes that all the Eaglesfields are humar dynamos and her full time job has been to keep their heads as level as possible. And she adds, "We've had a wonderful life so far anyway."

Anne Keith Royall, Sweet Briar's first May Queen, lives in Goldvein, Virginia. She has retired from active work and now raises Siamese kittens—although that might be called work. She, too, was unable to come to reunion and we missed her.

Several years ago, on a trip down The Valley on my way to Sweet Briar, I stopped off in Harrisonburg long enough to see Jean Harris for a few minotes and found her at home, so we had a pleasant though brief chat. She didn't make it to reunion but she did drop me a note and said she wanted to be included among the first thirty-six, as she was among those present when Sweet Briar's door opened in September, 1906.

I have a great affection for Amherst and orobably was better acquainted with the early Amherst day students than were any of the other boarders of that time. The Rev. Arthur Gray, one of Sweet Briar's early Trustees and rector of the Episcopal church in Amherst, was one of my mother's seventy-nine first cousins and I was often invited to the rectory for week ends to stay with his daughter, also a Sweet Briar student. It was, therefore, a great disappointment that this daughter, Ellen Douglas Gray Tyler, could not be at Sweet Briar for reunion. For many years her home has been in Lawrenceville, Virginia, and since her husband's death two years ago she and her sister-in-law have been living together.

Another former Amherst day student is Bessie Scott Von Gemmingen. Her husband is a civil engineer and they live in Arlington, Virginia. Bessie, who is a sister of Mrs. Carter Glass (Mary Scott, Sweet Briar, 1910), is interested in Red Cross, church and D. A. R. work, and she has been libarian of the Mt, Vernon chapter of the D. A. R.

Jane Cunningham, whose summer home is still Amherst, teaches English at the E. C. Glass High School in Lynchburg. Jane, who was an excellent student at Sweet Briar, later was graduated from Johns Hopkins University. She is a member of the National Educational Association, the Virginia Educational Association and the United World Federalists. Also, she is sponsor of her present school's newspaper.

Eva Wood Stump, still another former Amherst day student, writes from her home in Starke, Florida, that her husband is the postmaster and a merchant there and that they have three daughters and three grandchildren. She is interested in Red Cross, P.T.A. and woman's club work and is a member of the Starke Music Club and a Trustee of the Presbyterian church. Her eldest daughter was a WAVE during World War II and served for three years; her second daughter majored in music at Florida State, taught music and directed a band for three years before she was married; and her third daughter is a graduate nurse and served for three years with the 24th Evacuation Hospital, which landed on the Normandy Beachhead and followed the troops right through to Berlin.

Another Amherst day student, whom I saw for a few minutes at Miss Lucas' garden party at Sweet Briar House, was Ella Kodes Hutter. Ella is married to Claudine Hutter's brother, Booker, one of the beaux at Sweet Briar when we were young and gay. They live in Lynchburg, where Booker is in the wholesale lumber business, and they have two children and five grand-children. Ella has a position in the Treasurer's Office at Randolph-Macon Woman's College. Her outside activities include woman's club, U. D. C., Colonial Dames and church work.

As I caught only a brief glimpse of Nell Dearborn Reed, who had driven over to Sweet Briar Sunday afternoon, I stopped by in Amherst to see her on my way home. Shortly after she left Sweet Briar Nell married Walter Reed, then in a bank in Amherst. They have two daughters and two grandchildren. Nell's sister, Marion, who was one of my girlhood friends, died several years ago and left a big void in Amherst. Another sister, whom generations of Sweet Briar girls remember with affection, is Mrs. Sam Wills. Their mother, Mrs. George Dearborn, is now in her ninety-seventh year and lives with Nell in Amherst. Nell is a fine gardener and is interested in church and garden club work.

Because of our reunion, this letter is mostly about Sweet Briar's first Academy students. (As a matter of fact, we were not classed "Academy" then, we were "sub-freshmen" and "specials." It was not until much later that all Sweet Briar's first year students not in definite college classes were termed "Academy." Later students who took some college work but were not in regular classes were termed "special." And for a while, as many of you know, there was a regular Academy flourishing right alongside the college.) As our later Academy-Special group will want to hear about their classmates I have some news for them too.

A wonderful letter came some time ago from Marion Peele, Special, who served last year as a Fund sub-agent. She is very appreciative of the replies to her Fund letters, even from those who, for one reason or another, were unable to contribute and she wrote: "It is so very encouraging to me to have word from them and to know that my various pleas just didn't end in the waste basket without further thought, and whoever of us doesn't run into circumstances that make it impossible to do the things we'd most like to do." Marion spent a delightful week end at Sweet Briar early last spring with Martha von Briesen and Helen "Mac" and writes that "Sweet Briar offers so much to calm the 'fevered way' and Martha's and Helen's friends are all so cordial and gracious to a real old-timer." Marion had hoped to come back for reunion in June but at the last minute found she was unable to make it. We surely missed her.

A letter not so long ago from a cousin in Parkersburg gave me the news that Elise Gibson Carney had been there and that she still keeps her figure and is a very handsome woman.

Katherine Withers Hamilton writes from her home at Naxera, Virginia, that her elder son, Philip, Jr., is now at West Point and that her younger son, Jack, is to go to St. Christopher's School, Virginia, this year. Her husband, an Episcopal minister, has been retired because of a heart ailment, and, as they must live quietly, gardening has become their hobby. She finds that old-fashioned roses have almost disappeared from her friends' gardens and are difficult to obtain now and she was delighted when one of her sons gave her a Jacqueminot rose for Christmas and a Marechal Nial rose for her birthday.

Helen Baker Waller's many friends will be sorry to hear of her illnesses: first a serious operation and later a painful attack of bursitis. We all hope that by now she has completely recovered. A very sad piece of news is that Virginia Emmert Beall died recently at her home in Martinsburg, West Virginia, after a lingering illness. She leaves a husband, C. Ralph Beall, and a son, for whom her friends feel very deep sympathy.

Edna Steves Vaughan, to whom a questionnaire had been missent, finally received one and writes from her home in San Antonio, Texas. Her husband is president of George C. Vaughan & Sons, a wholesale and retail lumber business. Edna says that his two loves are his business and bridge. She is a sustaining member of the San Antonio Junior League, and a member of Christ Episcopal Church, a reading club and the Alamo Heights-Terrell Hills Garden Club. Their daughter, Elizabeth Jane, was graduated from Sweet Briar in 1944. They also have a son, Curtis T., Jr.

Will any of you gentle readers volunteer for the job of Academy-Special Secretary? I offered to take it for a year and now my time is more than up. As I have other Sweet Briar work that will take a great deal of my time, I shall appreciate relief here. The work is not too onerous—four letters a year to get out—and it is such a pleasure to hear from old Sweet Briar friends and to make new ones. Please write to the Alumnae Office or to me.

Class Secretary: HENRIETTA WASHBURN, 2030 DeLancey Place, Philadelphia 3, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: GRACE CALLAN, (Mrs. William L. Bond) 1149 Ardsley Road, Schenectady, New York.

As the only member of the class to return for Commencement this year, I missed you much. Nevertheless, there were so many of our old friends there that reunion was still great fun. I was glad, too, to make the acquaintance of some of our younger alumnae, as well as of some who ante-dated us, members of the "Original 36." One of these whom I thoroughly enjoyed was my roommate for the week end, Loulie Antrim Mason. Further down the hall was Adelaide Schockey Mallory, the magnetic center of a nightly gathering of us "old-timers"-including Eugenia Griffin Burnett, Claudine Griffin Holcomb, Claudine Hutter, Nan Powell Hodges, Mary Virginia Parker, Jennie Hurt Turner and Sue Slaughter,

It was good, too, to see again Anne Schutte Nolt, Frances Pennypacker, Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes and Louise Weisiger—and I thoroughly enjoyed a visit with Nancy Worthington and a glimpse of her apartment in Lynchburg. Others who added to the sense of home-coming were Miss Benedict, Dr. Harley, Dr. and Mrs. Rollins, Mrs. Dew, Miss Hull, Miss Howland and Miss Morenus.

While it was somewhat startling to find that I had aged to the point of being unrecognizable to some, it was pleasant to discover that some looked even younger than they did forty years ago!

One of my chief satisfactions lay in being present at the graduation of my godchild, Beyerly Taylor—Alma Booth Taylor's youngest daughter. A happy touch was her hooding by her sister, Mary Booth Taylor Hollowell, of the class of '46. I have since rejoiced in a letter from their mother in Anking, where she and her husband and Helen are bearing such noble Christian witness under unknown difficulties.

And now our thanks for the following interesting reports in answer to the spring questionnaires:

Beeky Patton is a busy manager of a Children's Home and is again organizing classes in Home Nursing, in addition to handling a real estate business, and taking an active part in church and civic affairs.

Laura Portmann Mueller writes, "No degrees, no thrilling job, yet my life is full. My four children are good, intelligent citizens, with a knowledge of world affairs, art and music." She summarizes her activities as, "Daughter, Wife, Mother, Grandmother, Citizen."

Erna Driver Anderson lives in Pelham, New York, where she says there are many younger Sweet Briar girls, with whom she bowls and golfs and works on local charities.

Catherine Bosson Taylor writes, "Life is so full and satisfactory. Following my year at Sweet Briar, I made my debut, and then went to the University of Chicago. The war sent me into the Detroit Associated Charities. Then came my marriage to Dr. Wesley Taylor. Five years later he retired and we came south to establish this place ("Justamere Farm," Greensboro, N. C.), and had our three lovely children. World War II saw them all in college. My son was a paratrooper and twice wounded. Both girls graduated from the University of North Carolina and soon married. Jim returned to college and is a textile engineer and married to a Sweet Brian girl, Dorothy Williams. They are all living happy, normal lives, and their parents are kept busy baby sitting and visiting. What more can anyone ask of life?"

Dear Abbie Munroe May is a shining example of patience and fortitude, and will be much in your thoughts, as she is in mine, when you read her letter, with which I close this report:

"This finds me here at Johns Hopkins Hospital. I am quite crippled with arthritis, can only walk very short distances and also have very crippled hands. My life is a struggle to keep from getting down in a wheel chair, or worse, bedridden. I hope to take the new medicine, cortisone or ACTH before too long, but my doctor asks me to be patient until more research can be done. These drugs can give very bad side effects, and also the good you obtain is not lasting. It will have to be worked on until it can be taken continuously, just as insulin is taken by diabetics.

"I was so glad to see Sally Miller Bennett. She had her daughter with her, and she was a lovely looking girl. Sally looked fine herself.

"Dorothy Wallace Ravenel has been by to see me at home, but I was up here, so didn't see her. She and her husband had been to Mobile to a medical meeting. She has two grandchildren, as does Sally.

"I, too have two of the dearest little grandsons. My daughter and her family, as well as my younger son, live with me, but my older son and his family live in Texas.

"I keep up, through letters, with Harriet Etans Wyckoff. I suppose you know she has been in Greece for over a year. Her busband is with ECA. She has one grand-child, a boy. Her second son wasn't married when I last heard.

"When you go to reunion, please tell Miss Benedict how much I would like to see her again, and that I would surely have come if I had been able.

"As I can't send a picture of myself, I will add that I am not so different in size from when you last saw me, and my hair is only gray in front so far. I walk with a cane and am bent to some extent. My hands are quite deformed but still useful, as I can still dn practically everything for myself. I am leaving the hospital next Tuesday."

With many thanks to those who have made this report possible, and hoping that we may yet hear from the other members of the class.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Fund Agent: Anne Schutte (Mrs. L. H. Nolt) 1301 Homestead Lane, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

You of 1915 who were unable to return to Sweet Briar in June missed a very pleasant reunion. Of the first six classes there was at least one representative from every class except 1912. 1915 was represented by three of the six graduates, Anne Schutte Nolt, Louise Weisiger and myself. My sister, Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes and I drove to Lancaster and spent the night with Anne, We were joined by Susie Hager Rohrer and left early Saturday morning to drive through the rain to Sweet Briar-and arrived in time for the Alumnae meeting and the Garden Party. Then followed the Alumnae Banquet in the Refectory. The early classes sat together at two or three tables near the speakers' table. Miss Benedict sat at the speakers' table and Miss Morenus and Miss Sparrow sat with us. The principal address was made by Dean Lyman,

My cards brought answers from twentythree former members of 1915. Katharine Mize Accola lives in Pelham, New York, where she is busy with club work. Jessie Rucker regretted that she couldn't return because of illness.

Martha Hines Dixon wrote that her oldest, David Lloyd, Jr., graduated from North Carolina State in Agriculture, married, and after the war went back to his job with U. S. Soil Conservation and for the last three years has been back in his native Lenoir County as Soil Conservationist. Her daughter, Martha Hardy, graduated from Woman's College, University of North Carolina, with an A.B. She received her M.A. in Social Science from the University of North Carolina and is now in Newport News, Virginia, with the Mental Hygiene Clinic of the Lower Peninsula. Waitman Hines, her youngest, graduated in Animal Husbandry at North Carolina State in March and is now living in Maury, N. C. He has been married three years.

Rosalia Feder Sarbey has two daughters. Martha has completed her Freshman year at the University of Arizona and Helen has finished her Freshman year in the Wickenburg High School.

Leona Gunther Zaegel, who married the brother of Elsie Zaegel Thomas, wished to be remembered to everyone.

Jane Gregory Heyer returned her card but sent no news, as did Dorothy Taylor and Mary Taylor Fisher.

Agnes Hood Gronemeyer could not return because her little granddaughter was flower girl to the May Queen at Mary Baldwin College and at the same time as our reunion, Emily Kersey regretted that her seven league boots could not carry her back east again. She remembers sleeping in the old windbreak camp and bringing her featherbed in for warming on the radiator on those few snowy nights.

Anne Roberts Balfour has been Christian Science Practitioner for 18 years and is second reader at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, at Jacksonville, Florida.

Anna Barley Baldwin reports that her son, Frazier, Jr., is having his 10th reunion at V.M.I. She has a new grandchild.

Marjorie DuSbane Stedman broke her back 3 years ago and tho' she is able to be up and around she is still in a cast and cannot make a long trip. Her daughter has just had her first baby so Marge is a happy grandmother. Last fall she had a visit from Henrietta Wadsworth Boggess.

Jessie Darden Christian asked me to call her while I was at Sweet Briar but we were kept so busy there just never seemed to be enough time. She still lives in Lynchburg and loves it.

Dorothea Eaglesfield Bridgeman was busy with carpenters and couldn't get away. She said, "Give my love to everyone who remembers I exist!"

Lel Red teaches and would not be through her school year in time to return to Sweet Brian Lelia Dew Preston's daughter, Betty Braxton, is taking a 6 weeks course at Oxford University in "English Literature since 1870." Enid Sipe Brent was in the process of moving to Florida to live.

Anna Wills Reed was in Virgini; June 12 for her son, Josiah, Jr.'s, graduation at the University of Virginia Medical School. She met Hallie Everett Russell at the D.A.R. when Hallie was elected Historian General. She, herself, was just finishing a term as Regent of Headquarters, D.A.R.

Helen Baker Waller spent her vacation visiting the old homes and gardens on the James River with her friend, Mrs. Eugene Davis Saunders of New Orleans, whose daughter, Sylvia, recently graduated at Sweet Briar. Sylvia is now married to Dr. Willard Davis of New Orleans. Helen's daughter has a position at the Church Home, Baltimore, Maryland, after studying at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Emmy Thomas Thomasson wrote, "I'd love to be with the 'old gals' but I'm afraid I cannot make it this year. I was in Lynchburg a few weeks ago but I did not get to Sweet Briar."

I had hopes for a while that Helen Nicbolson Schively would join us in Lancaster and drive down with us to reunion but her plans were changed when it was necessary for her to act as "mate, deck-hand, chief cook and general flunky" to her husband in bringing their cabin cruiser up the river from Paducah, Kentucky, to Cincinnati, Ohio. Her daughter, Sylvia, who attended Sweet Briar, has been on Arthur Godfrey's staff until recently when she went to the television program "The Show Goes On" with the Columbia Broadcasting Company.

Margaret Grant sailed for Geneva June 1 for her summer work with the United Nations, so was unable to be with us. She took her son, Harold, with her. Of course Harriet Exans Wyckoff was unable to be with us as she is still in Greece with Bernard who is with E.C.A.

It was wonderful to see Miss Charlotte Hull and Miss (or I should say Dr.) Ruth B. Howland at Sweet Briar. Miss Howland has been taking the place of the head of the Biology Department who is on sabbatical leave.

Sunday evening the early classes, 1910 through 1915, had a picnic supper on the deck of the boat house. Miss Benedict, Miss Sparrow, Miss Morenus, Eugenia Griffin Burnett, Nan Powell Hodges, Claudine Griffin Holcomb, Claudine Hutter, Mary Virginia Parker, Margaret Potts Williams, Sue Slaugher, Henrietta Washburn and several others were there besides the three members of 1915.

Miss Morenus tells me she was Visiting Professor of Mathematics at Connecticut College in 1947-48. She is enjoying her retirement—spending her time visiting, traveling, staying in Amherst, and attending meetings. Last spring she took a West Indies cruise with Miss Florence Hague, who was on sabbatical leave, and after her return attended meetings of the Virginia Academy of Science in Roanoke and the Virginia A.A.U.W. in Natural Bridge.

Miss Sparrow drove up from Richmond with Louise Weisiger and looked very well and happy.

Sunday afternoon a group of us drove over to see the Walkers and Dr. Harley, who has been living with them. They were most cordial, as always. We marvelled at Miss Winnie's beautiful African violets.

Last spring, through Marjorie Johnson Good, I received a copy of the Wellesley Alumnae magazine which announced the awarding of special degrees to some of their illustrious alumnae. Among those honored was Dr. Connie M. Guion.

I want to give Anne Schutte Nolt a pat on the back for the fine job she is doing as our class Fund Agent. I hope we will make her work worth while by contributing generously to the Fund when she calls upon us.

1920

Class Secretary: Frances Kenney (Mrs. Carlos E. Lyon) 445 W. William Street, Decatur, Illinois.

Fund Agent: Helen Beeson (Mrs. Francis M. Comer) 325 Limestone Street, Maysville, Kentucky.

A large bundle of greetings to all!

I won't pretend big-heartedness in taking on this post as class secretary. True, I felt sorry for Helen Beeson Comer having to do double duty and I was fully aware that I have done very little in the interest of Sweet Briar. But the real bait was the "refresher course" in former friendships and already I have received big dividends.

The names of sixty living class members were sent me, with the addresses for forty-eight. With two "assists" and the one address I could furnish, there are now only nine unaccounted for. I wrote each of the fifty-one and to date have had ten fine replies. During the fall I hope I can put a check mark by the names of you rascals who haven't answered so far. I don't want to be forced to "ad lib" in the coming News issues and I'm betting you don't want me to!

Margaret High Norment writes that she leads "a busy, uninspired but quite happy life as a housewife." In an alert and wellorganized way, I would add, judging by her prompt reply to my plea. Her older son was in World War II, has finished school and is now working in a Dallas bank. Her younger son will graduate from Texas University in June, 1951, and expects to go in business with his father in Paris, Texas. Margaret visited Sweet Brian about three years ago as they were driving the younger son home from Exeter-says she found everything as lovely as she had always remembered it. She supplied the news that Katherine Armstrong Lawrence lives only a block away in Paris and is in Community Chest

Helen Johnston Jones very humbly states that she could always answer "same" to each request for news. No go, Helen, we want to hear from you and will be awaiting each and every item. Your work as managerowner of a dress shop in Richmond, Virginia, sounds mighty interesting, all the more so because you "buy, sell, keep books, sew, and sweep." Helen's son is studying for his M.A. in history at the University of Virginia and she credits his special interest in that subject to Miss Sparrow, inherited via herself. Sweet Briar has a loyal friend in Helen for she urges many fine girls to enroll there.

Helen Guthrie Montgomery called me when in Decatur some months ago. She said then that she and George had moved back to Mattoon, Illinois, her home when she attended Sweet Briar. Her recent letter gave me more details, and how I enjoyed them after losing track of her for years! They lived in Wichita, Kansas, for 21 years, then moved to Mattoon in 1947. There they bought a specialty shop for women and Helen is operating it. Best of all they can revel in being near their only daughter and two little granddaughters. The Montgomerys had just returned mid-summer from a delightful vacation abroad, sailing both ways on the Ile de France. I don't believe I had known Helen and George were married at Sweet Briar at the end of her junior year, while George was in the Navy. What a background for a wedding! I came near doing the same thing—a different groom, a different year, but the same Navy. My real thanks, Helen, for the address of Geraldine Rall Bewsher.

There must be something very fine in the name of "Helen." At least I think so, for it's tops in my list of cooperative replies. Helen Mason Smith writes from Hagerstown, Maryland, that she has news of prime importance, and how right she is! Their daughter, Helen, "Jr.", enters Sweet Briar this fall and has been awarded a scholarship. How very proud you must be of her. Helen, and how fine that Sweet Briar is to have her for a while.

I wish I might include Mary Johns Coleman's letter verbatim. It was a real treat, and you would love her description of a visit to Sweet Briar last fall, when she had taken her son to enter V.M.I. Any of us can well understand her feelings upon arrival at the old scenes, after 32 years absence, but few could describe those feelings so pertinently. It seems, with her verve of 1917, she went tearing into Carson and the suite she and Evelyn Redfield Grant had occupied. Undaunted by the college unopened, housecleaning afoot, and the few available staff members unable to answer her hungry queries concerning this person or that, she dashed from one place to another, excitement rampant. Finally, as she slowed to a walk. she came upon a mirror, glanced into it, and had been so carried back to the past that she felt she was "living in 1917 and gazing into a crystal ball, seeing myself as I would be, rather than seeing my present self reliving the past."

Mary says she has spent most of her time in Texas except for 1947 when she was in Colorado Springs. She has four children and has been widowed since 1936. Randolph, her oldest son, was a paratrooper in World War II and is now in the land department of the Amerada Oil Company. Claudia, second child, was married this August to a commercial artist from Brownsville, Texas. Mary wrote me, mind you, just the week before the wedding. Wish I knew her secret of organization and calm! The third child, Beverly, was in Washington last winter but had just returned to Corpus Christi, her husband having been called to report to California for Marine service. Dabney Wharton, the youngest Coleman, is returning to V.M.I. Mary expects to spend much of the winter in Virginia and is ready and willing to drop in on any pals thereabouts-promises she won't "stay to dinner." She keeps the knocker polished in Texas, too, and offers "a green ranch-style house with plenty of rooms, and a jovial Mexican house-man who will bring coffee each morning at day-break." Big ranch country, oil wells, and reminiscing, Mary, what are you saying? You may be sorry!

Isabel Webb Luff apologized for postponing her reply, and I wondered that she made it when she did. She had been in the center of two weeks festivity, with her brother and his family there from Chicago as all convened to celebrate her father's 80th birthday anniversary. Her mother is 79 and both parents are in good health. How fortunate! "We're just like everyone else—have fun and enjoy life to the greatest degree. A few aching bones, very few gray hairs." I'd say you are doing all right, Isabel.

From Mary Caroline Hogg comes word that she has had the same position for 30 years. Since the death of her employer she continues on with the second generation, is full of praise for the young partners, and I would venture they could say much for her valuable help and experience, Mary Caroline has her own apartment in the family home and has had the fun of painting it and adding each new detail. Nephews and nieces seem to keep M. C. on her toes (if she needed any help, which I doubt). She and her sister, Alibee, visited Sweet Briar for our 20th class reunion. Unfortunately, they found no contemporaries there so their stay was less happy than it might have been.

Rebecca McGeorge Bennett is facing the same threat with many of us. Her 22 year old son is entering medical school at the University of Pennsylvania and the 19 year old son is starting his junior year at Amherst, providing the Government doesn't intervene. Besides those two fine sons, she speaks of her very attractive 6' 6" hosband (why not!), their 10 year old French poodle of no mean intelligence, and a recently acquired cottage by the sea. She adds that said cottage has afforded them "many colds, many head and back aches, but much pleasure." In addition to her family, "Becky" devotes much time to various boards, secretaryship of one such, a music class, and a busy round of flower markets, horse shows, and such. Wonder if she ever sleeps?

It's good to know that another classmate is nearby, even though I'm not such-a-much at looking people up. Helen Sackett is in Chicago and holds the important spot of executive secretary for Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. A brief recount of the intervening years notes that she went on to University of Wisconsin, after Sweet Briar, Following college she was with a publicity and campaign firm in New York City, then did social work in Springfield, Ohio, during a period when it was important that she be near her family. Later she was connected with the Detroit Community Fund, after which she went to her present position with her sorurity. It's wonderful to hear from Helen.

I located "Red"—Evelyn Redfield Grant—through Mary Jones Coleman. Evelyn says she and Bill have a country home in the hills beyond Little Rock, Arkansas. "If the international situation explodes, we invite you and the class of 1920 to visit our wooded acres in the Magic Circle. P. S. Be sure to bring tents." That's what Evelyn said! Exploding situation or no, Red, I shall be mightily tempted to phone you a "hellu" some day, for Little Rock is on our beaten path to Shreveport when we're tracking down lumber.

This winds up the news garnered from recent letters, but I know you will be interested in word sent with Christmas cards from Eleanor Indge Peterson and Geraldine Jones Lewis. Eleanor still lives in Mansfield, Pennsylvania. Some years ago, she and "Pete" stopped over-night with us as they were en route west. Eleanor hadn't changed a bit at that time and I would wager she hasn't even now, though she has had to slow her tempo because of health. They have two children, both married. Mary Lee, the daughter, was stricken with polio a year ago but at Christmas time Eleanor reported her steadily improving and in splendid spirits. The son Gerhard, his wife and two little boys were living in Philadelphia where he was serving his second year of interneship at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital.

Geraldine Jones Lewis lives in Gainesville, Texas, as before, and has three children. Robert, Jr., is married and has two children. Rebecca and Jones are their daughters. Jones finished at Stuart Hall in June.

Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes' letter from Florida early this year was awaiting me when we returned from our sojourn down there. She seemed mighty happy and was having a delightful winter, tossing in some golf and various pasttimes.

Now for my two-bits' worth. Thank goodness I lost my fodge-sundae-and-midnight-snack flesh soon after leaving Sweet Briar. A sharp pin would have been fatal in those days. I have grown accostomed to gray-white hair in 17 years and don't mind it too much—didn't care for that mouse-colored stoff I had before anyway. For those who may possibly recall, I married the young blade who visited Sweet Briar en route to Navy service in 1917. He often talks of that "special permission" Monday night visit to campus and his feelings as he walked the length of the refectory through a sea of girls. Bet he'd like to live that over again!

We have two children, extra special to us. Barbara attended University of Wisconsin and graduated there. She is 30 now, is married, and they have two little boys. No superlatives indulged in at this point but I envy you grandmothers who have the babes nearby. Our son is 19 and I know just what "Becky" and many, many others are dreading, as for the long arm of military service. 'Corby" was a freshman at Duke University last year and is reporting back next week early because of football. I was delighted when he chose a university in the area I had enjoyed so much. As we returned from Florida in early 1949 we drove via Durham to see the university, then went on to stop at Sweet Briar, my only visit there since youknow-when. Beautiful as ever, it was, but only one familiar face-Bertha Pfister Wailes.

She was charming and did her utmost to make me welcome.

I have curtailed my activities in civic work—serve on the Red Cross Board of Directors and on its Home Service Case Committee. I also do Motor Corps duty in connection with Blood Bank. As I mentioned to some of you, Carlos and I are in the midst of building a new home. Charge it up to the "Frenzied Fifties" (age or calendar) or whatever, but we had long thought of a one-floor house (plus basement) and decided "it's later than we think."

When it's news time for the next issue I'm going to be awfully busy dusting off old belongings and placing a few new ones, so will do well to get post cards off to all of you. That won't mean that I'm not as anxious as ever for every scrap of news, so make it easy for me, won't you? Come on, you gals who haven't answered! Same address for the present.

1922

Class Secretary: MARION WALKER (Mrs. L. K. Neidlinger) 3 Elm Street, Hanover, New Hampshire.

Fund Agent: ALICE BABCOCK (Mrs. Charles I. Simons) Box 388, Colombia 1, S. C.

It is with trepidation and a modest spirit that your new secretary takes on this task. First blow fell when I realized that ten post cards went off, signed and sealed, with a glaring mistake in spelling, which you have been, so far, too polite to mention. You been, so far, too polite to mention. You roobably thought the "ignomy of no class notes in the ALUMNAE MAGAZINE" far outweighed the ignominy of having a secretary who can't spell. Thank you for answering them, anyway. I just can't tell you how gratifying it has been to have you reply so promptly, and how impressive it is to read what some of you young things accomplish. Makes us ordinary housewives blush.

Margaretta Carper MacLeod is taking a course in landscape gardening from the Landscape School in Des Moines (by correspondence) to further her ability to help the new and small house owner and gardener. She teaches classes and lectures all over Virginia, on design with plant material, and color in design. A fascinating art, it seems to me, and one to give pleasure to many. This, ladies, is in addition to raising s.x youngsters: Roderick, 6, enters school this fall; Margaretta, 12; twin boys, Johnnie and Charles, 15; Jimmie, who spent the summer working in Alaska, goes back to V.M.I. this tall; and Louise, a graduate of Randolph-Macon, is teaching in Martinsville, Virginia. Margaretta's husband died two years ago and hers has been the responsibility of this wonderful family. Sweet Briar aiumnae abound at many of her lectures, lending "an extra feeling of moral support," she says. This spring she lectured to the Aibemarle Garden Club and the club was entertained by Torrance Redd Rinehart in her lovely house near Charlottesville. (Will any of you ever forget Torrance singing in her 'Alice Blue Gown"?) A full and busy life Margaretta has!

Selma Brandt Kress is another with her talents working. She is Supervisor of Music, with three Glee Clubs, at the Winchester-Thurston School for Girls in Pittsburgh, where she also teaches piano. On Sundays, she is the organist and choir director for the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church. Glad to hear she had had a summer vacation—hope it was a good one.

May Earl Slocum is President of the Republican Workshop in Minneapolis this year. It is an organization dedicated to teaching Republican women the methods and techniques of the Republican party organization, and encouraging participation in party politics.

Helen Anderson Henkels has four children—three boys, 17, 14, and 12; and Helen, 9; not to mention two baby Cocker Spaniels and a cat. She is active in the League of Women Voters, and is also a "rug-hooker." Learning to sail at Pocasset, Massachusetts, where they have a summer home, too.

Jeanette Stoffregen Hunter reports "nothing spectacular," but reading between the lines one can tell how much time the volunteer work she does at the Crippled Children's Hospital and the Red Cross takes. She is on the staff of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service.

Wonderful letter from our Freshman President, Stella Gwynn Waugh. Two adorable grand-babies, soon to be two years old (that dangerous age). Her son has a daughter; and her daughter, a son. Stella entertained Talat Rasul, the girl from India who graduated last year from Sweet Briar, and enjoyed her so much. She drove her back to an early morning class and reported "Sweet Briar looked more beautiful than ever." Stella's husband is Secretary of Dan River Mills, Inc. It is nice to know someone connected with that marvelous material.

Ruth Fiske Steegar and her husband have bought an old house in Old Lyme. Connecticut, and are working like dogs on it. They do take time off for fishing and fun once in a while, she says.

Marjorie Milligan Bassett's son, Clarke, Jr., graduated from Dartmouth this June. Marjorie and her husband drove from Fargo, North Dakota, for commencement. Had one all too short glimpse of them here—she looked fine and it was good to see her.

Gertrude Dally Massie and family vacation in the White Mountains and drive through Hanover en route. Adrianne, their daughter, went for her second year to Camp Glenlaurel, Helen Mac's and Jeanette (Dan) Boone's camp in North Carolina. Gert has short hair and looked très gay this July. I see Burd Dickson Stevenson fairly often.

also. We visited them, in Sewickley, a year or so ago, and had a whirl. Burd invited Alice Earley Clendenning and Mary Fohl Kerr for supper, and we all chattered like mad. Burd has had a son at Deerfield Academy, which brought them up this way, now and again. Their daughter, Blair, is at Vassar, and they have another son, at home in school. Burd is as much fun as ever, and looks as young as young.

We are all proud of Beulah Norris, chairman of the Alumnae Fund. It is a big responsibility and she has given endless time and has done a wonderful job! Beulah reports a good time on campus at commencement.

Alice Babcock Simons is to be congratulated, too, as our Class Agent. DO NOT FAIL to reply this year when Alice and her henchmen get busy.

There is still more news to come (thank you again for answering the cards), but perhaps I'd better stop for this time. The shock of having 1922's class notes cut by the editors might be too much for all of us.

Both Mary Nadine Pope Phillips and Deedie Kirkendall Barricks sent group pictures of our 25th reunion and the one in this issue "Popie" had blown up so we could let you see who was back. Ione McKenzie Walker is the only one you won't recognize—she has her hand over her face! We had a wonderful time and each one said what a shame it was that the rest of the class couldn't have been with ns. It was our only regret and we want you who were not there to know we missed you.

As most of you know, Eleanor Miller Patterson, did all of the preliminary work for us on the reunion so we have her to thank for all of the issues in this letter. I must admit that most of it is about our children but then I suppose we have arrived at that age! Sue Hager Rohrer and Pop Graham Hunter take the blue ribbon for having the most children, and Deedie Kirkendall Barricks, Edith Read German, and I seem to have the oldest. Still no grand-mothers!

Adelaide Harris Holmes' son, James, Jr., who is 18 and 6 ft. 5 in., has just finished his first year at Palm Beach Junior College and plans to enter Carolina in the fall. Adelaide has evidently done a magnificent job with the Junior League judging from the many responsible offices she has held.

Mary Craigbill Kinyoun has built a cottage at Lake Kanuga, North Carolina, and her new address is Route 3, Hendersonville, North Carolina.

Kitty Newby McGee's daughter, Elizabeth, was elected "Queen of Cotton" last spring and was feted throughout the south.

Ruth Taylor Franklin wrote that Don, Jr., plans to enter Cornell in the fall and her daughter, Ann, will return to Wheaton College.

Barrie Greason Cooper has a lovely new home in Essex Fells, New Jersey.

Lucy Reaves Utterback is the Administrative Assistant of the Arkansas Cancer Control Commission.

Betty MacQueen Nelson is the new president of the recently formed Sweet Briar Club of southern California.

Frances Burnett Mellen has been studying Fundamentals of Advertising this year. Her daughter, Mary Ann, will room with Lib Matthews Wallace's daughter, Dolly, next year as sophomores at Sweet Briar. Incidentally, Mary Ann is lovely.

Amy Williams Hunter wrote mostly about her visit from Virginia Whitlock Cobb and her two boys, Peter, aged 21, and John, aged 13. Peter graduated from Cambridge in June, is engaged, and hopes to be married in the not too distant future. John is at boarding school. Amy says nearly all of the boys in England go to prep schools at 7 and have constant schooling until they are about 22.

Muriel Fossum Pesek has three children—Nancy is 20 and a junior at Sweet Briar. Paul is 17 and Mary Louise 7.

Romayne Schooley Ferenbach's son, Richard, graduated from Brown University this year and Colin is 16.

Ione McKenzie Walker has become quite a golfer and has won many local trophies this year. Her whole family is most enthusiastic over the same and even Billy, who is only 13, gives great promise of being a fine player.

Helen Tremann Spahr has one son, Robert, Jr., aged 19.

"Pop" Graham Hunter has been taking a very active part in Garden Clubs. She has been president of her own club and is now president of the Federated Garden Clubs of Rome. She also has a class in Flower Arrangement and with all of this activity looks after her four sons, Harold, Jr., 18, John, 13, Guy, 6, and Hunter, 3.

Marjorie Leute Crouse has raised a niece, Nancy Bross Thompson, 25, and a nephew, Major Robert Bross, 29. Nancy was married in 1949 and Robert graduated, cum laude, from Princeton in 1941.

Margaret Freeman Sherdahl is living in Fargo, North Dakota, and has two daughters. Virginia Whitlock Cobb's two sons grad-

Virginia Whitlock Cobb's two sons graduated from Davidson College this June and her daughter from St. Mary's Junior College last June. Virginia and her daughter had a wonderful summer visiting Amy Williams Hunter and touring the continent.

Margaret Meals Ewart has a son, William, Jr., 19, a sophomore at Princeton, and a daughter, Peggy Anne, 17, who entered Sweet Briar this fall.

Elizabeth Dibrell Smith has 3 boys, Alden, Jr., 18, George, 15, and Dan, 12.

Georgia Martin Adams is Counselor at Batesville, Arkansas, High School and has just gotten her M.A. degree from the University of Arkansas, Edith Read German has a son, George, Jr., 23, who graduated from Lafavette last June and is now in the insurance business. Her daughter, Joyce, 19, is studying to be a technical medical secretary, and Lymie, 13, is an 8th grader and has a flare for music.

Clara Early Dickerson is living on a farm just outside of Merchantville, New Jersey, and has two girls.

Mary Reed Hartshorn's daughter, Anne, 21, spent the summer at Estes Park and her son, Ted, Jr., entered Dartmouth this fall.

Lucy Carson Haddow has moved to Bronxville, New York. Please send me your new address!

Louise Gibbon Carmichael has just moved into her new home in Forest Hills, Durham, North Carolina.

Will those of you whom we have no news of please write and tell me about yourself and family. Only then can we have another letter in the ALUMNAI NEWS, Class Secretary: Helen Dunieavy (Mrs. Henry D. Mitchell) 4707 East 7th Avenue, Denver 7, Colorado.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA TAYLOR (Mrs. George F, Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

How changed is the complexion of the whole world—changed the complexion of each of our lives, since the last issue of the NLWS. Again we are fighting for what we believe in—Democracy, our precious heritage, that it shall not perish from the earth.

One of the most moving experiences I had this summer was hearing and meeting General Eisenhower. Denver is terrifically proud that he spent the summer here. His speech packed a tremendous wallop and pointed out how we can make Democracy work in each of our lives.

Dot Keller Iliff and Seward have received their orders and are waiting to leave for Washington. Seward will be in the Selective Service Branch of the Army. Dot hopes to find a house in Alexandria. We shall surely be lonesome for Dot here in Denver as she has been a great inspiration to our Sweet Briar Group and to all her many friends. Dot tells me that Helen Finch Halford had planned to come to America for a visit in September. Helen's husband, Cecil, has been salmon fishing at the Tip of Scotland this summer. Helen's oldest daughter, Helen, is going to The Sorbonne in Paris this winter.

I hear Margaret White Knobloch had a most gay summer in her new, dark blue Cadillac convertible, which her husband gave her for her birthday.

It was fun to talk over the telephone to Mildred Gribble Seiler when she passed through Denver this summer on the Seiler's trip to Los Angeles for The Shrine Imperial Council Meeting. One of our neighbors attended the Convention, and from his description, it must have been wonderful.

A card from Anne Barrett Allaire, dated June 5, 1950. She had been in the hospital in Bristol, Connecticut. She said her orders were not to lift a finger for two months. I surely appreciate her taking pen in hand to write to all of us. She writes that last summer (1949) she and her husband just about lived at The Golf Club and expected to do the same this summer. She adds that she never hopes to be another Babe Zacharias. Anne also writes that the month of June was living up to its tradition and she was up to her neck in Bridal and Baby Showers, weddings, and graduations. I think we all know what she means.

Again our faithful and interesting contributors, Edna Lee Gilchrist and Kay Norris Kelley, came through with funds of information. Edna writes that Cornelia Wailes Wailes and Tom were home from England for a month this summer. They have now returned to England until December. Tom is in the State Department, Cornelia's mother died in June and we all join in sending our deepest sympathy. Edna goes on to tell of her twins, Joan and Judy, who have been at Camp Glenlaurel, in North Carolina, You all know this wonderful place is run by Helen McMahon and Jeanette Boone. It is reputed to be one of the grandest camps in the country. Edna says the children simply adore it as do all the other Sweet Brian daughters, which include those of Gert Dally Massie, Jocelyn Watson Regen, Jackie Bond Wood, Lib Marton Forsyth, Norvell Royer Orgain and several others. What marvelous fun it all sounds and what beautiful country to spend the summer in!

And it is good news from the Kelley household, as Kay writes their son, Randolph, is super-even his limp is no longer visible. We know what a great joy this is for each of the family and all of us join in the greatest of rejoicing for the Kelleys. She also writes that she has grabbed the Alumnae Fund again. Let's all get behind and help Kay and also help Sweet Briar. The Kelley's oldest daughter, Priscilla, or otherwise known as "Cil," goes to Middlebury College in Vermont this fall. "Cil" certainly likes the water, as she is an outstanding swimmer and has been a sailing councilor this summer. Meta, the second daughter, has been working with horses in a camp in Vermont this summer. Didi, Kay's hope for Sweet Briar, is taking the harp, so may end up at Oberlin. Doesn't the Kelley family sound simply loads of fun? As the saying goes, "I'll bet there is never a dull moment in that menage.

Speaking of horses, Hank and I had our usual wonderful week end in Estes Park last week, and I was able to pursue my favorite sport, horseback riding. Estes Park is always fun—the main street grows more crowded each season, and it is like a carnival. The traffic is a continual marvel.

And speaking of the west, this letter is as they say in Spanish, "hasta la vista." I want to thank you each for the personal fun it has been hearing from you. I have become intensely interested in all of your doings and hope I can pursue reading your stories under the new Secretary (STEP RIGHT UP, SOME ONE, AND VOLUNTEER!) I can recommend the job—your mail is always fun, like a continual Christmas packet. I also feel you all need some new "Zip A Dee Doo Dah" under a new journalist, Thanks Again! Good luck and good cheer to each of you.

Margaret Malone McClements, wife of James B. McClements, Jr., died suddenly June 24, 1950, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. McClements, a native of Pittsburgh, was active in Sweet Briar Alumnae activities, having served as president of the local alumnae group, and was serving on the Alumnae Council at the time of her death. She was a member of the College Club of Pittsburgh and active on the social service board of the Woman's Hospital.

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH FORSYTH, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham, Alabama.

It was at this time of year, maybe at this very moment, in 1923, when we put on our freshman aprons and the class of 1927 emerged a loyal and enthusiastic whole! Right now we are a unit again when each of us is reading the same thing at about the same time, because this issue of the ALUMNAE NEWS is sent to the entire class of 1927 as it was in 1923. We are pleased and proud to have news from so many of you!

But first: some daughters now at S. B.

Some more news from Florida, Julia Ventulett Patterson lives in Jacksonville. She and Jack drove up to New York in June and talked to Dickie Dickinson and Lou Collins but didn't get to see them. They drove around S. B. on their way home.

The next issue of the magazine will have news of more of us. I even have a little up my sleeve now. However, I must tell you that Virginia Wilson Robbins and I had a wonderful day with Theodora "Tootie" Maybank Williams who had messages from Elva "Billy" Quisenberry Marks, Sally Jamison and Claire Hanner Arnold—as well as the gals in Chattanooga—Ruth Lowrance Street and Tavenner "Tab" Hazlewood Whitaker. "Tootie" had been getting around quite some and had only the nicest things to say about all of you. It was one of the BIGGEST treats of the year to see her again.

Gretchen Orr Swift is a grandmother. The Durhams (Jo Snowdon) en masse, spent several weeks in Colorado—as did Connie Van Ness. We expected to go to bring Bill, Jr., home from camp and Evic Anderson Tull was a darling about helping us with our plans, but Bill, Sr., had an emergency appendectomy which ruined everything except his health. It was the only trip we had planned so far in advance so we have concluded that is the wrong system!

Now, if you want the next three issues of the News please send a small or large contribution to the Alumnae Fund. No bills are sent, as you know—so if you ARE interested send it now while the thought is still fresh in your mind.

Our 25th reunion is coming up in June 1952. We want EVERYBODY to take the rejuvenation treatment with us whether you went to S. B. one year or four. Elizabeth Mathews Wallace will be Chairman of the occasion. It seems far away now—but time passes very quickly so keep June 1952 in mind.

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: KATHERINE LEADBEATER (Mrs. Howard B. Bloomer, Jr.) Shore Acres, Lorton, Virginia.

The response this time for news for the class letter was heartening. It was double the last one. This time I received two letters—one from Betty Moore Schilling and one from Sara McHenry Crouse. You have no idea what those two letters meant. If I hadn't been so pushed I would have written them a personal "thank-you," but since I didn't, I say it now!

Top to Bottom: Fred, Yates and Bill—sons of Betty Moore Schilling.

Betty Moore Schilling writes that she has no Sweet Briar timber, only presidential, having three sons. To quote Betty, "one 18, Fred, whom I seldom see 'cause he is wrapped up in his car and girls and went to Pennsylvania State College this September. One 11, Yates, who is all wrapped up in snakes and turtles and baseball and never hopes to see college. One 5½, Bill, who is just about to lose his first baby tooth."

Betty sees a lot of Marian Jayne Berguido and she and her husband are the God-parents of Marion's sixth child, a son. And Marion and Carlos are the God-parents of the Schilling's Bill.

Marion's oldest daughter, Jayne, had a lovely "coming-out" party in June and entered Sweet Briar this September.

Muggsie (Mary) Nelms Locke moved to Alabama a year ago. Her daughter, Nan, is a sophomore at Sweet Briar this year and according to Betty loves it. She also tells me Marjorie Mondell's new husband is Mills Astin and he is from Wyoming as were Marjorie's family.

Betty says she tries to attend the alumnae affairs when possible and occasionally sees Kitty Brightbill Biltz, who is looking grand.

All of the above comes from Betty. Can't you see why I am grateful? In sincere appreciation of her effort I am going to add a personal question. Betty wants to know what has become of Anne Lane Newell Whatley, who used to stop on drives from Presque Isle to Atlanta and hasn't done so since 1938. How about sending me some news, Anne Lane? I'll put it right in this column where Betty can read it!

The next letter came from Sara McHenry Crouse (bless her) who says she has four daughters. Joan, the oldest, had two very happy, and I might add successful, because she made the Dean's List, years at Sweet Briar. She is majoring in Psychology and is transferring this year to the University of Kentucky. Joan was in the class with Betty Prevent Balch's Cynthia and Ruth Lowrance Street's Frances.

Sara's second daughter, Cynthia, was a senior at The Brearley and wants to be a lawyer. Right now she hopes to go to Mount Holyoke and later to Harvard. Linda, the third daughter, is 12 and flew over to Switzerland in June to spend the summer with Martha McHenry Halter who lives there. The youngest, Cassandra, is 8 and is in the same class at The Brearley as Ella Phillips Slate's daughter, Sallie, Sandra's chief ambition is "just to be a bride," but Sara hopes she will have other aspirations in the course of the next few years, such as entering Sweet Briar in 1960.

A telephone call to Page Bird Woods while in Richmond has left me with this question in my mind—has she not changed one bit in 22 years? Has she stayed as young as her voice for it hasn't changed by one tone or inflection. Page has two sons, William S. D. Woods, Jr., known as Chip who is 20 years old, six feet tall and is a third year man at Virginia Military Institute. He is an all-round athlete. He made several letters in fieshman athletics last year one being in football and he hopes to make the varsity team this year.

Page's next son, Bird, is 15 and attends St. Christophers. She tells me that he is a talented musician and an artist and that both boys tower over their Mother.

A recent card Page had from Rip Van Winkle Morlidge said she and Torchy Mc-Pheeters Stone were vacationing at Myrtle Beach, S. C., with their respective daughters and while there went over to Pawley's Island to see Sarah Exercit Toy.

A phone call to Lillian Lee Wood found her out of town. Her sister told me she was spending the summer at Macinack Island working with the Oxford Group.

When I called Marion Sibley Marxer in Detroit this summer I was lucky enough to catch her in and had a very pleasant telephone visit since we couldn't manage a personal one. Marion spent part of last winter in Florida and had a most relaxing time. I am sure most of you did not know she lost her husband about two years ago. She is doing a wonderful job of developing new interests. She plans to take a typing course this fall and hopes to go into a parttime job of reading to blind students. In case you think being a professional reader is easy let me tell you few qualify after the rigid tests you have to pass.

And now my last little nugget of news in July I saw Carolyn Yancy at a Virginia Press Association convention, Though she wasn't in our class I am sure many of you remember her, She was in the Post Office when we were in Sweet Briar.

Fund Agent: Virginia Hoosson (Mrs. R. C. Sutliff) 4733 24th Road, North, Arlington, Virginia,

Well, I for one had a wonderful summer and hope you all did, too, and will send me news of it for my next letter. I went to Blowing Rock, North Carolina, where 1 saw lots of old friends and gnt strong and healthy again playing golf. While visiting in Roanoke, Virginia, on my way south I had a nice visit with Athlein Benton Lawton. She and her husband were to leave in July for the Smokies to join the Highlands Handicraft Guild meeting. She told me she had seen Dorothy Jolliffe Urner in the late spring when she came with her husband for a convention. All was well with Dottie. "Ath" also caught a glimpse of Cary Harmon Biggs who had come to town on a day's shopping spree with her two children. After a wonderful meal with "Ath" she gave me a recipe that will really glamorize a pork chop (Will send on request).

I had hoped while in Virginia to get in touch with Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins to get news of her family and her lovely farm, "Blue Hills," near Charlottesville. No luck, however. I did see Amelia Hollis Scott and spent the day with her and her very nice family in Lynchburg. Her oldest daughter, Sue, had gone west on a rrip, stopping in Arizona and California, while her son, Tom, was planning to help his father during the vacation in their flour mill.

We would like to send our sincerest sympathy to Gert Prior who lost both her mother and her brother in automobile accidents within a few weeks of each other.

Peg Bushey Scherr has been elected a new member of the Alumnae Council. She will be director of the S. B. Alumnae Clubs in Region VI. Congratulations to her!

Lib Lankford Miles is raising chickens! Her farm is near Wilmington, Delaware, and the chickens kept her so busy she could not get to Commencement in June.

Jean Buchanan Bingham and her family have spent a gay summer, we hear, at the beach at Westhampton on Long Island.

Peg Timmerman Burlin has given up her job with Glamour Magazine and moved to St. Louis where her husband will be art instructor at George Washington University.

Had a nice letter from Emily Braswell Perry telling of her summer at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. She and Bill have a house there where they enjoyed the sea breezes in peace and quiet having sent their two boys to a camp in the mountains near Asheville.

In a magazine recently I found quite a write-up of the Ordination of the Rev. John Baird Shinberger—Lisa Guigon's husband.

Lisa and Baird will soon have a new rectory finished in Purcellville, Madison Parish, Virginia, where they will live with their four children—twin girls were born this summer!

Another wonderful letter came from Mary Shelton Clark. She enclosed pictures of her 18 year old son, her husband and herself—all very handsome. Her son has graduated from McCallie and will go this year to Vanderbilt University. Mary said she had seen more or less recently Louise Dailey Sturhahn whose son went to school in Chattanooga; Harriet Dunlap Towill, who has "lovely daughters;" Tavenner Hazleu ood Whitaker and Ruth Lourance Street and Bess Lourance Hill all of whom live in town.

Mary and husband, George, have moved into a cooperative apartment house on a hill outside Chartanooga. George flies his own plane but Mary vows she would never touch a button of it—just helps navigate. They are also golfers and I am terribly excited about a game with her this fall when she comes with him to a bankers' convention in Westchester . . . not that the golf will be so good but the talk will be plentitul and lots of it about the old days at Sweet Briar!

Class Secretary: Mona Stone (Mrs. Thornton A. Green) McMillan Farm, Marshfield, Wisconsin, Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George S. Writer, Jr.) 21 5th Avenue, Nyack 3, New York.

Much to my dismay and your surprise you now have a new class secretary! My first bit of news, which some of you already know, is the announcement of the arrival of William Russell Moose 111, in June. His arrival was too much for his daddy who promptly took to a hospital bed with an appendectomy. At the latest report from "Marge" (Marjorie Sturges) both father and son were doing well and mother holding up as well as could be expected.

Right here and now on behalf of us all I'd like publicly to express our thanks to "Marge" for a grand job as class secretary, her shoes will be impossible to fill! Also best wishes to her and Russ and the bambino from us all.

Some reunion news has trickled through, and I shall attempt to relay it to other unfortunates like me who could not be there.

Twenty-three of our class showed up. Dougie Lyon Althouse, Mary Huntington Harrison, Mary Moss Powell, Tucker Jones Taylor, Agnes Spronl Bush, Gladys Wester Horton, Carolyn Martindale Blouin, Nancy Games Jaeger, Lib Marston Creech, Jarvis Seele Gammon, Adelaide Wampler Kundahl, Jo Reid Stubbs, Serena Ailes Henry, Ruth Hasson Smith, Jo Abernethy Turrentine, Rachel Ferguson Nash, Lindsay Prentis Woodroofe, Fanny Ford Libby, Lucy Miller Baber, Rosalie Faulkner Loving, Elizabeth "Scootie" Gorsline, Norvell Royer Orgain, and Gwen Olcott Writer.

Those who were able to attend the reunion

report their delight in finding each other "well preserved" and seem a bit amazed not to look and feel older, at least as old as reuning alums looked when we were undergraduates! A class picnic was held at the boat house, and all the doings of the weekend were enjoyed by those present. Would that I had been there! Let's all try to make it for the 25th.

"Marge's" other bit of news was that the Moose family is moving, first to Columbus, Ohio, till the first of the year and then to Atlanta, Georgia, where they expect to be permanent residents.

Gwen reports that Jarvis Scele Gammon has a daughter who entered SBC this September. I hope that Jarvis' daughter will love it as much as my Anne, who is a sophomore. You have no idea what fun it is to have a daughter at Sweet Briar! I recommend it to you all.

Other news is a bit thin. Before the next issue of the NEws I hope I shall hear from many of you so that I shall have more to report. This September ! deadline is a difficult one for a farmer's wife to meet. We have been so busy this summer that I have not had time to send out cards. However, I expect to do so before the next deadline rolls around, and please send me all the news you can glean, cards or no.

We had a visit from Polly Swift Calhoun and her husband and two older children. They spent two days at our camp near Ontonagon, Michigan, and we had a delightful time. Since our husbands are both engaged in farming we had much to discuss, besides the joy of renewing our own friendship. Polly had just visited Emma Knowl-ton Lytle in Oregon, Illinois. The Calhouns had a very ambitious trip planned to Wyoming and back via a southern ronte through Oklahoma.

As to news of the Green family, our second daughter, Joan, graduated from St. Mary's Hall at Faribault, Minnesota, in June and is entering Wellesley this fall. She refused to follow Anne's footsteps to Sweet Briar, preferring to venture forth on her own. She won a Pendleton scholarship to Wellesley, which is my mother's alma mater, thereby giving mother great pleasure. Our son, Mac, who is twelve, is entering junior high here at home this fall.

Herewith I shall end this first attempt as your reporter. I am looking forward to renewing contact with you all, and with your help I shall try to keep you in touch with each other through this column. This job is one that calls for cooperation and I'm counting on you.

1931

Fund Agent: NATALIE ROBERTS (Mrs. W. S. Foster) 2417 Lynchburg Avenne, N. W., Roanoke, Virginia.

At last I have that long promised report on the 1950 rennion. However, I cannot take much credit for the information, since the greater part comes from my faithful contributor and in this case my proxy. Virginia Cooke Rea. Perhaps some of the facts will be a repetition of what you saw and heard if you were in attendance but since the October issue of the News goes to all the alumnae, much will still be news.

The following were present: Martha von Briesen, Natalie Roberts Foster, Jane Mublberg Halverstadt, Phoebe Rowe Peters, Josephine Gibbs Dn Bois, Polly Swift Calhoun, Virginia Tabb Moore, Harriet Wilson McCaslin, Mary Frances Westcott Hale, Ella Williams Fauber, Elizabeth Clark, Jean Countryman Presba, Gertrude Lewis Magavern, and Virginia Cooke Rea.

Here is what I have as sent me by "Ginny": Polly Swift Calhoun's husband is a farmer. There are four children—Susan, 13; Theodore, 12; John, 10; and Gordon,

6. Polly does more than six ordinary people. She writes feature stories for a Connecticut paper; is a member of the Board of Education; is a director in the Public Health Association; is active in the County Farm Bureau; helps locate DP's; coaches a girls' basketball team; helps in re-classifying books for the Public Library; goes to the state capitol for hearings on education, world government and birth control and directs the choir besides filling a deep freeze with food. (Makes my back ache!)

Natalie Roberts Foster's husband is a consulting engineer. No children. Her main interest since returning to Nestle Brooke lies in managing her aunt's property.

Nancy Worthington served cocktails to the alumnae one afternoon in her lovely apartment in Lynchburg. Nancy seems fine. She is director of Camp Allegheny in the summer and spends her winters in lining up personnel for the camp. She is also secretary for the Southeastern Section of the American Camping Association.

Jane Mublberg Halverstadt's husband is in the advertising business. Their children are Albert, Jr., 15; and Connie, 13; Jane's interests are in gardening, golf and girl scouts.

"Jo" Gibbs Du Bois' husband works in an experimental laboratory for Firestone. Their children are John, 10; Laurence, 7; Joan, 4. Interests: church, school and cub scouts.

"Trudy" Lewis Magavern's husband is an attorney. In spite of five children she looks just as she did in college—much the youngest in the group picture. Her children are darling.

Phoebe Rowe Peters has two sons. The older graduated from High School this spring and is entering Amherst in the fall.

Harriet Wilson McCaslin's husband is a physician. They have two daughters and a son. This winter they are going to South America where her husband will be giving lectures. Dr. McCaslin takes two months off each year and they take a wonderful trip. Nice life, eh!

Virginia Tabb Moore has two children. Her daughter was in Nancy's camp last summer. "Ginny" is a great canasta fan. "Split" Clark works for the Red Cross

"Split" Clark works for the Red Cross doing Home Service work. She was very busy getting ready to drive with three other women to California. They plan to go as far north as Seattle and take in Yellowstone and the Canyon.

Jean Countryman Presba's husband is in the advertising business. They have two children—Paula, 8; and David, 4. Jean's interests are mainly in her family and a Brownie Troop committee.

Charlotte Kent Pinckney's husband is in Public Relations and they have three child-ren.

Virginia Quintard Bond's husband is a bond salesman and they have two children. Virginia is very active in Junior League.

Margaret Ferguson Bennett has two children. Her husband is Dean and English Professor at Olivet College in Michigan and Margaret is the registrar. Mary Lynn Carlson King's husband is a lawyer and they have four children. Her interests are school, public health, and gardening.

Ruth Schott McGuire's husband is the owner of a men's retail clothing store. Her interests are her two children, horseback riding, and a needle work guild.

Marjorie Webb Maryanov's husband is a physician. No children. Her interests are gardening, golf, church and the hospital.

Violet Andersen Groll is secretary for an attorney and has a daughter, Penny.

Peronne Whittaker Scott has two children, including an eight months' old baby. Her interests are in church, tennis, bridge, and knitting professionally.

Toole Rotter Mullikin's husband is a citrus grower in Florida. Her interests are in the church, tennis and growing orchids.

Jane Bikle Lane's husband is Marine Administrator for the Sun Oil Company. She has a part time job as managing editor of Davis Nursery Survey. Her interests are League of Women Voters, Red Cross, a cricket club and Cancer Society.

Margaret Lee Thompson married a newspaper man in Washington, D. C.

Eizabeth MacRac Goddard's husband was interned in China for a couple of years but is home now.

Marian Murphy Munz's husband is a state patrol man. They have two children.

Jean Ploehn was married in April. She is now Mrs. Leon Wernenthin, Mary Leigh Scaton Marston married a retired army general and they have a beautiful home in Washington.

Ethel Ware Rutherford runs a gift shop. That concludes "Ginny's" report to me and the following news was collected from cards that I sent out.

Elizabeth West Morton had just returned from a week's jaunt in Portland, Oregon, having put her two older girls in camp in the Cascades. She left the two younger girls with a nurse. Jere, her husband, was spending his third season in Alaska. "Bet" and three other coast survey wives made the trip to Portland together and had a wonderful time. They especially enjoyed the Columbia River drive which is said to be one of the most beautiful in the West.

"Ginny" Quintard Bond's card was full of vacation news. She had spent ten days in Stamford, Connecticut, in July. She took her younger son, Whit, with her. She had a chat over the phone with Ann Mason Brent Winn as she passed through Boston. Later she and Eddie were at Nantucket and at the time of writing they were spending a few days at Little Deer Isle, Maine, with the prospect of visiting her son, Ted, at his camp in New Hampshire. "Ginny" should be well fortified for that heavy winter schedule this year.

Gillette Hilton Pritchard saw Violet Andersen Groll and daughter, Penny, in Chicago, Both looked most attractive.

Martha von Briesen wrote of a wonderful trip to Europe—touring France, Switzerland, Germany and Holland. She adds, "I had the pleasure of seeing Marcelle Dominique Perrot, her too engaging children, and her very nice husband. Marcelle was interested in all the news about S.B. and people who came to our reunion."

"Jo" Gibbs Du Bois wrote glowingly of reunion. She said that "Trudy" and Phoebe looked younger than ever and that the campus grew more beautiful every year. Polly and Frank Calhoun had lunch with the Du Bois family on August 1 at which time they dropped off their young son, Jordan, age 7, for a month's visit while they and their two older children, Sue and Ted, took a trip West. They planned to visit Helen Hanson Bamford, Emma Knowlton Lytle and Mona Stone Green en route. The Du Bois family were planning to spend two weeks at the shore, if all kept well. Fortunately young Larry has recovered from his illness. Their oldest boy was convalescing from an emergency appendectomy and doing fine.

"Nat" Roberts Foster and her husband had had the happy experience of having a little boy and his two sisters from the nearby "Home" for their vacation. It proved most gratifying and they hope to repeat it some time. The one sad note in "Nat's" card was the death by poisoning of their wonderful four year old Boxer. Directing the Vacation Bible school, garden clubbing were her most recent summer activities.

"Marge" Webb Maryanov has played a lot of golf this summer. She now regrets that she didn't spend some of that energy in weeding her flower beds. Otherwise no news.

When Nancy Worthington wrote, camp was entering its sixth week, with a little rain every day, but things had run very smoothly and the season had been a lot of fun

Cary Burwell Carter was there; also Sarah Gracey Haskell whose husband, Lewis, was serving as chaplain for the month of August. They have four darling daughters. Two are in junior camp and the younger ones in Cowbell Alley, where families also reside in camp. If only Camp Allegheny were in Ohio, I certainly would take advantage of Nancy's wonderful Directorship.

Mary Frances Westcott Hale crashed through with a card. After attending reunion and visiting relatives in Charlottesville, she met Earl and they went to Ocracoke Island for two weeks. Ocracoke is 30 miles off the North Carolina coast where the pirate, Black Beard, used to hang out. Leave it to Westcott to find a spot like that to relax in.

Jean Cole Anderson wrote to the effect, "No gray hairs, but my poor aching joints!" And when you hear what she has been doing it is easy to understand about those "aching joints." She built the sets for the summer production, "January Thaw," that the Little Theatre presented on July 26 and 27th. Jean is Vice President of the Little Theatre guild. She has also been tending the church thrift shop on Saturday mornings and in September she did a display camping window for the Girl Scout Drive.

In addition to this she is secretary for the Girl Scout Council as well as tender of the PTA scrap book, for the coming winter, Received a card from Polly Suift Calhoun sent from Sante Fe where they were visiting friends. They spent ten days in Colorado—fishing—and to date the trip had been a wonderful success.

As for the Shipmans-they have had a quiet summer. Janie was in Camp Minniwanca in Michigan and son, Shippy, has done everything from driving a grocery truck to swinging a pick and shovel. He goes to W & L this fall. Ship and I spent a week in Northern Michigan. We stayed at Lake Walloon a while, did some sight-seeing and picked up Janie on our way home. We are planning to go to Cleveland in September and enter our dog in the Field Trials. With Shippy leaving for college in September, I will have more time on my hands and hope to do a better job of getting out my cards on time, but that will be wasted energy unless you girls crash through with replies. How about it, gals?

Class Secretary: MARJORIE WARD (Mrs. George H. Cross, Jr.) 2204 West 11th Street, Wilmington, Delaware.

Fund Agent: MILDRED GIBBONS, 918 First National Bank Building, Tampa 2, Florida.

Sue Burnett Davis, Suzanne Gay Linville and I were the only ones of our class back for reunion. It's a shame for everyone said it was the largest and best planned reunion we've ever had. I did gather some news, however. Sue Davis is on the Alumnae Council and will be coming back to Sweet Briar several times a year. She is busy in Atlanta with P.T.A., teaching Sunday School, garden clubbing and perfectly beautiful sewing.

Suzanne is president of the Sweet Briar Club in Westchester County, lives in Scarsdale in the winter and Sharon, Connecticut, in the summer. Suzanne and her husband, who teaches school in Scarsdale, have two young sons, 5½ and 4.

Sue sees Caralisa Barry Pollard in Atlanta quite a bit. The Pollards are building a modern house, which must be dreamy for Caralisa's husband teaches architecture at Georgia Tech. They have two little girls.

There also was news of Sarah Gracey Haskell and her family. Sarah's husband was Chaplain at Camp Alleghany for a month this summer and she came there with her four children—two of whom were campers.

Barbara Munter Purdue writes from Seattle that she has three children, 4½, 2, and 10 months, which certainly must keep her very busy.

We do have some traveling classmates. Lib Doughtic Bethea took 14 debutantes to Europe this summer. Tuie Groner Moreno went to Hawaii last June and writes that she hasn't seen any Sweet Briar gals but that Hawaii is all that she's been told and more. They have grand quarters and a huge yard, plus a new dog and cat! As Tuie says, they are making up for living in an apartment so long. They swim every day and live out of doors-Suzy is taking hula lessons and Tuie says she may yet!

Alice Bonghton Keenan writes from Washington that she has three boys, 14, 18, and one son born last Christmas day. Virginia Craig Steman recently visited Alice. Virginia lives in Cincinnati.

From Memphis comes word that Virginia Finch Waller has two boys, 16 and 13. She teaches piano at home and is secretary of the Memphis Symphony Society,

Ann Anthony Hill's children are getting very grown-up too. Her son is 15 and her daughter, Betsy, is 12. Ann is active in the Sweet Briar Club in Boston, Ruth Thompson Lathrop is in Heidelberg, Germany, with her army husband and 16 year old daughter and is very busy learning Russian.

Henrietta Bryan Alphin wrote from Crozit, Virginia, in June that her husband. Tom. finished internship in the U. S. Public Health Service last July and returned to anatomy and is now Assistant Chief Medical Examiner for the State of Virginia with headquarters in Richmond. In June they were looking for a place to live in Richmond. Here's hoping they've found something by now.

A card from Edith Railey Dabney came saying she was sorry not to get to reunion but three children plus some fourteen boards, committees, etc., in Lexington kept her so involved she couldn't get away from all of it for a month and leaving for California the next day.

Betty West Morton writes from Seattle that she "is sitting on a keg of dynamite right now waiting to see what effect the Korean War is going to have on me and mine. My regards to Courtney and Tiny and all my other dear friends way back east."

Chubby Harrison Merrill, who lives in Atlanta, says that she and Mill Hodges Ferry plan to return to S. B. C. for their 20th reunion. Chubby sees Mill frequently when she gets to Birmingham. She also sees Hazel Stamps Collins and her two charming daughters. Chubby's eldest boy is very smitten with Hazel's 9 year old. Art, Chubby's husband, is still teaching half time at Emory Medical School, doing research and practicing half time. They have three sons, Arthur, 9, Harrison, 7, and Randy, (almost two) "who was meant to be a daughter but wasn't. So, of course, I'm almost whitehaired, arthritic and cantankerous, was very active as a club woman, but Randy's arrival turned me into a Mother in spite of my desire to run Georgia politics."

Nellie Nightingale Gleason saw Betsy Higgins Plummer in Tampa and was terribly impressed with Betsy's very smart appearance, figure, etc. Jim, Nellie's husband, and Frank had a grand time together. Jim was just back from a 10 day business trip in Germany and England. Nellie stayed home with their son, Michael. Betsy and Nellie are both worried about their respective husband's standing in the Army Reserve.

Please don't forget to send me some news about yourselves before the February NEWS. Class Secretary: Doris Crane (Mrs. Samuel C. Loveland, Jr.) 331 Chester Avenue, Moorestown, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: GERALDINE MALLORY, 169 East Clinton Avenue, Tenafly, New Jersey.

New Jersey seems to be well represented at this time. I agreed to be class secretary for a year and hereby bow with the aspiration to do as well as those before me.

Blanche Davies Barloon has had a daughter, Anne Stuart Barloon, since she last sent in some news. Anne is now 41/2 and has a brother, Peter, 7. The Barloons just bought a house after living first in New Orleans, then Cambridge, Massachusetts, and then back to Cleveland, Ohio, over a tenyear period. Blanche's husband is Chairman of the Department of Economics at Western Reserve University and Blanche keeps busy as Program Chairman of the University Women's Club.

Marjorie Burford Crenshaw and her husband have been out at Morgantown, West Virginia, where the latter has been visiting teacher at the second term of summer school at the University. Marj is taking a job September first as Executive Secretary of the local T. B. Association. We do wish you luck! She was on the Sweet Briar Alumnae Council for three years and will now miss her regular trips back.

Mary Frances Hammond Cook, her husband and two sons, Dal and Scottie, had a marvelous European holiday this summer. They went over on the lle de France and flew back from London. She also has a daughter, Kirklyn, but she remained at home while her family visited France, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, England, Ireland and Scotland. The Cooks had such a wonderful trip that they are already planning their next!

Sue Graves Stubbs wrote that her third child, John Howell Stubbs, was born on April 26. Susalee Belser Norris is the baby's godmother and Sue hopes she can be in Louisiana for the christening. Sue, King, and the older children had a short summer vacation at a resort hotel on Mobile Bay where the children adored the sailing, crabbing and swimmingand Sue loved the room service.

Elizabeth Stuart Gray had lunch at the Boxwood Inn July 30 en route home from a trip to Ohio. Lib also paid a visit briefly on the Rollinses and Miss Benedict. It was lovely and cool and they had a delicious lunch which all added together made a most delightful break in their trip. All other things are routine with Lib at the moment and I leave her card with a sigh of envy as I have often wished that I could drive up to the Boxwood Inn for lunch.

Nevil Crute Holmes' husband has to be away from home a great deal but this summer she and her two little girls went along and spent a lovely two weeks by a mountain lake near her old home town, Canton, North Carolina. It was fun, Nevil reports, seeing people she hadn't seen for 15 years or so. Nevil saw Lon Rogers who was home with her 3 children in Asheville.

Margaret and Mary Imbrie sent a card.

They are both working and I was dissappointed to have no vacation news. 1 do know that they had a pleasant trip last year driving up through the New England States with Helen Bond. I can report something the twins have done that I bet no other class member has thought of. They joined a second Great Books Discussion Group to keep up with the first! This keeps them straining their eyes because each group meets every two weeks and the reading is not "light."

Susalee Belser Norris writes that she is now in the midst of redecorating their new home (an old house but new to them) in the Garden District of New Orleans. She loves New Orleans and adds that her home should be finished by fall and there is a welcome awaiting any Briarites that come that way. Here's hoping that all those of '33, who would like to do so, don't arrive the same week end! She and her husband, Jim, visited in Lexington, Kentucky, late this summer and drove on to North Carolina to pick up their two campers.

Katherine Gochnauer Slater and family (Nickie, 8 and Anne, 5) spent two weeks at The Seatonse at Virginia Beach where she ran into several Sweet Briarites. Among them Jo Rucker Powell whom Kitty had not seen in ten years. Jo looked as lovely as ever and has three daughters and the nicest husband who is a divine dancer! Kitty reports all this from the Cavalier Beach Club where George Olsen was playing. Others included Anne Brooke, who lives at the beach, Norvell Royer Orgain and Camilla Alsop Hyde who were spending vacations there. Elizabeth Brown Trout had a cottage across the street. She has three darling children. Elizabeth went back to Sweet Briar for Commencement this year and said it made her feel mighty aged.

Jessie Coburn Laukhuff sent a card from Washington. In case you do not already know, Jessie was married last December to Perry Laukhuff, who was an instructor at S.B. when we were there. He is now a career officer at the U. S. Foreign Service. Our very best wishes to them both!

Katherine Howze Maclellan sends an entry to spare us an empty column. I thank thee, Kitty, and hope that all our classmates do likewise. Kitty has an active household with little Anne Llewellyn, aged 3, and Robert Howze, aged 2. Besides managing her household she belongs to two garden clubs, a book club, and is active in her church. The Maclellans have just returned from a two weeks vacation at the Ponte Vedra Club in Florida. Having spent one evening at Ponte Vedra J can well imagine what an enjoyable time they had!

Lois Foster Moore and her husband, Jim, had a wonderful trip abroad in June. A week in Paris, on to Denmark, then Norway where Jim skippered a boat in some International Races. The Norwegians won, Americans second, Swedish third. It must have been a fascinating experience and they even met royalty! After three days in England the Moores flew home again.

Mary Buick has returned from a vacation at Bones Ranch at Birney, Montana. She had been at the same ranch 11 years ago and had not ridden horseback since! Mary, brave gal, rode every morning and evening and recouped with siestas in the afternoon. She is still able to stand on her feet. In fact, she loved every minute of it and is now back hard at work in the pediatrician's office.

Frances Quinn Bond and Helen Bond have moved from Wilmington, Delaware, to Chadds Ford, Pennsylvania. Frances has a daughter, Jerry, who is just about as irresistable as they come.

Margaret Bell Hare has had a beautiful, peaceful summer going to their beach every day with the young fry visiting them. Margaret resigned as Branch Chairman of the American Red Cross to find she had to be Vice-Chairman and Chairman of Recruitment of Volunteers for the new VA Hospital. She then resigned as advisor to St. Margaret's (a church chapter she organized five years ago) to find herself Chairman! Margaret decided that her "no's" must be too weak. Plus that she is to work in the Filter Centre in White Plains spotting aircraft and hopes that it won't be anything worse. More power to you, Margaret, and we hope so, too.

Rose Beverly Bear Burks is definitely busy with four girls, one in diapers, one having beaux, and two in the middle. She finds the one in diapers the least trouble. The Burks family spent four days at White Sulphur Springs where they saw Jo Rucker Powell, Margaret Lanier Woodrum and Alice Dabney Parker, (From right here it looks as if Jo is getting around more than the rest of us.) Rose Beverly and her husband were attending the Virginia Bar Association. The Burks' eldest, Elsie, goes to St. Anne's in the fall and Rose Beverly hopes to get over to Charlottesville for some week ends. She feels she'll need them as she finds adolescence exhausting and somehow can't remember going through any such stage.

Frances Atkinson penned a card from the Nurses' Home, VA Hospital in Little Rock. Pat has been working in the Registrar Division two years, and she advises that we watch for the news of her hospital becoming a psychiatric center before too long. Their seminars feature Drs. Blain, Meniger, and Moreno. For relaxation at home Pat turns to tennis. For relaxation away from home Pat recently journeyed to Dallas.

I could really write a book on me and my family. Would you be interested? Cappy, 10, Salty, 8, Briny, 5, and Mary, 4, plus parents, have been spending the summer on the lake in Hammonton, New Jersey. Majored in French but am vainly trying to remember my two years of German so I can teach a Roumanian D. P. how to cook. To my great relief all four children now swim and have spent the entire summer collecting turtles. Father, Mother and handicaps took a week's business trip to Maine in July. Another business trip took Sam and me to Europe in January. We flew non-stop to London and later went on to France, Italy and Switzerland. After a week in Genoa we had a week end in Rome and thence took the train to Geneva. Such a super way to relax!

My thanks to all who answered cards. I am looking forward to hearing from others during the year.

Fund Agent: MARTHA LOU LEMMON (Mrs. W. Frederick Stohlman) 11 Edgehill Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Julia Sadler de Coligny was in a dreadful auto accident in July. She is recovering slowly, but from the seriousness of her injuries it seems as if it will be quite a long spell. However, Julia's fighting spirit gained the upper hand and she managed to get out of the hospital in a mere twelve days. She says, "In spite of my appearance, my fractured collar, my aches and pains, and my numb skull, we are all on the mend. All four children were in the accident, too. Julie, the youngest, was in the hospital the same twelve days I was, but her scalp wounds are healing beautifully and the broken nose is functionally corrected. We are thankful, as long as it had to happen, that we are alive. because from the picture of the car in the paper it is a miracle to everybody." Miss Weaver was in the accident, too, and suffered a broken knee cap. As to how it happened: the only details that I have are that they were driving along with a real estate agent looking for a possible family camp placehe took his eyes off the road to watch little Julie and along came a loaded truck and trailer!

On the bright side—wedding bells—Cecil Birdsey Wade was married June 6 in Rheinbeck, New York, to the Rev. Raymond E. Feussle. He is with Bard College as Chaplain and as Professor of Greek and Religion. The witnesses were Cecil's brother and Charles and Lib Scheuer Maxwell.

The Maxwells took a cottage at Sea Island, Georgia, for the month of July and had a wonderful time. The Feussles also had a cottage there. Sue Fender Miller, her husband, and her two children visited the Maxwells for a few days. At Sea Island, Lib ran into Virginia Battey Etheridge, her husband, and their four children (the youngest are twins). In New York, Lib has gotten to know John Bender, Jill's brother, and his wife very well. They live right across the street from the Maxwells; the two couples met through their children who are classmates at school.

Bonnie Wood Stookey and family spent July at Cotuit on Cape Cod and thoroughly enjoyed it. They had a pleasant day in Madison, Connecticut, with Alma Martin Rotnem and family. Quite recently Lib Scheuer Maxwell and her son, John (Bonnie's godson) spent a day at the Stookeys. Bonnie is currently engaged in a shoe buying and touth cleaning spree with her 7½ and 5 year olds in preparation for the tolling of the school bell.

Jean Sprague Hulvey writes that Anne Marvin spent a week end with them in June. They went to see "Brigadoon," played canasta, and did a great deal of visiting. In July, Jean spent two weeks in Norfolk while Charlie was at the Little Neck Amphibious Naval Base for active duty with the Marine Corps. At the end of September Charlie will finish his Law Course. He will set up practice somewhere in Virginia, but the exact spot is not yet determined. Jean has completed a quite successful stint as Fund Agent.

Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman and family had a cool, calm summer in Princeton going often to the shore and to the theatre. There are two good summer theatres there. On one excursion the Stohlmans dropped in on Maggie Ross Ellice in Annandale and hid a grand visit. Maggie has a lovely old farm with an elegant view and a swimming pool which is no less than fifteen feet deep anywhere and which doubles for conserving water. "Maggie is full of verve as usual and has one of the friendliest, smilingist daughters—her name is Parry." Lon had brief visits from the Sweet Briar Psychology Department—Miss Möller in June and Miss Mull in August.

Betty Suttle Briscoe reports a summer at home which was quiet but busy with swimming lessons for the girls and the usual routine. Last spring Mary McCallum Neill stayed with Betty when she came north to see her son who goes to school near the Briscoes. They had a fine visit and hope to repeat it this fall. Betty says Mary hasn't changed a bit.

Marjorie Lasar Hurd and Rhea have had a fine summer. Rhea had an article in the August issue of the American Home magazine. The Hurds are now bracing themselves against a frantic fall and winter, for they are building a bouse! "Marj" says people think that they are crazy and that she knows it. It sounds very exciting to me.

When Becky Strode Lee wrote, she, her husband, and their girls were preparing to go to York Harbor, Maine, for their vacation. They were to leave the two boys at Kenmore—Becky's home in Amherst.

The Bill Bamfords (Helen Hanson) managed to call the turn on the weather for their vacation. They took their two oldest children and went to Beach Haven, New Jersey, for four glorious days of sun, sand, and surf. Then they arranged for a cold snap that they might "do" New York City in comfort. They had a grand visit from Frank and Polly Suift Calhoun who with their two oldest children stopped a night in Maumee on their way to a tour of the West. Helen and Bill were hoping for a visit from Harry and Eleanor Alcott Bromley in late August.

Mary Hutchinson Gordon came to Detroit to visit her family in the late spring and we had a fine visit. The Gordons had had a marvelous Bermuda vacation and were looking forward to many summer week ends in New Hampshire at Philbrook Farm. Their nine year old Molly spent this summer at camp in New Hampshire. The older boys, twelve and fourteen, now have a sailboat and had a dandy time learning to sail on Narragansett Bay. Six year old Peter will get to go along when he becomes more skillful at sailing, and they more skillful at sailing.

Dot Hussey Rockaway's husband, Jack, went to National Guard Camp for the latter part of June. Dot took their two boys on a tour including Niagara Falls and a visit to Jim and Nancy Russell Carter. Dot gives many of her winter hours to being a Den Mother and her summer to tending her garden.

BABY BULLETIN: David, born July 10proud parents, Jim and Nancy Russell Carter. Jim had quite a busy Sunday-he drove his three big boys and my twelve year old (whom he picked off a train the preceding afternoon) to Camp 100 miles south of Buffalo, got them settled, and returned to Buffalo, in time to have dinner with Nancy and escort her to the hospital. The Carter boys stayed at Camp five weeks. Sally spent the summer adoring the new baby. Jim was planning to spend his August vacation doing chores around their lovely country placemainly moving the garage and building an addition to it. Nancy is full of pep and the baby is a handsome fellow-eye witness information.

After spending the month of June nursing sick children (who had to be kept in separate rooms and ministered unto every four hours night and day), we finished out the summer having a lot of fun. We drove to Buffalo July 15 on our way to take our second son to the aforementioned Camp and stayed a night at the Carter's town house. I was able to get in two lengthy hospital visits with a bubbling Nancy. We came home via Cleveland and had an hour's chat with Eleanor Alcott and Harry Bromley. Ten days later found us at the Carter's country place for a grand long week end preceding our retrieving our boys from Camp. Nancy had good "help" so we spent all our energy on tongue-wagging. I had great fun cuddling wee David. Sally C. is such a sweet child; she and my Sally had a gay time. En route home with the boys we thoroughly "did" the Welland Canal and Fort Niagara. After four days hasty repacking, we were off to Lake of Bays, Ontario, for ten wonderful days with Harry and Elly Alcott Bromley and Ann.

Credit here to Elly for a noble "assist" in addressing cards despite being surrounded by much interesting conversation. The Bromleys discovered Lake of Bays Lodge several years ago and have since spent three weeks there each summer. It is the perfect small resort and had a most compatible group of guests. Elly and Harry had miserable weather for two weeks so when they turned on the sun to make our stay perfect everyone soaked up a bit too much and acquired a neat little burn. Ann, who is just two weeks younger than my Sally, is a darling and the girls apparently enjoyed each other's company immensely. We sailed (exploring a small part of the 365 mile shore line), swam, hiked, et cetera. Dancing, at Bigwin Inn was quite enhanced by the boat ride one must take to get there-take your choice (or try each) -a swift, elegant speedboat or an amazing little steamer which chuffs slowly across the bay giving people ample time for singing and for admiring the Northern Lights and the galaxy of shooting stars which performed for us. We hope to repeat the marvelous time next summer. The Bromleys stopped a night with the Carters on their way home.

To all my correspondents—thank you very much. I surely enjoy hearing from each of you as well as being grateful for the news to put in this column. To everyone—remember that if you miss the deadline, send the card anyway—the news is just as good for the next issue, and when you don't receive a card write me a nice, long newsy letter with lots of details!

Class Secretary: DOROTHY BARNUM (Mrs. Josiah G. Venter) Johnsons Point, Branford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: GENEVA CROSSMAN (Mrs. Edson S. Stevens) 2151 Walnut Lake Road, R.F.D. 1, Birmingham, Michigan.

The class of 1935 must hold some kind of record as one of the least Alma Mater minded classes of all time! For our 15th reunion there were only 7 back out of a possible 88 graduates. In the year that I have been writing class notes, I have sent out 200 cards and have had 24 replies! Many thanks to you who have answered my queries.

Elizabeth Broun Trout, Cary Burwell Carter, Nancy Horton, Mary Marks, Mary Lou Saul Hunt, Pat Whitford Allen, and Helen Wolcott were the ones who got back to reunion. "Wooly" says that she and Pat and Nancy were the only ones to stay the whole time. The others were there only over Saturday night during which time there was "much much rain." She remarked, "It was a shame that the others weren't there on Sunday afternoon and Monday for the heautiful weather so that we could have taken some pictures to show that even after 15 years we weren't noticeably coming apart at the seams." Mary Marks also wrote that the 7 who were back thought they had withstood the "ravages of time nicely, thank you!" "Wooly" writes that she "had a gloious week in the spring at Charleston. The gardens were in all their glory and I have never seen such magnificance. Through friends we also got a taste of old Charleston with tea in one of the historic old homes, a party in another, etc. It's a charming place." In the middle of August she and her mother went to the Eastern Shore for a week of relaxation and swimming.

Mary Marks has had a summer of work and conferences, but did manage to get a "perfect week end" at Sweet Briar with Miss Rogers and Miss Crawford. She has been made D. E. Area Supervisor for the Tidewater area and plans to live in Suffolk. She is looking forward to the traveling she will do, for her work will carry her about the Hampton Roads section, the Peninsula, and the Eastern Shore.

Judy HalliBurton Burnett writes that they had a grand time at their beach cottage, and had a busy summer commuting between the mountains and the shore. Her daughter will be in Junior High this year and Judy says that she can scarcely believe it. She remarks that "Father Time has us in his clutches—wish I felt older, instead of just looking older,"

Betty Myers Harding has had a busy summer with lots of guests and family. She wrote that Miss Weaver and Julia Sadler de Coligny and her children had been in a serious automobile accident in Richmond in July, but all are recovering. She says there is no immediate prospect of her husband going back into the Navy but it is a possibility she supposes.

A newsy note from GeeGee Morgan Carpenter says that she dined with Marion Walker Alcaro in August—that it was the first time she had seen her in 7 or 8 years. GeeGee has two girls—the older starts kindergarten in the fall, and the younger keeps her parents in hysterics most of the time with her struggles to talk. GeeGee writes that Sarah Turpin Habberton's second daughter arrived in June.

Ruth Legum Marcus had a relaxing summer taking short vacation trips with her husband while her two girls were in camp. She says her husband has promised to visit Sweet Briar with her next year and she is really looking forward to that, Ruth is going back to Social Service work this fall.

Cynthia Harbison Heye, whose fourth child (third daughter), Cynthia Johanne, "very blond and very lovable," arrived April 20, says, "My days are busy, busy, busy, and I never get everything done. Someone is always being fed or bathed and my recreation consists of pulling weeds out of the garden!"

Josh and I spent all spring remodeling and enlarging a very small downstairs bedroom, and now we have a much more convenient guest room. Any Sweet Briarites are most welcome. We plan to take the children and go to Cape Cod for a week in September—after that school and winter are upon us.

Do write—all of you who have not been heard from in some time—and please, more good work from the faithful.

Class Secretaries: RUTH GILLIAM (Mrs. Earl R. Viar) 817 New Hampshire Avenue, Lynchburg, Virginia. MARGARET SMITH (Mrs. John R. Thomasson) 1514 Arrow Street, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ALMA MARTIN (Mrs. Ralph A. Rotnem) 330 East 79th Street, New York 21, New York.

My summer was so absolutely ideal for me that I will have to write to you about that first. Rusty, the children, the dog, the canary and I stayed in the Garden Cottage at Sweet Briar for the month of August. You all will remember the Mangiaficos living there—right next to Sweet Briar House. Since then Mrs. Raymond has occupied it most of the time. She has now retired and the cottage will henceforth be reserved, for the Alumnae Secretary, "Maggie" Cornwell Schmidt and her little daughter, Ruthie, arrived September 1 to take over.

Sweet Briar is the perfect spot for a vacation with children. The lake is grand for swimming now—no more mud—and fishing and boating are fun too. We tried but we caught no fish, although others did. There is always something of interest going on at the farm, even if it's just a trip to the dairy at milking time or to see the new calves. The community itself is so hospitable that it makes you feel right at home again.

I hardly know where to begin to tell you about everyone. Well, to start at the end of New Faculty Row-Mrs, Lill is soon to build a house on a road to be put through the woods toward the lake, just beyond Dr. Ricc's house. In fact, I understand that there are to be three new houses built on that road. Dr. Rice is as attractive as ever and ber house is charming. Her mother lives with her and adds a great deal of pleasure to the campus. Miss Crawford has her in one of her 8:30 philosophy classes. Miss Crawford and Miss Rogers are at Red Top and Kate works for them part-time now. Kate is the one who made those wonderful little cinnamon buns we so enjoyed on Friday afternoons. Mary Marks was at Red Top for a visit while I was there and she looks just the same. I washed towels in Miss Crawford's Bendix one day so that I wouldn't have to come to town. Wasn't that a helpful neighbor?

Mrs. Lyman's house was being painted and fixed up for Miss Pearl who moved on September 1. The Ramage sisters are just as sweet and hospitable as ever and busy having visitors off and on this summer. Mrs. Rollins (you'll remember her as Miss Benedict) lives in the next house, Dr. Rollins is a retired Episcopal minister and Mrs. Benedict lives with them. At the Patteson House Madame Johnson occupies the first floor. She went away this summer and rented her apartment to Dr. and Mrs. Arnold Del Greco. Dr. Del Greco taught modern languages at Sweet Briar during the war and is now in the same department at the University of Virginia. They come back each summer for their vacation. They have two lovely girls, 8 and 10, who played with our 9 year old Bill. Miss Möller returned from her Sabbatical just as we were leaving. She has bought the Poston house across the tracks and a mastiff puppy for a watch dog. Her little black Cocker, Jill, has been replaced by another one named Poppy.

You probably read Edna Lee Gilchrist's article on the Farm in a recent issue of the News. Edna is just as attractive as she sounded in that article and the twins, Joan and Judy, are adorable. Joe had a surprise clam bake for Edna's birthday which was lots of fun and plenty of delicious food cooked in the open. They are getting ready to add an addition to their house—where the Blackwells used to live.

Mrs. Watts was living in Gray this summer to be with the telephone operators and Mrs. Kerr. She is just the same sweet person and was wonderful to my children.

Now for the work going on this summer. They are putting new bathrooms in Manson and Carson and have run some kind of new pipes across campus. Several of the buildings, including Sweet Briar House, have received a coat of paint. All the dorms have a new fire alarm system that is very modern but rather complicated to explain. The lawns and gardens are kept in perfect order all the time so that campus looks like a large and wellrun country estate.

I know this next news is what you want most to hear and that is why I saved it for the last. Mrs. Pannell and her two boys, Gary and Clifton, retorned from Europe the middle of August. I had planned to put on my white gloves and go calling formally, but with children in both families, I naturally met her over the back porch railing. Mrs. Pannell is the most natural and charming person I have ever met. She will make us a marvelous president. I cannot sing her praises high enough. The two boys have a marvelous sense of humor that keeps everyone laughing and are still the most thoughtful children I have seen in a long time. My Bill enjoyed them immensely and hated to come home. He begged me to build a house out there and stay forever so that he could be with the two boys. Gary, 13, is going to Woodbury Forest this year and Clifton, 11, will be at home and go to the Amherst School. We hope to see a lot of him over week ends.

Here's hoping that this wasn't too much rambling about me and mine, but I am so full of Sweet Briar right now that I wanted to pass it along to you.

Roth is much better than I about getting information from you all so this next part is mostly from notes you have sent her. Margaret Huvley Range has moved from Tryon, North Carolina, to Charlottesville. Her two girls, Carroll, 11, and Harriet, 9, spent July and August at camp. She also has a 2 year old boy named Ned. Peg keeps busy with church work, Hospital Auxiliary, and Little Theater. She stopped by Sweet Briar in April and saw Miss Glass, Dr. Harley and Miss Ruby. By the way, I heard that Dr. Harley has gone back to Africa again.

Cabby Mitchell Ravenscroft this summer visited her mother in Denver and also spent two weeks with Dina Newby Adams. While there she saw Polly Brown Sweeney and Ces Jansen Kendrick. Cabby has a daughter, Lucille, and her son, Sparky, was at Camp Cheley in Estes Park this summer.

Kin Carr Baldwin writes that her son, Bobby, aged 10, went to Camp Virginia this summer. Her little girl, Stuart, 7½, went with Kin and her husband to Nags Head for ten days, where she saw Liza Lewis Parham. She saw Jackie Conbran Nicholson at Farmington and Nancy Braswell Holderness at Virginia Beach at a wedding.

George-Ann Jackson Slocum wrote in June of Stumpy's engagement and of a shower that Muggy Gregory Cukor gave for her. Stumpy was married in August to Samuel C. Fisher. George-Ann is kept plenty busy with her family. She has a son, Jack, aged 6, and twins, Julie and Jimrny, aged 5.

Marjorie Wing Todd has a new baby boy. Her first two were girls so that makes this one doubly exciting.

A wonderful "news letter" came from Annette Harley Chappell's mother, Mrs. Charles S. Harley. There was a picture of Annette and her three children, a girl and two boys. She writes that Annette and Joseph, her husband, have a new home in Silver Spring, Maryland. Joe is in the U. S. State Department. They attend the church of the late Peter Marshall. They belong to the Parents' Club, of which Joe is president, and Annette is president of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Club of Washington, D. C. We wish more mothers would follow Mrs. Harley's lead and keep us up-to-date!

Best of luck to each of you in your activities this fall and don't forget to let us hear from you.

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 1906 Dewey, Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Marjorie Silvester died on Thursday, February 23, in a New York Hospital after a ten days illness. She had been in poor health for three years but had been continually and cheerfully planning for the future.

Promising in dramatics in college Midge continued her interest in the theater by studying under Mme. Marie Ouspenskaya from 1937 to 1940. She taught for a time at the Stearns School of Dramatics in Peterboro, New Hampshire, and from 1940 to 1949 she taught at Mme. Ouspenskaya's School of the Theater. Midge also was active in radio and television work.

Not much news to send you gals this time and that's had when this issue goes to everybody, regardless of whether she is an Alumnae Fund contributor or not. Maybe it will stimulate you to help me get back the cards you get before they are thrown in the trash,

In trying to make up news I went over my folder and found an old card from Claire Handerson Chapin which will really seem like old news to her—crossed with one of my letters back in the spring when Claire was just setting out for a Florida trip as a reward for being quarantined with her three for Scarlet Fever and then Measles. She says that soon they'll be over children's diseases and into adolescent problems. I was glad to see that she is already planning to "meet you for our 15th reunion."

I also came across a letter from roommate, Rilma Wilson Allen in which she had sent me a picture of her little boy. He was just beginning to toddle then, but she said she was having a hectic time because their only yard at the apartment was steeply graded toward one of the main streets, so her life was full of giving him "supervised" air, plus cooking and cleaning, washing and ironing—and I guess her life hasn't changed much with the intervening months.

After my last column reporting our class as celebrating Boys' Month, I had an addendum from Molly Talcott Dodson so that I could include her E. Griffith Dodson III, born March 3rd—9 lbs.—who, she said, arrived in the midst of the Virginia General Assembly while Grif was serving as a Roanoke delegate. Molly T. doesn't think the state government was a bit upset, despite the domestic upheavel. She says E. Griff III's sisters, 7 and 8, have taken him over completely, so maybe she can just sit back and coach now.

In new news I did have a card from Jinny Fanlkner Mathews. She reports (as do so many mothers, somehow!) "Youngest, Jane, is a handful." But Jinny is still managing to sing in choir and be President of Junior League there in Charleston for two years. She had seen Virginia Eady Williams at the ASLA Conference in Sun Valley and "Ces" Jansen Kendrick in Denver while Jinny was visiting there. She said they had their vacation in Florida last spring and were sticking close to home this summer, but the above paragraph sounds like she had covered a lot of territory in the past year.

I also had a card from Helen Hays Crowley which said that her time was filled with chauffeuring the children from everything from dental appointments to dancing lessons plus her own secretarial work at home. She had her first real vacation from the children this year in 9½ years—a two week's trip to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and a fourday trip to New York. Sounds like she had better do like some of the rest of us did last reunion—use that as an excuse. I had my first vacation from Clark when he was 3½ months old that way!

In an unsuccessful attempt to get together with M. J. Miller Hein one day when I was in New York, I did manage to get a card from her. She says she has had a wonderful summer at Northport, Long Island, where her husband's family rented the Miller's home. M. J. had to stay right there to look after John and Judith, but she says being on the water has spoiled her so that she hates to go back to city streets. She should live on the water like we do. With young Paul just five months old, I don't think I have been swimming in the ocean (just 10 minutes away) a dozen times. But it has been wonderfully cool and we have had a grand seafood diet, caught by Charley. Next summer I expect to make up.

That's all I could scrape up for you but please send me any news you know or find out. And don't forget to send in some money to the Alumnae Fund so you can keep up with what's going on at the Briar Patch.

Class Secretaries: Adelaide Boze (Mrs. James A. Glascock, Jr.) 4266 South 35th Street, Arlington, Virginia. Cynthia Noland (Mrs. Karl Young, Jr.) Long Ridge Road, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.) 765 Valley Street, Orange, New Jersey.

YOU should have been back at reunion!

Everything is just as you remember—the fragrances, the sounds of crunching gravelled walks, the uneven brick surfaces in the arcades, the resounding "thump" of those long, wooden stairways. Recalling Senior Parlor as we knew it, the present one with its circular sofa, upholstered in soft green, if you please, is out of this world. The new "date" house is perfect and suggests that perhaps we were born too soon. Miss Lucas was stunning.

A goodly group returned and we felt (and looked) not one day older-but our knees did on that long climb to third floor Grammer! 'Tell Sinclaire Farrar and Cynthia Noland Young drove down from New York, as did Lois Fernley McNeil and Blair Bunting Both from Philadelphia-Wilmington area. Reba Smith Gromel achieved distinction by flying from Allentown to Lynchburg. From Richmond, Clara Call Frazier, Emory Gill Williams, Polly Boze Glascock, Jane Goolrick Murrell and from Arlington, Baba MacRae Causey and Mary Sue Kilham Davis. Nida Tomlin Watts and Betty Frantz Roberts were there to greet us. So the resulting bull-session (in what may be remembered as Rosabel Robbins and Betty O'Herron's room freshman year) was all and more than you can imagine, complete with cigarettes and refreshments. A similar gathering took place the following night when Miss Möller was captured and taken to our hangout, where, in spite of uncomfortable postures on those iron beds, we sat spellbound and hilarious until 2:00 a, m. On Sunday, for what was to have been the class picnic, Nida had us to her house for cocktails. The only trouble was that the usual snafu occurred and Nido had to keep us from starving! Which she did so deftly that no one realized. It was all so pleasant in her gracious living room, Bob an admirable host, and her two children so endearing that it was perfectly painless when the new secretaries were chosen. It was felt that it would be difficult, even impossible, to find another so diligent and able. Accordingly, two were selected whose names appear above.

There was naturally much talk of those who did not return. "Ivy" (Betty Ivins Haskins) made up for her perfidy—she went on a trip to the coast with her husband—by wiring that her spirit was with us. The fact that it was signed "Izy" only added something to her humor we were remembering and missing.

When Robert McGee arrived on July 18, all 8½ lbs., we excused Martha Rector McGee for her noticeable absence. We learned that Martha has an exceptional gift as a home decorator and that her house in Roanoke is charming and something to see.

Lida Kepner Short has a bright and pleasant apartment in Richmond where her husband works for an insurance firm. Her children are Billy, who is entering first grade, and Peggy, 4, who is a blond, curly-haired doll. She reported that Martha Smith McGowan lives in California and has three very small children.

After reunion, 'Tell Sinclaire Farrar went to California with her husband and son, Dougie, for several weeks. They went expressly because Fred's mother was ill. When they arrived she improved so rapidly that Fred was able to attend to some business for his advertising firm and thus extend their stay to pleasant lengths. Clara Call Frazier and Bill came up to New York and we were able to use this as an excuse to see "Detective Story" although Anne Burr has had to leave for reasons of health. That same week Miss Möller stopped in for an hour or so on her way to deposit her dog at a kennel so that she could leave for Mexico. On the heels of reunion, plus a visit from my sister, the Youngs were not their usual sunny selves. A post card showing some ancient Aztec ruins indicated that she was having a marvelous time there.

Another traveler was Marie Gaffney Barry who sent a card from London in June. She said that she and Ted were crowding an amazing amount into three weeks.

Nida and Bobbie were in New York the end of July. After that they took the family to Virginia Beach for the rest of the summer.

Polly Boze Glascock went straight from reunion to move from Richmond to Arlington. Before going on vacation in August, she was able to see Agnes Spencer Burke. Ag's son is entering second grade and is a precious tornado and her little girl is two years younger and winsome with lovely brown curls falling to her shoulders.

"Tedie" MacKinnon visited Katherine Estes ('41g) during the summer. "Tedie" has opened a shop in Chicago where she sells sweaters and woolens imported from Scotland.

Polly also saw Jean Tyree Willman who lives in Falls Church, Virginia. Jean's husband is a Commander in the Navy and works at the Pentagon. Jean has three childran—two girls, six and three, and a boy, one. She considers herself fortunate to have a D. P. from Latvia who takes care of the house and children. The only difficulty is making herself understood by Olga, who speaks very little English.

Margaret Dowell Cochran surprised Polly with a visit. She had driven down from Detroit with her husband's family.

Betty Frantz Roberts has moved into Frances Moses Turner's house in Lynchburg, "Mose" having moved to Little Rock, Arkansas.

Nancy Haskins Elliot's husband has accepted a three-year appointment as assistant professor of History at Cal Tech and they are living in Patadena, Californ'a.

Mildred Moon Mentague was dismal that she was unable to get to reunion. She says she's in great shape but there were the usual obvious reasons why she couldn't leave her growing family. She has a son, Carrington, who arrived on August 17. This makes three boys for her.

Polly will be your correspondent for the next issue. Any news should be sent to her before January 1. Please make a note of her new address which does not appear in the new Directory. Beginning with that issue and continuing in the remaining issues for the year, we will very briefly summarize each graduate from the questionnaires returned for the class book on our Tenth.

We will also bring you up-to-date on as many non-graduates who send in any information. So, he sure to send your contribution to the Alumnae Fund because you may discover your Freshman roommate is living two blocks away!

As reported in the June issue of the ALUMNAE NEWS, Clementine Carter Murray died on June 8, 1950, almost on the very day that she received her degree ten years before. It has been suggested that many of her classmates would wish to do something for the college in her memory. Accordingly the college was consulted and it was further suggested that since her major subject was French, it would be especially fitting to enlarge the Library's small collection of books in that language. The Library has no endowment fund so that gifts are really necessary to its growth, All books acquired in Clemmie's memory will have a suitable bookplate, to be designed and chosen by the Library. Baba MacRae Causey has kindly volunteered to serve as collector of any contributions. They should be mailed to: Mrs. Beverly Causey, 402 Virginia Avenue, Alexandria, Virginia.

Class Secretary: RUTH JAQUOT (Mrs. Rone B. Tempest, Jr.) Box 1020, Santa Rita, New Mexico.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA BEASLEY (Mrs. Richard Holzer) 219 N. Broad Street, Lancaster, Ohio.

Hello, everyone! With the new fall clothes in the shop windows, pix of pretty college girls in all the magazines, and an increasing bewilderment about the why's and wherefore's of this world of ours—do you join me in wishing we could be stepping off the train at Sweet Briar station once again for some refresher courses?

I know all of us are proud of Ann Hanslein Potterfield, who has been elected to the Alumnae Council. As class secretary she always did a dependable thorough job. She sends the following message: "I'd like to thank all of you who wrote to me so faithfully, every letter was gleefully received. Ruth offered (volunteered!) to take over my job since I will be kind of busy with the new Alumnae Council work. Here's hoping that you will be as good to her as you were to me."

To that I add an humble amen and many thanks to all who wrote this time. And add, as no afterthought, that Ann is sparing nothing in thinking of the future of S. B. C. The third Potterfield daughter, Phyllis Mary, arrived July 28, weighing 8 lbs. 15 oz.

Our Prexy, Margie Troutman Harbin, writes that "the twins—18 months (Bob and Bill) and the other two boys keep me in a steady row!" Alice Williams Mighell and her husband (Dr. Joe) and two children drove up to Rome from Mobile and spent an evening with the Harbins in July. They were on their way to Linville, North Carolina.

She reported that Sally Page Williams Crawford is living in Great Neck with her two sons, Alice's husband is an obstetrician and gynecologist in Mobile. Margaret Kelly, long unheard from, is Mrs. John L. Gardiner, lives in New York and has a daughter, Margaret Halsey Gardiner.

Betty Hanger became Mrs. Livingston E. Jones on August 12 in North Carolina. They will live in Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania. Sudie Clark Hanger was in the wedding and Betsy Gilmer Tremain went down for the big event.

Caro Quinn Foster had a daughter on June 23. She is named Kathryn Maureen (Kathie).

Another new baby is reported for Edna Suann Carter about two months ago; which sex not stated, but it gives her two boys and two girls. Isn't that wonderful?

A brand new house is reported by Peggy Cunningham Allen in Knoxville, Tennessee. Peggy says: "My two offspring, Mardee and Robbie, another year as recording secretary of the League, and little gardening and golf bring me up-to-date on activities as of the last eight years." And she adds: "Bob's in the insurance business, but right now we're sweating out another army career." And aren't we all! Next week my husband and I and our two sons are driving to Denver for a couple of weeks, where he will take a Reserve Officer's training course. I've been dusting off uniforms and trying to convince myself that just because they get him back on an airfield doesn't mean they'll try to keep him there. A life in mining seems very stable in comparison.

Peggy said she saw Maggie Dunbar Pence from Phoenix at the Junior League Conference at Sun Valley in May. "Also many other S. B. C. alumnae, all boasting marriage, children, and some added poundage." According to my records, this is the first news of Maggie since 1943, so won't you let me know if that is Phoenix, Arizona, or Pennsylvania, plus address?

Did many of you see the super-glamour bathing suit photograph of Barbara Freking on the cover of Collier's in July? This reported that "Freak" is now in Hollywood acting in movies, radio, and television!

A letter from Eloise English Davies to Dan Boone at S. B. C. says: "I applied for law school at Washington last spring, and was accepted, Then the Navy decided to close the air station here and ordered Tom to California in June. Now he has been brought back to Seattle after serving a tour of duty of one week in California. This time we hope we're back for two years. Fortunately, the University of Washington will welcome me back." She adds that she wishes all could meet her husband, Tom, and their three little boys.

We have a number of address unknowns on the records. I'd like to have Alice Williams Mighell's street address in Mobile, and word of any of the following would be much welcomed: Virginia Cummings Davis, Mary Belle Chilton Phillips, Olivia Crumpler Nolting, Pattie Rose Early Cleveland, Mary Arden Ewing, Glen Fulwilder, Nancy Gilbert Pugh, Maudie Headley Allen, Elizabeth Lesser Purviance, Nancy McIter Kemp, B. J. Walker Dalton, Ginny Wilkinson Swanson, and Barbara Williams Kees.

Remember that this is the only issue of the News that goes out to all alumnae. A contribution to the Fund will assure you of receiving the subsequent issues—filled with vital information of engagements, weddings, infants, vacations, new houses, and whathave-you. This last, also, I beg to remind you, is most timely and complete if you all keep me posted, via post card, letter or carrier pigeon. Thanks to those who did, and my regards and best wishes to all!

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER (Mrs. A. D. Matthai, Jr.) 20 Clinton Place, Utica 3, New York.

Fund Agent: ANNE McJunkin (Mrs. Frank E. Briber, Jr.) 6640 N. Elm Tree Road, Milwaukee 9, Wisconsin.

You nasty girls! This happens every year; nobody writes during the summer, so I bat zero on news in the one issue everybody gets. Anyhow thank you, Catharine "Skip" Bracher O'Connell for the solitary card returned, though I'm sorry its news isn't any happier. Okie has been alerted and is waiting to go back in the Air Corps. "Skip" feels like she's sitting on a keg of dynamite, not knowing when the word will come to rent the house and move. Elsie McCarthy Samson seems to feel a little insecure (militarily) about her husband, too, but not so definitely.

At least my roommates have kept in touch. Em and Nancy Pingree Drake took their vacation to St. Paul and briefly visited Anne McJunkin Briber en route. "Junk" had also recently seen Barbara Duncombe Lang who has a 10 months old daughter. "Junk's" children and new home seem to be keeping her well occupied and constantly surprised. They seem never sure what the kids or the garden will come up with next, but evidently the latter has produced all sorts of flowers, fruits, and vegetables.

Besides her trip this summer "Ping" has been working one morning a week as a soda jerker at the hospital canteen and as a volunteer at the maternal health clinic. She has also been serving on the Board of the Planned Parenthood League, a situation she considers somewhat of a joke. For reasons why, send "Junk" a contribution and receive your next installment of the News.

Meanwhile Fay Martin Chandler has been enjoying her summer at Nantucket where she had a surprise visit from Pat Robineau Van Devere, who "looked fine and as usual was full of news," none of which was imparted to me. Earlier Fay had been to a week of the A.D.A. summer school in Bryn Mawr and really felt back in the groove listening to lectures and taking notes. Now she will be busy getting settled in a new house in Brookline which they bought to take care of the present and possible future expansions as Al teaches at M.I.T.

Another recent investor in real estate is Sarah "Ouija" Adams Bush who is very pleased with their new house in Dallas. An early summer card said she had seen Bonilee-Key Garrett and Mary Love Ferguson Sanders in Fort Worth, and also Dot Long Cousins at a Junior League Meeting. Dot has two cute little boys.

On one of our business trips I stopped in to see Frances Gregg Petersmeyer. She had been to Memphis where her sister was Queen of the Cotton Festival and where they were festive to the point of exhaustion, but Frances said it was delightful to be tired from things other than babies and the Bendix. I had been preceded by visits from Karen Norris Sibley and Betty Weems Westfeldt. Karen was on her way back to Atlanta from a Maine vacation, looking rested and much the same as six years ago except for a becoming short hair-do. She had seen Mary Law Taylor and described her as the world's most enthusiastic mother. Weems was in New York for an Executive Council meeting of the United World Federalists. Gregg says she is still utterly engrossed in this cause for world government and with enthusiasm as intense and contagious as ever. She has been doing a good job for them for several years.

I am now (at this paragraph) in Baltimore and have just talked to Page Ruth Foster. Before I report any of her news on others I want to give you the belated but official poop on Page's son, "Robin," who was born September 22 last year, just before 1 got married, and was never justly treated in print for that reason. His real name is John Robinson Foster and is now a big healthy boy. Page and Jim have had their first vacation since they got married and had a wonderful time in Provincetown. She told me that Harriet Pullen Phillips is taking a late vacation to Asheville and that Frances-Scott "Scottie" Simmons McConnell has moved to Chapel Hill where she is studying for a post graduate degree-in something scientific we can be certain but Page wasn't exactly sure what. She also told me that Anne Noyes is still doing interesting legal work in Washington, and that Jane Gregory Moore is in Richmond, Virginia, where her husband is practicing.

I hear, too, that Betty Schmeisser Nelson had a baby girl in the spring, and that's the news from this city.

If this letter bears a somewhat desperate tone it is because I became apartmentless on September 14. However, if anybody feels like writing me my family (address above) will be glad to deliver all mail to whatever park bench we have set up residence.

I received a newsy letter from Pat Whitaker Waters in answer to an S.O.S. I sent her. Says she: "I saw several alumnae at a tea that our club gave for Dr. Anne Gary Pannell. Dotty Denny Sutton (who is a most capable president) did a grand job of arranging the tea. Jane Rice McPherson, Ginny Lee Griffith Morton, Jinx Griffin Hilbert were there. Libby Vanghn Bishop was visiting Jane and Dykie Watts was in town, having recently returned from Japan. She said she saw Crump while she was there. Betty Farinholt Cockrill came up from Annapolis for the tea. It was really very gay . . . Ginny Lee has moved into a larger house and has gotten settled . . ." Pat herself has been very busy, also her son Johnny who was in a fashion show and performed like an old hand at it.

DOROTHEA POTTER TEIPEL
Daughter of Ginny Hall and Carl Teipel

B. J. Rodgers Hammond was in town last month and we had a nice visit together. I finally met her little girl, Holly, who is adorable and made a big hit with my husband. They chatted together while B. J. told me how she and her husband are redecorating (including papering and wood panelling) their new house all by themselves. It sounds stunning, but I don't know which I am more impressed by, the decor or the manual labor!

Ginny Hall Teipel spent the afternoon with me yesterday and after several hours of delightful conversation devoted solely to babies and Ginny and Carl's new house which they are also redecorating singlehanded (in the most ultra-ultra fashion) we finally got down to S. B. talk, She was about to see Dottie Tobin Ayres who has a fabulous modern house in Essex Fells, New Jersey. Ginny also said that Carol Myers Hunter and husband are building a new house in Hilton Village, Virginia. E. B. Duval hasn't written recently as she was having a wonderful and long vacation from her museum job, where she lectures to children and adult groups. We tried to get Sydney Holmes Bales to come in town too, but her schedule is rather confusing these days. Bill, her husband, has a very good new job as news writer for NBC and has to be at the studios at 5:00 a. m. to prepare the early morning reports, which is pretty hectic what with the Korean situation.

Mimi Ethridge Booth has moved to Tampa, Florida, where George's office has been transferred. I just spoke to her father who tells me they have found a nice spacious apartment there.

Annabelle Forsch ran into Tina White at the beach last week. She said Tina was looking wonderful and is enjoying her job in personnel at Sterns. Tina said that Leslie Herrick Danford is living in Jacksonville, Florida, these days. We are all (Annabelle, Tina and 1) going to have lunch together soon, so maybe I'll have more news about S. B. '44 next time.

OUR FAR-FLUNG ALUMNAE . . .

Marge Willetts' post cards from a tour of Europe which includes England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and France. She saw Juanita Gans for an hour in Frankfurt, and mentions that Dykie Watts was touring Europe on her way back to the U. S. A. (re June column), but I can't figure out whether they saw each other somewhere there. Anyhow, Dykie plans to drive west with her and give her a hand in running Marge's animal clinic in L. A. when they get back.

Sally Lerner David and Alan are touring France. They left the U. S. in July on the Mauretania.

Pat Stickney is also touring Europe this summer no doubt among other things in the interest of Art. I hear she has been doing some very good paintings in Ohio.

Cornelia Sadousky Niemann (ex '48) is honeymooning through the U. S. A. in their new Chevrolet convertible. After October 15 they will be living in Palm Beach where Don has a teaching position at the Palm Beach Country Day School. RECENT ARRIVALS . . .

Elizabeth Stuart Meyer and Anne Kimbrough Meyer on May 15! Fence Williams and Vincent Meyer are the Mama and Papa.

Terence Robert Anderson!!! and other exclamations of delight! He was born June 29 and looks for the moment like Winston Churchill, without the cigar.

Class Secretary: ARIANA JONES, 38 Wiggins Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: Mary Vanoeventer, 1101 Graydon Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

A very big thank you to all who wrote me about your summer doings. To go way back into summer—to June—I would like to introduce a new junior member of the class, Robert Brink Feuer, son of Peggy Brink Feuer, who arrived on June 2.

Coming along to July—on the 15th, Rosemary Ashby and David Dashiell, Jr., were married. Mary Lou Holton and Noma "Candy" Greene were two of her bridesmaids and of course flocks of Sweet Briarers attended the wedding. "Rosie" and David spent their honeymoon in Bermuda.

Elizabeth "Tib" Foree's engagement to Charles Browder of Sweetwater, Tennessee, was announced in July. They plan to be married in the fall.

Mary Lou Holton received her M. A. in French from the University of Michigan in June, and was appointed Assistant Professor of French at the University of Toledo. She took the summer off to vacation before returning to the university and first visited Norfolk for "Rosie's" wedding. Then she flew to Alabama to spend a week with Caroline Rudulph Sellers at her farm outside Montgomery. Bess Pratt was there at the same time. In August Mary Lou was off to Canada for a two weeks fishing trip with her family. And in the early fall she plans to squeeze in a trip to New York.

"Candy" Greene writes that she is doing publicity for Reynolds Tobacco in the Norfolk area. She saw Anne Ouens Mueller who visited Norfolk en route to San Francisco where she joined her Navy husband. Anne flew ont with her new baby, Shelley, and her two year old daughter, Sharon.

Latest word from Lucy Charles Jones Bendall is that she has a new son, as of August 25, named Gordon Pannill. Also, a new arrival at Jean Pollard Kline's is John Woodson, born August 3.

Jane Pickens Church writes that Herbert has been called to active duty in the Navy Air Corps as of September 15. Their son, Jim, is now about a year and a half and is very blond with blue eyes.

Fllie Clement Littleton writes that her two daughters are thriving. They are aged one and two and the next best thing to twins and so much easier for Mama! Freddy has finished law school and is working in Philadelphia. They hope his job will be law and not the Navy again. Ellie reports that Betsy Gurley Hewson's daugter is a darling and a cute combination of Bets and "T." Polly Kent Page's daughter, Elizabeth Wilmer, was born last winter. Polly also has a son, Robby, who is about two.

Bea Dinguell Loos and Dick were in New England this summer and visited Bets and Tommy Hewson in Nantucket. Bea also stopped to see Leila Fellner Piel and her daughter, Madeline, in Connecticut. Bea saw Helen Graeff one week end in June and reports that "Graeffie" still loves her work in a church in Danville.

Ellen Robbins Red and David are back from Mexico and all settled in their new house which David designed, contracted, and even helped build. It is perfect—even air conditioning!

Polly Vandeventer is back from a six weeks trip to Europe which grew into a four months' tour. She visited Italy, France, Switzerland, England, and Scotland.

The most "foreign" place I saw this summer was Cape Cod. Now my sun tan's fading and that seems a long time ago. Georgianna "Georgie" Ellis visited me over Labor Day and I do envy her with some of her vacation still to come. She is planning to be at the shore with her family for several weeks.

Class Secretary: Audri y Lahman, 4550 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. Fund Agent: Marguerite Rucker (Mrs. Tazewell Ellett, III), 1003 Grove Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

'Twas really grand to hear so much good news from so many of you about jobs, trips, engagements, weddings, and babies.

Among recent brides is Martha Garrison who was married to Charles W. Anness in June. They honeymooned at Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, and are now getting settled in their Cincinnati apartment.

On September 5 Ginny Holmes became Mrs. Arch Turner in Memphis. Among the bridesmaids were Bea Backer Simpson. Eve Godebaux Hirsch, and Ann Paxson. Bea and her husband, Charles, planned their vacation to coincide with Ginny's wedding.

Ann has been doing job analysis work that has kept her traveling around the country for the last year and a half. She's looking forward to staying in the home office of her company in Baltimore for a while this fall. Her travels have even taken her to Texas where she saw Gloria McElroy. Gloria has been studying for her M.S. in French at the University of Texas, Martha Sue Skinner was married to Robert Logan September 15, after spending the summer in Europe, Martha Schmidheiser was in the wedding party.

Pat Cansler wrote of her wonderful-sounding summer in Europe. Her most important news, however, is that she has just announced her engagement to James Robert Covington of Charlotte. Bob is promotion manager of Station W'BJ in Charlotte. Their wedding is planned for December 1, and already they have a darling house that will have a goest room for all Briarites who come to Charlotte.

Evie Sharp reported that she was to sail for Europe on the Ile de France September 12. She received her Master's Degree in Political Science from Wellesley last June and plans to continue her study at the Sorbonne this year, as well as visit friends in Luxembourg and Austria. Her sister, Josephine, who is a junior at Sweet Briar will join her next summer for a tour through Europe.

Nela Wattley has returned from her year abroad, and has been visiting friends in upstate New York, as well as Mayde Ludington Henningsen before returning to New Orleans. Mayde reports that Victor William Henningsen III, who arrived in July, is growing by leaps and bounds and is keeping her very busy.

Patty Trangott Rixey and Jack have a son, John Barbaw Rixey, born July 17.

Eleanor Potts Snodgrass has a little girl, born August 30 in Norfolk. "Pottsie" wrote me the good news the very next day and sounded very, very happy.

Betsy Anderson Douglas has two little girls. Betsy Plunkett and Helen Pender Withers are working in Norfolk.

Rickey has been to Virginia Beach this summer and when she wrote me was about to begin teaching third grade in a country school near enough Richmond that she can commute.

Closey Faulkner will be teaching in one of Richmond's elementary schools after taking some education courses at the Richmond Professional Institute of William and Mary. Blair Graves is back at her job as music supervisor for three elementary schools in Roanoke.

Jane Ransom received her Master's Degree from Vanderbilt in June. While studying for it she worked for Theyer's Hospital in Nashville as a Bio-Chemist in the research department and loved it. She is planning to gn to Louisiana in October to see Diane King. Mary Jo visited Diane late this summer on her way to North Carolina on a vacation. They drove to El Dorado, Arkansas, to see Phil Thorpe Miller, and by luck, B'Lou Bruton Lyons was visiting Phil, so the four of them had a grand reunion. Nancy Moses has also been on a vacation to California and the Grand Canyon.

Meon wrote that she and Vickie Brock were about to try out their French on a trip to Quebec and Gaspe Peninsula. She's doing personnel work at the Chase National Bank and Westray Boyce is a personnel assistant for the Royal Liverpool Group (insurance company) so they often get together to compare notes.

Pat Goldin is now living in Summit, New Jersey and plans to job-hunt in the New York area.

Harold, Barbara and Martha Frye Terry will be living in Ridgefield, New Jersey, while Harold studies at Union Theological Seminary.

Probably many of you saw Look's recent feature on Jenne Belle's one-suitcase wardrobe for Europe.

Nan Steptoe is working for the State Department. She and Nancy Vaughn and I often bump into each other in the corridors or the cafeteria and exchange news on the spot.

Patty Damron is working for a law firm in Washington.

Liz Barbour Beggs has already assembled a wonderful collection of antiques in her Alexandria apartment.

As you perhaps already know, the contributions to the Alumnae Fund are to go for Faculty Salaries this year. Of course, your contribution brings you the next three issues of the Alumnae News free, so if you've enjoyed reading this news half as much as I've enjoyed collecting it, please contribute to the Alumnae Fund—and please send me your news!

Class Secretary: KATHARINE HART, 3133 Monument Avenue, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ALICE TROUT, 1301 Franklin Road, Roanoke, Virginia.

This summer was filled with almost as many weddings as last, but the European trips were few.

Bunny Barnett was married to Walter H. Brown on June 3. Alice Trout and Stevie Stevens were bridesmaids and Patsy and Sandy Robinson and Sue Corning were there for the festivities. Bunny and Walter are now living in New York where Walter is with the New York Trust Company.

Marie Musgrove was married to Bill Pierce on June 10. Caroline Casey, Judy Easley, Betsy Dershuck and Flip Eustis were bridesmaids. I was on hand too, and we really had quite a reunion. Marie is living in Charlottesville while Bill finishes law school.

Nancy Houriet was married to Gary S. Cotton on June 23 and is now living in an apartment in Cleveland.

Carrie Beard was married on June 17 to Steve de Clerque. Anne Higgins, Betty Ruth Cleaver and Fritzie Duncombe Lynch were among the bridesmaids. Bertie Pew, Sally Melcher Jarvis and Lindsay Coon Robinson were among the guests. Fritzie and her husband, Jack, then drove south, stopping in Baltimore to see Bill and June Eager Finney, and in Washington to see Sam and Peggy Quynn Maples. Fritzie and Jack drove on to Charlottesville where I met them and we also saw Marie Musgrove Pierce. Fritzie says she is Program Chairman of the Chicago Sweet Briar Alumnae Club and as such sees Ann Henderson and Jody McCarthy. Jody is engaged to Wes Whitman.

Mimi Powell was married to Dr. Russell J. Leonard on August 23. Frances Pope was in the wedding and Ann Doar Jones says Carolyn Cannady Evans and Emily Pruitt Jones were planning to be there.

On August 26 Betty Wellford was married to Paul Bennett. Caroline Casey, Jean Taylor, Sallie Legg, and Jackie Jacobs Buttram were bridesmaids. Betty and Paul will live in Richmond where Paul will work on his Masters in Biology and Betty will teach third grade at St. Christopher's School for Boys.

Mary Frances Brown was married on August 31. She became the bride of Donnell Ballard of Texas, Marilyn Hopkins was maid of honor and Sally Strickland was a bridesmaid. Mary Fran and Don will live in Ypsilanti, Michigan, where Don is a chemist at Kaiser-Frazier.

Kitty Hardwick was married September 9 to Hugh Efrid. Bertie Pew, Sally Ayres Shroyer, Peggy Quynn Maples, and Maggie Woods Tillett were bridesmaids. Kitty and Hugh will live in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Lizzy Hancock soent her summer taking courses in math and biology in preparation to teaching them at Hathaway-Brown in Cleveland this fall.

Betsy Brown arrived home in July after a grand six months tour of Europe. Polly Plummer also arrived home in July after spending a year at the University of Geneva.

Betty Blair Gosling and her husband spent the summer taking a cruise to South America and will be back at the University of Michigan this fall.

Evelyn Lee Kagey Johnson has a daughter, Virginia, born May 4. She and her daughter visited Mary Fran Brown Ballard in Detroit in July.

Marilyn Hopkins is engaged to James E. Bamborough and plans to be married in October.

Rosie Holmes and Bertie Pew were the only two who went back to Sweet Briar for graduation.

Anne Fiery took a trip out west with her family this summer.

I saw Alice Trout and Mary Graham Hull in July. Alice finishes her technicians course in October. She is learning to play golf in her spare time. I also visited Betsy Dershuck to try to get some news, but Betsy had none. She is looking for a job for this winter.

Preston Hodges Hill spent her summer teaching Vacation Bible School.

teaching Vacation Bible School.

Ruthie Garrett was a councilor at a camp in Ontario, Canada.

Ellen Ramsay took a trip to Florida after she had to give up her plans for a European Patsy Davin Robinson is kept busy with her volunteer work but she and Sandy took time off to meet Bill and Judy Baldwin Waxter in Ligonier, Pennsylvania, for Labor Day.

Please, all of you, send me news at any time and don't wait for a card from me.

1950

Class Secretary: LACY SKINNER, 11 Seneca Street, Rye, New York.

Fund Agent: DIANA DENT, Old Church Road, Greenwich, Connecticut.

Since that momentus day, June 5, the class of '50 has scattered itself from one end of the earth to the other. For some—a goodly number if the truth will out—the wedding bells have rung. Others are frantically mopping the brow over that new-fangled contraption the typewriter. The more ambitious members of the class are already drawing comfortable pay checks, and then there are some of us who come home from the beach each day complaining of eye strain and exhaustion. (I've had the worst eye strain lately!)

The wedding bells started ringing in June and there seems to be no let up in sight. On June 30 Elaine Adams was married to Nathaniel G. Harrison in Tallahassee, Florida. Shirley Long Collins was in the wedding party and Peg Gilliam and Louise Currey attended

July saw Mary Lou Illges married to Lieut. Allan Brown, U. S. A. Nancy Storey was on hand to witness the ceremony in Ponte Vedra, Florida,

On August 19 Bill Bailey, Nan Nelson, Helen Missires, and I atteneded Marilyn Ackerson's marriage to Hank Barker of Bristol, Tennessee. Kitty Barker was a bridesmaid. After a lovely reception at the Ackersons Marilyn and Hank made a successful getaway toward New York in none other than the black Buick with the Tennessee license. For dinner that night the newly marrieds feasted themselves on shrimp cocktail, roast beef and wine. How do I know? It's quite elemental, my dear Dr. Watson. We bumped into them at Howard Johnsons on route 125, New Jersey. Mr. Ripley, you've got yourself a new believe-it-or-not.

September has become a serious rival to June as far as weddings are concerned. On September 2, in Rockhill, South Carolina, Sally Lea, Ann McNear, and Kitty Barker were bridesmaids in Garland Hunter's wedding. Nicholas Davies was the lucky groom. Report has it that they live in Charlottesville while Nick continues his studies.

In Winnetka, Illinois, also on September 2, Dain Fuller became Mrs. Daniel Searle.

Congratulations to all the bridegrooms and—well, I never have known what to say to the bride—good luck and best wishes from all of '50.

As for engagements, Nancy Storey writes that Maggie Craig will be married to Sam Sanders of New Orleans. The wedding date hasn't been set as yet.

From abroad comes word that a group of Sweet Briar 1950's are helping to further the International situation. (Free interpretation to that statement permissible!) Helen Missires saw Frances Martin sail from New York in July. Departing on the same ship, by the way, were the Misses Muncy, Newland and von Briesen. Dolly Clark writes that roommate Lola and Sally Lane got back from abroad the first of August "in fine shape with much loot!"

When last seen and heard from Diana Dent was in Geneva where she hoped to hear Mrs. Pannell address an International assembly.

While abroad "Presto" (Ann Preston) discovered lying dormant within her a fascination for Roman ruins. Amazing course that C. C.!

Mrs. Crisp reports that Mary Rose has been enjoying the social life of various diplomatic circles in London, Paris, and Rome while on a "Grand Tour" of England and the Continent.

News from the home front seems to revolve around secretarial schools, summer refresher courses, and early starts on careers. Merry Moore writes that for her, buying wedding presents constitutes full-time employment. Aye, Aye, Merry. That it do!

Nancy Storey soent the summer months in Alabama Polytechnic Institute where she took directed teaching in order to teach forty fourth graders in Columbus this winter. (Now don't ask them to explain Myth the first day, Nan!)

Nan Nelson is currently featured in an old revival at the Katherine Gibbs theater entitled "But Miss Stroodle, my machine is jammed," and Bill Bailey and Sally Bianchi have been faithfully pounding away at home town typing schools. Sally and Peachy Lillard will crash the Yale Drama School this fall

Boola, Boola—Boola, Boola!

Dee Dietrich attended summer school at George Washington University and was graduated in September. Betty Todd, out in Cincinnati, is working for her father in Todd Brothers Women's Specialty Shoppe.

As most of you know, Judi Campbell came east to New York immediately following graduation to start work as a Guest Editor for the Mademoiselle College Special. Congratulations, Judi, for the splendid job you did as Contributing Editor.

This seems to be about "all the news that's fit to print"—not that some of the news you sent me wasn't fit to print, but you know what I mean. Keep up the good work, 1950. I love hearing from you.

Sweet Briar and Its Founders

by Dr. Meta Glass

Miss Glass was the guest speaker at the Founders' Day Ceremony October 25, 1950

Following are excerpts from her talk,

The FEEL that I must give warning to my hearers that most probably I can not tell this story without mentioning, or implying at least, emotion, devotion and ideals. I tried for twenty years to tell it without them and only succeeded in filling waste baskets with my efforts.

We shall go all the way back to Elijah Fletcher, one of the large Fletcher family of Ludlow, Vermont, who brought with him to Virginia, when he came to teach a country school, his diploma from the University of Vermont—after which the one that each of you hopes to get is modelled. He married Maria Antoinette Crawford and lived off to the east of Route 29 north of Amherst at Tusculum.

Elijah made money—not, I venture to think, teaching school—but investing in land, farming, operating a sort of private bank until, when he died, he left an appreciable fortune for that day and over 8,000 acres of land in the county and in Lynchburg (I used to go coasting as a child in Fletcher's field there). He and Maria had two sons and two daughters. Both girls married and continued to live in Amherst; one at Mt. St. Angelo across the way, and the other, Indiana, here in Sweet Briar House.

Indiana married the Reverend James Henry Williams, an Episcopal minister from New York. They had one daughter, Daisy, whose thoughtful and demure face you see every time you go into the Daisy Williams gymnasium. Indiana, who was called Indy by her family, and Miss Indy by the rest of Amherst county up to the time of her death, and since th n by generations of Sweet Briar students, outlived all her family, parents, brothers, sisters, husband and daughter.

Daisy was born in 1867 here and died in 1884 at sixteen. The family spent about three fourths of the year at Sweet Briar and the winter months in New York City. When she was at home she was taught by her mother. When in New York she attended a private school. The story goes that it was the school which figures in All This and Heaven Too. She loved everything about this place, and we have her diaries for three years full of what was planted, when things bloomed, what Logan, the coachman, was doing-almost every day some note about Logan—when the family went into Lynchburg, news items about Aunt Lilybell, her name for her aunt Elizabeth, full of affection and occasionally a bit of fun made of some of Aunt Lilybell's peculiarities with a refreshing bit of mild malice in so admirable a tale as the entries make. There are many momentos of her left; clothes—all her stockings had holes in the heels—toys, watch, a little paper book she made for herself when she was eight and called Chatterbox, illustrated in most amusing fashion. A ghost figures in two drawings and he bears a striking likeness to a nursing bottle. She had friends—only girls, so far as she mentions in the diaries, went to concerts and plays, shopped at Lord and Taylors, and seemed fully satisfied with her parents as her most constant companions. When separated from either she wrote often, in German to her mother to show how well she was progressing. Selections from Daisy's Diary, published a few years ago, makes an hour's pleasant reading for its placidity and its revelations.

After Daisy's death, followed by that of Mr. Williams, Indiana spent lonely years in that big house thinking of the school that was to be founded there for young girls and women, and gathering things that she thought would be useful when it was founded. She died in 1900, leaving all her property for this college. She made a strikingly wise will, not hamstringing the development of the school by limitations. She made no conditions governing the bequest, but she indicated that she hoped the school would never be moved from Sweet Briar, and that its name would not be changed.

The charter for the Institute was granted in 1901. Miss Indy designated a group of Trustees who were to appoint a Board of Directors for the College, and the first directors were all Episcopalians, because of the connections of the Williams family. Bishop Randolph was made Chairman. The composition of the Board, when it was bound by no restrictions of the will, makes it noteworthy that at its first meeting it decided to make the Institute independent, not attached to any denomination, believing that it could develop more usefully if it were not under church control. Of course independence has its price. Such an institution can expect no financial assistance from church or state. It must depend for support upon people who believe it is doing a useful job and want to help it. But I believe that those who have taught and studied at Sweet Briar have been glad of the Board's decision.

As always in a group, there have been some persons in the Board whose direct and long-continued service to the college makes their names stand out. Bishop Randolph, the Reverend Carl Grammer, the Reverend Arthur Gray, the Reverend Theodore M. Carson, Mr. N. C. Manson Mr. Fergus Reid, all carried much of the weight of founding and developing the college. The Board named the buildings, as you will recognize, to show their appreciation of these men, not because these men had given the money for their erection, but they had given themselves and their wisdom and experience. The money came from current funds, Miss Indy's legacy and miscellaneous gifts. Mr. Reid gave the library, but not the building bearing his

The college opened with 51 students and 11 faculty members in September, 1906, under the presidency of Mary K. Benedict, a native of Missouri, tall, blond, calm with a Vassar A. B. and a Yale Ph. D., just 32 years old. Of course she set much of the pattern of Sweet Briar's development, and she was insistent upon high academic goals and sound scholarship, and a simple, purposeful and at the same time happy life for the group. The college, when it opened, was contained in Sweet Briar House. Academic, Gray, Carson and the Refectory, with faculty and staff residences in the four older brick houses on Faculty Row. Randolph, Manson and Carl Grammer were built during Miss Benedict's administration, the first ten years of Sweet Briar's life. She was adored by the students, and apparently could inspire them, discipline them. or play with them and be equally accepted in each role. She has not lost her interest in the college, and many of you saw her on this platform last commencement. She resigned in 1916 to study medicine and, though she is known everywhere else as Dr. Benedict, Sweet Briar liking to call its presidents by the common title of women, still calls her Miss Benedict.

On her resignation in 1916 the Board selected Dr. Emilie McVea, who was then Dean at the University of Cincinnati. The development of the college went on along the lines of its accepted pattern. It had opened, as so many colleges have, with instruction on two levels, receiving girls in the Academy not yet ready for college and in the College freshmen who were ready. One of the early developments in Miss McVea's administration was the discontinuance of the Academy as preparation of girls for college throughout the country became more satisfactory, and as Sweet Briar had more students on the college level to take all the places available. This was one of the particularly difficult periods for the college financially and, at the same time when World War I ended, as so often happens after a war, there were greatly increased demands on the college to take more students.

Sweet Briar had, of course, to earn its public recognition and while Miss McVea was president the college was admitted to the Southern Association of Colleges, listed by the Association of American Universities and accepted by the American Association of University Women. These recognitions established its place in the educational world and called the attention of the public to its excellencies, thus attracting more applicants for admission.

It seemed imperative for the college to expand physically, even if capital had to be borrowed. During the later years of Miss McVea's administration Fergus Reid and Fletcher Halls, the Infirmary, the four stucco houses on Faculty Row and Hill House were built and the college reached its present capacity for students. In twenty years it had doubled its physical plant and increased its student body more than tenfold. Of course, the faculty had grown also, as had the academic facilities but not so rapidly as the student body. Due to ill health Miss McVea resigned in 1925 after a nine year term of service. The College was 19 years old and had had two presidents.

The next administration, mine, lasted 21 years and was largely occupied with adjustments and digestion of the rapid growth preceding it. The tasks seemed to be to increase the number of faculty members and to remedy as rapidly as possible, by recurring increases their inadequate salaries; to provide a library adequate both in books and building to the demands of the still developing curriculum; to bring to efficiency, as far as space would allow, work in the sciences; to raise an endowment to furnish a measure of security in these expensive developments; to lead the college out into the world in an increased degree, since World War I had opened the avenues along which we are now moving so hurriedly; to find housing and playing fields for physical education and the sports, both of which were distressingly cramped; to bring Sweet Briar students into the currents of the life of student organizations in this country and abroad; to find ways and means for student assistance by scholarships and remunerative work on a country campus.

The faculty was increased from 37 to 57. Other staff was also increased, especially in the office of admission, the library and the establishment of the office of Buildings and Grounds. A service of inestimable value was begun when Elsetta Gilchrist, now Mrs. Barnes, gave her services as Consulting Landscape Architect, which work she has kept up to this day.

Mr. Fergus Reid gave the Mary Helen Cochran Library in memory of his mother, and the Carnegie Corporation. assisting our family budget, helped raise the number of books from 11,000 to 62,000, and the maintenance staff from one to five trained persons with student assistants.

The extensive building program of 1924-25, the last of Miss McVea's administration, left a $250,000 debt. but that was paid off, and by three campaigns for funds and annual giving by friends, especially the alumnae, the endowment came from $131,000 to some $960,000. The students who were in college from 1922 to 1931 raised the money for the Daisy Williams Gymnasium, with some assistance from other college funds.

The scholarship program was extended by an appropriation from current funds, and it has been supplemented from time to time by the highly valued named scholarships which you see listed in the catalogue, many more of which would be highly helpful.

In 1932, when Sweet Briar was already sending students to France—and one to Germany, the arrangement for Sweet Briar study at St. Andrews was consummated, and it is a delight for Sweet Briar to welcome this year the first St. Andrews student to come to us. Now that Sweet Briar administers for the benefit of so many American colleges the Junior Year in France, and has on its campus students from other countries, as well as having in other countries 11 Sweet Briar students, we can truly say that the international current flows both ways. In 1946 Miss Lucas established the Nan and Nancy Askew Scholarship to bring to Sweet Briar a student from the Far East, and there have been students from China and Viet Nam holding this scholarship.

After this long administration came under Martha B. Lucas four years of vivid emphasis on current problems in this upset world; problems at home and abroad, academic, racial, social. Her administration is another demonstration of how Sweet Briar has lived consciously in its own day and time as the years went along. And with its conscious participation in the life of its day Sweet Briar has uninterruptedly built its educational program in sound fashion along the lines of its first chosen aimsa liberal education as a background for varying types of later life. A recognition of achievement in the success of this program came under Miss Lucas in the installation of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter at Sweet Briar two years ago. During this same period there was also increase in the number of faculty members, in faculty and staff salaries, in the book collection of the Mary Helen Cochran Library. In the adoption of College Board tests for all incoming students, and the extension of the number of departments requiring comprehensive examinations for graduation Sweet Briar took two steps to strengthen the effectiveness of its work. For the promotion of fruitful relationships between all four groups working for Sweet Briar's good there was set up in 1949 the Joint Council of Sweet Briar College, made up of three representatives each from the Board of Overseers, the Faculty, the Alumnae and the Students, with the President of the College as Moderator and the Dean as an invited member. The carrying out of the further building program has been blocked by lack of funds in so expensive a period of building.

Only one generation of students had the privilege of knowing President Lucas, but the memory of their sovivid president will not pale, and she endeared herself likewise to many alumnae who were here before her administration.

Without in any way belittling the services of those not mentioned, some names have come during the years to stand out in the minds of all Briarites. And also, as with the Board, I shall not mention any persons now serving the college. From the early days, and perhaps over a longer period than any other employee of the college William B. Dew kept Sweet Briar's finances in order, met and sent on their way the students of year after year, planted trees—all the figs and the white pines in front of Academic and many more—oversaw the maintenance of the physical plant and the farm, was the post master, and with it all was a personal friend of everybody on campus, comforting them and teasing them and taking care of them in likely and unlikely circumstances.

A beloved Briarite who served long was Dr. Mary Harley, who gave the first dose of medicine given at the college and spanked hysterics out of countless misses and was always inquired about by alumnae whenever they saw people from the campus. She still is a part of the college for, though she resigned years ago, she comes back when she can between visits to the blue monkeys in Africa and friends scattered over the United States. And there are many others . . .

The other group which must be mentioned is the students, both those in college and those who have been and now have another title. By being students they make the college fulfill its mission or they make it a travesty. By the quickened life they learn here to put to use in whatever they do after they leave they justify it or they take from its effectiveness. By their way of doing things they indicate whether Sweet Briar has increased in them a proper sense of values, an appreciation of the validity of work—in short, what we pray for in the prayer for Our Country, "honorable industry, sound learning and pure manners." What kind of women they seem to be to the people who know them is perhaps their greatest gift to the college, but not their only gift. Sweet Briar students have given her from the very first year of her existence of their substance and of their service to increase her usefulness and the public recognition of what the college can do and does do and will do. What more can any founder do?

Do you not feel that we are rich indeed? That we can do what Sweet Briar needs, that it is the natural thing to do, and do you not catch a glimpse of what a rewarding job it is in the doing?

Now comes one to guide the college who seems to us to be of the stuff that a college should be made of, able, educated in the true sense of the word, courageous, so human and so alive. There are good days ahead of us.

The cover picture taken last November shows Mrs. Pannell selecting apples from the orchard with the help of "Farmer" Joe Gilchrist, to send to the 79 students from 31 colleges and universities now studying in Paris with the Junior Year in France, administered by Sweet Briar since 1948.

The Manson Memorial Scholarship

What is it?

The Manson Memorial Alumnae Scholarship is a full tuition scholarship awarded each year to an upperclass student of high academic standing who shows qualities of leadership and makes some real contribution to the student activities.

Who was Mr. Manson?

Mr. N. C. Manson (1858-1924) was the first legal counsel for the college and for years was chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors. He gave untiring devotion to the interests of Sweet Briar. Dr. Mary K. Benedict said of him, "No one contributed more to the founding of the college in an essential way than did Mr. Manson." He came closer to the students than anyone else who has not been actually a member of the faculty. It was natural, therefore, that at his death, the alumnae loved him so much that they wished to commemorate his service to the college.

Where do we get the money?

The money raised from Club projects is put into the Manson Fund. At present this amounts to $3,536.65 and the interest on it this year will be $170.82. The $529.18 necessary to make up the full tuition is taken from the annual Alumnae Association budget. With the growth of the capital, this amount will be lessened each year.

What Clubs have contributed during the past year and how.

MANSON SCHOLAR - 1950

Margaret Ann Chisholm, of Laurel, Mississippi, is the current Manson Scholar, and certainly fulfills the specifications set forth by the Alumnae Association. Peggy has ranked her class scholastically every year. She was a sophomore house president and a member of Q. V. In her junior year she was elected to Tau Phi and the Joint Council and was a member of the Judicial Board. In her senior year she is chairman of the Judicial Board and again a member of the Joint Council. She won Freshman and Junior honors and her name appears regularly on the Dean's list.

How many Manson Scholarships have been awarded?

Since 1925 when the Manson Scholarship was established there have been 28 girls to whom the scholarship has been awarded. All those who have experienced it have expressed a deep and sincere appreciation for having been chosen the recipient.

Who selects the Manson Scholar?

The Scholarship Committee of the College decides who the recipient of this award shall be, basing their choice on the statement set forth by the Alumnae Association.

Dr. Connie M. Guion

Appointed Member of the Board of Overseers

1911 — Dr. Guion as a member of the Sweet Briar Faculty 1951 — Dr. Guion as a member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers

EVER since the appointment of Dr. Connie M. Guion to membership on the Board of Overseers, announcement of which was made in November, there has been widespread rejoicing over Sweet Briar's good fortune. Alumnae and faculty members who know Dr. Guion and interested citizens in Lynchburg and elsewhere, some of whom are not personally acquainted with her, have expressed warm approval.

What is this new Board member like?

As a good many alumnae well remember, Miss Guion was one of the liveliest members of the faculty when Sweet Briar was very young. Two years after her graduation from Wellesley, she came here to teach chemistry and physics from 1908 to 1913, but her activities were by no means limited to the classroom or laboratory. She was instrumental in establishing the Students' Book Shop with its aim, then as now, of turning its proceeds into scholarships. As an honorary member of Paint and Patches she was adviser and director for many a performance staged by the Ripplers and the Merry Jesters, clubs which flourished under the spirit of competition.

Beloved by her students, Miss Guion was always ready for outdoor fun, such as riding trips into the mountains or camping overnight under the windbreak. "State" clubs were popular in those days, and Miss Guion was an ardent member of the North Carolina club.

The class of 1913 dedicated its Briar Patch to the class sponsor, inscribing it as follows; "To Miss Connie M. Guion, our friend, comrade and ever-ready guide, we dedicate this, our senior year book, not in a spirit of formality, but as an expression of our love and admiration."

When she left Sweet Briar in 1913, Miss Guion entered the Medical School at Cornell University, from which she emerged as Dr. Guion four years later, graduating at the head of her class. After serving an interneship in Bellevue Hospital Dr. Guion began private practice in New York, where she has become recognized as one of the outstanding members of her profession.

Dr. Guion is chief of the general medical clinic at New York Hospital and she is also professor of clinical medicine at Cornell University Medical College, where she has been a member of the faculty for more than 20 years.

In recent years, a number of honors have come to Dr. Guion, the latest being a Wellesley scholarship endowment named for her, which is now being established. She was one of 11 women given honorary degrees by Wellesley at the 75th anniversary celebration, held in conjunction with the inauguration of President Clapp last March, and Dr. Guion was one of three luncheon speakers on that occasion. In January, 1949, she was one of 12 of "the world's outstanding women doctors from the United States, Canada, England and France" to be given Elizabeth Blackwell citations by Hobart and William Smith colleges.

Dr. Guion has by no means limited her interests and energies to her professional duties. She has served for several years as chairman of the compensation board for the Department of Labor, in New York. Active in the American Association of University Women, she has been a member of its committee to select recipients of international fellowships. She has also served on the scholarship committee at Cornell Medical College, and she was president, in 1946-47, of that institution's alumni association and chairman of the special gifts section of the Cornell fund campaign. She has also been active in Wellesley alumnae affairs, and keeps in close touch with Barnard and Connecticut College through alumnae and faculty friends, and with Vassar, where she once taught.

Dr. Guion returned to Sweet Briar on Founders' Day, 1945, her first visit in many years, to deliver the address when the Mary Kendrick Benedict Scholarship was presented to the college. Dr. Guion had served as faculty chairman on the scholarship committee, and devoted a great deal of time and action to raising funds for the scholarship.

Since that time, Dr. Guion has visited Sweet Briar several times, most recently at commencement in 1948. She has also sent gifts of books to the library from time to time.

Two of Dr. Guion's nieces, Alice Babcock Simons, '22g, and Margaret Newton, '34g, are Sweet Briar alumnae.

LETTER FROM MISS LONG

The Alumnae Association presented Miss Long with a silver tray on her retirement in June, 1950

"The lovely silver tray that the alumnae gave me last commencement is one of my most cherished possessions. Again, many thanks to the Association. In my little apartment the tray forms a perfect foundation for other pieces of a coffee service given to me by various groups of faculty and students. With such a wonderful ganging up see how it pays to retire. When Uncle John Reid received a silver bowl for his twenty-five years or more of vigorous gardening at Sweet Briar he said, 'Come Saturday evenin' and I's through my work, I's goin' to set in the sun and hold my silver in my lap and watch it glitter.' I, too, like to watch mine glitter. Do drop in, any of you, and let me pour you a cup of coffee.

"Aside from the remoteness from Sweet Briar, Lexington is a delightful place to live. The proximity of a big university offers many opportunities: library facilities. lectures, concerts, and sports. I am carrying on many of my old interests, like reading Boswell and Melville, but practicing some new activities, too. I find new recipes in cook books quite exciting but I prefer the ones marked 'never fail.'

"There are two distinct differences between my old and new way of living: my days are unscheduled and I am not on a single committee. I enjoy this freedom. However, as the world situation becomes more and more grim, I shall, like all of you, want to assume some definite personal responsibility.

"With all good wishes,

Yours sincerely,
DEE LONG."

President Pannell Publishes Guide

Dr. Anne G. Pannell, president of Sweet Briar College, and Dr. Dorothea Wyatt, professor of history at Goucher College—and both active AAUW branch workers—have collaborated in the preparation of a guide entitled CAN-ADA: AMERICA'S NORTHERN NEIGHBOR. The close cooperation between the United States and Canada, developed during World War II and continued in the present crisis, makes particularly timely this guide which will take you into a fuller understanding of Canadian geography, economics, and history. Dr. Pannell and Dr. Wyatt, both experts in things Canadian, have made the process both simple and attractive by the direct and provocative treatment of their topic. This is a guide built with understanding of the problem of the small branch but with a skill which will command the respect of experts.

CANADA: AMERICA'S NORTHERN NEIGHBOR is 25 cents and is available on request from the AAUW Publications Clerk, 1634 Eye Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Sweet Briar's Vocational Guidance and Placement Program

by HELEN K. MULL, Faculty Chairman,

Committee on Personnel and Vocational Guidance

FROM time to time in the past few years, Sweet Briar alumnae have no doubt been made aware that efforts were being made by the college to help its students find suitable positions, both paid and volunteer. At this time I should like to explain in some detail the present program of vocational guidance and placement work, particularly since this year for the first time the college is in a position to offer special assistance in placement to its alumnae.

The Committee on Personnel and Vocational Guidance is in charge of the program. This is a joint Faculty-Staff-Student committee of twenty-one members, fourteen of whom are students. It has a Faculty Chairman and a Student Chairman. It has also a special assistant, paid by the college, who is a member ex officio.

The work of the Committee is essentially threefold. It maintains personnel files; it brings job information to the students; and it lends assistance in placement.

The personnel files contain information about each student—her personal background, her interests, special training, work experience, vocational and regional preferences, personality ratings by instructors, and letters of recommendation. In cooperation with the Alumnae Office, similar files are being assembled for alumnae who indicate that they are interested in obtaining positions.

To make the students aware of the nature of different fields of work, the Committee secures representatives of various vocational and professional fields, who inform the group of students interested of the important aspects of the work, its requirements, and its rewards. Private interviews with the speakers are arranged for students who wish them. In recent years we have had forums on graduate study, on teaching, both public and private school, on nursery school work, on journalism, on marriage; speakers on secretarial work, nursing, the Ligon project on character education, W. A. V. E. S., on how to get a job-just to mention some of the fields covered. Apart from the yearly emphasis on graduate study and teaching, the Committee is governed in its choice of fields to be represented by current interests of the student body ascertained from the personnel files previously mentioned.

In connection with this informative function, the Committee publicizes its projects in the Sweet Briar News, on its bulletin board in Gray where attractive notices of vocational opportunities, forums, speakers, civil service examinations and all such matters are posted. Here the students also indicate by "signing up" whether they are interested in the particular activity posted; in, for example, the contest for special work with Mademoiselle or in the extracurricular typing and shorthand courses which the Committee has been arranging at a nominal fee. Last year about twenty students took typing and about five, shorthand. The opportunity to take such courses has been much appreciated, as the students realize that secretarial techniques often are an entering wedge to good positions for the holder of an A. B. degree.

This informative aspect of the work is greatly furthered by the Committee's special assistant, Miss Shirley Rosensteel, who holds her A. B. from Northwestern University and has done graduate work there along personnel lines. Miss Rosensteel holds regular office hours and helps students find information about jobs. The Office is well equipped with books and pamphlets to which the students may be directed. Indeed, the Office is always open and its library may be used at any time.

As to placement, the desired culmination of these efforts, it is a phase of our work which we hope will grow. At present, Miss Rosensteel informs suitable students when calls come in from prospective employers, and arranges

FREE ADVISORY AND PLACEMENT SERVICE FOR COLLEGE AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN

Sweet Briar Alumnae seeking employment in the New York area will be interested in the WOMAN'S PLACEMENT BUREAU, INC., 541 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK 22, N. Y. TELEPHONE: PL-8-2153.

This is a non-profit organization, incorporated in New York State, and a joint venture of leading women's colleges of the East and New York employers.

The Bureau will

- register, refer, and place applicants who are alumnae of member colleges;
- canvass business firms and professional organizations for job openings;
- c. promote the acceptance of trained women in responsible positions, irrespective of a college background;
- d. promote fields of employment for older women;
- act as the New York office of college placements bureaus.

You, a graduate of a cooperating institution, are invited to make use of this service.

interviews when employers come to the campus. Perhaps many of our alumnae, or their husbands, can help us by sending their notices of positions open to Miss Rosensteel. We should also greatly appreciate having them available (in person or through correspondence) for consultation by students who are considering entering their particular field.

To further the placement work, the college has this year become a member of the Woman's Placement Bureau, Inc., of 541 Madison Avenue, New York. This Bureau offers non-profit placement and advisory service to college and professional women. It maintains contact with employers; it lists graduating women and local alumnae referred by the placement bureaus of member colleges; it arranges forums at the request of member colleges, cnnducted by men and women prominent in their fields, who present to students the requirements of a job and the attributes necessary to success; it furnishes information on employment trends; and it acts as the college's New York placement office. I should like to call particular attention to its service to alumnae of member colleges, hoping that some of Sweet Briar's alumnae will avail themselves of it. The Bureau "assists alumnae and women with special training, experience or talent, in obtaining part or fulltime employment, (1) by providing a center where applicants can register, (2) by referring applicants to available positions, (3) by supplying information on job possibilities and living conditions in New York to those residing outside the city." No fee is charged the applicant. The member college, however, pays a $2 fee for every alumna who applies.

This Bureau seems to be made for just such a situation as ours, and indeed other colleges have felt its need if one may judge by the persons constituting the Board of Directors, among whom are presidents and other representatives of various women's colleges—Vassar, Keuka, Bryn Mawr, Barnard—as well as representatives of the A.A.U.W., Girl Scouts, Bloomingdale Brothers and the International Business Machines Corporation. Mr. Evans Clark, Executive Director of the Twentieth Century Fund is Executive Director of the Bureau and Miss Alice Gore King, formerly Vocational Adviser at Bryn Mawr College and Assistant Head of the Brearly School, is its Executive Secretary. Sweet Briar is very glad indeed to extend now to its alumnae the opportunities afforded by this Bureau.

Florence Woefel Elected to Membership on Alumnae Council

Florence Woelfel, '21g, has been elected a member of the Alumnae Council to fill an unexpired term. She lives in Chicago, Illinois, and has had a successful career as an executive in various cosmetic businesses.

Florence's home was originally Morris, Illinois, where, following her graduation from Sweet Briar, she participated in church, club, and charitable activities. She took a business course; and then took her first job on a dare. Her work has always been in the cosmetic business, and she says that "although my business course gave me my mechanical requirements, my college education in Liberal Arts gave me the background, the foundation, and the 'thinking' tools to work into an executive position." Florence started as a secretary and since then has handled the buying, the exporting of supplies to Canada and England for foreign assembly and distribution, worked in the Sales and Promotion Departments, and occasionally did some good will traveling. She has recently terminated her association with Dana Perfumes (Tabu, 20 Carats and Voodoo) and is now developing Consolidated Cosmetics.

Florence is enthusiastic about her job and about Sweet Briar. The Council is looking forward to meeting her and working with her.

WHY A WILL?

By ELIIN Snodgrass PARK, '37g*

NE of the incidents of owning property is the right to dispose of it at death. Although women control a major portion of the wealth of this nation, few of them take advantage of their right to make a will. Perhaps it is only natural that because wills are associated with a subject unpleasant to contemplate—death—making one is put off until "tomorrow." But because tomorrow may be, and frequently is, too late, it is important to consider today the value to you of a will.

The two principal reasons for making a will are first, to make certain that your property will go to those to whom you wish it to go, and second, to make certain that as much of your estate as possible is preserved for your beneficiaries and as little as possible is used up in administration expenses and taxes.

Who would be the beneficiaries of your estate if you should die intestate depends upon the law of the State in which you reside and hold property. States vary in their laws, and it is, therefore, not possible to make generalities on this subject. Under the law in the District of Columbia, there are provisions which cause women familiar with them to make a will. For example, if a woman who is married and has no children wishes her husband to have her real estate upon her death, she must leave it to him by will. Otherwise, he will have no interest in it. If a woman has a husband and children, upon her death intestate her personal property will be divided between them. If the children are minors, it will be necessary to have a guardian appointed to protect their interests. The premiums on the bonds covering the guardian will sometimes consume a small estate. By will, the wife may leave all her personal property to her husband, permitting him in his discretion to use whatever portion he wishes for the benefit of the children.

If a mother wishes to leave specific articles to her respective children she will write a will. Often, the dividing up of mother's property will lead to hard feelings and bitterness between brothers and sisters. One woman in order to avoid the possibility of such a family dispute gave to each of her three children a copy of a list of her possessions. She asked them to indicate those articles in which they were very much interested, those in which they were interested and those in which they were not interested. When the lists were returned to her, she made out her will, trying so far as possible to comply with the wishes of all the children.

A widow may be satisfied that her children will inherit all of her property. She may, however, have a particular person whom she would like to appoint guardian of her minor children, and she may do so by will.

Assuming, however, that you find under the law your property will go to those relatives to whom you wish it to go upon your death, no doubt you will have some charitable organizations or other institutions which you would like to include among your beneficiaries. There is no State which would give Sweet Briar a share of your estate unless you made a will to that effect. Our college increasingly needs your support, and if each alumna would include in her will a bequest to Sweet Briar, the college would be aided immeasurably in its efforts to maintain its standards at a level of which we are proud.

In these days of rising costs and taxes you will want to preserve as much of your property as possible for your beneficiaries. By making a will there are numerous ways in which you can save expense to your estate. For example by naming an executor and permitting him to serve without bond, you may dispense with or cut to a nominal sum his bond, and thereby save on the premium. By naming an executor you may feel confident that there will be someone who will take charge of your affairs promptly upon your death, and thereby avoid unnecessary delay and expense in settling your estate. This is particularly important for women who live alone.

It is also possible by will to provide intelligently for the effect of taxes on your estate.

If you have decided by now that you would like to have a will, I urge strongly that you consult an attorney to draw it for you. It is true that you could probably write a valid will yourself, but it takes an expert to draw one which will adequately serve the two purposes mentioned.

It is possible that you may be one of those unusual women who has a will. If so, be certain that it is kept up to date as conditions change within your family and as legislation is enacted which might possibly affect it.

I am concerned, in general, about the need for women to make wills. As a Sweet Briar alumna, I am particularly concerned about the need for other Sweet Briar alumnae to include our college among the beneficiaries of their estates.

As a suggestion, this will make an excellent form of bequest as a codicil to your will.

ACADEMY—SPECIAL

Class Secretary: Margaret Potts (Mrs. Henry H. Williams) 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Fund Agent: CLAUDINE GRIFFIN (Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb) 2514 Laburnum Avenue, S. W., Roanoke, Virginia.

In the October issue of the Alumnae News I asked for a volunteer to take over the Academy-Special Class Notes. The first and most important reason for this was that ever so ofen the job needs a new approach and new blood to keep the letter alive and of interest (the fact that none of you seems to have read my plea proves that!); the second is that other Sweet Briar work, other activities and my constant shifting back and forth between New York and the farm at Shepherdstown, W. Va., have made it increasingly difficult to secure news for these notes and get them out on time. But it does seem very important to me that the links between each of us and Sweet Briar should not only be kept intact but strengthened. If you feel as I do about this and can spare a little time four times a year, please let me hear from you. The work is not really taxing and you will, I am sure, find it very rewarding.

Just the other day I had a wonderfully heart-warming letter from Miss Benedict. It was written to acknowledge some reunion inapshots I had recently sent her and as it should be of interest not only to you of the earlier groups but to all of you, I am sure she will not mind if, through this medium, I share it with you.

"... The pictures are extremely good, and very natural of each person, and they make vivid the memories of the visits with the 'old girls'—which visits were the nicest things that have happened to me for a long time.

"As I so often say these days, I have had the rare privilege of following the growth of the college we started through its many years of development. Even more, I have been able to keep the companionship throughout the years of my younger sisters in our first group, and every time I go back and see you all, I glow with pride over what you did in the early days and over what you are doing at Sweet Briar and in your own lives.

"Didn't we have a lot of fun bouncing around the farm and looking for cows, etc.? Never have I seen so much of Sweet Briar io such a short time,

"I had such a lovely note from Beulah Norris. It was good to hear from her.

"I can hardly wait for May to come when I plan to start out again in my Studebaker and head for Virginia . . .

Affectionately,

Mary K. Benedict."

It is surely good news to hear that she is again coming back to Sweet Briar. Let as many of us as possible be there to greet her.

Adelaide Schockey Mallory, in writing ibout the same reunion, says. "Didn't we have a nice time? Funny part is, I didn't feel my age. Had a nice visit with Eugenia Griffin Burnett and then with Dudley Powers Waggaman. She's as sweet and pretty as ever and has a very nice son . . .

"You know, I believe those Sweet Briar years were the happiest of my life. I've certainly kept up with many of the girls . . ."

It was very saddening to learn recently of the sudden death of Jamie Sexton Holme, which occurred last June 13 at her home in Denver, Colorado. You will find an account of her life and activities following these class notes.

Sweet Briar, and especially Academy alumnae, should feel proud of Jamie's accomplishments but very sorrowful that one who had such a full, rich life and gave such pleasure to others should be taken while she still had much to offer. I am sure that the sympathy of all of us, especially those who knew Jamie, goes out to her husband and sons.

Some time ago Ethel Shoop Godwin wrote from her home in Suffolk, Virginia, but her reply to my questionnaire came too late for the October issue, so here is her news now:

Ethel has two children, a son, Bernard W. Godwin, Jr., who will enter Jefferson Medical College next year, and a married daughter, Ann Godwin Moore, who, like her mother, has a son and a daughter. Ethel's husband, who had many business activities, was killed in 1938 while driving to a plant he owned in North Carolina. After that his various business interests were sold with the exception of a one hundred and fifty year old grist mill and ice plant in Chuckatuck, Virginia, which Ethel herself now manages. That and raising two children have kept her well occupied; and now her grandchildren are an added interest and pleasure.

She writes that she and Dorothy Bancroft visit each other quite often and that she and her son had just returned from a delightful visit to Dorothy. In the fall of 1949 Ethel had a Sweet Briar houseparty which included Dorothy, Sea Willow Ward Stafford and Clytie Carroll Allen, and, she added, "One would have thought we were back at Sweet Briar. My children got a big kick out of it and said, 'Oh, if we can only be like you all when we are your age!"

Just the other day I was attempting to explain to my fairly youthful "houseworker" the problems and benefits of social security (for a complete understanding of this see page 27 of the January 6th New Yorker) and my joy and delight replied, "But sixty-five is too far away to bother about." Isn't it wonderful to be able to feel that way?

In November my husband and I drove out to Pelham to the wedding of Terry Shaw—whom many of you remember with pleasure when she was Sweet Briar's Alumnae Secretary—and Charles McCurdy, Jr., of William and Mary College, Terry, with her red-gold hair, was lovely in a short gown of champagne colored lace and satin and a Juliet cap with a shoulder-length veil of the same color, and she and her nice husband looked radiantly happy. The service, in beautiful Christ Church, was most impressive and the reception at the Manor Club was a delightful occasion.

It was an especial joy to find Dr. Lyman there and we enjoyed a brief chat with her. It is always such a pleasure to meet up with old Sweet Briar friends; they seem to mean even more than other friends.

For that reason I hate to take leave of you through these Notes; but one of you is needed in may place, so please come forward!

JAMIE SEXTON HOLME, A.

Mrs. Jamie Sexton Holme, A., nationally recognized poetess and wife of Peter Hagner Holme, Denver attorney, died June 13, 1950, at her home, of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Her death came shortly before publication of an anthology of poems by Coward-Mc-Cann Publishing Company which includes her "Prelude I". The book's title: "Love Poems of Six Centuries."

Mrs. Holme was born April 10, 1893, at Hazlehurst, Mississippi, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Sexton. Her father was a prominent Mississippi attorney.

She attended school at Hazlehurst and later attended Sweet Briar College. After leaving school, she trained in voice and piano in New York City.

Her interest in music led to the composing of several songs, but later this interest gave way to poetry. Many of her poems were published in leading periodicals and in three volumes, "Star Gatherer," "Floodmark" and "I Have Been a Pilgrim,"

Her poetry led to the award of an honorary master of letters degree by the University of Colorado in 1936.

She married Peter Hagner Holme on May 14, 1914, at Hazlehurst. They had made their home in Denver since 1914. Mrs. Holme was a member of the Denver Woman's Press Club, the Colorado Poetry Fellowship and the Wednesday Music Club.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Peter Hagner Holme, Jr., and James S. Holme, both of Denver; a half-sister, Mrs. May Higdon of Jackson, Mississippi and six grandchildren.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: MARJORIF COUPER (Mrs. Chester H. Prince) 705 West Ocean View Avenue, Norfolk 3, Virginia.

Fund Agent: FRANCES MURRELL (Mrs. Everingham Rickards) North Shore Point, Norfolk, Virginia.

Thank all of you girls for your prompt response to my S.O.S. for news. It was nice to get an extra letter from you, and although some of you are within the range of my voice, your letters were most welcome.

Louise Hooper Ewell, president of Class of 1910, writes, "My dear husband's death followed his long illness and left me entirely alone in my old home." She has lived there all of her married life and decided to make an apartment for herself and rent two apartments to young Naval Officers and their wives based at Little Creek Amphibious Base. She has also built a darling cottage on a beautiful point of land on the water, which was quickly rented to a young officer and his wife. Louise's step-son, Edwin Ewell, and her step-daughter, Virginia Ewell Whitehurst, are a great comfort to her. They visited her this past summer. Edwin is married, has two children, and has established his own business in New Orleans. Virginia is living in Jackson, Tennessee. Her husband is Vice President of The American Creosoting Corporation. Their son, Adelbert, was graduated last year from Vanderbilt, and is now working with his uncle in New Orleans. Lonise's letter continues, "My dear little grandson, Arnold Edwin Ewell, II, son of our dear boy, Arnold Ewell, who was killed in World War II, lives with his step-father and mother in New Mexico. His father is Principal of the High School and Grammar School at Hachita, in the ranch country. Iittle Arnold has started to school and is getting along so well. He is quite an artist according to the drawings sent Grandma. He enjoys riding the ponies on his grandfather's ranch." Louise took a motor trip through the Valley of Virginia in July with her cousins and saw Nan Powell Hodges in Staunton.

Frances Murrell Rickards writes, "As for me, I have had a big year. In May I flew from New York to London where I met two friends with whom I traveled for two months." She visited England and traveled extensively on the Continent-of course seeing the Passion Play. She returned by steamer from Genoa and was back in time to welcome her first grandchild. Frances says, "A boy named for my son, Garrett Rickards Bowden. We call him Garry. His mother is Murrell Rickards, class of 1944. My only regret in taking the trip was having to leave before our reunion." She has just returned from Lynchburg where she visited her mother, Mrs. William Murrell, who will celebrate her 92nd birthday soon. Frances' four brothers are living in Lynchburg, so she had a busy time seeing all of their families. One evening when she attended the Little Theatre with Claudine Hutter and Miss Morenus, who should be sitting nearby but Mrs. Lee (Miss Nellie Tucker). She was visiting her sisters in Lynchburg. (Miss Nellic Tucker escorted me from Norfolk to Sweet Briar when I entered Sweet Briar.)

Mary Scott Glass is still living in Washington and among her many activities is busy with the Senior Congress Club and Senate Red Cross during the winter months. Her sister's grandchildren, Lucian Bruce, Jr., and Clare Wailes Webb are nearby and a great pleasure to her. Mary is having her old home in Amherst "practically made over" and hopes to return there some day for a peaceful life.

Anne Cumnock Miller is well again after an operation this past summer. She was so sorry to miss the reunion in June. Although she is busy with two grandsons she finds time for a game of bridge.

Eugenia Griffin Burnett writes of her return to Sweet Briar to a meeting of the Alumnae Council in October, and to a Board meeting in November. She was very happy to meet the new Alumnae Executive Secretary and Treasurer, Margaret Cornwell Schmidt, and her little daughter, Ruthie. On November 21 Eugenia had the pleasure of entertaining the new president of Sweet Briar College, Mrs. Pannell, when she came to Richmond to attend a joint meeting of A.A.U.W. and the Sweet Briar alumnae. Eugenia tells of her three wonderful grandchildren-two little boys in Philadelphia and a 13 months old granddaughter living nearby in Richmond. In addition to Eugenia's many interests she has been doing some special work for her Chapter of the League of Women Voters.

Adelaide Schockcy Mallory writes of the grand reunion in June, her first visit to Virginia in ten years—when the old bunch met in Claudine's and Adelaide's room each night it was as though time was as yesterday. She visited Eugenia in Richmond and Dudley in Arlington after leaving Sweet Briar. Since her return home she has been going through the throes of getting a two car garage built! Adelaide's letter ends with "am well, weigh 138 pounds, and have one cat."

Nan Powell Hodges' letter is so special that I am sending it verbatim. It follows:

"Marjorie Prince, our Class Secretary, has written that she wanted news from each of us—I suppose to remind the younger alumnat that we are still in existence and as filled with love and loyalty for Sweet Briar as the youngest one of them. Our 1910 reunion last June was the most rewarding experience I have had for years. I am sure that each one of us said farewell at the close of those two interesting days feeling closer to the college, to each other and to Miss Benedict, who was with us. We spoke often of those of you who could not be with our group, and wished for you.

"As for myself—I am in my eighth year as Headmistress of Stuart Hall in Staunton. The work is absorbingly interesting, and completely time consuming. It is fun coming in close touch with adolescent girls and their many problems. Twelve of my girls are now at Sweet Briar. When they visit us and tell of what they are doing and of their various reactions, I feel almost as if I were reliving my own Sweet Briar days—for after all, there is something about Sweet Briar which is the same—yesterday, today and, I hope, forever."

Indeed I was so sorry to miss our reunion in June, but maybe I can "hobble" up to the next one. Sue Slaughter gave me a detailed account of the entire time, so I felt as though I had been there. We have bought a place at Willoughby Beach (in Norfolk) and have had fun fixing it up. Our love for bright colors has run riot down here where the drab sands make color essential. We have recently had oak floors put over the old flooring for warmth. Living in a house while that is being done is dreadful, but we are glad it is over now that the Wintry Winds are blowing. My husband has been retired for several years and is very happy and well down here with his fishing tackle and boats. This year we decided not to go to Florida, as we thought it would be a mild winter but look what's going on! For twenty years we have been spending the month of August in Western Carolina, at the same lovely place, but since living at the Beach I feel like a traitor leaving the best Beach month. I often see Louise Anne, and Frances. Frances and I go to the Community Concerts, Little Theatre, and often meet at The Museum of Arts for the afternoon lectures. It has been fun hearing from all of you and those who haven't written please send me something for our next letter. I do hope the New Year brings contentment and peace of mind to you and to this confused world.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Josephine Murray (Mrs. J. Whitman Joslin) 200 W. Madison Avenue, Johnstown, New York.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA HURT (Mrs. William R. Turner) Holcombe Court, Blackstone, Virginia.

Christmas letters from Margaret Thomas Kruesi, Kathleen Cowgill, Betty Baldwin Lewis, Barbara Shand and Loulie Wilson gave me more news than I have had for some time but unfortunately none of these girls is in the 1911 lists.

Esther Keller Brown wrote that her daughter and family were moving from South America to Crawfordsville, Indiana, about one hundred miles from Muncie where Esther lives. Anne Marie studied in South America, married and has lived there ever since. Esther, of course, is delighted.

1 tried to check on the other four 1911 grads last year and have very meager information. Mary Parker is a business woman, Insurance, in Franklin, Virginia. Emma Morriss is in business in Richmond, Virginia. Alma Booth Taylor and her husband were at Berea College in Kentucky and planning to go back to China. Jennie Hurt Turner, from whom I received this information, was pretty busy acting as Fund Agent.

As for myself, I have devoted nearly the whole year to politics, having been Acting County Chairman of the Democratic party due to the death of the Chairman. I have two granddaughters, each with a southern name which pleases me very much—Jamie and Mary Lou.

1913

Class Secretary: MARY CLARK (Mrs. Clarence Bloss Rogers) 205 Beverly Road, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia.

Fund Agent: Sue Hardie (Mrs. William T. Bell) 50 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

Greetings to all of the class of 1913! May 1951 bring to each of you the best this world has to offer.

The response from the old crowd has been quite spotty, but we have a bit of news from here and there that may be of interest, as well as prove an incentive for others to let us hear from then, before the next issue of the News.

First—we turn the spotlight on our representative on the Alumoae Council—Eugenia Ruffington Walcott. You will all remember Eugenia as our hope for May Queen, who turned our hopes to a hoax when she dressed as Sis Hopkins and withdrew her name—Eogenia is a real personage, and if I attempted to tell you of the versatility of her activities there would be little space left for the rest of us.

Sue Slaughter writes that she spent her fifth consecutive summer at Warm Springs, Virginia, as "one of the younger set"! ("Girls, we must all go—as it is as rejuvenating as Black Strap Molasses and Yogurt") Sue ran into Martha Bell Crosby and her husband, Judge Crosby, at a party while at Wa.n. Springs.

Bessie Grammer Torrey writes that she is living with her unmarried son, Carl Grammer Torrey, who is an active reserve officer in the Air Corps Engineers, but has not been called yet. Bessie also has a married son, Donald, and a charming five year old grand-daughter, Ellen, Vivian Mossman Groves has a married daughter with two lovely children—so she has joined the Grandmuther's Class. Vivian also has an unmarried son.

I see Henrianne Early occasionally on her visits to Atlanta, to Colonel and Mrs. Clifford Early. Henrianne looks exceptionally well On my frequent visits to my old Kentucky home, Hopkinsville, I see Sarah Cooper, who still lives there.

Elizabeth Franke Balls writes from Berkeley, California, that they expect to move nearer East next fall—to Purdue at Lafayette, Indiana.

Mary Pinkerton Kerr writes from Charlottesville that her son, John Alexander Kerr, is in his fourth year at the University of Virginia — commercial course. Mary also writes that Dr. Harley is spending the winter in Charlottesville and she sees and enjoys her very much—especially her keen and interesting discussions of her studies and activities while in New York and South Africa, Mary also writes of a very fine performance of "Green Grows the Lilaes" given by the Rotunda Stagers in which Miss Meta Glass has one of the principal roles. Mary didn't see It, but said the reports were good.

Sue Slaughter writes me that she was the onty representative of 1913 at Class Reonion in June. Miss Benedict, of course, was there and many of our friends of old days. Henrietta Washburn of 1914—and Eugenia Griffin Burnett and Nan Powell Hodges of 1910. Sue also writes the most important "class note" is to announce Miss Guion's appointment to Sweet Briar's Board of Overseers—which delights all of us.

I regret to report the death of Ruth Houser, killed in her car October 6th near Valparaiso, Indiana. She was alone, except for her little dog, and died instantly.

In these days of our years with the world in such a chaotic state, we pause-and think of "Our Tomorrow"-your children and grandchildren-our future citizens to inherit this so great nation. Our thoughts naturally dwell on the children and the type of world we are creating with our responsibility for their future confronting us. I have no children or grandchildren of my own, but I have been thinking and studying about this sorry state of affairs since 1938. I completed three manuscripts in 1946 which some day I hope to have published and dedicated to "Your Grandchildren-The Tomorrow of America and The World." The titles are: 'Where Are We Bound"?; "George Washington-A man"; and "Let Freedom Reign!-(The Evolution of Freedom)." These manoscripts were considered by the Julius Messner Foundation in their International Contest for the best book to combat intolerance. However, I did not win the prize of $10,000, nor did they offer to publish them. I have had no rejection slips-but the letters from publishers prove very interesting reading-so some day you may hear of me, Enough about Mary Clark Rogers!

We are indeed fortunate to have so many of 1913 still with us—so bring our news records up to date. Let us hear from you—and you—and you!

Class Secretary: JUHA BIVILLE (Mrs. Jonathan Yerkes) 2935 Grand Avenue, Jacksonville, Florida.

Fund Agent: GRACE CALLAN, (Mrs. William L. Bond) 1149 Ardsley Road, Schenectady, New York.

"The pen is mightier than the sword" or so I've been told. Mine isn't, for having written one-fourth of the class of 1914 for news—net result—one reply. Not being easily discouraged, I shall hope for more luck and much to report for the spring bulletin.

Catherine Bosson Taylor writes from "Justamere Farm" in Greensboro, N. C., "My interests are concentrated in my husband, the children, and four grandchildren on present count. Horticulture and husbandry are fast becoming a side line."

Now for my own short story. I have given up all civic activities for the present, with the exception of the Presidency of The Woman's Board of the Children's Home Society of Florida. This is a full time interest, and I love to work with underprivileged youngsters.

This Christmas was an especially happy one for our Sweet Briar junior, Rebecca, made her debut, and had as her guest another Sweet Briar junior, her roommate, Joanne O'Malley of Washington. Becky's presentation dance was Friday, December 22, a gala affair to start the holiday season, and the whirl of parties kept the two girls and our household busy.

Elizabeth Merritt Merritt, Meta Bryan Graves, Marguerite Drew Bardin, and I are the grandmothers of the Jacksonville Sweet Briar Club. It's wonderfol on Sweet Briar Day, to hear the report of college life from the younger generation. Even though forty years have passed since we jumped from the train in the cold grey dawn at Sweet Briar station, we still feel the same love and enthusiasm for our Alma Mater.

Remember! Please send in your news soon, and a wonderful Year to you all,

1920

Class Secretary: Frances Kenney (Mrs. Carlos E. Lyon) 64 Southmoreland Place, Decatur, Illinois,

Fund Agent: HELEN BEESON (Mrs. Francis M. Comer) 325 Limestone Street, Maysville, Kentucky,

My heartfelt good wishes to all for 1951! May the days between the writing and the reading of this letter bring brighter prospects for peace, the blessing we all pray for.

I am really proud of the number who replied to my last plea. (I sent cards only to those who had not responded before.) For those who continue to be "wayward," cards will be coming your way again—and soon, We need and want to know how you are faring.

Antoinette Malet's fine letter from Lozere, France, arrived just too late to be incorporated in my previous digest, but it is inspiring to read and leads one to resolve anew that a nation-ours-which lives so wondrously in her memory should and must endure! She writes only praise-for Sweet Briar, for our new college president, Dr. Pannell, and for all her experiences through several years in the United States. Antoinette spent "five enjoyable years" at Sweet Briar, two years as a student and three years as an instuctor. Following that, she taught in New York City, in Massachusetts, Ohio, and Maryland, always with real pleasure in seeing more of our country and its people. She spent several years in New York City, registering in New York University one summer, and witnessed the erection of such landmarks as the Empire State building, Rockefeller Center, George Washington Bridge, Madison Square Garden, and the Waldorf Astoria. She was in Boston in May, 1927, when Charles Lindbergh made his era-opening solo flight across the Atlantic. Writing of our United States, she said, "Populations from every nation under the sun, united in the love and enjoyment of freedom." May we keep it that way, Antoinette!

Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes' letter just missed the deadline also. She had had a busy but interesting summer overseeing the repairing and refurbishing of their home. Her resume of recent years included the information that she enlisted in the Waves in 1942, with headquarters in Washington following seven weeks of rigorous training. She was assigned to personnel work, dealing with Waves who were making a very secret device, and this experience convinced her that she wanted to continue with personnel work after the war. To which end, she later enrolled for a special course in the University of Wisconsin. Going back to real study was a chore, she saysand I can well imagine-but "Penny" joyed it, the University, and Madison. Concluding she wanted to know more of the middle West, she chose Chicago for job hunting and soon was ensconced in the personnel department of Sherwin-Williams Company, with a full schedule of hiring, firing, and counselling the two hundred and fifty women in the plant, plus editing the plant magazine. She was married in April, 1949, thereby becoming a mother to one and a grandmother to three. On last winter's trip to Florida "Penny" saw Louise Hammond Skinner in Palm Beach, and Ruth Hulburd Brown at Sea Island, Georgia. Last spring she went back to Sweet Briar with her sister Frances, Anne Schutte Nolt, and Sue Hager Rohrer, but found no classmates there to join in the 30th reunion. She enjoys the very active Chicago chapter of Sweet Briar alumnae.

Geraldine Jones Lewis has cooperated wonderfully with a long letter and more news on her Christmas card. "Gerry" was graduated from Baylor University, Waco, Texas, in 1920—was married to R. Taylor Lewis in 1921—and they live on a stock farm thirteen miles from Gainesville, Texas. Her summer was a packed one—a trip to Staunton, Virginia, for daughter Jones' graduation from Stuart Hall, a drawn-out trip home spaced with visits en route, young house guests throughout the summer, grandchildren to "baby-sit," a huge ice cream freezer needing tri-weekly filling for the young blood, brides to be entertained, plus all the regular duties. Both daughters, Rebecca, 28, and Jones, 17, enrolled at Texas State College for Women this fall, Rebecca to do further work in sciences. She was married December 21. Whether she will continue her studies beyond June depends largely on the status of her bridegroom, who is in the Reserves.

Alleine Hicks now lives in Raleigh, North Carolina. From Sweet Briar she went on to graduate from University of North Carolina Woman's College. She wrote of Dr. Pannell's visit to Raleigh in October to take part in the inauguration of the new U. N. C. president.

Martha Stevenson Coates of Pasadena, California, writes that she has nothing important to report, but I found it very interesting to know that she is secretary of the Linda Vista Improvement Association, chairman of the Pasadena division of Sweet Briar Alumnae, and chairman of the election board of their area.

From Corinne Loncy Benson in Salem, Massachusetts, comes data of their three children. Frank II, is at Harvard; Corinne, "Jr.," graduated from Smith in 1950 with Phi Beta Kappa standing and is now teaching at Westover School, Middlebury, Connecticut. Ann, age 10, is at home—"happily," says Corinne.

In October Helen Beeson Comer visited her daughter, enrolled and happy at Notre Dame of Maryland. They went to Philadelphia to see Kentucky-Villanova football game. It must have been a joy to cheer on a homestate team such as Kentucky proved to be. Helen is encircled with Hospital Auxiliary and Red Cross work, but was counting the days until her daughter's Christmas visit.

Mary Virginia Crabbs Shaw has three fine sons. One is a senior in college, one a college sophomore, and the third a junior in high school. M. V. lives only two blocks from lloe Bowers Joel (in Crawfordsville, Indiana), and she quite regularly sees Dorothy Wallace, Louise Evans Shideler, and Emily Moon Spilman

Eleanor Judge Peterson's son, H. Gerhard, Jr., graduated from Harvard Medical College, then served interneship of one year at Montreal's Royal Victoria Hospital and one year at University of Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia. He is now specializing in radiology under Dr. Sosman, at Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston. He and his wife Eleanor have two little sons, Gary III, 3½ years, and Lance, 2 years. Mary Lee, the Peterson's daughter, and her husband live in Mansfield, so Eleanor can keep a loving eye on the new 2 months old granddaughter.

Christine Webster teaches English in the Carthage, Missouri, high school and is head of that department. She says her greatest achievement since Sweet Briar is her son, now a young lawyer in Carthage. He is a member of the Missouri State Legislature and for two years has been president of the Young Republicans of Missouri. Richard is also chairman of the deacons of his church.

He is married and has a little I year old son, Richard. You are more than justified in your pride, Christine.

I felt a real loss when I learned of the death of Eleanor Lynott Hackett. Shortly after the notice from the Alumnae Association I had a letter from Eleanor's husband, Robert Hackett. He said Eleanor had been in poor health for about a year but had seemed to improve some after a month's stay in Honolulu. They returned home for their son's wedding last February, spent March in Florida, then moved to Wayland, Massachusetts. The new home was a real source of happiness for Eleanor, but she was confined more and more to bed, and passed away October 21. I am sure all who remember Eleanor and her "joie de vivre" will feel her loss as I do.

Roberta Knapp Ballou writes that they have lived in California thirty years. Her husband, Kurtz, is cashier of a Long Beach bank. They have two sons—Peter is married and teaches World History, U. S. History, and Democratic Living in Redondo Union High School; Richard is with the air force navigation department (civilian capacity) at McClellan Field near Sacramento. "Bobby" says she keeps busy with "Gray Lady Corps, Red Cross, music and fun."

Braxton, Jr., oldest son of Ida Massie Valentine, was married December 19 to Mary Pratt of Gloucester, Virginia. Henry, their second son, has finished college and is with Davenport & Company, stock brokers in Richmond. The third son, Massie, has another year at Woodberry Forest School in Orange, Virginia.

Helen Miller Kavanagh has been married thirty years and has three daughters. The oldest is married, living in Jacksonville, Florida, and Helen was spending January with the family. She says the Sweet Briar alumnae group in Wilmington is a very active and enjoyable group. She and Polly Bissell Ridler are the "seniors" of the group.

Geraldine Ball Bewsher, Tampa, Florida, sees nearby members of '21 class often. She has been busy and distressed with the critical illness of her father, who passed away in November.

It seemed good to hear from Virginia Lovell Haggart after all these years. She sent a change of address which attaches to a new one story colonial home on the banks of the Red River in Fargo, North Dakota. Sounds good, doesn't it? Virginia spent her junior year of college at North Dakota State College in Fargo, and then graduated from University of Wisconsin. She is a grandmother now—to a 5 months old boy.

A new home some time recently for Dorothy Whitley Smyth. Planning the decorating of said home and hard work in her husband's law office keep Dot jumping. She promises a long letter soon, which I shall be awaiting.

From Betty Lea Apgar came a Christmas greeting and news. She has two sons—both graduates of Princeton, both in the Navy, and both married. The older son has two children, and the younger son was on the "waiting" list at the time Betty wrote. Betty's parents of 84 and 80 years live with her, Madeline Bigger is near enough that Betty sees her occasionally.

That is the "story" for now. No doubt I have presented this news in a very dull fashion but I assure you I had very little time to work on it, what with holiday duties and gaiety. I feel very brave to put the new address at the head of this letter—but here's hoping we can be moved by the time the magazine reaches you. We have reservations in Florida for February 15—want very much to have the moving over before that. If the contractor "comes through," my next letter will be from the area of warm sands. Adios!

1922

Class Secretary: MARION WALKER (Mrs. L. K. Neidlinger) 3 Flm Street, Hanover, New Hampshire.

Fund Agent: ALICE BABCOCK (Mrs. Charles 1. Simons) Box 388, Columbia 1, S. C.

Having one grandchild is exciting enough, but to have two—one brand new—and to have them both here for Christmas, along with their admiring aunts and parents, was just about perfect fon for the old folks. Suppose you all felt as we did—let us keep this Christmas, and remember it always.

More news of our capable classmates; Minnie Long Wilson is a government transportation specialist with the General Accounting Office, (thanks to our Dr. Morenus' mathematics, she says). Children—eight, plus a precious nephew they have raised. Five boys and three girls and all of them sound as smart as their mama. Think this accomplishment over, and take off your hat to the Wilsons.

Grizzelle Thomson is chairman of the mathematics departments at the Junior High in Norfolk where she teaches. She attended an interesting workshop this summer and later went to an adult camp in Vermont.

Bus Fobl Kerr and Charlie attended the V. M. I. - University game this fall—their Charles graduates from the University this year. They went on down to Richmond with Lydia Purcell Wilmer and her hosband and over to Sweet Briar for step-singing. The Kerrs have built a "Gunnison" home (prefabricated) and have settled down to the "easiest kind of living possible."

A note from our Mary Monson on her Christmas card, which I was so glad to have. She and her Mother have moved from an old house into a new one. Her Mother has been an invalid for three years, so there is little time for trips, but Mary expresses the hope of us all making the 1952 reonion.

Alice Babcock Simons keeps busy with three boys (and the '22 Fund). The boys are still growing (and we wish the same could be said about our class report). The oldest Simons boy is off to prep school, at Darlington in Rome, Georgia, but the twins are still at home to keep things buzzing.

Gert Dally Massie has also moved—not far—a good 4 iron shot away, she says.

A card from Alice Earley Clendenning from Iowa City, Iowa. No news-just best wishes. I shall pursue her by penny post card and report to you.

Not too many of you recipients of the penny pust cards took time to send the other half back. Bot I still have hopes—and those of you who haven't been called upon yet—brace yourselves—it's coming.

1925

Class Secretary: EUGENIA GOODALL (Mrs. E. C. Ivey, Jr.) 3827 Boonsboro Road, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Jane Becker (Mrs. John Clippinger) 1263 Hayward Avenue, Cincinnati 26, Ohio.

At long last we can boast of a grandmother—Louise Wolf Stark's eldest son became the father of Seth Warner Stark on May 23. Congratulations!

Jane Becker Clippinger and her hasband and three children spent part of the summer in Bermuda and loved it.

Lucy Holmes Carson Haddow's new address is: 793 Palmer Road, Bronxville, New York, Adelaide Harris Holmes' son, Jimmy, went K. A. at Virginia this fall,

I do hope all of you had a grand Christmas and will have a glorious 1951, Please tell me all about anything that I can pass on to our class.

1927 Reunion Year

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: Daphne Bunting (Mrs. L. K. Blair) 42 Kenwood Avenue, Worcester 5, Massachusetts.

Thank you for contributing to Sweet Briar for 1950-51. Each of you reading this should take it as a personal compliment, because I don't believe any one of us seeds in news without the hope that others will do the same—Result: this column which we all share pride in. Don't you think it is terrific this time?

Maude Adams Smith's greatest outside interest is the League of Women Voters in which she is very active. Although Maude and her husband are both graduates of the University of Illinois, Sweet Briar gets its share of her affection too. She enjoys the occasional alumnae get-togethers in Boston—but in 15 years has only met three members of our class there.

Babe Mbers Foltz and Tom, with another couple, also from Ft, Smith, Arkansas, took a tremendous trip in the late fall driving to Boxton via Sweet Briar, Williamsburg, Washington and back through Cleveland where they visited Tom's brothers. In New York they met up with a lot of old friends from Little Rock (Babe's sixter lives just outside of New York). Much feteing and carrying on! Babe says the next time she will quiet down—can you believe it?

The Hydes (Canilla Alsop) recommend The Homestead for complete relaxation after a cottage at Virginia Beach for six weeks. Camilla, Jr., is attending Mount Vernon Junior College and is very happy there. She enjoyed going to Charlottesville for football games, etc., so Camilla and Ed had a chance to have a glimpse of her when week-ending at the Farmington Country Clob.

Evie Anderson Tull and Dick left on December 1st for a vacation in San Francisco.

Tabo Brown Houd came up to Bronxville for Mary Gladys' daughter's wedding. Virginia Wilson Robbins asked me over to have lunch with them. Tabo was in fine fettle and looked wonderful. It was a real treat to see her after all these years.

When Madeline and Mac Wood took Beth down to William and Mary in the fall they were in Norfolk for a time and saw Kitty Wilson Garnett for a brief chat. She is reported to be as gay and full of energy as always.

Thank you, Daphne Bunting Blair for your letter to us asking for contributions to the Alumnae Fund. I am sure your effor: has brought results. Also, many thanks for the plug for me, it sustains me at this moment when I am typing in the midst of Xmas wrappings, etc.

Daphne had the pleasure of seeing Louise Collins Schroeder and her eldest son, Jed, in the fall when they were looking over colleges for him for 1951-52. Daphne says that Dickie Dickinson Robbios and Louise are planning to be at our 25th.

Had a wonderful letter from Mary Carpenter Temple (Mrs. Charles B.) who lives in Danville, Virginia. She moved from Orlando, Florida, to Danville several years ago and used to see Mary Opie Meade Bailey quite often until Mary Opie moved from Danville. The Temples have two children, Betsy, 13, and Charles, Jr., 10.

Elizabeth Cates Wall has rented her house in New Canaan, Connecticut, and is preparing to open an antique shop in Highlands, N. C., next summer.

Elizabeth Chaffinch Hornbacker graduated from the University of Maryland in 1927 after attending Sweet Briar. She married Dr. John H. Hornbacker in 1932. They have one son, John, who is 13. Elizabeth says that they have stopped at Sweet Briar several times on their way to taking John to Camp Greenbrier.

Elisabeth Mather Chaplin's daughter, Ann, is attending St. Margaret's at Tappahannock, Virginia

Eleanor Errin Bollock's eldest son, Curtis, is at the University of Alabama.

A day, not so long ago, when Connie Van Ness was coming oot, who should call but Alice Eskesen Ganzel who had two important callers—Dot Garland Weeks and her very nice hosband. Alice asked us over for cocktails—we went as soon as I could get Connie off the train, and had a grand time. I don't know of anything more joyous than to meet up with contemporaries who seem not to have aged a bit, As a matter of fact I have concluded that the class of '27 were given something outside the usual curriculum—joy of life—it seems to be universal in the class of '27. Don't you agree?

Dot's son is at Syracuse and her daughter at New Jersey University.

When she wrote, Alice Gibbon Shuford was in a home town Follies—scene "When Mother was a Vamp," dresses of the early twenties, Charleston, etc. Can you imagine anything more fun to see? Maybe we can inveigle a repeat performance at our 25th.

Helen Goffigan Wills tells about her children: Helen, 21, is a senior at Randolph-Macon; Woller, 15, is at Virginia Episcopal School.

Emilie Halsell Marston tells of a wonderful Sweet Briar reunion in her living room in Baltimore. Guests included Eleanor Harned Arp, and her husband who were visiting their son and his wife, Dottie Hamilton Davis and Allan and Mary Rich Robertson. Emilie's daughter, Nancy, was married on December 30 and is living in Pasadena, California.

The Sweet Briar Fashion Show and Tea in the fall in Baltimore was reported a great success.

Wilburn Hampton Rogers' son, Van K., Jr., is in his senior year at Mississippi Southern.

Gwin Harris, after all these years, we are orerjoyed to hear all your news. She married Beverley St. George Tucker about five years ago and lived in Włashington, D. C., for four years. "Bev" was a Colonel in the Army, hence Washington, but at the time she wrote was in civilian life. They had recently moved to San Angelo, Texas, Gwin's original home, to take over the ranches of part of Gwin's father's estate. Her address is 1324 South Madison Street, San Angelo, Texas. We certainly are glad to get it, Gwin has two children, Patricia Anne Scott, and Jimmy Harris Scott.

The Johnsons (Marie Langford) have three children away; Charles, 20, enlisted in the Navy and is at Great Lakes; Grace, 18, is a sophomore at Smith; Joya, 15, is at Stuart Hall, Staunton, Virginia.

Virginia Kaake became Mrs. Donald P. Setter in 1927. After Sweet Briar, Virginia went to University of Minnesota and later to Cornell. Her husband is an architect and also a graduate of Cornell.

Ibby Luck Hammond's husband, Hall Hammond, was reelected by a smashing majority, in the midst of a Republican Landslide, as Attorney-General of Maryland. We send our congratulations to them.

Tootie Maybank Williams does have fun. She visited Claire (Hanner) and Wylie Arnold in their Beach cottage at Garden City Beach last summer—spent a night with Sally Jamison and to top it off, Billy Quisenberry Marks spent a week end with Tootie and Tigh.

In the spring Anna Patton Thrasher wrote me a nice letter part of which you will enjoy the quote "If and when I ever have any news I'll surely let you know. More than likely it will be my obituary since I go again this year to do my bit at our diocesean youth camp." She hasn't been heard from since, suppose she is O.K.? Anna knows Mrs.

Pannell and thinks we are indeed fortunate to have her as President of Sweet Briar.

Pauline Payne Backus says she will be back for our reunion in '52 definitely. Watch our for her—she has all sorts of rejuvenating schemes in mind at this point.

Julia Pollard teaches history in one of the Richmond Junior High Schools. She has been working on a Textbook History of Richmond and hopes to have it ready to go to press in '52. She and Peggy Walton McLester have been working on a Special Fund for a teacher they both had 31 years ago.

It was good to hear from Margaret Powell Oldham who lives in Onancock, Virginia. Her husband graduated from William and Mary and is Deputy Clerk of Circuit Court of Accomac County.

Billy Quisenberry Marks saw Comfy on her way to and from Dallas last summer. She said it was great fun.

Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach's youngest daughter is song leader of the freshman class at Sweet Briar. Georgia, who is now at the University of Indiana after two years at Sweet Briar, is chairman of the Kappa House. She was the only senior to be chosen and was elected to the Student Opinion Committee of the Town Hall Board.

Helen Smyser Talbot has been president of the P.T.A. Belltown School for two years. The Talbots have three children—Peter, 13; David, 7; and Jean, 5.

Mary Reade Copenhaver's husband is Registrar at the Asheville School for boys. They have two children, Elizabeth, who is a freshman at University of North Carolina, and Mary, who is a senior.

The Durhams (Jo Snowdon) came east to spend Thanksgiving with their son, Taylor, who is a student at Middlesex. The Cranes enjoyed cocktails with them in New York. Jo is also a definite for our 25th.

We express our deepest sympathy to Virginia Stephenson who lost her mother last year. Virginia's job keeps her traveling all over the state and two or three times outside the state each year. However, she has bought a new house and is busy decorating and furnishing it.

Frances Street, Ruth Lowrance Street's daughter, is House President of Manson. Ruth was on campus in October when they had the first step-singing.

Lucy Orgill Genette's son, Sidney, is a senior at Duke.

Very nice to hear from Anne Watson Soule. Her husband is a graduate of New York University and is an Aero, Research Scientist. They have two children—Sam, 14 and Marianne, 12. Their home is in Hampton, Virginia.

When Mary Elizabeth Turner Baker wrote she was eagerly awaiting the Christmas reunion of her family, she and her two little ones were in Florida, her eldest, Betty, at Wellesley, while Louise, 15, was overseeing the household for her father in Louisville.

We are very happy to hear from Kathryn Reid Emmott who lives in Douglas, Arizona. After attending Sweet Briar she graduated from Wooster, Ohio, in 1927 and after spending some time in Europe owned a Hosiery shop before marrying in 1931. The Emmots have two daughters, Kathryn, 18. 1 student at the University of Arizona; and Susan, who is 16.

From Racine, Wisconsin, we hear from Dorothy Warner Hall (isn't it wonderful to hear from so many?). After graduating from the University of Wisconsin she did case work for three years. She married T. Faxon Hall in 1929 and they have one daughter, Mary Lou "Bunny" who is a senior in High School. Dorothy regrets Bunny cannot enter Sweet Briar because she has not had enough language. Wish we could do something about that!

We have heard from Clara Wheeler too. She received her M.A. from the University of Kentucky and afterwards taught at the Bowling Green College of Commerce there. She is now teaching in Bethel Woman's College and has been there for six years. Bethel Woman's College is in Hopkinsville so Clara has seen Madeline Brown Wood occasionally when the latter has been home for a visit.

When Beth Williams Cadigan had an unexpected operation last summer, her children were busy and occupied with interesting jobs. Dick, 13, was at Camp Dudley; Judy, 17, was in Woods Hole caring for Dean and Mrs. Copeland's three children; and Jeanne, 20, a junior at Wheelock, had a wonderful job at Tyler Place Inn, Highgate Springs, Vermont, supervising small children.

Kitty Wilson Garnett tells something of the activities of her busy family. Maria, 19, has been rehearsing like mad for a play. "The" Jr. played varsity football (halfback) for Norfolk Academy. "The" Sr. is studying Latin American History at University of Virginia—William and Mary extension in Norfolk. Kitty says the extension is as big as William and Mary. She does almost daily substitute work in High School.

Virginia Wilson Robbins and her family visited Virginia's parents in Cape Charles in November. We are very pleased that Mrs. Wilson takes such an interest in us and our activities. She frequently sends clippings to Red from the local periodicals, including Maggie Leigh Hobbs and Libbo Mathews Wallace and their daughters when they were at Sweet Briar for Parents Day.

AND NOW: We come to the last and best part of this report which is Maggie Leigh Hobbs' own account of Parents Day.

"It was really such fun going to Sweet Briar for Parents Day and I got such a kick out of it. I hope that all of 1927 who have daughters may have the same experience. Peggy rooms in Reid just down the hall from Dolly Wallace (Lib Mathews' daughter who is Reid's House President). The dormitory has been redecorated in pastel paint and the rooms look very attractive. The sitting rooms are comfortably and tastefully furnished. There were greens and fall leaves in all the buildings, artistically done by Bebe Gilcbrist Barnes on a visit the previous week. Something has been added since our day!

"We had two beautiful fall days and the campus looked lovely. The new library is most impressive as well as the gymnasium. I think Helen McMahon and Gert Prior should be congratulated on the Book Shopit is quite a shop! I was sorry not to see Helen Mac and Dan Boone-I heard that they were away for the week end, closing their very successful summer camp in North Carolina for the winter. We had lunch in the refectory-and never in the 1920's did we have such a delicious meal there. Peggy says the food is good all the time. At lunchcon we were introduced to Mrs. Pannell. We all liked her immediately. We enjoyed neeting her individually again at Sweet Brian House. The faculty were there and it was nteresting to meet Peggy's professors as well as to see and chat with Mrs. Wailes who taught many of us sociology back in 1927. Peggy was surprised to find out that Miss Rogers was also Director of Athletics in our day. Sweet Briar House looked lovely and in traditional keeping with its history. The boxwood and magnolia are still as beautiful and as imposing as ever-

"Of course Lib Mathews Wallace and 1 had a wonderful time reminiscing about the years 1923-27 and I loved meeting her two fine boys and Dolly who is a darling. Harry and Hobby, our husbands, took it all very well and seemed to enjoy Sweet Briar almost as much as Lib and I did. Hobby insisted on calling me 'the old Grad' which aged me at least ten years and put me in my place. It was fun to see Dottie Reinburg Fuller again who has a daughter in the sophomore class and to talk with Eugenia Goodall Ivey over the phone. I was disappointed not to se-Edna Lee Gilchrist who lives on Sweet Briar grounds and who gave the daughters of alumnae a wonderful party earlier in the year. Peggy tells me that Julia Reynolds Dreisbach has a most attractive daughter also in the freshman class and I was sorry not to have met her this trip, but Parents Day was so successful I am sure I'll find some excuse to go back again sometime this year. Lib thinks maybe May Day might be the excuse we are looking for and I hope it can be arranged.

"For those of you who haven't been able to go back for some time, it seems to me Sweet Briar has changed only for the better and we can he justly proud of our Alma Mater."

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: ELLA PARR PHILLIPS (Mrs. Samuel J. Slate) 1435 Lexington Avenue, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA HODGSON (Mrs. R. C. Sutliff) 4733 24th Road, North, Arlington, Virginia.

The most interesting news from Mary Archer Bean Eppes—after a rather grim summer of serious illnesses and operations the family has now recovered and is in blooming health again. They have moved to Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, where Jimmy is now Associate Professor in the Department of Mechanical Engineering at Lehigh University—Beanie wrote that they had found a darling house just two miles from Bethlehem which had belonged to friends and they had also been lucky enough to sell their house in Cambridge so they are now looking forward to life in Bethlehem again after seven years in Cambridge. Their two sons, Jamie and Bennett "seem happier than ever at St. Paul's. We are proud of Bennett's fine grades but alas, his high notes are going down and we have heard the last of his soprano solos. However, he is very happy in his extracurricular activities, choir, football, squash and cross-country. Jamie is editor of the yearbook and in charge of the sale of the St. Paul's Record, which was made by the Choir and Glee Club. His main interest this fall has been football and we are proud that he was awarded his letter. Best wishes to all the Eppes for many happy years in your new home!

Louise Dailey Sturhahn and her husband Ed also have a new home. They have bought a farm about four miles from Purcellville in Virginia. They lived in Washington while they completely "did over" the old stone farm house.

A call from Emily Braswell Perry who was in town this fall with her husband Bill, for an Education Association meeting, reported her two "cowboy" sons in fine fettle. She and Bill stopped in Charlottesville on their way home to Chapel Hill for a football game.

Mary Shelton Clark came to town with her husband who was also attending a convention—bankers this time. They stayed in Westchester but Mary and I managed a grand long talk as well as a luncheon with our respective husbands—quite a success as a good time was had by all. (I might add here that Cornelia Otis Skinner can be all wrong about a reunion of schoolmates!)

A very nice surprise the other day was seeing Emma Riely Lemaire and meeting her attractive French husband. Her stepson recently arrived from France to go to school here not speaking a word of English and Emma says her French isn't what it should be—oh dear!

The Sweet Briar Day tea was a most enjoyable affair given in the home of Elizabeth Scheuer Maxwell. The honoree was Dr. Connie Guion, a new member of the Board of Overseers, and there were a few faculty members, too, including Dr. Crawford and a new professor of romance languages, Dr. Hutchinson and his wife. Dr. Crawford sold me on the splendid idea of spending the summer at Sweet Briar, either staying at the Inn or taking an apartment or even a house. There is tennis, swimming, scenery and coolness so what more could you ask? Dr. Lyman, now at Union Theological Seminary in New York, also attended.

I had a nice talk with Edith Durrell Marshall who is an ex member of the S. B. Alumnae Council from Cincinnati who is visiting here for the holidays. She told me that Polly McDiarmid Scrodino was getting along fine.

A Christmas card from Amelia Hollis Scott, our illustrious Alumnae Association President, promised a long letter soon with special news. Wish the rest of you would send some, too (plaintive voice).

1930

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Mona Stone (Mrs. Thornton A. Green) McMillan Farm, Marshfield, Wisconsin.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George S. Writer, Jr.) 21 5th Avenue, Nyack 3, New York.

Here is another deadline to be met, and very little with which to meet it, as almost no news has found its way out here to me!

I had a brief but grand visit with Alice Blake Crane in Madison over a lunch table last November. Alice is kept busy coping with her small son, Jeremy, who is now attending kindergarten. To my regret I was not in Madison long enough to see the young man. Alice and Frank and Jeremy spend a bit of each summer at their camp in the Flambeau region of nothern Wisconsin.

Marge Sturges Moose is the only one who has written since my last attempt to report the news. She is now living in Birmingham, Alabama. Marge sent me a cute picture of son "Robin," who is thriving.

The Alumnae Office reports that Sally Gammon, daughter of Jarvis Scele Gammon, and Beverly Smith, daughter of Dorothy Dabney Smith, are freshmen this year at Sweet Briar. So with mine we now have three daughters of 1930 back at SBC.

And now my friends, since no news with which to fill this column is forthcoming, let's open the nominations for class secretary for next year. I agreed to only one year at this, hoping there would be time to scramble around and find someone to take over for a longer period. If any of you would volunteer you would have the blessing of us all I really have not the time to do the thing properly, and have to find someone by June. I would like to nominate Liz Copeland Norfleet. With her experience in newspaper work and present contacts with many alumnaz, Liz should make us a perfect class secretary.

May the new year bring us all closer to Peace on Earth and Good Will to All Men.

193 t

REUNION YEAR

Class Scretary: Martha McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman) 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Natalie Roberts (Mrs. W. S. Foster) 2417 Lynchburg Avenue, Roanoke, Virginia.

A card came from Peg Ferguson Bennett in late September with the news that she was resigning as Registrar of Olivet College with the hope that the added rest would help her recover from arthritis. They will continue to live there for her husband is Dean of the College. The Bennetts managed a trip to Virginia last summer-stopping for a quick look at Sweet Briar, which they found as lovely as ever-but naturally very quiet at that particular season. Their son, Dexter, is back at Cranbrook School for his third year, and Stephen is in the fifth grade locally. I know that all of you join me in wishing Peg a quick and complete recovery in the future.

Another of our classmates who was back at Sweet Briar this summer is Ellen Eskridge Sanders. As you recall, Ellen's home is in Amherst and so the Sanders' spent their vacation there and the two children especially enjoyed the lake at the Briar. While there they met the Pannell boys also. Ellen saw Beck Strode Lee at Kenmore. On returning to Washington she expected to be very busy with the Woman's Club, also P.T.A. and Church work—the latter including Sunday School teaching. She also mentioned that she sees both Jean Sprague Hulvey and Vira Rose Whitebead Morse occasionally.

Gillette Hilton Pritchard and her husband have left Chicago and since early September have been located in Morganfield, Kentucky, as Gill's husband is at Camp Breckenridge. Both find Morganfield a pleasant change from the big city, and I am certain that their active young son must be enjoying it, too.

Aggie Cleveland Sandifer wrote me a letter containing several interesting news items. First and foremost—Martha McCowen Burnet had a son, John Alexander, born around mid-October. Mart's oldest son is a freshman in college this year and there are two girls at home. What fun they must be having with the new brother. Aggie and Bill spent a weekend in Atlanta with Hazel Stamps Collins and her husband, and attended the Kentucky-

Tech game. Later the Collinses had a party for them and there were five Briarites present. The Sandifers are building a house—sounds exciting but rather hectic in these times! Prudence, their older daughter, attended Camp Greystone last summer with Jean and Lucy Alexander, daughters of I ucy Moulthrop Alexander.

I had hoped to get my daughter, Jane, and Polly Woodward Hill's Jane together at the Sadler Wells Ballet in Cincinnati for at least an intermission chat but the Hills sacrificed the Ballet for the Princeton Triangle Show at young Jane's suggestion. I am sure that at 14 I would have made the same choice. Polly and Bob were in New York in October—saw "South Pacific" but found it disappointing without Pinza.

When I heard from Mary Stewart Kelso Littell in October, she and her husband had just returned from Tryon, North Carolina, where they had spent a week enjoying the golf and horseback riding. It seems that Stewart's daughter, Carolyn, is quite a horse woman in her own right, having won the Hunter Horsemanship Class at the Indiana State Fair in September. Later she took First and Second Place at the Ft. Wayne Charity Horse Show. She's attending Indiana University this year and plans to major in Fine Arts and minor in Education. Since Camp Atterbury has been reactivated (40,000 strong) Stewart is very busy with Red Cross work. She and her husband hope to go to Arizona in February if all goes well,

I was disappointed in not getting to attend the Sweet Briar Luncheon honoring four new freshmen in Columbus last September. For, with a son entering W & L this year I was especially interested in the new "crop" at our Alma Mater. However, as things worked out, he has done all right with mama's assistance and has found his way to the Briar on most week ends. My biggest thrill, which was touched with nostalgia, came when he called us from there on Thanksgiving Day having just enjoyed a marvelous dinner in the Refectory.

Needless to say, there has been a definite gap in my life this fall, with only one child at home, but chanffeiring my sub-deb daughter could be a full-time job if I succumbed to it. She has managed to get herself involved in everything from pounding the cymbals in the school band to heading a volley ball team.

What with our new Ice Arena here in Troy, I, too, am becoming a bit athletic in my old age. However, my first appearance on ice skates almost proved to be my last as I ended up in the hospital with left arm in a cast. No, I didn't fall—I was pusbed. Since then I have limited myself to square and folk dancing and bowling—so am managing to stay on my feet. Nevertheless, I intend to go back to ice skating after the first of the year so you had better write me so that I can record the news quickly—for who knows, it might be my right arm next time!

I know this reaches you too late to wish you a Merry Christmas, so will confine myself to wishing you all the best in the year of 1951.

Class Secretary: Marjorie Ward (Mrs. George H. Cross, Jr.) 2204 West 11th Street, Wilmington, Delaware.

Fund Agent: MILORED GIBBONS 918 First National Bank Building, Tampa 2, Florida.

Virginia Bellamy Ruffin wrote me in September that she and her husband had a grand summer at their cottage at Wrightsville Beach. They went to Roaring Gap for a week in June to put their daughter, Suzanne, in Camp Silver Pines for two months. Suzanne is cleven years old. Their son, Peter, aged nine, went to Camp Morehead for a month. With only their youngest, Virginia, aged three, at home it was much too peaceful and they were glad when camp ended. Virginia saw Virginia Hall Lindley in June when she visited Mary Lynn Carlson King at Wrightsville and again at Roaring Gap. It was their first reunion in ten years. Hazel

WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS FOR YOUR DAUGHTER?

If they include college, we shall be glad to consider — with you — her preparation.

Please address ST. ANNE'S SCHOOL (Epis.)
Box BA, Charlottesville, Va.

Our location is interesting and accessible; our experience is varied; our curriculum (grades VII-XII) is well-rounded; our emphasis is individual, based on the principles of Christian democracy.

Headmistress: Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Randolph V A. B. Bryn Mawr, M.A. Univ. of Va.

Dean: Miss Catherine Offley Coleman A.B. Sweet Briar, M.A. Mills Stamps Collins called Virginia from Wilmington, North Carolina, during the summer. She had been at a beach nearby. Virginia didn't see Hazel, but enjoyed chatting with her.

Fleanor Mattingly Littlepage writes from Norfolk that "there is nothing new about me or mine. 'Mine' consists of one M.D. husband and two love birds. I stay quite busy delivering babies for other people, but have none of my own."

It was fon to hear from Amalie Frank Kohn after all these years. George and Amalie had a 16th wedding anniversary in December and they have lived in Atlanta since their marriage. They have two daughters, Jacquelyn, 912, and Judy, 5. George is General Manager of Grier's Almanac Publishing Company. Amalie sees Lib Donglass Foote once in a while.

Marion Malm Fowler stopped at Sweet Briar while on a trip south to show her girls the college in hopes this will inspire them to go there. They are 13½ and 11½ so it won't be long before they will be planning to go to college. Marion's husband, Mac, is doing graduate work in prosthetic dentistry at the University of Michigan and hopes to get his Masters Degree in June.

Virginia Squibb Flynn has just moved to Darien, Connecticut. Her hosband was transferred to New York City and they were sad about leaving Winchester, Massachosetts, but are liking Connecticut more and more. Suibble's oldest son, Billy, aged 13, played on the Junior High Football team this fall and Michael looks like a football prospect in the near future. Sue Burnett Davis visited Squibble in October and they had a grand time together.

Elizabeth Job Jopp says she wrote from under their snowdrift this weik end before Thanksgiving in Pikeville, Kentocky. The Jopps had big plans for a Thanksgiving week end on a Virginia farm with some of their friends but the weather man stopped them in their tracks, Jobie and Gos drove 3,400 miles on their vacation to Key West, New Orleans, etc., and didn't see a single Briarite. However, she did talk to Betty Uber Fby on the telephone. Betty is just back from California on a pleasore trip killing time while her hosband, George, closed up an ice show in London, England. George is comptroller of the Harris Amusement Company. A letter from Ruth Kerr mentions the same blizzard. Ruth is busy with Girl Scout work and her Hamilton House is coming along very nicely. Wasn't her brochure handsome? I hope that it will bring her lots of business.

Thanks to a card from Martha McBroom Shipman I have some news of Jane White Borton. Jane said her Janey is a freshman, Bill a sixth grader, and Bob "oor high voltage charge." Janey has a horse, Smokey, and between riding and skiing they manage to get their exercise. Bill, Sr., is in charge of Atomic Medical Defense of the State of Oregon and is busier than ever.

Charlotte Magothin writes from Deerwood, Minnesota, that she has just spent ten days in Washington visiting her brother and his family. Her brother is in the Air Force. Charlotte had lunch with Helen Pratt Graff while there and enjoyed seeing her again. Charlotte's younger sister is being married January 5, so added to the usual Christmas rush, her life seems to be a continual bedlam,

From Cockeysville, Maryland, Anne Mac-Rae writes that she is very busy and happy in her work, assisting a bosy and progressive country doctor and having fun in her free time. Anne went to Bogota, Columbia, last sammer to visit her brother, which was very pleasant, but "no revolutions."

I will quote Alice Dabney Parker's card in full: "We have had a very fine and busy year. I went to the Symposium of the Arts at S. B. C. in March and was so thrilled and impressed by it that I wished the whole world could have been there. I went to New York in May and again in October, saw all the outstanding plays and did a little bit of everything. The second time I stayed a few nights with Betty Allen Magruder who has a charming apartment, which includes her office now that she's a practicing psychiatrist. She stays busy all day and early evenings, but we had some rare sessions in the wee small hours which carried me back to the Briar Patch, Irene Kellogg was in the City at the same time and we had a grand reunion. She is much better now after a long and grueling ordeal when one of her vertebrae kept jumping out of place. She has returned to Daytona Beach. My two girls and I spent most of the summer in Charlottesville. My older daughter gave her first dance at Thanksgiving-a rather awe-inspiring occasion for me. I am trying to be an organist these days in the little Episcopal Church, and am getting a tremendous kick out of trying to learn what I am doing,"

There were a few notes on my Christmas cards. Betsy Higgins Plummer writes from Tampa that she hasn't any news except that the Plommers have been spending a few weeks painting their house inside and out, the outside was done by professionals, but they did the inside walls themselves, and they are pleased with the whole idea. Ruth Remon Wenzel says Helen Nightingale Gleason and Iim Gleason were in Washington this fall during the American Bar Association Meetings and they had a fine time catching up on all the news. Sarah Phillips Crenshaw says that she hasn't been on north for a year, but has been in New Orleans several times. She and Pete both seem to keep busy and on the go constantly,

The Crosses were very doll doring Christmas, for Wardy, our youngest son, and I were more or less housebound with whooping cough, of all things. I didn't get to the Alumnae Representative meeting in Washington on January 6 for that reason.

In so many of the cards I have received since taking on this job of class secretary you have said that you are not active in your local Sweet Briar Clubs. I do hope you will have a change of heart, for Swest Briar needs your help through her clubs and you are missing a lot of fun. Please do write me all of your news.

Class Secretary: Doris Crane (Mrs. Samuel C. Loveland, Jr.) 331 Chester Avenue, Moorestown, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: GERALDINE MALLORY, 169 East Clinton Avenue, Tenafly, New Jersey.

Response to my cards was quite gratifying considering the time of the year.

A card too late for the last column came from Hawaii. Marge Gubelman Hastert was vacationing on the island of Kanai when my card arrived. She was busy getting the children ready for school. Her other activities include Den Mother for Cub Scouts and occupational theraphy at the Mental Hospital. Another invitation comes from Marge to all classmates. If anyone goes to Hawaii, be sure to look her up!

Mary Elizabeth Clemons Porzelius sent an answer a little too late. She, her husband Al, Bettie B, and Susan spent a night at the Boxwood Inn. The Porzeliuses took their children to Washington, Philadelphia and Williamsburg. Earlier in the summer they had taken the two girls by plane to Kentucky. Having experienced all modes of travel, Bettie B, and Susan are now airminded.

Commuting from her farm ten miles out of Spartanburg claims most of the time of Lena Jones Craig. She has two children—Susan, 8, and Tommy, 6. Lena is on the Charity League Board and interested in Garden Club work. She sees Emma Hill; who is Mrs. Lewis Boyd now.

A card from Connie Murray Weller of Princeton reports no personal news, but she had met Sime Stockton Griswold on the street and Sime told her that Jossie Jones Garlick was in Princeton on November 26, the day after our hurricane. Sime had seen Jossie who looked wonderfol and just as she had in 1930. At the end Connie slips in the fact that she has four children and a very nice husband. Good heavens! I do believe it's Jossie who has the above. Connie will have to send a card for the next issue to let us know just who is struggling with four!

Elizabeth Schlen Stainbrook is still living in the country—Branford, Connecticat, to be exact. Her husband, Edward, is an assistant professor of psychiatry at Yale Medical School. Judith, their daughter, is 4. They all went back to Virginia for Christmas. Elizabeth reports that Betty Taylor Antrim has her third son, born in November. Betty still lives in Richmond. Things are the same with Elizabeth and she hopes they will continue so in this uncertain world. Amen.

A lovely house and a wonderful life keep Ella Jesse Latham content in Alexandria, Virginia, where her husband, Bob, teaches at Episcopal High School. Penny, aged 9, is in the fourth grade and average, adds Ella, with a "Thank goodness" tucked in. Son Joe, 8, third grade, is all boy but both add up to loads of fun. Ella corresponds from time to time with Sue Graves Stubbs and Susalee Belser Norris,

From Brookline, Massachusetts, a card written by Langhorne Watts Austen reveals that she is having a busy time managing a maidless household including three children. The oldest is now going out in the evenings so for the first time the Austens are waiting up for her to come in. Langhorne is on the Altar Guild at church and works weekly for the hospital Thrift Shop plus helping with the Community Fund, etc. Doubt if Langhorne can now report no snow in Boston as she did on card.

Helen Martin of Ambler, Pa., visited Janet Martin Person on her vacation this year. Helen bought a horse last spring but is beginning to think she is a lit'l bit past the age. Hope to hear more later about what Helen is doing.

Cotton Skinner Shepherd modestly writes of not much news but it seems that life is far from dull for them! In the fall, Cotton and her husband went to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, for a short time. In November another vacation (from what kind of business, please) they divided between New York and family visits in Raleigh and Greenville, N. C. They are now back in Miami bracing themselves for the coming "season" which promises to be busier than ever.

Four daughters leave Margaret Austin Johnson little time for her own interests and I can well imagine. The Johnsons live a sort of "You can't take it with you" type of hilarious family life that is worth everything.

It seems amazing how many of us have four children. Californian Charlotte Tamblyn Tufts is breathless keeping up with the social life of her three boys, 13, 11, and 7 and one spoiled girl of 5! Undaunted she goes each Sunday to teach a class of 25 teen-agers in Sunday School. Most of the time Charlotte feels she is miles behind them but she doesn't worry about the future of this country knowing so many good citizens now growing up.

Another classinate with four! Karen, 10; Sandra, 9; David, 7; and Peter 2, belong to Elizabeth (Libby) Giesen Lindsay. Libby has a big house—no maid—and above all, she has started a little photographic business of her own which has become more fun than anything that she's done up to now. She took all her children to Wisconsin for the summer where they had a maryelous time.

A card from Jane Martin Person tells us more about Helen. It now can be told that Helen also vacationed in Avalon, New Jersey, and that "nag" referred to on Helen's card wins an occasional ribbon at shows around Ambler. Jane and her husband are still farming at Stanchfield, Minnesota, but they hope never to experience another drought like last year. The Persons are expecting their third "blessed event" in June.

So glad to hear from Mary Bess Roberts Waynick among others. Mary Bess has moved again from Roanoke to Norfolk and is now living on the Naval Base in Quarters P-36. She has been in Roanoke a year and was formerly in Newport News. She is interested in bridge, gardening, sewing and books as well as dancing and office work. To this Marv Bess adds a job, a small house and a dng. All adds up to quite an active life. She finds much satisfaction in the ALUMNAE NEW; as I hope you all do.

Malcolm and Jean tan Horne Baber sent an attractive Christmas card on which Jean wrote that son Malcolm is in first grade and Bruce is just in everything. She and husband and older son spent a few weeks in Santa Fe last summer. It was Mac's first train trip and he loved every minute of traveling. A small jaunt to Canada completed the Baber's travels for the year. Jean's house, children and dog make plans almost useless as you all know.

Anne Marvin writes that in October she started taking a business course at the Jefferson School of Commerce in Charlottesville. It is most interesting, Anne says, and adds that she is working her head off (even studying harder than when at Sweet Briar). Someone asked her what she planned to do with her course when she finished it and her answer was—take a vacation to recuperate.

The perpetual motion of the holiday season has me still in a whirl, but I sincerely hope I have not overlooked any cards that were returned to me. Many thanks to you all for taking time out to answer. My situation can be summed up by the following true story: Christmas eve—dragged self to bed after making ready for early onslaught of four ragamuffins. Back kinked from struggling into house with a crate of oranges sent by sweet friend. On hack—heating pad on stomach awaiting proper temperature before turning over and placing on afflicted part. Six o'clock—children's voices. Realization that stomach is nigh burning up. Back still hurts.

A Happy 1951 and Peace be with you all.

1934

Class Secretary: MARY LEE RYAN (Mrs. Porter Strother) 798 Pemberton Road, Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan.

Fund Agent: MARTHA LOU LEMMON (Mrs. W. Frederick Stohlman) 11 Edgehill Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Our sympathy goes to the family of Martha Jean Humphrey's Douglas who died November 10. Martha was martied at her home, Van Wert, Ohio, in December 1937. She had lived in Indianapolis in recent years. Martha had been ill all this last year. She leaves two sons, Michael Humphreys, age 11, and Timothy Wells, age 7.

By far the largest part of this missive is "courtesy of Lou Lemmon Stohlman"—gleanings from the wonderful response you gave her Fund Agent questionnaire this past fall. I'd like to add my thanks to hers to all of you who "gave" with news of yourselves as well as with the checks. It is obvious that most of the time most of you are extremely bashful; I hasten to assure you that your erstwhile classmates are exceedingly interested in your activities. The one sentence answers are better than nothing but are tantalizing—please add the where, the when, and other details.

Daughter of Julia Shirley Patterson, '34.

First of all, congratulations to Mary Ann Page Guyol who is now "at George Washinton University where, 18 years after my cophomore year at college, I am now a junior." Any more students among you ladies?

Congratulations in the Infant Department: The Bradleys (Lou Dreyer) have adopted a son, John Dreyer Bradley, who was four months old as of Christmas Time. Lou says she will be strictly a homebody this winter,

It's a new daughter for Bob and Mary Moses Lindsey, bringing the total of small women in their house to three. They recently had a visit from Uarda Rosamond Garrett Sample, who lives in El Dorado, Arkansas, with hir husband and three children and is also leading the busy life.

Virginia Abshire Hartzog graduated from the University of Texas, now has a son and admits to being mo-e interested in military schools than girls' schools.

Dot Andrews wrote Lou that she sympathizes with the job of Fund Agent as she is treasurer of her Dog Club. Dot and her sister raise and show cocker spaniels and miniature poodles.

Gail Donobue Owrey sold her home in Wallingford. Pennsylvania, in July and moved with her children back to her home in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Jo Fink Meeks has three daughters, ages 11, 9, and 3; so maybe her ties with Sweet Briar may be renewed in the not too distant future. Jo said, "am involved in the usual round of activities, being a Girl Scout Leader to twenty-one 11 year olds keeps me busy and almost buffaloed. It wouldn't be so bad if that were the only thing I tried to do, but-", Well, you know Jo. The Meeks spent August at Harbor Springs, Michigan, where they had a surprise visit from Elsa Gerstacker Allen and her husband, Bill. They were in Northern Michigan to pick up their small son and his horse from a nearby camp. lo says that "in the fall of '49 Elsa had a severe case of polio from which she has recovered remarkably well. She still has daily treatments and the chances are good for a complete cure. Our sympathy surely goes to Flsa-also an acclaim of "Stout Fella!"the note I received from Elsa in the spring (see June issue) never mentioned her health, Jo's sister-in-law, Frances Meeks Ford, has recently returned from Honolulu where she lived for 9 years. Her husband has an International Harvester Agency at Stanwood, Washington, a small town on Puget Sound, Thelma Hamfen Fried, with her children not in camp this summer and no help, had a busy little season but her energy seems to be n full supply.

Mary Jane Hayden Nichols is living in Trueson and has a 712 year old daughter. The most recent specific news mentioned was a trip to Quebec in 1946 as delegate to the Junior League Conference.

Helen Hoffecker Roehm claims that her 7 year old son and her baby are still keeping her "completely disorganized and incompetent." Lou adds here that this is the way custodians of small people usually feel. Cheer up, girls? After a while you will become accustomed to never getting anything done exactly when you'd like nor how you'd like.

Fleanor Ann Clement Tunison is living in Syosset, Long Island. She says that she has drifted away from the S. B. group because they were gone so long during the war. She has no children. Lou says that's all the facts but her letter was so ebullient that she felt that she had had a long talk with "Bubbles" and that she had earned her nickname fairly.

Nancy Hotchkis Boschen has lived in Venezuela, Colombia, and Honolulu, and is now tied down with three children in Scarsdale. "Our summers used to be spent in hunting and shooting, but now we have switched to sailing."

Therese Lamfrom Beck is one of the three presidents of Alumnae Clubs from '34. (Elly Alcott Bromley heading the Cleveland group and Betty Suttle Briscoe piloting Philadelphia). Therese says the Milwaukee Club is going to entertain both Mrs. Pannell and Miss Glass this season. She also says that she has a 13 year old son and a 12 year old daughter, "having a hand in their school activities keeps me weak—but young in spirit, I hope."

Priscilla Holcombe is in the Foreign Service with a military address out of New York. Can anyone supply any details?

Marjorie Lasar Hurd has been working on a drive for her prep school. How is the house coming, Marj?

Dotty Prince Oldfield, who finished at William and Mary after she left our class, has three children, one possible Briarite "who are right with me and over me while I am writing," (Lou's comment, "three years ago I would have taken this statement with a grain of salt. Not now!") Remarkable isn't it how the little dears develop a sudden and all consuming interest in Mother or need for Mother whenever she sits down at her desk. This afternoon has been fraught with youngsters needing their skate laces tightened, another kettle of hot chocolate prepared, etc., plus my figuring how best to board over the kitchen linoleum so that the skaters can get about to make their own drinks and wash their own cups!

Bob, husband of Marjorie Thuma Anning, '34, and Bob, Jr., age 10, Sydney Helen, age 7, and James Burton, age 3.

Julia Shirley Patterson wrote that they had a perfect 2 weeks at Pawleys Island, S. C., with Bibby, Lucy, their husbands and their children. "My life is typical of the one they say the college graduate should not lead—completely submerged in the slough of details of housework, feeding children, washing children, ad infinitum. The fewer vou have the more time you let it consume. I am hoping to re-educate myself along with Shirley—it is remarkable how much I am learning now that she is in school." (Good luck, Boots! I am finding that the dust of 20 years hangs thick over my Latin conjugations.)

Ruberta Bulley Hesseltine's mother died during the summer. I'm sure the class joins me in sympathy. "Sis" and her husband and daughter have gone to live with her father in Arlington, Massachusetts.

Anne Corbitt Little writes, "We have finally bought a house after all these years of moving. Lamar still travels, but it does give one a new outlook on life."

Mary LePine has been busy with the five children of her sister, Madeline, who died last spring. She savs, "They have been with us singly, doubly, and even in fives for a big part of the summer. That is where my time goes! Planning parties for teen-agers down to reading nursery rhymes to three year olds makes for a big repertoire,"

Marjorie Thuma Anning wrote a grand letter with news of their first real vacation in nine years—two weeks in Florida last summer. They had a wonderful time. She wrote that the long lost Martha Diehl is Mrs, John J. Phillips, of Moorpark, California, where they run a lemnn ranch and have two daughters, aged 6 and 7, and a son, 4.

Elizabeth Eskridge writes from Arlington, Virginia, that she was at home in Amherst for Thanksgiving and saw Miss Morenus and Mrs. Dew there, as well as having a glimpse of Anne Marvin in Charlottesville.

Marjory Prentis Hirshfield has moved to Washington from Cleveland but gave no other news.

Betty Suttle Briscoe was likewise cryptic and said she and her husband were off for a two weeks vacation in November but not a word about what direction they were taking.

Betty Carter Clark, 'way out in Pasadena, says that they took their boys last summer "to Fallen Leaf Lake near Tahoe and at last found something like the country we used to know in our summers in the north woods. They've started an S. B. Club out here—three meetings a year. Eleanor Cooke Esterly is about the only one I see more frequently."

Having quoted Lou Lemmon Stohlman several times, I'd better tell you something about her. She has had quite a busy fall. Dispatching two batches of 177 letters each ought to be enough (I trust all the class rewarded her efforts most handsomely) however she helped the League of Women Voters in their finance drive, "the rest of the time I sit around and wish I were in Cuba or some other place where the sun shines and the air is warm. New Jersey has been cold and gray day after day after day. But the sun shines every time another letter comes from one of the '34 ladies. At the risk of sounding like Edgar Guest, I say so and I nean it." They had quite a time in the late fall storm which swept the Eastern seaboard. "We were not very hard hit ourselves, but neighbors' trees kept falling and breaking wires. Two and a half days without heat and light was mild compared to the difficulties of friends whose roof blew off and who had no facilities for days, including water. Ten days after the storm the power is so low about 6 p. m. every evening that the furnace zoes off. We finish eating dinner and go to bed. It is an excellent excuse to catch up on all my reading instead of getting the mending done." Lou's account of her trip to Council meeting: "In October I spent three days at S. B. meetings of the Alumnae Council and the Joint Council, a most interesting group which convenes the day before the Alumnae contingent assembles. Mrs. Pannell presides, and she very graciously had us to lunch preceding the meeting, so we had an opportunity for some non-business conversation. She is as attractive as her pictures and also has an unusually charming voice. My knowledge of the Alumnae Council was very dim; we were thoroughly busy for two solid days and half the nights-partly with hearing from administrative officers (the President, the Dean, the Director of Admission, the Treasurer) what is going on in their departments, partly with deciding what alumnae can do and how to do it. It certainly is a sterling group of ladies and I enjoyed every minute of seeing them operate. Being on the Council brings home to me one of the greatest of all advantages of having gone to Sweet Briar, viz., that one can suddenly become a member of a group of erstwhile strangers and feel almost immediately that they have been friends since childhood. I suppose that every club and fraternity has this as one of its ideals, but this is one circumstance in which it comes true." Lou adds that as of November 1 we had more contributors than any other class and were beaten out for top amount by only $7. Who'll contribute $8?

Our fall has had its ups and downs-the Bromleys (Elly Alcott) came for 1 week end in October and brought Ann. It was a great deal of fun. In November we had a freak accident-drove up an overpass to find when we got to the top that an accident had just happened over the rise and their lights were There was a car across both our lanes and just a bit beyond a car across both the other lanes. Porter managed to swerve and avoid both cars but then we met a piece of ice, went round and round, hit the guardrail and went over, fortunately on our own highway, and not in the highway below. We were extremely fortunate-with all three children with us, the only damage was a squashed car, one broken collarbone for Porter, a little glass in the head for Sally, a bit of glass in the eye for me, and nothing but nightmares for the boys.

Instead of wishing you a Happy New Year, by the time this reaches you it should be Happy Valentine's Day, so I'd better change my wish a bit to say that I hope this finds you getting all you hoped from the New Year.

Class Secretary: DOROTHY BARNUM (Mrs. Josiah G. Venter) Johnsons Point, Branford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: GENEVA CROSSMAN (Mrs. Edson S. Stevens) 5492 Sunnycrest Drive, Route 1, Birmingham, Michigan.

A nice card from Helen Schneider says that Sarah Turpin Habberton lives very near and that she has two darling little girls: Alice, 3 (Helen's godchild) and Anne, 6 months, a "beautiful babe." Helen also says that she saw Helen Wolcott recently when they went to a District of Columbia Sweet Briar Alumnae meeting on a dark and rainy night.

Helen. Wolcott writes that she has a new job-"same place, different man. I'm secretary to the newest Member of the Board (of Governors of the Federal Reserve System). It really keeps my nose to the grindstone, but is intensely interesting." Helen also writes that Sue Strassburger Anderson and family have moved to Tollhoure, California, in the foothills of the Sierras, to ranch and raise cattle. Sue wrote Woollie a most enthusiastic report and seemed to be getting a kick out of riding again. Woollie had news too of Hester Kraemer Avery who sent her a Christmas card saying that they are stationed in Garnisch, Germany, where Jimmie is Recreation Director.

From Anne Baker Gerhart comes news of the third addition to her family, second boy, Andrew Howard, born September 22, 1950. Little Andrew kept his mother practically inactive for almost a year, so Anne's outside activities have been nil. She says that the Milwackee alumnae enjoyed a visit with Miss Glass when she was there for the celebration of the 100th Anniversary of Milwackee Downer College.

Had one of Eleanor Rust Mattern's nwn hand-blocked Christmas cards with a note about her two boys, Johnny of kindergarten age who loves his school, and Danny who is some younger. Eleanor and her husband and children had a trip east last year, and we hope to see them again before too long.

A Christmas card from Betty Myers Harding tells of a trip to Boston to s e some of her family, and plans to have a family gathering at her home in Westport at Christmas, She also writes that she has seen Miss Robinson and Mrs. Lill. During the "great storm" that we on the eastern seahoard had at Thanksgiving time, Betty says that they were without light, cooking or heat for two and a half days, and it certainly made them appreciate the conveniences all over again. Chez Venter was luck'er for we were without light only 12 hours, and fortunately lost nothing in our deep freze. Had gas heat and hot water, and gas for cooking. Never saw such wind and water though, Our house was deluged with water all day long. Standing at our second floor windows was like being on the bridge of a ship in a storm (according to my husband). But we suffered no real damage beyond a few shingles lost and two pine trees down.

Had Christmas cards from Sarah Miller Adelman and Cynthia Harbison Heye, but no special news.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of the following, please let me or the Alumnae Office know. We have no addresser:

Elizabeth Cotter (Mrs. Raymond M. Gilmore)

Claudia Dewolf.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Dear 37ers:

We are temporarily lacking a class secretary, but I couldn't let this magazine go to press without telling you of Terry Shaw's marriage to Charles P. McCurdy, Jr. The ceremony took place Nov. 18 in Pelham Manor, New York, and they are now living in Williamsburg where Charles is executive secretary of the Alumni Association of the College of William and Mary.

Following so capable an alumnae secretary as Terry is difficult, but I am thoroughly enjoying my work and life at Sweet Briar. Ruthie, age 6, and I live in Garden Cottage, the tiny house in the boxwoods next door to Sweet Briar House. We enjoy tremendously the privilege of having Mrs. Pannell as a neighbor. Ruthie plays with Clifton Pannell and they both attend the Amherst School.

I hope that many of you will come to Sweet Briar for a visit while I am here—and by the way, how about one of you volunteering to be class secretary?

Do come see me,

Maggie Cornwell Schmidt,

1938

Class Secretary: LUCY TALIAFERRO (Mrs. Charley C. Nickerson) 80 Battin Road, Fair Haven, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: KATHERINE HOYT, 152 Forest Avenue, Caldwell, New Jersey.

In the post-Christmas melee, it's hard to know where to start writing you gals, so I'll just dive in with what I have. One card I was particularly pleased to get was Betty Smartt Johnson's with the picture of her two girls and little boy. Betsy is eight, Barbara is four, and Clay is nine months-so he also should have been included in our Boys' Month report way back last spring! Smeady says the children aren't always as solemn as their picture, but they're quite a crew to be proud of: Betsy with brown hair, Barbara with Smeady's blondeness, and young Clay looking just like his daddy. I hope all you girls will remember that I put pictures like this in our scrapbook for a rehath whenever we get together.

I also had a post card from Cobbie—Mary Cobb Hulse—sometime in the fall. She says she and Mary Thompson Ball and Connie McDuffic Turner attended a Junior League convention together last year, then all retired, and their work is being taken over by Barbara Derr Chenoweth. Thompson is matriculating at the University of Alabama under Hudson Strode, the author. That gang seems to get together a lot, between summer at the beach and League activities. Cobbie was generous enough to say they miss us "Yankee gals" though.

Some of our other cards seem to show our gang is still moving around in houses. Marion Fuller Kellogg says they have been in their new house, down the road from the other one but this one they built, about a year ago, which they love. Macky somehow stays busy as ever—with Ann, 91/2 and in 4th grade, David 7 and in 2nd grade, and year-old Steve. Macky, even at that, had canned over 50 quarts of applesauce, made crahapple jelly, and found time to be on the Girl Scout Council, a Red Cross Captain, and Room-mother for David's class!

Rilma Wilson Allen is delighted to now have me over the barrel where 1 owe her a letter. She too moved as of November 1, to a two-story house that she is most pleased to have a fence around so they can turn young Robert loose. She says there are plenty of children around, plus being a few blocks from school—when they need it. Rilma said the Charlotte girls had attended a luncheon for Mrs. Pannell and all liked her so much. A note on Judy Bemis Wills' Christmas card told me that she too has moved, to the shore—Darien, Connecticut—and that they like it so much.

A card from Marion Brown Zaiser says that her family were refugees from the Labor Day hurricane, their little beach home nearly washed away, so they have bought a new one and are in process of getting it furnished gradually. Brownie had just finished some strenuous campaigning for a local school board issue—successfully, too. And at time of writing, she was in the midst of packing to spend Christmas with the Zaisers in lowa, where her two "Cracker" boys hoped to see their first snow.

One week end this fall when Charley was away, Kay Hoyt came down overnight with me, and we had a wonderful "catch-up." She brought down her red plaid slacks and we just sat around and bulled-except when Clark would make her take him out and throw his touch football around. They made quite a team. Of course, we Nickersons had a wonderful Christmas, since Clark is just big enough to be initiated into Santa Claus. He was overawed with it all, but is making a fast comeback and using all his toys so hard that even the unbreakable records break! Even Paul was good to us, he sat in his little chair and laughed and watched and didn't whimper for breakfast till all the wrappings were off, which isn't bad for an eight-months old is it? Goodbye till next time, and send me your news even if I don't always post card you.

Cynthia wrote such a delightful letter last time that I begged her to do it again this issue, and just let me do the grubbing for news. She would have none of it, however, so here goes with the latest.

The biggest plum of news comes from Helen Schmid Hardy, who recently had twins, Sylvia, 7 pounds, and Robert, 7½. These added to her three boys gives her the grand total of five children, and as far as I know, the only twins in the class. This ties "Hug" with Mary Elda Stein Kantz as having the biggest families in the class. Mary Elda is living in Muscatine, Iowa, and her three daughters and two sons range in age from 8 years to 9 months.

Mary Miller Naquin announces the arrival nf Stuart, which brings her total to four with Susan, 6, Carole, 4, and David, 3. Her husband, Howard, is in his fourth year of a five-year residency in Opthalmology at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Mary wrote that she was about to embark on a project at the University of Maryland, teaching medical students something about the "meaning of illness" to the patient and his family and the emotional and psychological reactions to disease.

Sterling Brown Calder arrived at the home of Duncan and Mary Frances Burnbardt Calder on December 10, 1950, weighing in at 6 pounds, 34 ounces. Jim and I had cocktails recently with Florence Merrill Pilkinton and Dick and admired at length their beautiful and poised four-year-old daughter, Carolyn. Young Richard Blanton Pilkinton, Jr., who had arrived on October 4, 1950, was tucked away in bed and not available for inspection. Flo and Dick have a lovely home in Georgetown conveniently located near Dick's place of business, the Georgetown Branch of Riggs Bank. Flo gave me news of Helen Patton Wright. They are now living in New Orleans, Louisiana, where Helen's husband is a judge.

The Christmas mail brought a card from Margaret Dowell Cochran, who was planning to spend the holidays with her family in Washington. Mag, John and young Jeff are living in Detroit, where John is associated with Ford Motors. I also heard from Ruth Goodwin, who as a secretary in the Personnel department of Reynolds Metals Company in Richmond, interviews and tests candidates for jobs. Dorothy Cambbell O'Connor wrote that all the O'Connors spare time, energy and money have recently gone into adding two rooms to their house-one for the children, the other a new entrance hall and closed-in porch for all. She and Bill are looking forward to leaving the frigid North to bask in the Florida sun for two weeks in February.

What spare time Clara Call Frazier can find from being a den mother is spent on the golf course, where according to newspaper reports she manages to capture a trophy or two. Bill is deeply engaged in the textile business and just recently opened a sewing and fabric center in Shirlington just down the hill from where I live in Arlington. Golf seems to be occupying the attention of a number of our classmates. Agnes Spencer Burke is a fiend about the game, and Mildred Moon Montague finds means of deserting her broad of three boys for the golf course frequently, to judge from the clippings she sends me.

Aelise McMinn Young, husband George, and sons George, David and Bryan, came to Richmond for Christmas. Aelise says she likes living in Watertown, Connecticut, but misses Virginia terribly. According to Aelise, Anne Conant Weaver is building a house in Marblehead, Massachusetts, for herself and her two young daughters. Knowing Anne's great love for sailing, we wondered if a boat landing would be conveniently placed just outside the front stoop.

At the Sweet Briar Day luncheoo Frances Wilson Dowdey told me that a book by Isabel Burroughs Dunn ("Phoopy's" sister) had been accepted by the publishers. The book is entitled "Maria and the Captain" and, I understand, is about the Burroughs family. Be on the look-out for it. Frances said the Ladies' Home Journal was going to run a zondensation in an early issue.

Martha Rector McGee broke down and wrote me a Christmas note enclosing pictures of her beautiful home and young son, and herself in blue jeans giving "Marse" Robert a bath. She went into raptures over her blond, blue eyed baby—"always laughing and always wet—but wonderful!"

Talked to Peggy Caperton Ranken on the phone. She, Bill and Margaret Tucker spent the holidays with her family who are living in Richmond now. She and Bill were leaving to spend the night with Nida Tomlin Watts and Bob in Lynchburg. Peggy is living in Seaford, Delaware, her husband being a chemical engineer with DuPont. Last summer when they were in Richmond, Peggy had the Richmond gals in the class of '40 and their husbands over for cocktails—and it was old home week—the gals in one corner yapping about SBC and the husbands on the porch discussing football, business, golf, etc.

Helen Cornwell Jones sent a beautiful Christmas card—silhouettes of their three soos—Danny, 7, Jonathan, 4, and Laurie, 1. She and Homer were flying to St. Louis to spend Christmas with her family. There are 22 in the Cornwell family now, and they were all together for the first time in five years. Afterwards they went to Chicago to be with Homer's family. The Joneses have moved to Barrington, Rhode Island, and have a large rambling house near Naragansett Bay.

I know you will all be distressed to learn that Parge Woods Gillette's brother, Dick, died very suddenly of an embolism, which was a terrible shock to the family. Parge, Lou and their two children are deeply engrossed in building their dream house near Rochester, Michigan, Speaking of dream houses, Elizabeth Gockley McLellan writes that they live in a perfectly hysterical house in Freeport, New York. It was formerly a garage and chauffeur's quarters and took them months to remodel-fun for the first three weeks but agony the rest of the time. She says not to believe those articles about people who do their own remodeling and just love it. She wrote that she ran into Mary Petty Johnston Bedell and her handsome husband on the Cunard Line pier last spring. They were both meeting people-not coming in themselves. Mary Petty has a beautiful home in Richmond and two fine sons. Wood is in the insurance business.

Had a lovely long letter from Connie Chalkley Kittler in which she said they were facing one of those upheavals which take place ever so often in the life of Navy people. Kit has orders for Norfolk the first of the year, and they expect to make Connie's family's home in Gloucester their base of operations until they find a place to live. She says they hope to find something big enough to accommodate them and their three children and still have space for visitors-especially if they are close to Virginia Beach! She never hears from any Sweet Briarites except Ethel James Milburn, who is in Hong-Kong with Ken "happy as a clam in spite of all the war clouds around here." Helen Taylor, our other far-flung alumna, is still in China with her parents practicing medicine. She expected to come home around Christmas time, but didn't make it.

Jim and I had a delightful visit with Cynthia Noland Young and Karl in November on the occasion of the Yale-Princeton game-dismal game from the Yale point of view, but an extremely gay week end. Cynthia and Karl are wonderful hosts, have an attractive home and three terrific children. We're expecting them to visit us in Arlington the first of the year when Karl has business in Washington. Arlington, Alexandria and Washington are full of SBC'ers. We play bridge occasionally with Clara MacRae Causey and Pete, who is with the Central Intelligence Agency, and Ginny Allison Haywood and her doctor husband are just a stone's throw away. Jean Tyrce Willman lives in Falls Church with her Navy husband and three children. She gave me the news that Barbara Godfrey is well on her way to a Ph.D in California. Jean said she had heard recently from Ruth Collins Henry, who has been living in England for the past three years. You will be sorry to learn that one of Ruth's four children was killed in an automobile accident last summer. Jean had also heard from Martha Ingles Schrader, whose husband is a Lieutenant-Colonel stationed at Wrst Point, Mickie Mitchell Gillis went to a party given by Ellie Snow Lea and reports that she saw Connie Currie Fleming, Nan Dickie Neil, and Midge Fleming Gray and husbands. Midge lives in the same apartment building as Ellie in Orange, N. J. Small world. The world is wide for the Elliots-Chattanooga, Scotland, India, Marblehead, and now California. Nancy sent a darling picture of winsome Miss Enid and young Johnny and announced that they all love Pasadena.

Another "lost" alumna has come to light -Rosemary Bjorge Johnson, who is now living in Yorktown where her husband is stationed at the U. S. Naval Mine Depot. She has a little daughter, Susan, and a young son. Bruce.

Cards also came from Jane Bush Long from Augusta, admitting that she was a poor letter writer, and from Jane Westphalen Gray, who reported that the St. Louis Sweet Brian Club had been quite active this year and has been a lot of fun.

A Christmas note from the Barkers, our class sponsors, was full of good news about the Junior Year in France which Dr. Barker is directing. Seventy-nine juniors from colleges and universities all over the States are in Paris this year taking advantage of the wonderful opportunity to live and study abroad for a year. One of them is a former student of mine from Richmond, Grace Wallace, who writes she is working hard but having the time of her life. Well do I know it! Cynthia does the next letter, so do send her some news. It's loads of fun to hear from you. Incidentally, the Class Reunion Book full of pictures and notes on classmates is in the Alumnae Office. A note to Mag Cornwell Schmidt will bring it to you. It's really well worth the trouble! Adios, one and all.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 2719 Hampshire Avenue, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH DOUCETT (Mrs. John E. Neill) 1177 California Road, Tuckahoe, New York.

A happy 1951 to you all-and that 1951 should remind everyone that it is 10th reunion year, if you can imagine anything that was that remote being right around the corner now. I hope we can gather a good-sized crowd in June, if possible.

Christmas helped the column by bringing in cards and notes. I do have some previous unreported items, which I shall record without further ado. Shirts Shaw Daniel and husband Dick became parents of Dorothea Winston, October 9. She was a husky one, weighing in at 8 lbs., 6 oz. By the holidays Shirts was able to report that young Dicky was crazy about sister Dottie.

A nice card from Piney Martin Patterson this fall said they were moving to San Juan, Puerto Rico, in November, where Pat was opening another branch of the family factory, and where they expect to stay two years. Piney's nice family of three children are: Brooke, in second grade, Fay in Nursery School and Doug in play pen. Anyone traveling that direction had best look up Mrs. Eugene F. Patterson, 3 Caoba Street, Santurce, Puerto Rico.

A note from Wilma Zeisler Lee brings us up to date on her activities. Her little girl Sandra was two in October-she is a tiny one with a mass of short curls and lots of pep, to quote her mother. Wilma says they love living in the small town of Rutherfordton, N. C., where she's busy with bridge parties, acting as scout leader and working in the church and garden club.

Butch reported hearing from Barbie Nevens Young. Barbie and her family, moving with the Army, have departed Texas for Lawton, Oklahoma. Barbie said she'd seen Mary James on television, which, by the way, is the first faint whisper of Mary's whereabouts for almost four years. Anyone know more?

Franny Baldwin Whitaker writes they're still civilians, so far, and busy with their new house and yard, "the law," various activities and two strenuous sons, but grand boys, nevertheless. Meade is now 4 and redhaired Martin is 17 months.

Lillian Fowlkes Taylor had a son, Tyler, 3rd, last September. Franny said they are building near Tis Scibels Frothingham, both not far from the Whitakers.

Lillian Breedlove White wrote about starting a caravan from Philadelphia, come June. She and H. A. Littleton Hauslein could get under way, pick up Dottie Bennett Black in Baltimore, then Mary White and Janie Loveland Byerts in Arlington. If you girls hadn't heard the plans, you know about them now and plan accordingly.

Betty Joe McNarney Williams said she and "Douce" were going to do likewise up New York way.

Peg Tomlin Graves was home from Lynchburg this fall, and one day we shed the children and responsibilities and wheeled down to Louisville for lunch and chatter with Mimi Worthington Foster. The Fosters have recently moved into a lovely home, in a new sub-division on the outskirts of Louisville. We gave it careful inspection and approval, as well as Mimi's two blond youngsters, Louise, who is in nursery school, and young Wheeler. Our parting shot was to make definite plans to return for the 10th.

That's all-I'm hoping that for March, everyone will crash through with news, for if things go according to precedent, after 10 years, it may well be my swan song and some kind, worthy, and more literary soul will take over.

Class Secretary: RUTH JAQUOT (Mrs. Rone B. Tempest, Jr.) Box 1020, Santa Rita, New Mexico.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA BEASLEY (Mrs. Richard Holzer) 219 N. Broad Street, Lancaster. Ohio.

Best wishes for the new year to all of you, and I hope you do as well by me as you did in the mail returns for this issue! Thanks so much for the many replies and at the same time, let me remind you that Beazle urges everyone not to forget that check, be it ever so humble, for the Alumnae Fund. The record for our class last year, she says tactfully, "wasn't sensational."

Our crop of future alumnae continues apace, and Beazle (who is Mrs. Richard Holzer) reports a daughter, Jenny, who will be about six months old at the time this is published. "The grandparents," says the Fund agent, "have already bought the Shetland." Does she expect us to be surprised?

Margaret Preston Newton reports a new daughter, Laura Preston, born July 17, and says she "is a beautiful child." Again, should we be surprised? Pres reports they were in Roanoke this past summer and saw someone who had been in Asheville and had seen Ruth Hensley Camblos, and that she did herself see Dolly Moomaw Hall at the assembly, met her husband and heard all about the baby.

Arrival of her third daughter, Constance Breckinridge Brewer, on May 29 is reported by Grace Lanier Brewer. The others are Grace, 5, and Betty, 2. In September Grace and Carlos moved into their new home in Clarksville, Tennessee. She says they have "gone overboard on the subject of antiques." With all this she has found time to take on a Sunday School class now which follows the famous (and taxing) Ligon system, with lessons planned for each child individually—and Grace has 19 seven-year-olds in hers'

Betsy Gilmer Tremain had her third daughter, Judith Blair, October 24, according to Ann Hauslein Potterfield. In early October Ann and Tom went to Charleston, West Virginia, where they bought a lot and plan to build a house "for company next July," Tom is going to practice there. After "a wonderful two weeks vacation sans all children," they went home via Richmond and saw Lucy Hodges Fuller, Allen, and the two children. The next week Ann drove to Sweet Briar for the fall meeting of the Alumnae Council, and speaks glowingly of Mrs, Pannell, and of Miss Pearl in her new capacity as Dean. She says "Fletcher Auditorium smelled as usual of paint, and rang with the sound of hammers and actresses. Ringer is producing good shows and everyone speaks highly of her work."

Mary Alice Bennett Dorrance wrote this she was in Southampton in September with her two boys, Johnny and Bennett, and a daughter, Mary Alice, who was born in February but whose arrival I think we've not mentioned here. She said she saw Margaret Kelly Gardiner and Cynthia Abbott Botsford in Westhampton at a cocktail party.

We do have the arrival of one son to record—Michael Richard, to Eddie Syska Peltier and Paul on November 14, weighing 7 lbs., 13 oz. He has a two-year-old hrother, Peter, The Peltiers are also very excited about their new house in Tuckahoe, New York, which they had moved into only two months previously. Eddic wrote "see Phyll Sherman Barnes often. Her baby, Betsy (6 months old) is just darling. Also keep in touch with Betty Doucett Neill who lives close by. She jost had a baby girl."

I know you will join me in extending congratulations to Catherine Coleman (I'm seared to call her Kippy now), whose appoint ment as Dean of St. Anne's School in Charlottesville was recently announced by Mrs. Thomas J. Randolph, Head-M.stress. Because of this great honor to our classmate, and because as our one time secretary she was so modestly silent about her accomplishments, I am including parts of her portions of the text of the announcement from the school.

"The new Dean has an A.B., magna currlaude, from Sweet Briar College; and an M.A. from Mills College, Oakland, California. She has done graduate work at the University of Iowa, Indiana, and Virginia. These things speak for the breadth of the new Dean's academic training. Majors in Mathematics, Philosophy, and Religion speak for its depth.

"Her experience includes six years of secondary school teaching, a year of tutoring students working under the Extension Division of the University of lowa, a fellowship at Mills, and a summer on the teaching staff of the McGuffey Reading Clinic of the University of Virginia.

"For two years Miss Coleman was teacher of Mathematics, School Secretary, and assistant to the Dean at St. Katherine's School, Davenport, Iowa. Since 1946 she has taught Sacred Studies at St. Anne's.

"She is a member of the National Association of Biblical Instructors and was a speaker at the March convention of the Southern Section at Nashville, Tennessee. She is also a member of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis. At present she is assisting Dr. Frances Triggs of the University of Maryland in work on graded textbooks in history for students with reading problems.

"Miss Coleman, as Dean, will continue to teach Bible and direct the reading program. Her new title will recognize past service as well as open doors to new accomplishments."

Less modest than Kippy, I will report I had a short story in the October issue of Charm, but I must add sadly that sales since have been nil and the prospect is discouraging. But who has troubles? Listen to Flush-Margaret Gu yn Tompkins: "Bud (her son Kenry) has had the rottenest summer-had a virus infection similar to polio twice, then tonsilitis, and then settled down to running a chronic temperature for weeks. In desperation the doctor ran tests on him for everything, all of which were negative. So, he said to let him be out and about, leading a normal life, and forget the fever. He hadu't been out of the house 20 minutes before he broke his leg! After that healed he had a sinus infection and we're presently waiting to have the tonsils out just any day now."

Isn't that terrific? Flush is working for the Harvey Travel Bureau in Houston and is planning a glorious bang-up vacation this spring, "leaning heavily toward a trip through England and Scotland."

Bobbie Engh Croft reports they have moved from California to the Chicago area "from now on," and she is having trouble getting used to cold weather again. Bobbie has three children; Billy 5½; Mary, 4; Doug, 3. She hopes to see something of some Briarites now.

Birth of a daughter, her second child, is reported for Jeanne Sanyer Faggi on September 4. The Faggis' temporary address is: 36 American Commission for Cultural Exchange for Italy, 2 Via Boncompagni, Rome, Italy. The baby has been named Cynthia (for Abbott), according to this word from Ann Lee Kremers Currie. Ann is living in Port Nelson, Ontario, Canada, and married to a Canadian. She writes she served for a time in the WAC hot did not get overseas, married; her husband was killed in France; she has a daughter, Arab; enjoys being "settled at last" and that "it is a very good life here."

Doris Ogden Mount writes she's always busy raising her two boys, the younger being almost 2 and "every time I turn my back he's into something." We know how that is, Oggie. She says she sees Jessic Marr Strahman often. Alice King Harrison wrote she and her husband spent a week end in November in Louisville with Dotty Hutchings Price and her family. "Her two little boys are just precious. The younger is just two days older than my Letitia so we can't wait to get them together (when they're older than six months, though)."

That winds up for this quarter, and again my thanks to all you busy, happy people. Write me again soon—and don't forget the Alumnae Fund.

May the New Year be a better nne than seem to be the prospects at the moment—particularly for a few more of us, such as "Tookie" Kniskern White and Byrd Smith Hunter whose husbands have been recalled into the Navy. At least the White's life (or maybe I should say "lives," as they continue to multiply like rabbits down there in the south seas) was not disrupted as much as it appeared according to Bob's first orders, which put him in the Mediterranean—not much appreciated having been taken in so involuntarily. However, the night hefore he reported they suddenly decided to station him right there in Honolulu—as Recreation Officer. Meanwhile Henry Hunter is stationed in Washington, D. C., leaving Byrd and the two children in Norfolk as places to live are hard to find around the capitol. The Navy has also shuffled Marjorie Shugart Dennehy around by sending Rod back to Annapolis after a delightful year in Cuba.

Our latest boosters of the basinette business include Martha Carey Holland, a November 16 arrival for Esther Jett Holland and Hugh, who are mighty proud and pleased parents. Esther wrote me, too, of Elsie Jackson Kelly's moving back to Lynchburg where she and Walter have bought a house very near the dear old Oakwood Country Club. Walter finished Georgia Tech in June. Another November birth was that of Elizabeth Fielding Smith, daughter of Beth Dichman Smith. Beth's only other news was that those ducks she was boarding finally made a nice duck dinner for her neighbor. And a note from Sandy Packard Hubbard announced the arrival of daughter No. 3 for Val Jones Materne. It's a good thing she got that son sandwiched in first. Now there's a likely person for Judy Snow Benoit to contact in her search for advice from other '43ers on "the care and shutting up of 4." Or she could soon ask Tookie or Elsie and probably a half a dozen others who are keeping right up with her. Judy and Arthur have been busy with the Junior League Follies and moving. Now she and Nancy Pingree Drake, who has just bought a new house, too, are very close to-

Another residence changer is Page Ruth Foster, who has sold their little house on "Artists row" and after a few months of shuffling between families, is about to buy a cottage in one of Baltimore's suburbs. I saw her at the Baltimore Sweet Briar luncheon and gab-fest, where she told me that Effice Siegling Bowers has recently moved, too, and has had another child since last heard from.

The old home town, where Worth and I spent the Christmas holidays and grabbed our week's vacation before '50 slipped by, had a very successful S. B. day which I enjoyed as Utica has no club or even enough potential members to form one. However, our new Baltimorean, Frances Taylor Trigg was not there so I hope to see her when we pass through again on our return from "the road." I think she is pretty well settled now though still without a phone, which never helped anyone in a strange town.

Brooks Barnes, Muie Grymes and Janie Findlay Tate are still among our New Yorkers and Janie wrote she had just discovered Peggy Rondin Foster lives only two blocks from her. I talked to Mu on the phone last fall and found her having an interesting time working for Radio Free Europe.

A late answer to my Angust plea-for-news cards came from Ann Jacobs Pakradooni, who told me of her 2 months stay at Cape May. N. J., where she saw several other Briarites on vacation, including Sally Jackson Mead and Betty Hanger Jones. And a note from Camille Guyton Guething tells of seeing Barbara Mc-Neill Blessing, who visited her after a previous stay with Louise Woodruff Angst in Kenilworth, Illinois. Camille has been working as chairman of one of the local Junior League Projects and also as Recording Secretary for the Oakland County Chapter of the Planneo Parenthood Federation.

That about concludes my present information plus all 1 could scrape off of Christmas cards so I'll rush to the nearest P. O. in hopes I've not missed the deadline. Have fun in '51—and write me about it!

We are finally settled in a cute, tiny apartment. We got all Christmas-ied up even unto a LIVE Christmas tree, which I put on our balcony to use next year—a Real Invetment, the florist told me, and because the Holiday Spirit was with me, I believed him.

I received a nice letter from Mildred Faulconer Bryant from which I will quote: "Mahlon and I built a new house this summer. Just as we were getting settled after moving in, Uncle Sam called. Now Scotty (Mildred's charming little boy, 17 months old in October, '50. Ed.) and I have a new home, but the Navy has our man. We live alone, but we don't like it. I saw Louise Hesson Shelburne this week. She lives in New Orleans now, but her father is very ill so she is back home on a visit. Sarah Norman Faulconer lives near me so I see her often. Her little Chesye makes a nice playmate for my Scotty."

A post card from Mugsie Abrash Salzberg last October tells me she and Arnold have moved to a darling house, with a large yard for son Harry, aged 2, to romp in. Arnold is Assistant Resident in surgery at MCV, and Scotty, son of Mildred Faulconer Bryant, '44.

Mugsie is doing interesting work with blind people.

Our Maryland correspondent, Pat Whita-ker Waters, writes that she, Jane Rice Mc-Pherson, Jinx, Sally Hollerith Nietsch and Ginny Lee Hall Teipel were all knocking themselves out over a bencfit Fashion Show and Tea for S. B. C. Alice Lancaster Buck and Peter week ended with Ginny Lee. I was very sorry to hear that Dot Denny Sutton was ill and I hope by this time she is all weil.

Mary White Hollander and family have moved up to the country and are waiting for their new house to be completed, which ought to be pretty soon. WE had hoped to see them out at Sydney Holmes Bales' cocktail party last week, but they couldn't come in for it. Anne Bowen Broadus was also in absentia as she was down in Bluefield for the holidays.

Phyllis Tenney Dowd is enjoying Cleveland and her husband Herbert likes his teaching job there, while working on his doctorate.

A newsy Christmas card just arrived from Fence Maury Valentine. "This week firm foundations will be poured for our house-to-be. It hopes to have a living room wall of thermopane glass overlooking the muddy James River if world conditions permit. If so, everyone is invited to come throw stones at the house-warming." By the time this issue comes out Fence will be in Florida spending two or three weeks basking in the sun.

And speaking of sun, Paulett Long and Gunner Taggart are "enjoying too the poinsettias in bloom all over and the sun suits instead of snow suits for the ninos. Drove through S. B. C. en route down on business here (Brownsville, Texas) in May and picked up news from Mrs. Lyman." It seems to me there is a new little face called Cornelia on Paulett's Christmas card—very cute and fat, and about five months old!

We've seen Janet Staples recently who is fine, looks wonderful and IS wonderful as she allows my child to sit on her lap for hours and pull her hair and or gnaw her knuckle and he's got four sharp little fangs, what's more!

RECENT AKRIVAIS . . .

Fmily Hope McCoy, candidate for the class of '71, birthday October 29, weight 6 lbs., 10½ ozs., parents Martha Lee Hoffman and Mac McCoy are both doing fine, too.

Garrett Rickards Bowden checked in with Ricky Rickards Bowden and Sidney on September 14, and weighed 8 lbs., 331 ozs.

"Betsy," Flizabeth Maury Valentine, named after her Mama, born June 4.

David Marshall Branch will be a May Day date for some lucky Briarite from the class of '71. He was born in May to Carlisle Morrissett Branch and Pat.

Thank you all for your Christmas cards. I loved them, and a happy, happy 1051 to all.

Class Secretary: Elisabeth Hicks, 1616-34th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Fund Agent: AUDREY BITTS, 211 West Fisher Avenue, Greensboro, N. C.

Hi all you classmates! Thanks a million for your cards and letters, those of you who wrote. And the rest, please drop me a line soon.

A lot of news about babies. And third babies, yet! How time flies. "Hedy" Edwards Davenport's third, Louise, born in September; Sarah Temple Moore's third son, Christopher, also in September; Kathy Murrill Wood all's third, a son, born sometime recently. Other recent additions are Franny Estes Seibels' new daughter; "Petie" Cross Tate's seven months old baby girl, "Puddin." Betty Avery Duff had her second son, Avery, last June; and Catherine Price Bass has a second, a girl, Barbara, aged nine months.

It's nice to know that so many 45'ers are becoming solid citizens and prospering to the point of building and buying new homes. Mary Haskins King wrote that she and her husband have bought a home in Greensboro, N. C., and are having a big time fixing it up. Their little hoy, Johnny Haskins, is 16 months old.

Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill and Sam are building a house in Hickory, and hope to move in by spring. Their two young 'uns are getting quite grown up—and to think, I haven't even seen them yet! Little Kathryn is four and Steve, nearly two.

Betty Carbangh Mann and Jimmy are building a house on Lookout Mountein, near Chattanooga. Tom and Sarah Temple Moore moved into their new home last summer. "Hedy" and Joe bought a house this past fall, so the Chattanooga group is quite large.

Wish I could have gone to reunion last June—but at the last minute, I had to work all week end—so cooldn't make it. Mary Kathryn wrote me about it, and it sounded like such fun. She said what impressed her most was the way everyone picked up exactly where we all left off in June of '45. Except, of course, there were a few new topics of conversation, such as husband; babies, jobs, etc.

Kathryn and Steve, children of Mary Kathryn Fryc Hemphill, '45.

Several people have asked for news of Mary Herbert Taylor, 1 wish 1 had more to report. All 1 know is that she is living in Durham, N. C., and that her husband, Dr. Edmund R. Taylor, is a chest surgeon. 1 will write to her and get the scoop one of these days.

Judie Morgan is to be married in February to Jimmy Hartman, also from Charleston, West Virginia. Mary Haskins King is to be a bridesmaid, and there will probably be a big Sweet Briar turnout.

Heard via the grapevine that Harriet Will-cox is working in New York for Metropolitan Life; that Audrey Betts is teaching riding in Greensboro; that Alice Gearhart is working in Philadelphia; and "Diddy" Gaylord, in Baltimore. Betty Symes is married and living in New Orleans. No details on any of the above.

I know all of you who knew Frances Freeman, who was in our class freshman year, will be sorry to hear that she died this past August after a three months' illness.

The news from Washington is scarce. I've tried to contact people during the holidays, but to no avail. As for myself, I'm still in the State Department Library—and love it. The work is very interesting, and we have a wonderful group of people. We work hard, but all enjoy it. I'm sharing a house in Georgetown with three other gals. We have a fine time—and do a lot of entertaining. Wish some of you all passing through D. C. would stop by.

Until next letter-love to everybody, and please write.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: ARIANA JONES, 38 Wiggins Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: RUTH HOUSTON, 695 S. McLean, Memphis, Tennessee.

I'm not sure that Nancy Dowd's marriage to Robert M. Borton on September 9 was ever officially reported. So here it is.

Audrey Humbert is now Mrs. J. R. C. Johnston and is living in Cornwall, England. This wedding I believe took place quite a while ago but this is the first I knew of it to tell you,

In August Margo Sibley and R. B. Lewis were married. They are living in Austin. Texas. Margo is working part time at the Biochemical Institute which she says is "a fine place with the most fascinating people."

Tib Foree's wedding to Charles Browder took place in Athens, Tennessee, the end of October. Her sister, Katherine, was her maid of honor and Bobby Warner was the bridesmaid. Bobby writes that the weeks before the wedding were a round of parties. Tib and Charles spent their honeymoon in Cuba and are now busy fixing up their house in the country near Sweetwater.

Clara Nicol Moore is now in Hebbronville, Texas, "the land of palms, sand and Mexicans," Little Al arrived in August and Nic swears that he understands Mexican as well as English!

Bea Dinguell Loos has been very busy with Karl Dickson II who arrived on November 27 and moving into a new house in Bethesda. Bea says Karl is quite an angel until hunger overtakes him. Bea and Dick see "T" Hewson every few weeks when he is in Washington on Eusiness. Betsy Gurley Hewson reports that life is fine with the Hewsons and that Joanie is great company when "T" is traveling. Jo Neal visited Bets for two weeks in November. Bets thinks that Leila Fellner Piel is teaching school near Westport, Connecticut.

Nancy Waite Ward's son was born on October 30 in Salt Lake City.

Peggy Coffman writes that she has seen Peggy Todd Fanning's and Joan Beren! Morse's daughters. Both are adorable blondes. Mother Peggy proudly writes that little Margaret Fanning gets cuter every day, has one tooth, and is almost walking.

Ruth Houston sent news of several '46ers. Helen Murchison Lane and her husband had a nice vacation on a lake in Canada and ended their summer with a bar convention in Washington. Mary Vinton visited in C'ville and New York this summer and was a bridesmaid in Barcy Kennedy's wedding. Latest news of Alice Eubank is that she ended her career in New York and is now back in Waco.

I was so delighted to hear from Bami Rollins who readily admitted that until then she could be classed as "one of the lostest of the long lost." When she wrote Bami was in the midst of packing to go to Corpus Christi where she is working on the Caller-Times. She had been doing publicity work in Phoenix but is glad to be back to a real newspaper job.

Bami was full of news, Eleanore Sherman Sorensen is living in San Mateo, California, and has a daughter, Linda Alice, born last April 10. Marilynne Mayer Estavillo's son, Alberto, is about 18 months old now. Anne Stubbs Fitzsimmons was a hostess for United Airlines after she graduated from Cornell, On October 6 she married Ambrose M. Fitzsimmons (otherwise known as Bud) in Humpton, Virginia. Julie Bristow is working for the Navy in Norfolk, Louisa Lloyd is working at a hospital in Hanover, New Hampshire. Margaret Swann Norris, who is a doctor, married a doctor. They are doing research in Florida and have a young son.

Lil West Parrott's son is now a year old. His name is Marion Arendell. Marion, Sr., went back to the North Carolina Legislature on January 2 so the Parrotts will be in Raleigh until April.

I hope you all had happy holidays and that 1951 will be even better than last year. It was wonderful of you who took out time during the Christmas rush to write so that there would be some news for this issue. To the rest of you, how about a New Year's resolution to write me? I'm not allowed to make up news about you and we all want to hear from you.

1947

Class Secretary: SALLIE BAILEY, 430 N. Blount Street, Raleigh, N. C.

Fund Agent: Maria Tucker, 2521 Fairmount Boulevard, Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Before I get started on this letter, I wish to state that I am resigning as secretary to our class. I don't believe I have written a post card to a single one of you in over a year, and the only reason why I have any news this time is because some of you sent me very, very welcomed Christmas cards with postscripts.

Flash: Margaret Ellen "Birdhead" White advised on her card as follows: "Did you know I'm getting married in about two months? You'd better come!" Obviously, "Birdhead" has not changed a bit, as what could be more vague than not telling me whom she was marrying.

Elaine Datis Blackford's card revealed the arrival of another Blackford, Miss Cynthia Blackford born October 20, 1950. Elaine now has 2 boys and a girl. Elaine and Chuck bought a house this summer and all goes well with them except the prospect of Chuck being recalled into service.

Blair Burwell's self designed card was wonderful. You might say it was "Blairingly" artistic, in fact. She advised that she and Ernie Banker have an apartment on Beacon Street in Boston and are engaged in heavy housekeeping. Ernie is going to secretarial school at Katie Gibbs, and Blair is doing medical research for the Atomic Energy Commission at the New England Deaconess Hospital. She promised to send me a picture of one of her experimental irradicated rats for the ALUMNAE NEWS. Betsy Mullen's card revealed only that she was full of the Christmas spirit but earlier word from her this fall advised that she had left her position in New York as secretary to the Vice President of an advertising company and is now working with Civil Service on Governors Island.

Anne Seibels Brannan took a vacation from housekeeping in Brewton, Alabama, to spend several days in New York in November. Anne is a Scout Leader in Brewton.

Kay Fitzgerald married Lewis Booker, who is in his last year in Medical School at Charlottesville. She is working 5 days a week in the Alumnae Office at U. Va.

I know all of you join me in extending our sympathy to the family of Peggy Pitman Dec, who died September 24.

Ann Marshall Whitley's delightful 12 page letter written on August 28, 1950, arrived from Salzburg, Austria, 3 days after the deadline for the October issue of the AIUMNAE NEWS. I am quoting most everything in her letter.

Ann and Lt. Jess Whitley were married in April, 1950, in Cincinnati. They honeymooned from New York, to Le Havre on the British liner, Caronia, visiting in Paris and then on to Austria. Ann says she lives in the shadow of the Alps behind a 13th Century eastle. She shops in Munich and Berchtesgaden, and visits Vienna for music although she says the Salzburg festival furnished its hare of music, too. She took up German as her maid knows not one word of English. They expect to be in Austria another year, io any of you planning a grand tour, be sure to go by 25 Franz Berger Strasse, Salzburg, Austria. Ann says she thinks Alex Marcoglow is now living in Paris.

Even across the Atlantic Ocean, Marshall seems better able to keep up with our class' doing than I can. She passed on the following information: Patsy Camblos Guttshall has two children; Gaille Griffith Brummett has two children also; Connie Clevenger is now Mrs. F. C. Berg; Nancy Cofer Stacy has one young 'un; Alice Reese Edens and Joe are in Mexico where Joe is stationed; Frankie Gardner Curtis and husband, Johnny. are living in Norfolk; Shirley Lewis is married to Don B. Johnson; Becky Knapp is now Mrs. John Herbert; Judy Burnett Halsey has a son; Cynthia Bemiss Stuart also has a child

Mary Frances Wood visited Europe this summer. Marshall heard from her when she was in Paris and was disappointed that Woody could not get to Salzburg for a visit. Woody toured France, Switzerland and Italy. Anne Pearson is working in Boston as a secretary and is crazy about her work.

Margie Redfern, Martha Smith and Jean Old Morrisette visited Ann in the summer. That traveling trio spent the summer in Germany, France Switzerland, and England. They bought a French Renault in Paris for transportation. They went to the Passion Play at Oberammergau, and they ran into Miss Sanford in Rome. She is writing a book.

Jo MacMillan Killeffer and husband, Bob, live in Stamford, Connecticut. Trudy Vars is now Mrs. E. V. Harris and lives in Texas. Jenne Belle Bechtel visited Paris this sum-

Jenne Belle Bechtel visited Paris this summer to attend the fashion openings. She is now a designer and was featured in Look magazine modeling her own designs.

Since I first mentioned Ann Marshall Whitley's name in this letter, I have been using information enclosed in her fine, informative and much appreciated letter. So all the credit for the news in this letter goes to her and those of you who sent me Christmas cards. In closing her letter, Marshall invited any and all of you planning to go to Europe to visit her in Austria so be sure to put Salzburg, Austria, nn your itincrary.

Class Secretary: AUDREY LAHMAN (Mrs. Robert Rosselot) Quebec House, North, Apartment 630 N, Washington, D. C.

Fund Agent: ANNE RICKS, 1506 Westwood Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

Our regular class secretary, Audrey Lahman Rosselot, has asked me to do up the class notes for this issue, so here goes—the news from Maddin Lupton with much help from many others.

It happens I'm on that ole faithful train on Sunday afternoon leaving Washington, D. C. This week end of January 6-7 was a hig one for SBC gatherings here in D. C. for Audrey married Bob Rosselot yesterday at a lovely service in the North Chapel at National Cathedral. Carolyn Irvine was maid of honor and the suite mates, Jane Luke and Betty Kernan, the attendants. At the wedding reception at the Kennedy Warren we saw McCall Henderson who is studying Russian at a Foreign Affairs School along with Liz Barbour Beggs' husband, Don, Kax Berthier is in D. C. working as a private secretary (who doesn't know how to type). Nancy Vaughn Kelly introduced her husband, Dan, a very good looking 6' 7" man whom she married in Providence right before Christmas with McCall, Kax and Ardis Fratus Mac-Bride as bridesmaids. Betsy Plunkett and Anne Ricks drove up for the wedding. Betsy still works in a drug company and Ricky teaches 3rd graders. Bet she uses her psychology major there. Carolyn Irvine works for Time magazine in New York; Kernan for the government, and Luke is a junior at U. Va. Medical School. I came up from Chattanoogs for the wedding.

Please pardon the constant use of "I," but I did want to tell you about some more people I've seen lately. I found Eleanor Johnson in Washington where she's working for the Bureau of Labor Statistics as an investigator and living with her mother in the Valley Vista Apartments in Ashmead Place.

In November in New York I saw Meon Bower and Vicki Brock one afternoon for a good gossip session. Meon is still with the personnel department of the Chase Bank and Vicki continues her social work in Yonkers, N. Y. Also saw Sylvia Schively who works for NBC. Wayne Stokes and I (both of us currently unemployed) were there together and we lunched with Jenne Belle Bechtel and Ynes Jova. Both of them are engaged, too! Jenne Belle is designing clothes for small sized girls and was excited over the window displays one of the large stores was to have. Ynes had only that day resigned from her job with Flair. Didn't get to see Westray Boyce or Cecily Youmans but they're still New York career girls. Meon went down to Philadelphia for Betty Ann Jackson's wedding. She married Thomas Ryan III, in November with Meon and Felicia Jackson there. I'm sure Steve and Janie Leach Cromwell and Tom and Margaret Sheffield Martin were pres-

Now for some of the news gleaned from notes to Audrey and to Ricky. Peggy Addington Twohy and John have two little girls. The older is Merrick or "Schnickelfritz" who already sports a collegiate looking plaid raincoat and saddle oxfords. And the younger is Jane Clark Twohy.

Jody Vestal Lyon, husband Bob, and children, Robert and Billy, are moving to Pikeville, Maryland, where their farm will adjoin Sally Pearre's home. In fact Sally and Bob Lyon are cousins.

Tate McArthur Todd and John are in San Francisco where John is stationed with the Army. They have a young son.

Bea Backer Simpson writes of her Brownie Troop and the fact that her main "hobby is my hubby, Charles"!

Helen Pender Withers has a grand job as secretary to the president of WTAR, a radio station in Norfolk. Neela Wattley is taking typing and doing some job hunting in New Orleans after her grand trip to Europe. Jo Neal's Christmas notes are always newsy. She has her MA and is engaged to a member of the history faculty at the University of Chicago. She recently visited Betsy Gurley Hewson and Tom in Massachusetts. Jane Ransom's family moved to Memphis the first of the year (do send in your new address, Ranny).

Mr and Mrs. Bob Lautz (Anne Street) are now living in Bronxville. Anne frequently sees Frances Robb, where Robbie works in Altmans.

Helen McKemie is married to Royce Riddle and they live in Wichita Falls, Texas

George and Ann Harris Bellows have an 8 month old boy and a lovely new home in Houston. Marguerite Rucker Ellett and Taze have a baby, Susan Ellett, born this fall in Richmond. Sally Smith Williams and Tom have a young Lacy Winn Williams, who was born in October. There's another Ann Litton now for she's the new daughter of Jim and Ann Litton Rouland Tuck, born in Nashville this fall. Warren and Helen Ellott Sockwell have a Warren Stephen Sockwell Jr., and now live in the country near Huntsville.

Suzanne Hardy Beaufort and Ira sent adorable Christmas cards with a picture of chubby little 'Zanne, their daughter. Jane Johnson Kent writes of her new addition, Lora Johnson Kent, Whew! This has gone on long enough for your tired eyes, I'm sure. Please pardon the construction, grammar and unity, but this train is still as jerky as it used to be, Incidentally, all you "spinsters" of the class of '48 take heart, for some of us started counting us up last night and there are at least 43 of us by actual count still left on the vine!

Hope you all enjoyed this even half as much as I enjoyed jotting it down after Ricky, Betsy, Lyn and I chatted about it 'til 3 a. m. last night.

Best wishes for the new year and love to all.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: LACY SKINNER (Mrs. Robert N. Eckardt) % David L. Skinner, 11 Seneca Street, Rye, New York.

Fund Agent: DIANA DENT, Old Church Road, Greenwich, Connecticut.

And on that day, September ninth, a multitude of heavenly Sweet Briar hosts (class of '50) gathered together to witness the marriage of Dolly Clark and John E. Rasmussen, Lieutenant, junior grade, U.S.N. Standing, the multitude took wine — particularly Edie Erooke, Kay Lang, Lola Steele, Betty Todd, and Dee Dietrich. The three wisemen came from afar, bearing mirth and confusion, and a startling resemblance to Bill, Waller, and Nan Nelson.

That same glorious day heralded in the birth of an eight pound boy. His proud parents, Frank and "Dannie" Munnerlyn Carter, will christen him Frank Carter III.

At 8:30 p. m., on September 15, Bettye Wright was married in Chattanooga to Thomas Schneider of Atlanta. Her attendants included Muffet Murchison, Nancy Carter Jewell, and myself. Also there from the class of 50 were Bill, Waller, Nan Nelson, and Betty Hutchens McCaleb. At this point, you might be harboring the notion that the first three are wedding trotters. Well—they are.

The Holy State of Matrimony seems to have caught several others in its net. Henrietta Hill decided to get married rather than run for President in 1952. She and Charles Clark Hubbard said their vows on November 25, in Montgomery. On December 20 Nan Nelson (her again?) and Muffet Murchison were bridesmaids in Jody Livingston's wedding. Jody was married to Dodge McFall, Ensign, U.S.N.

Dottie Barney, too, was married—to Maurice Jackson Hoover, Jr., of Bronxville, New York, and Atlanta, Georgia, on January 3.

Peter Thompson Holzworth writes that she was married in April, 1950, and is now living in Birmingham, Michigan, where husband, Wendy, has a job with the Pontiac division of General Motors.

Boston has become the hub of the universe to several members of the class of '50. Dain Fuller Searle is living there while Dan attends Harvard business school; Mary Lamman is working in the operating room of the Boston Children's Hospital; and Nancy Day is strug gling away at Katie Gibbs. Speaking of business schools. Mary Waller Berkeley is "stationed" in Richmond and can be heard nightly whispering sweet words (?) to her typewriter.

Down in Louisville, Kentucky, Pat Hallotan is an employee of Brown-Lorman Distillers, and in Wilmington, Delaware, Rita Murray is working at the duPont experimental station. Donna Wunderlich writes that she is taking her Masters in English at the University of Arkansas and at the same time teaching fourth grade in Memphis. I never knew she had six hands!

During the summer Agnes Veach was in charge of a college shop in a department store. "The interesting part," she says, "was producing a style show which was both on television and open to the public."

Sally Webb is busy teaching math at Rosemary Hall in Greenwich, Connecticut, and word has it that Judy Campbell is at the University of Michigan journalism school.

As this edition of the ALUMNAE NEWS goes to press, I will be flying south for a two weeks stay at the Caribe Hilton in San Juan, Puerto Rico, with Robert Nicholson Eckardt to whom I was married on January 6 in Rye. Until our new Rye address is permanent, send me news to the address at the head of this letter.

Gracias amigas for your letters. Remember that it is right to write, but wrong to prolong.

Sweet Briar Reappraises the Liberal Arts Course

by Lysbeth W. Muncy

Assistant Dean and Assistant Professor of History and Government, A.B., Vassar College; A.M., Ph.D., Radcliffe College

"TEACHING young people today is like trying to get through a long-distance call at a party" says Gilbert Highet of Columbia in an article on higher education which appeared recently in the New York Times. For those of us who are teaching the liberal arts, which often seem to the students peculiarly remote and unrelated to the present time of crisis, the problem of "getting through" and of making the liberal arts course significant and essential for them is difficult indeed. And yet the very presence of four hundred and more students at Sweet Briar is evidence that at some time these girls had decided that the study of the liberal arts was worth four years of their lives. In view of the uncertainties and distracting alternatives that were puzzling many of our students, Mrs. Pannell, Miss Pearl and I decided that we should all sit down together to re-examine and re-appraise the liberal arts education and to re-discover what it is, what it can do, and also what it cannot do. This led to a series of ten coffee parties, five at Sweet Briar House and five at the Dean's House, where students from all four classes met with the hostess and two or three members of the faculty to devote an hour to a free and informal discussion of the values of the liberal arts education. Students were invited in groups of forty to forty-five and by the end of the series, on February 21, all had had an opportunity to share in these discussions. As a "floater" I was privileged to attend several of the meetings both at Sweet Briar House and at the Dean's House and I shall try to give you a composite picture of the discussions.

Mrs. Pannell and Miss Pearl led off with a brief and eloquent presentation of the fundamental values of the liberal arts education today. Each stressed the importance of the trained mind, prepared to deal with any problem in any field and to cope with the varied issues of life. They underscored the need in the present emergency for each to develop her intellectual powers to the very limit of her abilities, the special responsibility of young women to continue their education when the education of so many young men is being interrupted, in order to maintain the needed supply of trained minds for industry, government service and education, the wisdom of calmly pursuing the study of those values which are fundamental to our civilization and thereby preserving the tradition of the liberal arts education which the young men are taking up arms to defend. This led into an examination of the abiding values of the liberal arts, the joys of the discriminating mind, freed from ignorance and prejudice and appreciative of the first rate in every field. Here one freshman told of her brother, who had served in the navy during the last war and was at one time stranded on a desert island. When he returned home he expressed his determination to go back to college because, he said, "the next time I'm wrecked on a desert island I want to have something to think about."

Both Mrs. Pannell and Miss Pearl made clear the differences between the liberal arts education and vocational education, stressing the fact that there is no specific job training in the former course and cautioning students not to expect their college degree in the liberal arts to conduct them directly into a specific job. But each extolled the flexibility of mind of the liberal arts graduate and her ability to apply her trained intellect to a variety of problems and to be successful in any kind of work. Mrs. Pannell especially pointed out that a young woman cannot tell in advance what her life work will be and that she needs to be prepared for anything, even for a sequence of quite different occupations. All agreed that the liberal arts course was the best training for marriage and home-making but also recognized that the young woman graduate might wish to take up a quite different kind of career before or after her marriage. A student, who is an alumna daughter, cited the case of her mother who had expected to live an easy life on a large southern plantation but was instead a hard-working farmer's wife on a midwestern farm and taking great satisfaction in this occupation because her education at Sweet Briar had opened her eyes to values and opportunities which would otherwise have passed her by.

Hostesses and faculty guests reiterated the point that the broadest kind of liberal arts training is the best preparation for the professions and for industrial jobs. Specialized education should come later-in the graduate schools or in apprenticeship courses; many employers prefer to give their own training. Examples were cited of outstanding journalists, architects, engineers and a novelist who recommended a broad general course of study, preferably not in the field of one's major interest, as background for a professional career. At this juncture I frequently pointed out the possibility of using the summer vacations for vocational training to supplement the liberal arts course during the college years. A few weeks spent in a business school or a special vocational school or at a job can give helpful practical experience and enhance the student's ability to get a job immediately after college.

It may seem to you thus far that the elders did all the talking! Actually after a warming-up period of about fifteen minutes the students entered right in, offering keen questions and criticisms and lively comments. Often they carried on the discussion by themselves while we listened. Their major difficulty seemed to be one of appreciating the significance of each of the courses they were then studying and its contribution to the general process of the liberal education. All students subscribed heartily to the liberal arts education but some felt puzzled or sceptical about the role of particular courses in that educational experience. Some could not yet see how all pieced together to form a meaningful whole. It was particularly heartening for us to hear the upperclassmen explaining to the freshmen and sophomores how this process really worked out even if they couldn't see the woods for the trees in the first two years. "When you get started on your major everything correlates," they said. Even some freshmen said that they saw the value of their first college courses and ways in which they linked up. Others said that they would have to take the word of the upperclassmen for the time being. All were agreed that at some time in one's studies, perhaps not until the senior year, perhaps not until after college, the whole took on meaning and true significance. But all were also certain that this understanding of the liberal arts course would come only as the result of much thought and questioning and reflection on the part of each student and that all needed to be stirred to think about these things. The students were unanimous in their opinion that the discussions had clarified many points and started a train of thought that continued in their own minds and in many dormitory discussions. They asked that these be held again another year.

Specific suggestions of the students centered on the wish for more treatment of current events in their courses and for more opportunities for vocational training, without credit, such as typing courses, while they are in college. We were able to tell them that a series of lectures on current topics, without credit, has already been proposed to supplement our present program of lectures and concerts. With regard to typing there is an extra-curricular course actually being given for a considerable group of students at the present time.

To describe the significance of a liberal arts education to Sweet Briar alumnae, who have long since seen the meaning of the whole liberal arts course and have cherished its values in every phase of their post college life, is indeed a work of supererogation. Nonetheless there seemed to be two good reasons for this article. One is that Mrs. Schmidt and I thought you would be interested to know about this series of discussions at the college. The other, that we are hoping you will want to take up this idea and rouse the train of thought about the values of the liberal arts education in the minds of your friends and neighbors. One specific suggestion came from a student-that the alumnae and college representatives when talking with prospective students make explicit the character and value of the liberal arts course as contrasted with vocational training so that the student entering Sweet Briar will know just what to expect and what not to expect. More generally, I believe that all of us who are convinced of the deep and abiding significance of the liberal arts course through our own educational experience and who are dedicated to its perpetuation must express our convictions at every opportunity and do our utmost to lead more and more young people into this way to the good life.

Alumna Heads Board Development Committee

THE BROWN FAMILY. W. L. LYONS, JR., 14, INA HAMILTON, 5, OWSLEY II, 8, SALLY, LYONS, SR., MARTIN, 12.

Sara Shallenberger Brown, '32g, is the first alumna to head a committee of the Board of Overseers. Sally was named Chairman of the Development Committee in October, 1949, and has been very busy in that capacity ever since. She was elected to the Board in 1949 and will serve until 1955.

Sally is Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown and lives in Harrods Creek, Kentucky. She and her family spend the winters in Delray Beach, Florida. In addition to raising four children, she has found time to pursue her favorite hobby and talent, painting, and had a one man show in November, 1948. She has been active in all sorts of civic, church and charity projects, as well as the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association.

Those of us at Sweet Briar who know Sally, look forward to her visits. We feel in 1951 just as the 1932 Briar Patch said, "When Sally breezed into Sweet Briar she won everyone with her charm." She has a big job and a most important one, but it could be in no more capable hands.

Dr. Guion Visits Sweet Brian

Dr. Connie Guion, new member of the Board of Overseers, chats with Eugenia Griffin Burnett, 10g, at a reception in her honor by Mrs. Pannell at Sweet Briar House.

BIRTHDAY PARTY — FEBRUARY 9, 1951

Sweet Briar celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the granting of the charter with a gala dinner party. Above, a general view of the refectory. Below, a portion of the speakers' table. Alumnae Council Holds Winter Meetings

SWEET BRIAR donned its best spring weather for the two-day visit of the Alumnae Council on February 12 and 13. The visitors from the frozen north were amazed to see bare ground, and thoroughly enjoyed the balmy air as they walked between the Inn and the A. A. Room in the gym where the meetings were held.

Amelia Hollis Scott, '29g, President, was unable to be present at the meetings due to the recent arrival of her third daughter, Mary Vista. Ellen Gilliam Perry, who resigned from the Council in October provided exciting news for her former associates. At the final session on Tuesday afternoon they heard that her daughter had been born that morning.

In spite of train strikes and snow, a good number of Council members came. It is reassuring, to say the least, to see about twenty "girls," all of whom leave families or jobs, (and many, both) who are willing to pay their own transportation, and come to Sweet Briar for two days three times a year. When they are here they work hard and are seriously intent on the business of the Alumnae Association. Ruth Longmire Wagner, '45g, came from Houston, Texas, and Florence Woelfel, '21g, flew from Chicago. Alma Martin Rotnem, '36g, Margaret Potts Williams, Academy, and Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman, '34g, came from New York. Beulah Norris, '22g, our very able Fund Chairman drove from New Castle, Pa., for the meetings and then continued south to Florida for a long awaited vacation. From Ohio came Lorna Weber Dowling, '23g, Lillian Cabell Gay, '36g, Anna Mary Chidester, '45g, and Mary Huntington Harrison, '30g. Maddin Lupton, '48g, from Chattanooga, used Sweet Briar as the first leg of a trip to Alexandria and Baltimore. Sue Burnett Davis, '32g, came from Atlanta, and Julia Sadler de Coligny, '34g, and Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10g, drove over from Richmond. Bertie Pew, '49g, was in the hospital and unable to come and Anne Hauslein Potterfield, '42g, and Ruth Myers Pleasants, '34g, had sick children and so couldn't attend the meetings. Eugenia Buffington Walcott, '13g, Peg Bushey Scherr, '29g, and Dolly Nicholson Tate, '38g, were also unable to come.

Miss Pearl entertained Julia de Coligny and Martha Stohlman at her house on Elijah's Road. The others stayed at the Inn. Mrs. Brown provided her usual "special" and delicious meals for the Council at the Refectory.

Meetings started each morning at 9:15 and continued, with time out for lunch, until 4:00 each afternoon.

The Council enjoyed meeting and knowing Florence Woelfel who was attending the meetings for the first time, and Adelaide Boze Glascock, '40g, who was elected at the first session to replace Charlotte Kent Pinckney and was able to come in time for the later ones.

One of the most important and time consuming items of business was the report of the Constitution Committee which is given on page 8.

The entire Council met with the Commencement Committee on Monday evening and plans for Sweet Briar's 41st reunion were formulated. Adelaide Boze Glascock agreed to serve as chairman.

Other committees met whenever they could and reported back to the Council. Reports were also made by the Alumnae Secretary, the Fund Chairman and the Regional Chairmen.

The question of local scholarships vs. Manson Fund as the object of the club money raising project was again brought up for discussion. Mrs. Pannell came and gave her views at the request of the Council. It was decided to undertake local scholarships and the particulars are given on page 7.

An attempt is made at each session to have two of the faculty or staff speak to the Council so that it is kept up to date on the college. Miss Dean Hosken, Assistant Professor of Religion and freshman advisor, spoke to the Council on some of the problems which confront the freshmen and how they are being met, in an attempt to increase Sweet Briar's holding power. Mr. G. Noble Gilpin, head of the Music Department, was speaker on Tuesday and gave an interesting account of the plans for four concerts the choir is giving this spring in Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Hot Springs and Sweet Briar. He expressed the hope that the choir can help alumnae interest by travelling to cities within a fairly close radius to Sweet Briar for concerts if the alumnae wish to sponsor them. The choir hopes to broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting Company in the fall. Mr. Gilpin also told of the willingness of Miss Iren Marik, a member of the Music Department and an excellent concert pianist, to offer her services (without charge, except for expenses) to Alumnae Clubs who would be interested in sponsoring a small concert as a money raising project. He said it could be done nicely in a small hall or large home with little expense and a good profit. The sponsoring of such a concert would provide the best kind of publicity for Sweet Briar. He offered to give advice to any clubs interested in this project. Mr. Gilpin also suggested that Alumnae Clubs call on various talented and trained alumnae for entertainment for club meetings or parties. He named several who have continued their study of voice or piano and who could present an excellent program.

The Council entertained the Senior Class at a coke party Monday afternoon at Garden Cottage. Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Pannell entertained the group at tea and took them on a tour of Sweet Briar House,

Then there were hurried departures, last minute instructions and notes, and letter writing, and before long the Inn and Garden Cottage were quiet again, but looking forward to June when the Council will come again.

Council Elects New Member

Adelaide Boze Glascock, '40g (Mrs. James A.) of Arlington, Virginia, was the unanimous choice of the Alumnae Council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charlotte Kent Pinckney, '31g. Polly, as she is known by her Sweet Briar classmates, was, in her college days a member of Paint and Patches, the Glee Club, Choir, News Staff and L'Alliance Francaise. She spent her junior year in France. After her graduation from Sweet Briar, she continued her study of French at Columbia University and received her M.A. in 1941. She has taught French at Fairfax Hall Junior College, at St. Catherine's, and the Collegiate School in Richmond, and is now teaching part time at Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington.

Adelaide served as president of the Richmond Sweet Briar Club and also of the A. A. U. W. there. She was also active in many civic activities including girl scout work.

She has recently moved to Arlington where her husband is a lawyer working for the government. She has already entered into the activity of the Washington Sweet Briar Club and that group considers itself very fortunate to have Adelaide in their vicinity.

Norfolk Selected as City For Nominating Committee

The Alumnae Council has designated Norfolk as the city from which the 1951-52 Nominating Committee is to be selected. This method of choosing a city has proved to be the most effective way to select a nominating committee, as it is thus possible for the members to attend nieetings, rather than having to do all the work through correspondence.

Sue Slaughter, '13g, is the Council's choice for chairman of the committee. Sue has been very active in alumnae work and is well acquainted with a large number of alumnae, as well as with the requirements for Council membership. The following alumnae have been submitted by the Council as nominees for membership on the Nominating Committee: Marion Peele, Special; Frances Murrell Rickards, '10g; Cornelia Carroll Gardner, '18g; Grace Merrick Twohy, '24g; Margaret Williams Bayne, '27g; Mary Marks, '35g; Anna Redfern Ferguson, '37g; Murrell Rickards Bowden, '44g; Eleanor Potts Snodgrass, '48g; Sydney Sue Overstreet, '50g.

The Chairman and the Committee will be elected at the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association on June 2, 1951.

A Challenge to Clubs

Local Scholarships

MANY clubs will be glad to know that it is now possible for them to initiate and support projects for local scholarships. The Alumnae Council, with the encouragement and backing of Mrs. Pannell, decided at its February meeting to expand the alumnae scholarship program to inc'ude club scholarships.

The Manson Memorial Scholarship will be awarded annually as usual, and clubs who do not wish to undertake a local scholarship will continue to work for the Manson Fnud; and it will continue to grow.

This new possibility will be a real stimulus to club activity. It will not only involve the raising of money. The alumnae will have to bestir themselves to stimulate genuine competition for the scholarship. It will provide excellent publicity for Sweet Briar, and the alumnae in turn will be doing a good deed for a worthy girl in their community.

The details are still to be worked out, but the choice of the scholarship winner will be left to the Scholarship Committee at Sweet Briar. It will welcome recommendations, but the alumnae must be careful not to champion a single applicant.

If a club raises even a fairly small amount of money and offers it as a scholarship, the college may be able to supplement the grant. It is hoped that a club will be able to carry a girl through for four years, if her scholastic record warrants it and the need continues, but if this becomes impossible, the college will endeavor to take over the responsibility. Self help is also a possibility after freshman year. The important thing is to give able students the opportunity of a Sweet Briar education. It is becoming more and more difficult for parents to provide it, and it is up to us as alumnae to see that the finest girls in our communities choose Sweet Briar as their college.

So clubs, here you are—an exciting new venture with a real purpose which is vital to you as members of your community and as alumnae of Sweet Briar. You asked for it—let's see what you can do!

DAUGHTERS

Alumnae Daughters Among Freshman Honor Students

by Martha von Briesen, '31g

THREE alumnae daughters were among the 18 freshmen whose academic records at the end of the first semester won places for them on the Freshman Honor List, announced on February 22, at the Honors Convocation by Dean Mary J. Pearl.

Education for a Better World was the title of the convocation address given by Dean Marion Tait of Vassar, who served on the Sweet Briar faculty during 1940-41.

"Joy and delight in the process of learning are the real fruits of education," said Dean Tait, remarking also that the current gloomy accent on panic and fear is a serious problem which our Democracy faces. She reminded her hearers that mistakes are inevitable, that democracy is experimental by nature, and that faith and mutual confidence in mankind are the fundamental bases of a democratic society.

Democracy, she continued, depends ultimately on an intelligent and informed body of citizens—sensible people who are at once sensitive and practical—and the recent "rediscovery" of the "usefulness" of the liberal education is of great importance in the present "welter of educational movements."

"Liberal education," Dean Tait pointed out, "is active. It is not just intellectual; it involves the emotions, the soul, the spirit. If it 'takes', you'll find that you are committed before you know it, to working for a better life . . . There is real value to this kind of education, and an increasing need for men and women who have it and who are ready to serve their communities and their country."

An unusually large number of freshmen were named on the Honor List this year. These girls, whose grades are all B or who have an average better than B, are:

Jerry Lou Dreisbach, Ft. Wayne, Indiana, daughter of Julia Reynolds Dreisbach, '27, and sister of Georgia Dreisbach, '51; Nancy Lee Edwards, Silver Spring, Maryland; Caroline Kimberly, Stockbridge, Massachusetts, Margaret Green Lotterhos, Jackson, Mississippi; Virginia Mitchell, Little Rock; Nancy Moody, Austin, Texas; Betty Gene Orr, Como, Mississippi; Ruth Sanders, Teaneck, New Jersey; Helen Smith, Hagerstown, Maryland, daughter of Helen Mason Smith, '20; Margaret Lu Van Peenen, Memphis; Bruce Watts, Fort Monroe, Virginia, sister of Virginia Watts, '44g.

Nine of this group entered Sweet Briar last fall as holders of competitive freshman scholarships, as follows: Erwin Alderman, Magdalen Andrews, Jayne Berguido, Anne Brooke, Judith Catlin, Joan Chamberlain, Marilynn Clark, Margaret Van Peenan, Bruce Watts.

After the Convocation these freshmen and Dean Tait were guests of honor at a luncheon in the refectory, to which administrative officers of the college were also invited.

We Point With Pride

Elizabeth Rountree Kellerman, '26g (Mrs. George H.), is one of five women among Hawaii's sixty-three Constitutional delegates who are hoping for admission as the forty-ninth state. These women are the first ever to have a hand in the initial drafting of a United States State Constitution.

Eleanor Bosworth, '47g, has been appointed Assistant Dean of Women at Southwestern College in Memphis. Frances W. Gregory, '36g, professor of history at Westhampton College in Richmond was recently one of a three-member panel for a lecture and question period by Senator J. William Fulbright (D. of Arkansas).

Elizabeth Lankford Miles, '29g (Mrs. John B.) has recently been appointed business manager, treasurer and assistant to the principal of the Tatnall School, Wilmington, Delaware.

Speaking of Alumnae Clubs

Dr. Meta Glass

(The following article is a reprint from the Alumnae News of April, 1946. It is just as timely today; and it is our hope that alumnae clubs will be organized during the coming year in many cities which do not have active clubs.)

THE great growth of volunteer associations for good purposes poses a real question for any individual as to how many and what ones she will participate in. A woman's relation to her college is a unique one. Yet there is question here also to what extent she will be active in the more or less family group that exists to enjoy, to support and to make known her Alma Mater.

The relationship is a bit family-like. The enjoyment to be got from college and a college club is very much like the pleasure that comes from revisiting a home or talking with others, whose home it also was, about the queer things that stick in family memories. It is great fun incidentally when it happens. It is not strong motivation to seek opportunities for such re-living—certainly not too often. Even family gatherings are apt to be more satisfactory when they occur because of something to be done.

What does one do for one's college? Show it some interest in keeping in touch with its life. Because it is very important for a college to be truly understood, see that its real character and aims are known among one's own acquaintances and, even on occasion, extending this to the general public. Stand by it when in daily life or in crisis it needs support, money, service or patronage. Make for it friends because of the kind of education and attitude toward life its daughters show.

What place has a college club in bringing to pass any of these aims? It is, first of all, an avenue through which to make effective each person's individual share in the whole accomplishment. At a meeting now and then the information that allows one to keep in touch with college life, often the personal touch with one who has just been there, is easily gained. The activities of a club do proclaim the attitude and effectiveness of the women who have gone to the college, although each woman in her unconscious daily life portrays this too. The club offers a real opportunity for succeeding generations of young girls to learn of what the college has to offer from persons in her own town with a vividness and conviction lacking in print. Finally, though not any more importantly than the other activities, the club offers a channel for financial support from friends and well wishers of the college who are not alumnae. Such interest and support initiated by active clubs is the very foundation of outside interest in a college. Every educational institution knows that to try to interest generous and educationally-minded individuals in the institution in a city in which the alumnae have demonstrated no easily seen activity and interest of their own is next to hopeless. And this is as it should be. How can the outsider judge the vitality of an institution except by first-hand knowledge of it, or by first-hand knowledge of the people who staff it and those who attend it? Sweet Briar is young enough and small enough and poor enough to need wider and truer acquaintance everywhere. It is never afraid of being better known. It always needs to be known for what it is. Why have Sweet Briar Clubs? Is it not too plain to belabor?

What kind of a program should a Sweet Briar club attempt? First of all, that kind of program which the members want and think will attain these aims. If I were a member I should want one that had the membership of all possible Sweet Briar alumnae in the city, of all ages and circles. Sweet Briar has never sought uniformity. Then I should want a club that did not meet too often. Life is especially demanding in this decade and other claims are many. Maybe three or four times a year, maybe even once a year. Several meetings would care for electing officers, would bring members up to date on fresh, really significant information about the college; would allow arranging some public activitiy, ambitious or modest, that offers the community a chance to recognize the interest and the ability of the Sweet Briar group; another would serve acquainting young students with the college in its proper light and interesting them in considering it for themselves.

The once-a-year program demands a special arrangement and is most likely to succeed in a relatively small group who can all be reached by telephone and who all agree to carry on with the required job when the call comes. I once belonged to a group that had no stated meetings and no officers. It was called "Behind Maria." Maria was a Deaconess in the mountain section of that state. She had needs, often sudden and acute, in her work. She made them known to any one of the group and the recipient of the call spread the news, assigned parts in meeting the call, got the necessary work done—it was often considerable—by many hands, called a meeting to hear the interesting bits about the venture and what Maria had to say about our response or even circulated the letters and the club settled back to await the next call. But that club had life in it and knowledge of the work and a sense of responsibility in each individual.

From the point of view of the college a club with only a president, or whatever she may be called, to whom a letter can be written, is of value, and club values vary all the way from this minimum to untold influence for the reputation and support of the college.

The program that has been set out seems not beyond the strength and time and ability of Sweet Briar women. How many clubs will Sweet Briar have in June, 1947?, in June, 1951?

CLUB NEWS

It would be most helpful if the Club secretaries would send reports of their clubs' activities to the Alumnae Office for this column. It is impossible to include news of all the clubs, but in this issue I have mentioned events which have recently come to my attention.

Boston—On February 28 this club gave a tea for prospective Sweet Briar students. The Kodachrome slides were shown, and enjoyed by all. For their money raising project the Boston Club took a block of seats with Dartmouth College for a night at the "Pops."

New York City—On February 14th the New York Sweet Briar Club held a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Pannell at the Woman's Republican Club. Mrs. Pannell spoke informally to the group. The new president of the Manhattan Club is Mrs. Richard R. Condit (Julia Hoeber, '41g) 24 Charles Street, N. Y. C.

Richmond—A spring meeting was held at the home of Lucy Call Dabney, '42g, president, and Margaret Cornwell Schmidt, '37g, Alumnae Secretary, spoke. Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10g, is in charge of plans for the Richmond group to sponsor a concert by Iren Marik at the home of Isabel Luke Witt, '19g, in the spring.

Washington, D. C.—The Washington Club has been very active this spring. On February 24 they gave a tea for prospective students at Mount Vernon Seminary, and showed the Kodachrome slides. Mrs. Lill went up from Sweet Briar for the party and reported that it was a lovely affair. The Washington Club sponsored a play entitled "Strange Bedfellows" given by the Little Theater of Alexandria. Proceeds are to go to the Manson Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Montgomery—The Sweet Briar Club of Montgomery sprang into action at the news of Mrs. Pannell's visit during spring vacation. Mrs. Pannell was visiting her brotherin-law and his family. Caroline Rudulph Sellers, '46g, and Henrietta Hill Hubbard, '50g, made arrangements for a tea to which they invited all the alumnae in Montgomery and prospective students and their parents.

St. Louis—The St. Louis Club has reorganized this year and has had several meetings. Virginia Page Carter, '50, is president. The group is planning a tea for prospective students.

Cincinnati—The Sweet Briar Club combined forces with the Wheaton Club of Cincinnati and sponsored a hockey game on March 11. The publicity for the event was excellent and resulted in a very successful project.

Philadelphia—As a result of Mrs. Lill's talk at the Sweet Briar Day luncheon the Philadelphia Alumnae Representative Committee has been reorganized, with Katherine Brightbill Biltz, '28g, as Chairman. The entire committee has been working hard and results have been excellent. On March 3 the club gave a tea for prospective students at the Woman's University Club. On April 3 the Philadelphia Club gave a Fashion Show and Card Party at Mrs. Mason's Barn. Betty Hanger Jones, '42g, was chairman of this event.

Cleveland—The Cleveland Club sold chances on a beautiful pair of Gorham Candelabra and had the drawing at their Sweet Briar Day luncheon. They are justly proud of their grand profit and hope to use it for a scholarship for a Cleveland girl. The club entertained prospective students at the Garden Center on April 8 and showed the ubiquitous Kodachrome slides.

SMALL CLUBS PLEASE READ

Those clubs who feel they are too small to be able to sponsor any money raising projects should take notice of the efforts of a single alumna. Nell Dearborn Reed, (A) (Mrs. Walter) of Amherst, Virginia, recently wrote the following letter:

"For a long time I have planned to have a benefit bridge party for 'The Sweet Briar Alumnae Association' but various things have prevented my doing so before this.

"As I am a great believer in 'Better late than Never' I decided to carry out my intentions on the first day of February with a party at two thirty P. M. for my contemporaries and another one at eight P. M. for my younger friends. In spite of very heavy sleet I had five tables playing in the afternoon, but weather conditions forced me to postpone the evening party until the following Tuesday evening when I had six tables of enthusiastic players.

"I had three prizes at each party, not so expensive but attractive, these I bought at 'The Sweet Briar Book Shop' where I found many things from which to select.

Each player was assessed seventy-five cents, but some of my friends were more liberal than that.

"It pleases me very much to send the enclosed thirty dollars to the Association."

Martha Lou Stohlman Reports on the Joint Council Meeting

L has some people who come twice a year to these Joint Council meetings and I have been ever so pleased to find myself among them. As testimony of my interest I waited nearly five hours in the Trenton station during the strike, to get a train which finally got me to Sweet Briar at 5:00 A. M.—just so I would be in time for Mrs. Pannell's luncheon 'round the round table at Sweet Briar House and then a whole afternoon of talk with students, faculty, board members and the President and Dean—besides Margaret Potts Williams, Anna Mary Chidester and myself representing you.

We got the Alumnae into a very large chunk of the conversation too, asking those present to tell us what they thought could best be done to strengthen our influence on Sweet Briar. After all, we are by far the largest of the groups represented.

Alumnae do their greatest work for a college through local clubs and through classes. We talked a good deal about clubs—about how they can best contact recently graduated seniors, how they can find girls in their area who have ability but who have not been active in the clubs, about what clubs should do. Mrs. Pannell pointed out that finding good students for Sweet Briar and raising money were generally the chief functions of alumnae groups. She is strong for the idea of clubs establishing local scholarships; this will bestir them to get better acquainted with possible Briarites in their local schools and will certainly give them something exciting to work for. She said that if a club raises even a fairly small amount of money and offers it as a scholarship the college might be able to round out the sum needed to see some sparkling girl through, The important thing is to see that able young women get their chance at an education in a liberal arts college especially ours. By the time Mrs. Pannell finished she had sold us all, even those who had wished most earnestly to see the Manson Memorial Fund completed in the near future. We now feel (and the Alumnae Council subsequently backed us up) that such a tremendous amount of capital is needed to produce sufficient income for a scholarship that money for current spending is more important. We would rather see needy girls cared for now. (This does not mean that we will not continue to award the Manson Scholarship, but it will be done the way it has been done, from current donations from clubs which are not supporting scholarships of their own.)

We were interested, too, in how we could take advantage of loyalties to classes, which men's colleges make so much more of than we ever have. Too often a sterling class which has had a great group spirit and looked upon itself as something special dissolves completely after graduation. Could an active president help prevent this? Would a regular election of secretary and Fund Agent every two or five years help? People's interests go into what their time and effort and money go into, and if more class officers were used, would interest in Sweet Briar be boosted? (Anyone with ideas on the subject is urged to communicate them to the Alumnae Office.)

From alumnae talk we moved on to discuss future plans for the college. In 1956 Sweet Briar will celebrate its Fiftieth Anniversary of the opening of college and in connection with this there may be a campaign to raise funds for a really handsome birthday gift to the college. A new auditorium, a new dormitory or science building are possibilities. Ways of informing and interesting people in this were discussed in some detail.

Mrs. Pannell is still eager to find some way to use the campus in summer so that our plant will not be lying idle for such a long time. Suggestions on this score ranged all the way from an art school to a stock-judging course. Add some more. Any reasonable thing will receive the thoughtful consideration of the administration.

The last thing we talked about was student morale and how every class seems to have its moment when no one is coming back—because the refectory uses powdered eggs (a delusion which prevailed for a while in my class), or midnight is too early for dates to leave—or for no reason at all. Mrs. Pannell and Dean Pearl have undertaken a big project which seems to be having wonderful results: they are entertaining in their homes groups of thirty to forty girls, together with three or four faculty members, to talk for an hour or so on the assets and difficulties of a liberal arts education. Miss Muncy has described the program in detail elsewhere in the News.

The meeting could have gone on and on, so interested were all participants. It was adjourned at 5:30 however, and I rushed over to Garden Cottage to greet the arriving Council members and then on to see as many Sweet Briar friends as possible before settling down to the Alumnae Council meetings the next day.

On Previous Joint Council Meetings

The Joint Council has held three meetings since its first was reported in the ALUMNAI NIWS in April, 1950.

On February 8, 1950, it met for the second time and considered the aims and needs of the college. Methods for maintaining a high quality of students were discussed, and also the effect of the requirement of College Board tests for admission. Each group represented on the Joint Council then presented its qualifications for the new president which were to be forwarded to the Committee of the Board then seeking the fifth president for Sweet Briar.

At the third meeting, October 22, 1950, the Joint Council agreed that the Dean should always be invited to attend its meetings, and also that each group would retain one representative and appoint two new ones each year. It was also decided to meet twice each year. The need for funds and some plans for a future fund raising campaign were discussed at length. The desirability of faculty representation on the Board was considered.

The Joint Council began its second year of existence on October 22, 1950. It resumed its discussion of a student body of 500 and the accompanying need for a new dormitory. Sweet Briar's holding power was discussed. It was the consensus that deliberate efforts should be made to help students realize the values offered by a liberal education Summer use of college buildings and facilities was also discussed.

The meeting on February 11, 1951 was the next and this is the one so ably reported above by Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman.

Nan Powell Hodges writes that in accordance with the Dix Plan for reunions we shall be welcome to Sweet Briar again this June. Nan cannot be there as her own Commencement at Stuart Hall comes at just that time.

Lillian Lloyd Thayer hopes to come but cannot plan that far ahead. Her son and his wife visited Sweet Briar recently and she was delighted to have a member of her family see it. He works with Columbia Concerts and was in Lynchburg. Lillian's four children are married and she has six grandchildren.

Eugenia Griffin, Burnett drove to Sweet Priar on February 9 to attend the "family party" celebration of the 50th anniversary of the granting of the College Charter. Miss Jessie Fraser originated the idea and planned the program which was a most interesting and enjoyable occasion. Eugenia spent the night with Claudine Hutter and had dinner with Miss Morenus and her guest, Miss Sparrow of Richmond, then returned to Sweet Briar for the meeting of the joint council and the Alumnae Council on Monday and Tuesday, In January Eugenia spent ten days in Philadelphia with her daughter, Eugenia, and her family. She saw Henrietta Washburn, Rebecca Patton and chatted by phone with Bessie Grammer Torrey.

Adelaide Schockey Mallory says they have had a beastly winter in Ohio, starting with a three foot snow Thanksgiving, another foot Christmas night and another New Years. They thought it was all gone—then the rain came and then the freeze. Six of her friends are in the hospital with either broken bones or hurt backs. Several have been killed in accidents.

Claudine Hutter of Lynchburg writes that she is glad she lives near enough to Sweet Briar to see old friends, alumnae and faculty, coming and going from the campus. Although the large Hutter family has lived in big houses all their lives, she is now in an apartment. She insists smaller quarters will never cut her off from a bushel of apples nor entertaining her friends as formerly. At a luncheon under her roof this winter, Mrs. Pannell was introduced to one of the first faculty members, Mrs. Nellie Tucker Lee. Another faculty friend, Miss Morenus, has an apartment nearby for the winter, and as always dispenses hospitality with her famous cup of tea known to Sweet Brair students throughout the years. Claudine's niece, Julia Dale, is a sophomore at Sweet Briar.

Frances Murrell Rickards, Louise Hooper Ewell, Anne Cumnock Miller, and I hope to get to this reunion. We were sorry to miss the last one. We always enjoy chatting of old times at Sweet Briar. Recently we have revived a Bridge foursome we had some years ago—the fourth member is also a Sweet Briarite, Lonise Beadles Richardson. At Anne's last week we were served on Sweet Briar plates.

We, in this area, live in an atmosphere of tension due to Army and Navy activities and we are constantly aware of things that might happen. Next week I am joining a first aid class of 30 members which meets two afternoons a week.

Thanks all of you who responded to my cards, and I hope to see you all in June at Sweet Briar.

Reporting again—this time amid the happy reunions and sunshine of the Sea Ranch at Fort Lauderdale. Despite my qualms as to the results from the twenty-three cards I sent out in January, five class members took "time out" to reply and promptly.

Margaret Wendey Dealy lives on Long Island. She graduated from University of Wisconsin in 1920—married—and they have three children, Margaret N. is now Dr. Margaret Dealy and is serving internship at Syracuse University Medical Center Hospital. A daughter to be very proud of, I'll wager! Frank R., the older son, is married and lives in the west. Robert W. is a freshman at Williams College. Margaret's principal outside activities center around A. A. U. W., the Plandome Women's Club, and various music clubs.

Lee Schurman Spear of Omaha, Nebraska, writes, "My life is a regular carousel—uninteresting for Sweet Briar news". We'll take a chance on that, Lee. She was leaving for Florida soon after writing me in late January—was to be at The Sails Apartments in St. Petersburg. She expected to see Geraldine Ball Bewsher, whose home is in St. Petersburg—also Phyllis Nelson (her sister) in Tampa, and Catherine Cordes Kline in Clearwater.

Alice Webster Speight writes that her hasband is one of the executives of the Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Co. in Richmond. Alice keeps busy with church and Red Cross work, plus bridge play including doplicate. Their two daughters are married. The husband of the older one is an officer in the regular Navy and is stationed in Norfolk. In June they expect to leave for "parts unknown". The younger daughter was to have been married last August 30 but the wedding was arranged on three day's notice when her prospective husband was called back to the Air Force. He is now stationed in England and she will follow as soon as he is permanently assigned.

From Ruth Hulburd Brown comes the word that their four children are married and there is "quite a crop" of grandchildren to enjoy. Ruth and her husband are to come to Florida March 1 and I'm hoping to stir my lazy self to get up to nearby Hillsboro Club to say "Hello". They plan to go on to Sea Island to stay until sometime in April.

Blessing on you Dorothy Wallace, for sending copies of your Christmas letters for '47, '48, and '49. I read every word of them and felt as if I had had the privilege of a fine visit with you. I can understand why Dorothy was unable to get out her letter in 1950. She is with the Argonne National Laboratory (Chicago), Health Physics Division—enjoys her work in spite of the toll it takes of time and energy. She is constantly "on call" for sudden trips to Veedersburg, Indiana, on behalf of her father. He will be ninety-five in March and determinedly keeps contact with his Building and Loan, and bank interests. After repeated devoted attempts to keep him pleasantly cared for, Dorothy now has him in a nice nursing home east of Veedersburg where he can be taken in for the desired business trips. One can readily realize the tension under which Dorothy lives, with her exacting (to me, aweinspiring) work and the many emergency calls to Indiana, An orchid to you, Dorothy! I'm glad you can participate in the activities of the Sweet Briar alumnae group and hope sometime I can accept your invitation to meet with them.

Personally, I have nothing of import to offer. We are hoping mightily that our new home will be ready for occupancy when we return. I feel like a trusting soul to walk out on it in the final stages but it may work out beautifolly.

Bye for now.

1921 REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: EDITH DURRELL (Mrs. Edward C. Marshall) 6326 Ridge Avenue, Pleasant Ridge, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Fund Agent: FEORENCE IVES (Mrs. Lloyd A. Hathaway) 166 Centre Avenue, Abington, Massachusetts.

It has been quite a while since we have had a class letter published, and I am at fault. Much has happened in the last year to prevent my taking pen in hand. Last April my Ann was married and left at once to go to Salzborg, Aostria with her husband, then a lieutenant and now Capt. Jesse W. Whitley. Incidentally he is a nephew of Margaret Benton Whitley of Fremont, North Carolina of the class of 1923. So, being quite alone, since my son, Ed, Jr., is still in college at Sewanee, I have been traveling about quite a bit in the past year, and have seen a number of Sweet Briarites here and there.

When in Connecticat last summer, visiting my aants, 1 had a wonderful afternoon with Jo Ahara MacMillan who was visiting her daughter Josephine in Stamford. She had just come from Michigan where she had visited Shelly Ronse Aagesen who is kept in a turmoil by her lively young daughter Alice, aged 10.

I also had a letter from Gert Pauly Crawford. She and Bob had a wonderful motor trip in Europe last spring.

If you read the last issue of this magazine, you saw that Flo Woelfel is now on the Alumnae Council, I know she is going to be quite an asset, and I hope she loves the job as much as I did when I served. It is such fon to return to campus to see old friends and make new ones. I really miss the jaunts back to Virginia.

Recently Mary Taylor Corley sent me a clipping and later annooncements of two of her sons marriages. She has four grown sons, you know, one of whom is an Annapolis graduate, one a West Pointer, and a third a flier for the Virginia Air National Guard. Lt. John G. Corley, 11 was married to Peggy Joyce Copley and Lt. Henry P. F. Corley to Phyllis Hurst, both girls from Richmond.

In checking over a letter from Florence Ites Hathaway, I find some bits of news, perhaps a little late, but I'll pass them on anyway. Ophelia Short Seward's daughter, Betsy Heath, was married to Edwin Branch Totty of Petersburg, Virginia a year or so ago. Kitty Datts Baynum wrote me this Christmas that another daughter of Ophelia's goes to school near her home in Maplewood, New Jersey.

Hildegard Flauner Monhoff, our poetess, wrote Florence from Altadiva, California where she has lived since 1926, in an "old garden house and a studio, all made over from way back. My husband is an architect and has added 20th century style to the two very elderly cottages that were here, I am a passmate plants woman, so picture me well nigh invisible among sub-tropical greenery (also weeds), I have only one child, We lost a little boy at birth and Ian is only eight and soon will be nine. You see I took over the exciting job rather late. There has been much joy and busyness, but not much poetry, with me, these years, but soon I hope to manage hetter"

Florence Douden Wood, our scientist meni ber of the class, wrote "Horace is chairman of Biology at Neward Colleges of Rutgers and commutes from Upper Montelair, New Jersey. When he went into the service 1 gave op our house in Chatham to live in Alabama with him. No, I haven't settled down in the least. If I do, it is a sign of senility and let's hope that day is far distant," Florence also has only one child, a boy. She is a distinguished scientist, with many books, and published articles to her credit. She generously has sent copies to the SBC library. 1 wish all of you girls who have published works to your credit, too, would do the same.

Catherine Hanitch, who lives in Oak Terrace, Minnesota, is working, as she has done for many years, in the laboratory of a large T. B. sanitorium just outside of Minneapolis.

Kitty Datis Baynom has a married daughter 22, a son 16, and a son who is in Princeton Theological Seminary. I hope to get over to Maplewood to see Kitty on my next trip to New York.

Gertrude Thams wrote a note from Denver, where she has been a moving spirit in keeping the Denver Alomnae group a going concern.

I saw Emma Adams Kyle on campus last Jone. Her daughter, Emma, graduated at that time. She lives in West Hartford, Connecticut where her husband is connected with the Aetna Fire Insurance Co.

Hattie Wilson Diggs lived in Baltimore for many years, and now is in Bronxville, New York, where her husband is with Standard Oil Co.

Marjorie Abraham Meyer of Birmingham has a son 27 years old, living in New York and a daughter at Goucher.

Frances Helmick Buell, Worthington, Ohio, wrote that a couple of years ago she saw Ernestine Shayler (I remember her as a member of our Freshman class) who came to Colombos, Ohio with one of her daughters for the burial of her father, Bishop Shayler. Frances had not seen her since college days, and enjoyed a visit with her when Ernestine came out to her home for dinner. Frances and Katherine Hauch transferred to Smith their sophomore year. Frances has a daughter, Barbara, graduate also of Smith College, and a son, Bob. She is very active in club work and in civic work.

Before Christmas, I attended a girl scout Regional Conference in Toledo. Mary Millard Webb was the chairman of the Region at that time and invited us all out to her home for a beautiful buffet supper. She is Georgia Millard Hewlings' sister of our class, and was a freshman our senior year. Mary has a summer cottage on Crystal Lake in Michigan, only a few miles from my cottage on Lake Lellanan and we visit back and fortin. Georgia lives in Salem, Virginia, and has one daughter.

When I was in Toledo, I phoned Ruth Geer Boice. Her son is at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and her daughter, Gracia, who spent two years at SBC, graduated from the University of Michigan and is now doing graduate work there this year.

I see Fran Simpson Cartwright now and then. Her daughter has presented her with two grandchildren and her son, Tommy, is in the Marines. Her step-daughter is still in school in Cincinnati and Fran says it seems so strange to be a member of the P.T.A. again after so many years!

Eleanor Finke Helmers' only son, Jimmy, was married in January. Louise Pochat Hattersley is a neighbor as is my old roommate Elizabeth Hodge Markgraf, so I see them often.

At Christmas time I had cards from Gertrude Anderson, who is still running a laboratory for a group of doctors in Findley, Ohio, El Harned Arp, Kitty Davis Baynum, Gert Pauly Crawford, Jo Abara MacMillan, Gert Dally Massie (I see her often in New York), and Florence Woelfel (I almost saw Flo when she was en route to SBC in January—better luck next time, I hope), and Shelly.

I may not be able to have a letter for you in the June magazine, as I flew to Austria to visit my child in March. It had been nearly a year since I saw her, so you can well imagine how thrilled I am. I expect to be with her for two months. Her husband plans to take a couple of weeks leave and drive up in their little German made Ford through Germany and the Low Countries and perhaps a glimpse of Paris and Vienna. On my way home I will visit Dotty Job Robinson for a few days. She is teaching school at Fairington School, Chislehutst, Kent, which is quite near London.

I spent a couple of weeks with my sister Ruth Durrell Ryan in March. Her son Winston was married on March 9. Ruth lives in Manhasset, L. I. She has two daughters also, Nancy, a junior at Adelphi College and Mary goes to Manhasset High School. When I visit Ruth I often see Isabel Wood Holt who lives at Oyster Bay. Isabel is a grandmother, as her daughter Julia has two small sons.

I'll write you about my trip and visit with Dotty, in my next letter, probably the first fall issue. I am sorry that I will miss our 30th reunion in June, I hope many of you attend and have as much fun as we did five years ago. How about one of you writing up the event for the June issue?

Best wishes to you one and all.

Class Secretary: MARION WALKER (Mrs. L. K. Neidlinger) 3 Elm Street, Hanover, New Hampshire.

Fund Agent: ALICE BABCOCK (Mrs. Charles I. Simons) Box 388, Columbia 1, S. C.

The first reply this time to the newsquesting double post card barrage was from a busband. His prompt answer gave me an idea—maybe the husbands would be more likely to answer. Although your secretary has not yet been left high and dry, still, there is an appalling number of unused post cards resting quietly around the country. Another theory is that perhaps the husbands forgot to mail the cards their wives carefully wrote. They just might be resting in the pocket of that old brown tweed he hardly ever wears. Do take a look.

To get on with the star-studded members who did answer: Leah Hines Cunningham lives in Wilson, N. C. where her husband is a tobacconist. They have three boys—Bobby, 21; Billy, 19; and Booker, III, 12. The two older ones attended the University of North Carolina until they entered the Army in February. The Cunninghams spend their summers at Morehead, N. C. and seem to be getting on fine.

Aline Morton Burt, also with three children, a daughter and two boys, lives in La Grange, Illinois. Her husband is in the steel industry, Chicago sales manager. Their daughter, through school, is assistant manager of an apparel shop and is engaged to a young man in the Air Corps. The older boy is a senior at the University of Colorado, president of his fraternity and a member of seven national honorary fraternities (engineering, science and music). What a variety of interests and skills! Their younger son is a freshman in High School and is a champion diver. "Mom", as she says, keeps busy, not enough time for hobbies, (chief one still photography), P. T. A., always church, Pi Beta Phi alumnae club work, League, D.A.R., etc. We can imagine how much time all this takes but don't desert your hobbies, Aline.

I heard a wonderful phrase the other day— "exercise your middle-age prerogative". I commend it to you all, Lucille Montgomery Cart has a daughter, Elizabeth, at St. Mary's in Raleigh, N. C., her youngest son, Ben, is in the Army. Another son, Walter, is being married in April to Donna Robinson who was a junior at Sweet Briar this year. Her oldest son is still a bachelor.

Margaret Marston Tiller wrote of her two granddaughters, nearly two and four years old, and I know how precious they are to the grandparents. Their mother, Jeanne, and and her lawyer husband live in Kingsport, Tennessee. Margaret and her husband are gardeners, both flower and vegetable, and extend an invitation to stop by Emporia, Virginia (Route 301 to and from Florida) and see them. She sees Ophelia Short Seward frequently, also Jeannette Kidd Sheridan, who wrote a much appreciated letter in response to my news plea. The Sheridans have been in and out of Hanover many times in the last few years and it makes me sad to think of not once seeing them. (When you stay at the Inn, Jeannette, we are practically your nearest neighbors.) They have two children, a son, "Champ", who is a junior at Johns Hopkins, and engineering major in the School of Business Economics, and a daughter, Jean, who has spent the last eight summers in New England. Jeannette's husband is a printer and advertising man. She has done "U.S.O. work, a little for the Red Cross, and some finger printing for the F.B.I. It was all volunteer work but the finger printing was really fun!" She hears occasionally from Margaret Garry Reading, whose daughter was married last year.

I also had word from Alice Earley Clendenning who has been teaching this year as a Visiting Professor in Iowa City. She takes off June 15th for California for the summer, where she has three grandsons. It would seem that the summer would be a busy, happy one.

This finishes the tale, dear gals, except for best wishes and good luck to each of you.

I'm sorry I missed the last two numbers, but things got a little involved, and I simply did not have time to gather news and send in a letter. Consequently some of the following news is old.

Last May I had the nicest letter from Elizabeth Sparrow Crothers who lives in Cincinnati. She has two daughters, Pat and Joan. Pat went to the University of New Mexico and graduated from George Washington University in Washington, D. C. She was married at Annapolis at the time her ensign fiance graduated, and is now Mrs. Danforth Clement of San Diego, California. Joan has been in New York for three years. She attended Parson School of Design, and now has a good designing job with Judy 'n Jill, a junior house. She has also done some modeling. Her picture was in the May first issue of Life magazine (Eastman Kodaked), Elizabeth also has a step-daughter who is a debutante, so her family sounds very interesting.

Eleanor Harned Arp's son, Louis, Jr., was married to Patricia Pinney of Clinton, Iowa; last August. They are living in Baltimore where Louis is studying medicine at the University of Maryland.

"Mardy" Hemghaum Curtis' daughter, Julie Ann DeLescaille, was married to Herbert Louis in Clinton, Iowa, in July, He is studying to be a dentist. I saw "Mardy" here this fall, and she hasn't lost a bit of her pep.

Grace Merrick Twohy's daughter, Patricia, was married last summer to George Rector. They are living in Washington, D. C.

I wish I had room to put in Marian Suannell Wright's letter exactly as she wrote it. It sounded so like her! She said Sue Simrall Logan still lives in Covington, Kentucky, and is working in the bank while her husband commutes to Chicago where he is working on a newspaper. As for "Swanney" her life must be a busy one. They love El Paso, and she says they are still struggling to get their two children educated to the point of super-saturation. At present, Dan holds the record for size among the thirteen year olds. He is six feet one and a half, and weighs one hundred and eighty-five pounds. He is a freshman at St. Stephen's Episcopal School at Austin, Texas, and they had to buy him out-size football equipment. Sue, almost nineteen, is at Texas State College for Women.

Gladys Woodward Hubbard writes that their son, Leverett, graduated from Yale last June and is now studying law at the University of Virginia. She and her husband went down to the North Carolina game last fall, and are looking forward to a real visit to Charlottesville and Sweet Briar this spring. Gladys says if any of you are touring New England she would be more than happy to have you stop by to see her in Hartford.

And now I shall try to fill up space with news of the Walns. Our oldest boy, Ray, Jr., was married to Ann White of Clarksburg, West Virginia, a year ago January. Ann gradated from Laurel in Cleveland and the next year went to Rollins College in Florida where she met Ray and the romance blossomed. They are living in Philippi, West Virginia, where Ray is in the coal mining business, and have a two months old daughter. I already have her headed for Sweet Briar.

This Christmas we went back to Davenport for a good old-fashioned family reanion, and hit fifteen below zero weather. It was fun to see everyone and in spite of the weather we did manage to circulate. "Dodie," "El" and Elsie are all fine. "El's" Mary is working in the University of Iowa Hospital in Iowa City in the Medical Art Department, She has a great deal of talent, "Josie" is at Pine Manor.

"Dodie" Von Maur Crampton's daughter, Gertrude, is working. Bud, Jr., is a senior at Cornell, and Kitty is at the University of Illinois. Last summer she went to school at Boulder, Colorado, and got a degree in mountain climbing, if you please! Her tales of dangling down a mountain-side by rope, etc., made my blood congeal. "Chuck", their youngest, and our Nick had a grand time together. A card from "Dodie" a few days ago said that she and Bud, with Kitty and "Chuck" were in Venice, Florida.

Our alumnae club for Washington, Maryland and Virginia area sponsored the Alexandria Little Theater play, "Strange Bed-fellows", on March 6. I am also chairman of the Red Cross drive for this part of town, and as the two events were about the same time, I feared for my family's welfare.

I feel I have done this column long enough, and Marian Swannell Wright has very kindly agreed to take over the job. Do help her out by sending her any news you may have. Don't be modest, and don't wait to be asked! I have enjoyed being secretary, particularly hearing from many of you whom I would not have otherwise. From now on write to: Mrs. William G. Wright, 2616 Montana Street, El Paso, Texas. Good luck to you all, and I hope to see you all at our thirteeth!

It's a slow process but maybe eventually we'll hear some news from each one of our class members.

Mary Sailer Gardiner wrote me such a nice newsy letter of her family. Her daughter, May Fairman, 23 years old, was married in the fall to John J. Quinn, who is associated with Armstrong Cork Co., and they are now living in Dallas, Texas. Mary's son, Joe, 21 years old, has joined the Air Force and has been at Lackland Base, San Antonio.

Sue Hager Rohrer's oldest son, Charles, has joined the Air Force and been at Lackland Base too. Sue spent two weeks in February at Avon Park, Florida with her Mother.

Lucy Holmes Carson Haddow and her husband spent the month of December in Charlotte. It was primarily a business trip but you know how Lucy loved being home at that time and for that long. She had grand visits with Martha Jamison Causey and says Martha's son is most attractive.

Virginia Wbitlock Cobb has moved back to Durham from Charlotte, Her daughter and Helen Goffigan Wills' daughter are close friends. They both went to St. Mary's in Raleigh.

lone McKenzie Walker has been visiting her family in Montezuma, Georgia for several weeks. Her oldest son, George, Jr., is now at O. C. S.

Louise Gibbon Carmichael has been visiting her sister Alice in Hickory and both of them went to Wilson for the wedding of their nephew, Gibbon Pender. Louise's daughter, Lou, is at home now.

Our daughter, Eleanor, graduates from Pine Manor this June.

I hope you will all have a grand summer and let me know all about your trips.

Class Secretary: Martia Clost (Mrs. Lowell B. Page) 18270 Kirkshire, Birmingham, Michigan.

Fund Agent: KAY NORRIS (Mrs. Stillman F. Kelley, II) 35 Carisbrooke Road, Wellesley Hills 82, Massachusetts.

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: Daphne Bunting (Mrs. L, K. Blair) 42 Kenwood Avenue, Worcester 5, Massachusetts.

I hasten to tell any of you who may be confused about reunion years that according to the Dix plan which was adopted several years ago, our class is slated for a reunion in June, but if any of you must choose between the two years, do wait until our 25th reunion in June, 1952. However, if you should happen to be in that vicinity this year, I'm sure you would enjoy being there as many of our friends from '26, '28, '29, '30, '31, and others will be on hand. The Dix plan is a system arranged so that two groups of classes reune each year is addition to the 5-year classes.

And now for the news:

It is with sorrow that I report the death of Pauline Payne Backus's mother who passed away on February 17. We send our deepest sympathy to Pauline,

Ruth Lowrance Street took Gordon, Jr., to New York for his spring vacation and Frances came up from Sweet Briar and spent the first weekend of her vacation with them.

The Cutlers (Rebecca Manning) had a tremendously successful cocktail party recently in their lovely home overlooking the Sound in Greenwich. It was a treat to see Beck's sister, Lib Wade, who came over from Bronxville for the occasion, Maggie Leigh Hobbs' daughter, Peggy, is Vice-President of the Freshman class at Sweet Briar.

Perhaps you saw in the New York Herald Tribune on February 20 the splendid picture of Kenneth Durham (Jo Snowdon's husband) who has recently been made a Vice-President of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company of New York. The whole eastern seaboard is overjoyed to have the Durhams in the vicinity. Their new address is Buxton Lane, Riverside, Connecticut.

Did you know that Dolly Wallace (Libbo Mathews' offspring) did the art work on the back cover of the February issue?

And because we are so "hepped up" about our 25th—a direct quote from Gwin Harris Tucker: "It is strange how school days and school mates never dim with time. I am sure we could pick up where we left off 20 odd years ago, and I hope to do just that at reunion. I do plan to be back in '52, My husband, Bev, has a reunion at West Point that same time and he can drop me off at S. B. I hope nothing will interfere."

An occasion of great importance was the New York Club's luncheon for Mrs. Pannell. We were greatly impressed by our new President, whose warmth, capability and graciousness won us all. She brought us close to Sweet Briar in a friendly, informal way.

The Cranes (yours truly) flew to Fort Lauderdale for one short week of sunshine. We went with the same two couples that took the West Indies Cruise with us two years ago—wonderful time.

When we reune in June of '52 a lot of precious time will be spent in trying to catch up on the "what have you been doing the last 23 years" question. We hope in this column to bring you up to date on various members of our class, so, with great pleasure, we start off with Madeline Brown Wood's autobiography:

"June 1927-Left Sweet Briar-diploma in hand to conquer the world. Worked in a laboratory at the Mayo Clinic five months. Married McFarland Wood in 1927. Lived in New London, Connecticut, Panama, Portsmouth, N. H., and New London again-son born in 1929. In 1930 went to Honolulu for five years-daughter born there in 1932. In 1935 came to New York where Mac was on duty at an ammunition depot 'til 1937. Thence to Norfolk where we greatly enjoyed seeing Kitty Wilson Garnett and her husband and Libby Jones Shands. Next, to Raleigh, N. C., for recruiting duty where Ruth Aunspaugh Daniels and her husband helped make life worth while 'til 1942 when Mac went off to sea and the children and I went to Hopkinsville for the duration. Mac came home in 1945 and we went to New Orleans for duty. In August 1949 we came to Louisville, Kentucky, where Mac is in command of a Naval Ordnance Plant. Our son is at the University of Kentucky studying electrical engineering and our daughter is a freshman at William and Mary studying whatever girls study at a co-educational college. The world is still unconquered!" Many thanks for starting us off with such a bang, Madeline.

"SEE YOU JUNE '52"

Any 25th reunion is a very special thing and the class of '27, Sweet Briar College, will be satisfied with nothing short of 100% attendance. Husbands that have already signed up include: William Crane, Jr., Stamford, Connecticut; Dr. Thomas Foltz, Fort Smith, Arkansas; Robert Hobbs, Baltimore, Maryland; Kenneth Durham, Riverside, Connecticut; and Harry Wallace, Jr., Charleston, West Virginia.

We believe their enthusiasm is due to the fact that Babe Albers Foltz will direct a twenty-fifth anniversary musical, featuring song and dance hits of our day benefitting the Alumnae Fund, Keep practicing "The Charleston" and search through that trunk in the attic for a costume so you can get into the act.

Everyone is on the committee and your assignment is to write letters encouraging your roommate and friends to meet you on campus. This should be easy with over a year at your disposal.

Maggie Leigh Hobbs will act as assistant chairman.

Send your ideas and suggestions to Elizabeth Mathews Wallace (Mrs. H. A., Jr.) Chairman, 327 Professional Building, Charleston, West Virginia.

Henceforth through June of '52 we will have a special message from the chairman of the rennion, Libbo Matthews Wallace, in this

1928

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary and Fund Agent: KATHERINE LEADBEATER (Mrs. Howard B. Bloomer, Jr.) Shore Acres, Lorton, Viginia.

Forgive me for letting you down in the last issue. The deadline passed and my oblivion was complete. So I will include two issues in one. I am having to send this in to the office early because I will be in Mexico when the next deadline comes. Don't let that stop you from writing me; your letters will be waiting for me when I get home and will make the next letter in the magazine.

There is lots of news this time. The class of 1928 really crashed through in fine shape and I was so pleased. Now I don't have to do what Evelyn Claybrook Bowie suggested, which was to tell about myself. Maybe I will have to resort to that yet, but not if you keep it coming as you did this time.

A letter from Mary Nelms Locke, who I reported previously is living in Spring Hill, Alabama, was enthusiastic about her trip to Sweet Briar last summer, to get her daughter, Nan, who is a sophomore this year at Sweet Briar, and the superb dinner and wonderful visit with Dr. Crawford and Miss Rogers. She mentions their charming home and I personally recommend the view from their porch as the perfect prescription for a serene mind. Mary says her primary interest continues to be horticulture and she has gone overboard about camellias, though they are only a part of the new things she had not grown before moving to Alabama.

Next was a letter from Kitty Brightbill Biltz, who was just leaving for a trip to Jasper National Park as the guest of the Sun Life of Canada, having won this trip by making her top quota as Sun Life agent. Kitty writes that her eldest daughter is in her first beau-ing era and her youngest started kinde garten in September, which with her work keeps her hands full.

My frantic plea to you all in the fall brought a sympathetic letter from Frances Coyner Huffard, who gave forth with a lot of news. She has two daughters and a son. The first daughter, Alice, 19 years old, is a senior at the University of North Carolina and Nancy, 16 years old, is a freshman in Salem College, Winston-Salem, North Carolina. It looks like Frances is making good North Carolinians of them, but after all Raleigh was her birthplace. Her last chick at home is Hudson, Jr., 13 years old, and he started in high school last fall. From the way the letter reads that really is a traveling family. Hudson, Sr., makes frequent trips to New York, Washington and Chicago and in between Frances went to Boston last fall and before Christmas drove her mother and father to Texas for a visit and then on to Palm Beach for the winter and in March she returned to Texas to drive them home.

Evelyn Claybrook Bowie was the opposite because her big news was the completion and settling into her new house in which she just wants to stay and enjoy the luxury of "lots and lots of closets and enough bathrooms." She offers a cordial invitation to any of you who can drup by. Evelyn's two offsprings are Beverly, 10, and Lee, 6. Evelyn is still the athlete. She and her husband won the County mixed doubles tennis championship and both the spring and fall golf championships. She says she is still allergic to women's clubs, teas and bridge parties but is on several civic boards. Doesn't that sound just like her as you remember her?

Helen Adams Martin has changed her address to Nashawtuc Road, Concord, Massachusetts, and she and her family also are enthusiastic sportsmen. They are sailors and she says the year seems to revolve around the time they can spend at Brewster-on-Cape-Cod where they just completed a home last spring. She has a son, Kenneth, 18, in the University of Rochester and a daughter, Martha Ellen, 15, Helen has joined the Concord Comunity Chorus and belongs to several civic organizations.

As I go through these letters I don't include everything for lack of space but 1 am truly impressed with the way Sweet Briar girls assume their responsibilities as good citizens by taking part in their local civic organizations.

Betty Prescott Balch's civic duty stint was more concentrated between September 7 and November 7 than ever before. Her husband was nominated for Lieutenant Governor of New York on the Democratic ticket and Betty campaigned with him for a strenuous two months, visiting nearly every city and town in New York state. Last May Betty and her husband, Dick, went out for the Kentucky Derby and visited Mary Huntington Harrison, and while there saw a lot of Polly McDiarmid Serodino, and last but far from least, our own "Rip" Van Winkle Morlidge. sent me a Christmas card with a "Rip" brief note saying she had no news, but that is better than not hearing from her at all.

Betty also reports hearing of Kay Emery Eaton who, we are sorry to say, has had a serious operation. Kay has two small children and is living in California.

Marion Sumner Beadle has written to Betty that all is well with her and her family in Honolulu. She has two daughters, Kate and Judy; sees a great deal of Lib Rountree Kellerman, who is very active in Republican politics in the Islands.

A card from Lib Crane Hall was chock full of news. She and her husband and two offspring toured Europe last summer. They included England, France, Italy and Switzerland in their two months itinerary, had a wonderful trip and got back in time to put Addie in Wheaton College this fall.

Louise "Squeak" Harned Ross took time out to add to my windfall of letters to say she has moved to Hinsdale and had Debby, 16 years old, in the Hinsdale High School and Peter is a sophomore at Princeton. On one "Squeak's" trips east to see Peter she stopped by to see Lou Bristol Lindemann, who has two daughters, Sue, a freshman at Skidmore and Carol, a sophomore in high school. Just before Christmas "Squeak" had dinner with Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins, who has "four beautiful boys and looks wonderful herself."

Forgive me for falling flat on my face and missing the last issue of the magazine, for this perfectly grand response to my plea for news deserved better. Best regards to you all and keep the news coming.

1929

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: ELLA PARR PHILLIPS (Mrs. Samuel J. Slate) 1435 Lexington Avenue, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: Virginia Hodgson (Mrs. R. C. Sutliff) 4733 24th Road, North, Arlington, Virginia.

A grand letter came from Jane Wilkinson Banyard who lives in Bermuda. She extends an invitation to all Sweet Briar girls who come down to look her up and any who travel on the Queen of Bermuda should make themselves known to Captain Banyard her husband. They have been back in Bermuda two years and like it as much as ever. They are hoping soon to build a house on their lovely property but so far have only gotten the dock finished! One son is attending Ridley College in Canada but the youngest is going to a local school. Jane wrote that she entertained the Sweet Briar group during the Easter season and hopes to make it a yearly occurrence. She paid them all a big compliment by saying she thought they were the prettiest and nicest of all the college groups! Not having any daughters of her own to send to Sweet Briar we would like to congratulate Jane on selling Sweet Briar to her neighbor for her two daughters and she is a Wellesley eraduate.

A note from Ida Moore Taylor says that after conferring with Nora Lee Antrim they have no news but confess to being just plain dull! A card from Margaret Moneure Johnson, also in Richmond, told of her two younger girls going to school at St. Catherine's while her oldest is a freshman at Vassar.

Claire Host Gaver writes that she is rather busy these days—an understatement I think you will agree when you hear that she has a full time job with the Board of Education in Fair Lawn, New Jersey, a house to keep and a family of three boys, aged six, nine and thirteen years, to look after! She regrets having no candidates for our Alma Mater.

I had a swell lunch last week with Katie Coe, She still works at Best & Co. but said she and her sister, Nancy, had been quite busy at home as their parents have been ill for the past several years. Katie told me something of Betty Hibbs, who now is living in Brooklyn after having had a most interesting time traveling all about the United States as a representative of the travel agency "Ask Mr. Foster". She has also seen, more or less recently, Helen Smith Miller who is a Red Cross worker now stationed at a veterans hospital in Rutland Heights, Massachusetts. During World War II Helen did a most splendid and dangerous work overseas. She has now taken up aviation, too, and has, or will have soon, her pilot's license. Her house in Sparkill was bought by Betty Neill Danner who is a busy housekeeper with one little girl.

The Sweet Briar Metropolitan alumnae group was one of those cooperating with Barnard College to present the third annual Barnard Forum. It was for me a most stimulating experience. There were approximately 1500 college women from twenty-three alumnae groups in the beautiful Waldorf Astoria ballroom. Dean Millicent McIntosh of Barnard College presided, Mrs, Anna Rosenberg, assistant Secretary of Defense, was unable to come as scheduled but Major General Ginsberg, an assistant to General Marshall, substituted. He talked about the war in Korea, "Women in the World Crisis" was the topic of a panel discussion which followed. The panel was composed of Dr. Margaret Mead, author and ethnologist, Mrs. Marion Eberly, director of the women's division of the Institute of Life Insurance, Miss Dorothy Stratton, National Executive Director of the Girl Scouts of America and Mrs. John Lee, National President of the League of Women Voters. They discussed women's role in the world from the viewpoint of industry, the war effort and the home and community. The concensus was that women can shape the future of our civilization—a terrific responsibility! I wish you could all have heard it for it was really inspiring.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary; Elizabeth Copeland (Mrs. Fillmore Norfleet) Woodberry Forest, Virginia.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George S, Writer, Jr.) 21 5th Avenue, Nyack 3, New York.

Presuming that you all saw Mona Stone Green toss the ball of class secretary at me in the last issue, I, herewith, by catching the ball and running with it for a year am displaying an ability I never demonstrated in college. It seems to me that my athletic tendencies were so deficient, that they snatched me out of basketball after the first week and put me in a posture class! Well here we go, with lots of help from Mona herself, who like a true sportsman, came from behind to support me in getting that ball down the field.

Mona says she sees very few of our classmates, with the exception of Able Blake once in a while, but she hears frequently from Marge Sturges Moose, who has just moved with her husband, Russ, to Birmingham, Alabama. Marge wrote Mona that she had a visit from Jo Rend Stubbs after 21 years. She had her ten year old son with her, but did not bring her little daughter, Stephame, whose pictures proclaimed her a very cute live wire. Jo's husband was in the Air Force during the war.

Mona's daughter, Anne, is a sophomore at Sweet Briar and sounds lovely, from the restrained remarks of her mother, who needn't listen while I tell you that Anne has been approved to study for Honors in zoology and chemistry.

I had a grand letter from Eagle, which makes me want to admit publically that the reason I took this job is to have the pleasure of writing to and hearing from our old friends. Eagle says frankly that her job is raising four children and that she loves it, but she doesn't think it very newsworthy. She lives in Lovingston, but says she doesn't get to the Patch very often, although her children get there whenever they can. She says Moss and Tuck stopped by to see her after reunion last year. She learned from the Lynchburg paper that Tuck's husband, the Rev. George L. Taylor, preached at S. B. C. in March. He is the rector of a church in Roland Park, Maryland.

Eagle says she hears from Jane Callison Smith, who lives in Charleston, West Virginia, where Diddy Mathews Palmer also lives and writes a column for the newspaper. Jane's daughter, Sarah, is at Bradford Junior College near Boston, Evelyn Ware Saunders lives in Amherst and has a little girl about five or six who attends dancing school with Eagle's three girls. I had already heard what Eagle told me about Lucy Miller Baber being a prize-winning golfer.

My old roommate, Split Clark, whom I see once in a decade, tries to keep me posted on the Lynchburgers, and I think it was she who also told me what Eagle did about Jette

Baker Davidson having four children, at least three of whom are Brains.

It was a real treat to hear from Scootie Gorsline whom I have not seen since I used to live in Richmond. She told me little or nothing about herself except that she and her mother have bought a dear little old house and are having a grand time renovating it. Scootie made it sound so attractive that I am going to see it and her as soon as I can. She also told me that "Nelson lives in the country, caring for two children, dogs, etc.", and that they see each other often. Nelson comes in frequently to do work at the hospital where Scootie also works, I believe.

When I last heard from Betsy Williams Gilmore, who is my only real correspondent in our class, she was resignedly waiting for the mumps which had just struck down her Nell, aged six. Neither Betsy nor Kirk had had them (it?) and Betsy had decided their number was up. I haven't heard whether she outguessed the Fates or not. Betsy is president of the Sweet Briar Club of Cleveland and interests herself in all sorts of other things, including Le Cercle des Conferences Français de Cleveland, which is a very recherche organization of smart ladies. She has also been taking a cooking class of Cordon Bleu lectures which she finds fascinating. She says Bebe Gilchrist Barnes and Charlotte Kelsey have also been taking the course. Betsy says she recently saw Ruth Hasson Smith and Mary Copeland Sturgeon in Pittsburgh, both looking lovely. Ruth has one daughter and Copey three. Betsy and Kirk also visited Mary Carroll in Havre de Grace last fall and found her just the same as ever.

If it weren't for Christmas I would never hear from Telia Barksdale Bailey and Lucy Shirley Otis, and for that, if for no other reason, I bless the season. Telia lives in Nathalie, Virginia, where her husband is a doctor and they have one little boy. Lucy's delightful annual reports make me want to get right on the train and go to see her and her husband and three children.

My husband and I recently chaperoned 50 boys from our school at a dance at St. Anne's School in Charlottesville, where I had the great pleasure of meeting Catherine Coleman, '42, who has just been made dean of the school. At the same time I had a reunion with Sue Tucker Yates whose son Ogburn, Jr., is one of our students. Charlottesville is quite close to Woodberry Forest School, but the routine here keeps me from seeing anything much of Mary Gochnauer Dalton whose husband, Jack, was recently named Librarian of the Alderman Library there. However, the Daltons stopped by to see us last fall on a short tour they were taking with their twelve year old son, Jay. Occasionally I see Charlotte Lee Lauck, who also lives in Charlottesville, and whose eldest son, Billy, is a student at Woodberry. Charlotte has four children.

We seem to be reuning again this year and I wish some of you would stop by to see me on your way. As usual, we shall probably be doing the same thing at Woodberry at the same time, which will mean that I stay home.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Martha McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman) 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Natalie Roberts (Mrs. W. S. Foster) 2417 Salem Turnpike, NW, Roanoke 17, Virginia.

Dot Ayers Holt, my ever faithful news contributor, sends word that son, Tom, almost 16, attends Andover School; that husband, Jack's factory is blooming and that she is up to her ears in church rallies and Woman's Club work—and thus manages to stay out of trouble.

Nathalie Roberts Foster is snowed under with writing "second appeal" letters for the Alumnae Fund-and having been elected President of the Sweet Briar Club of Roanoke at the Christmas luncheon, she is doubly busy. The Fosters had a nice vacation in Florida recently and now are settled back home awaiting a possibility of a "call to arms" again with the Air Corps, However, Nat is still optimistically plugging for our reunion in June. She wrote also of the death of Anne Fischer Abry who died last August. Her husband wrote Nat that Anne had always felt close to S. B. C. and he wanted our class to know of her passing on, I'm sure you all join me in expressing our sympathy to Mr. Abry and their 3 boys.

Polly Swift Calhoun was ill for two months but is completely recovered, I am hapy to report. The Calhouns have had a Bavarian girl for an Exchange Student (International Friendship under the Armed Service and State Department Plan). It has proved quite a success. She attends High School with Sue and all are most fond of her. They continue to be involved with the Legislature—with Frank serving his second term there. There are 3 Calhouns (2 boys, 1 girl) playing basketball now—so Mrs. C. keeps quite busy with her taxiing to and from the various games.

Nancy Worthington got a card off to me before leaving for Washington for a Region III Convention of American Camping Association, which includes Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. Being Chairman of Proceedings, it was her job to line up records for 14 sessions. She had seen Beulah Norris, Margaret Potts Williams, Adelaide Boze Glascock, Julia Sadler de Coligny, Alma Martin Rotnem at Sweet Briar Council meetings. Also, she often runs into Ella Williams Fauber at Church Circles and "Split" Clark at the Little Theatre.

Charlotte Kent Pinckney found it necessary to resign from the Council, having discovered that being President of the St. Stephens Auxiliary, which has about 600 members, was a full-time job in itself, but an interesting and rewarding one. Working with her in the Auxiliary were Virginia Tabb Moore, Mary Leigh Scaton Marston and Virginia White.

Naomi Doty Stead and George were back east in July, having visited in Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland. They thought it extremely damp and chilly after the warm breezes of Arizona and still remain loyal to their newly established home in Tucson. Naomi had entertained Virginia Hatch Chase for lunch when she was there to visit her son at the University.

Martha McCowen Burnet's new son, Alex, is now 4 months old and, according to mama, the most fun of anything the Burnets have ever had. Their oldest son is now 18 and attending Davidson, but Martha and her husband are suffering the same problems as the Shipmans—namely, the draft situation, and what the future holds for our freshman sons, Bill and Aggic Cleveland Sandifer had been over to see the Burnets after Christmas. A card from Aggie gives me the exciting news that they hope to move into their new home by June.

Helen Sim Mellen keeps busy just tending child and house. Helen is always thoughtful in acknowledging my cards, for which I am grateful. It doesn't have to be exciting news!

A nice card from Peg Ferguson Bennett saying she had no news to report, but "We all rock along fairly evenly with worries about the future of the small liberal arts colleges and what the draft will do to our sons."

Helen Laurence Vander Horst and her husband are moving their family to Chattanooga where he will be Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Helen says they hate co leave Philadelphia where they have made many friends, but she is thrilled to get back to the south. Maybe I'm a little biased, but I think Chattanooga a very nice spot to move to, especially for a Sweet Briar girl, for that town is certainly a hot-bed of "Briarites".

As if reminding you that some of us have children in college isn't enough to make you feel ancient, let me add insult to injury by telling you that Carolyn (Mary Stewart Kelso Littell's daughter) and our class baby, made her debut this Christmas. This exciting event took place at the Indianapolis Dramatic Club Christmas Ball, and from mutual friends I understand that she was one of the loveliest "debs." Carolyn attends Indiana University and loves it.

The Shipmans made a trip to Virginia around mid-March to see Shippy—then on over to the Briar for the weekend. It was quite an experience to be there with my whole family, especially with my son dating a Sweet Briar girl and Janie having the thrill of spending a night on campus. We also spent a few days at Williamsburg and Hot Springs, then back to Ohio.

As many of you know, I have tendered my resignation as your class secretary. I know all of you will be as pleased as I to have Elizabeth "Split" Clark take over for our class. Do give her a big welcome by sending her all your news so she can see what a cooperative class you are. Her address is 227 Botton Avenue, Lynchburg, Virginia. I know I shall miss being your secretary, but I am booking forward to reading "Split's" letters!

Just one word about reunion—if all the classmates return who a year ago made the vow that they would, we should have a good representation. Stewartee and I are hoping to repeat the pleasant experience of our 10th and be on hand come June—so farewell 'til then.

1932

Class Secretary: MARJORIE WARD (Mrs. George H. Cross, Jr.) 2204 West 11th Street, Wilmington, Delaware.

Fund Agent: MILDRED GIBBONS, 918 First National Bank Building, Tampa 2, Florida.

We do have some exciting news for this issue. Last June Barbara Munter Purdue had twins, a boy and girl and also in the same month Trudy Buist Roberts had twin girls. I believe these are the first twins any of our class have had. Isn't it amazing they came in the same month? Congratulations to both the proud mamas. Barbara wrote me her news and also says that she has three other little girls, one 51/2, one 3, and another 11/2, and they certainly keep her on the jump. Barbara lives in Seattle and sees Jane White Burton occasionally. She heard from Em Green Kennon at Christmas, Em lives in Atlanta and has two daughters. Incidently, the Alumnae Office doesn't have Em's address and would like to Trudie has three other children besides the new twins and is as busy as she can be, Bobbie Bennett Cullum wrote me the news about Trudie and says that she and Earl live in Dallas with their three children, Margaret Anne, aged 9, now in 5th grade, Allen, aged 4, and Bennett, 15 months. Bobbie has been in her new home for fifteen months. She also tells me that Fran Seneindiver Stewart is building a new home.

Dot Smith Berkeley writes from Chapel Hill that Edmund will receive his Ph. D in September, having finished all his research at this point, He is looking for a job for the fall, but Dot says that college teaching doesn't offe, much hope and he is trying prep schools, Ned is at Episcopal High School this year and Judy and Backy are much occupied with scouts. Dot says she is mildly involved with Garden Club, P. T. A. and Home Demonstration Clubs, She also says that Connie Fowler Keeble has a brand new Studebaker and that Marge Miller Close's family are all quite healthy and happy at this point.

It was nice to hear from Helen Pratt Graff who lives in Kensington, Maryland. She saw Anna Gilbert Davy and Charlotte Magoffin this fall when they were in Washington for flying visits. Helen describes her life which sounds very busy. Her boy is nearly fourteen and she says the teen-age problems have hit them hard, Julie, her daughter, is twelve and will be a young lady soon, Helen works in the school library on Fridays, and is active in two P. T. A.s, holds office in Christ Church Altar Guild, belongs to two bridge clubs, takes a millinery course once a week, goes dancing once a month and whenever she has a spare minute (when can that be?) sews for herself and Julie.

Marcia Patterson writes that she is still at Kent Place School, Summit, New Jersey and has been so busy that she even missed Sweet Briar Day in New Jersey and New York City. Marcia says she recently had a nice visit with Isabel Scriba.

Mary Moore Pancake writes from Staunton, where she is Publicity Director at Mary Baldwin College, that she spent a month last summer as press officer in the New Bureau at Mount Holyoke College during their third annual Institute on the United Nations, It was an interesting experience and Flappy met people from everywhere. She saw Virginia Hall Lindley last fall when Virginia paid a visit to her nephew who lives near Staunton. Jack, Virginia's husband, had a bad appendectomy, but is all right now. Flappy heard through Mildred Hodges Ferry that Mildred Larimer is in Rome with ECA. Larimer has an apartment at 62 Via Veneta and writes a card now and then from some glamorous spot. Hodges also said that Sarah Harrison Merrill and Art had recently been to Birmingham and were soon going on a West Indies cruise, Jim and Mildred have hopes of taking a cruise soon.

Flappy says that Mrs. Pannell is going to speak at Mary Baldwin soon and the Sweet Briar Alumnae thereabouts are all anxious to meet her. Thanks so much for your newsy cards, Flappy. Wish everyone would tell me as much as you do. Flappy has had this job and knows how awful it is to send out 25 cards and get back two or three. The next time you start to throw one of those cards in the wastebasket please give a thought to your class secretary and write a few words even though you may think your life is drab. Your classmates still want to hear about you.

I am hoping to see Ann Authony Hill this summer when she comes back to Boston after a visit south. Ann's Betsy will be 16 in April and is planning to go to Sweet Briar. She says they have a good Sweet Briar Club in Boston and she seldom misses a meeting. There is no one from our class, but a few Ann knew before, among them Virginia Quintard Bond and Langhorne Watts Austen.

Lib Doughtic Bethea had a wonderful summer in Europe. She was gone six weeks, going over and coming back on the Queen Elizabeth. She took with her fifteen girls, all Memphis debutantes. Lib say that war conditions have scared her off for a trip this summer, so she thinks she'll wait until she can take her daughters with her, Mary will be 12 in July and will go to camp this summer, Lib will take Ann Branden, 9, and Richard, 6, off somewhere else. Lib has just become a Memphis Realtor and is connected with a fine office and is most enthusiastic about her work.

I had a letter from Lib Young Faulk in Vicksburg, who says that they had a wonderful Christmas season, perfect weather, no illness and interesting parties, and then sleet, ice and snow which had them without electricity and telephone for ten days. Their trees, shrubs and flowers are ruined. Lib's three children, Charles, Geneva and Fred really keep her busy and she has also taken an office in the Garden Club and Auxiliary. Speaking of Garden Clubs, Lib sent me a Flower Arrangement Calendar for Christmas. The 41st illustration from the Iris Garden Club of Atlanta is an arrangement by Sue Burnett Davis and someone else. Do look for it if you have the book.

SALTY, BRINY, CAPPY AND MARY LOVELAND CHILDREN OF DORIS Crane LOVELAND, 333

1933

Class Secretary: DORIS CRANE (Mrs. Samul C. Loveland, Jr.) 331 Chester Avenue, Moorest wn, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: GERALDINE MALLORY, 169 East Clinton Avenue, Tenafly, New Jersey.

News was certainly not forthcoming this month! I sent out over forty double cards and only two were returned. Of course that makes my work that much lighter but I would like to hear from the others in the class and will hope for the best before my next deadline.

Ruth Daties Young was the first to answer and she had the exciting news to tell of moving to California, I shall let you read her card verbatim:

"Our latest news is that Bobby, Tom, Bob and I move to Sherman Oaks, California in about ten days. Saw Charlotte Tamblyn Tufts out there when we were there these past two weeks and am so glad we will be near her and her lovely family. Bob has been made General Sales Manager of Motion Picture Film of Ansco. So Hollywood is our logical move. Our new address will be: 4023 Woodman Drive, Sherman Oaks, California. All Sweet Briarites welcome."

The second card came from "Ted" Clary Treadwell. No doubt you would not like to miss a word of her card either, so here goes:

"Had two enjoyable contacts with Sweet Briar—the annual gathering on December 28 and the regional meeting of the Alumnae Representatives on January 6. On both occasions I enjoyed hearing Mrs. Pannel!.

"Ben and I drove to Richmond a few weeks ago and saw Fran Powell Zoppa and her family and this week they're coming up to see us. Fran is terribly active—her latest accomplishment is producing a play which ran for two nights last week clearing $900 for one of her many clubs, I'll learn more of the details when I see her.

"As for me, my main activity outside of running the house and caring for Kay, who is 9, and Ben, who is 5, is teaching piano here at home. I have 24 children pupils and 4 adults. It does keep me stepping but I am enjoying it. Had a recital yesterday—glad it is over. Will start planning for the June one now!"

We really did hear about three of our classmates on these two cards and I do enjoy hearing from all of you so much that I will just tack on the end—Please write on that little return card and drop it in the mailbox

BONNIE Wood STOOKEY, 34g, AND SONS, WITH TALAT RASUL, '49g, AND ZINAT RASUL, RAN-BOLPH MACON, '53, OF INDIA

pronto. P. S. Sent along a picture of my four to swell our column. It just might be that I'd like you to see them, too! Dachshund has now been replaced by a brown French poodle named "Mimi."

1934

Class Secretary: MARY LLE RYAN (Mrs. Porter Strother) 798 Pemberton Road, Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan.

tund Agent: Martha Lou Lemmon (Mrs. W. Frederick Stohlman) 11 Edgehill Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

We have another house builder. Cordelia Penn Cannon and family are building in Greensboro, North Carolina. Cordelia says that most of her time at present and for quite a while to come is given to seeing to the house and planning the decorations and the garden. She is busy with church and civic activities. Also she is "being thoroughly educated by a teen-age daughter and a roughneck son."

Out in Boise, Emily Marsh Nichols is fully occupied with her job as Medical Social Consultant for the Idaho Department of Public Assistance and on the side as President of the League of Women Voters, nearly a full time job in itself, she says. One of Emily's brothers and his family have moved to Tacoma, Washington, and Emily is trying hard to convince all her Eastern friends of the beauties of living in the west.

Marjorie Van Evera Lovelace writes that her "Jeanie is almost twelve and is a tomboy, mainly interested in climbing trees. Son, Richard, is nine and has definite mechanical interests. Husband, Eldridge, is a partner in the firm of Barth, Altman, and Associates, city plan engineers. This involves a good deal of traveling and I am left to busy myself with numerous activities. This winter the campaigns got me. I'm hoping not to ring any more doorbells for a long, long time! The St. Louis Sweet Briar Club is more active this year, in fact I'm going to a meeting tomorrow."

Mary Walton McCandlish Livingston recommends a book to us. "The Crisis in the University" by Sir Walter Moberly (Macmillan, 1950, $2.50). "Though written about higher education, it helps to clarify many of the problems which plague P. T. A. members from the primary grades up. It is written by a man versed in Christian theology as well as in educational methods. It can be borrowed (for 10c) from The National Council Library, Protestant Episcopal Church, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York. Of news of herself—nothing. Do I have any spics around Alexandria? Someone please tell me something about Mary Walton.

Anne Corbitt Little's new home mentioned in the February issue is in Atlanta, I have discovered. They moved in a year ago, and have made lots of nice friends and have found some old friends, and have relatives close by. Louise is in second grade at school and Suzanne is in a wonderful kindergarten quite nearby. "My civic activities have been few as it took us quite a good while to do over the house, but I have gotten a great deal of satisfaction out of working with the deaf children at the Junior League Speech School."

Lydia Goodwyn Ferrell, who lives in Richmond, Virginia, has had a busy fall as a Major in the Community Chest Drive, having nearly 150 workers to supervise. The rest of the time she is busy with Ralph and the three children.

Once more many, many thanks to Lou Lemmon Stohlman for passing on news you ladies sent her in answering her Fund Agent letter—herewith:

Helen Murray has lived in Stowe, Vermont, for several years and has been associated with the Mt. Mansfield Hotel Company since 1941. "Bookeeping and secretarial work for the General Manager keep me busy all year round, but I do not have to punch a time clock. As long as I do the work expected of me I may spend an afternoon skiing, playing tennis or golf. Of course if the temperature happens to be 30 below zero, I find it most convenient to have to spend the day in the office." Doesn't that sound like a marvelous arrangement?

Virginia Broun Lawson, who lives in Charleston, West Virginia, says, "Our summer was very hectic; I had my three boys. aged 10, 8, and 4 and my niece and nephew in Wytheville, Virginia. Because of the polio epidemic we fled. They had all been directly exposed so we spent a very tense summer." Fortunately they all seem to have escaped.

Katherine (Peachie) Hanna is Curator of the Taft Museum in Cincinnati, "I gave a series of twelve lectures last year on Fine Arts at the University of Cincinnati, Also I have been on the Advisory Council for Xavier University and on the Board of Adult Education." She has spent a great deal of time working on a gigantic display of gold jewelry collected from archeological digs in Mexico, Guatemala, and South America. Wouldn't that be interesting work!

Sue Arbenz Hazlett: "I still have a warm, warm feeling for lovely Sweet Briar, and had so hoped to send all of my daughters to be nurtured in her bosom. But so far the score is four boys, no girls." (Shall we suggest to Sue that there are three good boys' schools within 60 miles of Sweet Briar and that if she sends her young men to one of them they can at least get weekend culture at the Briar Patch!)

Virginia Battey Etheridge, who has four children, says that she sees Cecil Birdsey Feussle every summer.

Rolfe Wells Moulder is to be found in

CHILDREN OF JIM AND NANCY Russell CARTER '34g BOB, SALLY, BILL, DAVID AND JERRY

Old Greenwich, Connecticut. She and Jim are cherishing an almost-two-year-old daughter.

Emily Timberlake Watterson lives in Cleveland, Ohio. Emily graduated from Mary Baldwin. She has two sons. She sees Eleanor Alcott Bromley and hears of Sweet Briar also through Elsetta Gilchrist Barnes who is her husband's cousin.

Charlotte Lee Lauck has a busy life in Charlottesville with four children—only the oldest is away at school, Bill—at Woodberry Forest. The youngest is four.

Elizabeth Mayfield Chapman says her hands are full with her two sons, the oldest of whom is seven. She mentioned a telephone conversation with "Fig" Newton but not a word about what "Fig" is doing. (Sometimes I think you people must be racketeers it is so hard to pry any information out of you!)

Helen Hanson Bamford is rushing around trying to keep up with her four. She says that she and Bill can't get over having a teen-ager, and that the Queen Bee is rushing through her babyhood without giving the family a chance to baby her.

While all of you moaned, groaned and otherwise lamented over the winter's cold, cold weather, the Strother family rejoiced. Our skating rink, 40' x 80', was a huge success, lasting two months. It was marvelous to have it right outside the back door-it meant that we all got in a little skating every day instead of just weekends at the park. One thing I learned that surprised me is that girls are noisier than boys. There were ten Cub Scouts here for an hour and a half after school one afternoon and ten Brownies here the next afternoon. The difference in the tumult was astounding. I wished for one of the decibel meters that they have on radio programs the afternoon the girls were her-The idea seemed to be-why wait until the other people stop talking, I'll just shout a little louder. Thank goodness they realize that they have to be quieter at Brownie troop meetings at school. And I expect that the neighbors said thank goodness the rink is usually populated with reasonably quiet and determined hockey players instead of screaming Sonja Henies. Porter is just back from a temporary active duty stint with the Army.

He was at the Pentagon and reports it to be as amazing a place as it is reputed to be. Since he comes from that part of the country and has relatives in Falls Church, Charlottesville, and around he managed to have a lot of fun. I kept the home fires burning by going to civic committee meetings, chaoffeuring boys' basketball teams, and getting my Brownie programs planned ahead,

If your name was not mentioned here, or only briefly, sit down and write me about yourself! The address is at the top, We want to hear about you.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretaries: MARGARIT SMITH (Mrs. John R. Thomasson) 1514 Arrow Street, Lynchburg, Virginia.

RUTH GILLIAM (Mrs. Earl R. Viar) 817 New Hampshire Avenue, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent; ALMA MARTIN (Mrs. Ralph Rotnem) 330 East 79th Street, New York 21, New York

You all are very hard to squeeze for news, almost as bad as the proverbial turnip! We had a blank column last time and we have very little news for you this time. Why don't you all break down and let us know what goes on? Maybe you are like me-doing the usual things that a wife and housekeeper and Mother does, I only hope that you have not met up with the venerable old flu bug. The Thomassons have been fighting it here for three weeks now and I am the only member of the family who has kept going all the time. I expect that most of you are busy like I am with the Red Cross Drive and the Civilian Defense projects as well as getting the family clothes, etc., ready for spring which we hope is not too far away.

We were very sorry to hear that Lucile Cox lost her father in February. He had been sick for a year and a half. Our sincerest sympathy goes to Lucile.

Miss Weaver has been sick for some time in the Lynchburg Hospital. Ruth has been to see her and is a much better friend in that respect than I am. Mrs. Watts, the Grammer house-mother, has also been in the hospital from the results of a fall,

Betty Cocke Winfree went to Atlanta again this year with Peyton to the newspaper convention. She saw Nancy Parsons Jones, whose husband is with the Gannett Newspaper Syndicate, and they have bought a house that has ten bedrooms and six baths, according to Betty, Nancy's mother is living with them,

Fran Baker Owen has also moved to a new home outside of Baltimore. Her new address is 11 Elmwood Road, Baltimore, Mary-

Kathleen Donobne McCormack sent me an adorable Christmas card featuring her four handsome sons. Too bad we can't reproduce that type of card, so all of you could

Our fifteenth reunion is this June! Why don't we make it a gala affair and have a big representation back for it? We haven't had a big group since our fifth. It's about time we got together again.

If anyone went to Stumpy's wedding or has heard about it we would love to have a description of it and I'm sure the rest of the class would like to hear about it, too, Maybe Stumpy will let us have a story on that for the next issue.

Please some of you come to our assistance and send us some news. We can't send you any if you don't send us any!

Class Secretary:

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Class Secretary: LUCY TALIATERRO (Mrs. Charley C. Nickerson) 80 Battin Road, Fair Haven, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: KATHERINE HOYT, 152 Forest Avenue, Caldwell, New Jersey.

This issue is suddenly upon us too soon after the February one, so I am afraid I haven't much news to offer you. However, I did hear from a couple of gals we hadn't heard from in a long time-so that helps,

Dot Tison Campbell was nice enough to help me get some maple syrup for my buckwheat cake eating family and sent me along a note. Her family had really been through a siege. Everybody, including Dot and Jim, had just recovered from chickenpox. Tison says she frankly can't remember what days who was ill, since she spent half the time looking after them all in an extremely condition. But they were all well when last heard from. She did say they had gotten south last spring, so maybe they will get the same break this year.

My other correspondent was Janice Wiley Adams, whom I had witten to ask why she was in Pennsylvania when I had last left her in New Bedford. She said my card arrived just as she was leaving for Jersey in a search for a new and permanent home. She seemed pleased to be heading again for the "hills of home," as she put it, and said they had some good prospects all the way between Benardsville and Red Bank-so maybe they will end up near enough to us for me to see her.

A delayed reply from Georgia Black Kievit says that their family life now is revolving around their little girl, Lydia Lee, born a year ago. She says even her son Dick at age 11 is up every A.M. to give her a bottle!

I trust we here are about through with a winter of colds and croup-two croup kettles going last week! More news next time, I hope, Class Secretaries: Cynthia Notand (Mrs. Karl Young, Jr.) Long Ridge Road, Stamford. Connecticut.

Adelaide Boze (Mrs. James A. Glascock, Jr.) 4266 South 35th Street, Arlington, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.) 765 Valley Street, Orange, New lersev.

This correspondent publicly yells "Uncle" and concedes the championship to Polly Boze Glascock for the magnificent and outstanding coverage in her column in the previous issue. The day has come when we can turn to her report with the same anticipation reserved for Walter Winchell himself . . . or Hedda Hopper?

This deadline seemed to come up through a crack in the floor on the heels of the most hysterical February. On the last day of January we broke our finger. (Loaded with nothing more deadly than three full quarts of milk, we were booby trapped by an icy patch concealed under an innocent layer of snow). The following day, son Billy presented us with the first of three thorough cases of chicken pox. Between cases, we were able to hurry down to Richmond to see an old friend and bridesmaid married , . . which rescued this column to some extent. Karl is running for a minor local office and consequently involved in a very peppery GOP primary contest. The cat had her kittens prematurely and we lost the entire, eagerly awaited litter . . . etc., etc.

On January 8 and 9 we visited Adelaide Boze Glascock and Jim in Washington while Karl had business there. They were superb hosts, unselfishly giving us the nicest welcome when they were both miserable with colds. Adelaide teaches two French classes each morning at Mt, Vernon Seminary and Junior College and was busy with the publicity for a Church Mardi Gras Ball, one of the outstanding social events of Northern Virginia. Since then, she has been elected to the Alumnae Council and attended meetings at Sweet Briar on February 12 and 13, Furthermore, she is Chairman for the reunion program for June! Her secret ambition, by the way, is to own a British MG.

While we were in Washington, Ginny Allison Haywood and H. B. had us all over for such a delicious dinner, the recipe for which the Youngs now cherish as the key to social distinction! The affair was most gala, for H. B. had just that very day arranged to return to Raleigh on February 1 and open his own practice of Ophthalmology. They have two husky young boys, Hubert, III, 4, and Bobby nearly 3.

We had hoped to see Agnes Spencer Burke and Jack but they too were the victims of some "bug" and we had to content ourselves with lively telephone chatter,

Lida Kepner Short moved into a new house in Westover Hills in Richmond on February 1. After years of apartment confinement, Billy, 51/2 and Peggy, 3, have discovered the joys of an upstairs phone, Jane Goolrick Murrell now has a daughter, Page Nelson, born January 27 in Richmond where her husband is a doctor. They have a son, Tommy, III, who was 2 in November. We hope to see Jane and her May Court candidate when we take the brood down for two weeks the end of April . . . Billy's school closes for a week then.

Emory Gill Williams says that she is in great shape and is much excited about the forthcoming April visit. Through her we learned that Clara Call Frazier's son, Norman, has been very ill and hospitalized for some weeks. He is at home now but faces a long convalescence that will keep him in bed for the next few months.

Marion Phinizy Jones moved from San Francisco to Los Angeles about Christmas time.

Estelle Sinclaire Farrar and Fred accompanied us to the International Flower Show at Madison Square Garden on March 7. The following Saturday they came for the night when we had Judy Bemis Wills and Allen here. Fred and "Telle" may go to Virginia at the same time we go. Betty Frantz Roberts has been long campaigning for them to visit in Lynchburg.

Fred and "Telle" had lunch with Mildred Moon Montague and Bill while the latter were in New York during February for a week of Theater-going. All the way from Lookout Mountain, Tennessee, they saw all the plays that we who live here never seem to manage!

Connie Chalkley Kittler hopes to find a house in the vicinity of Norfolk where Commander Kittler is now stationed. For the time being they are living with their three children, aged 2, 5, 7 in the Chalkley home, "Lade Braes," Ware's Neck, Gloucester, Virginia.

Ann Adamson Taylor recently visited her parents in Richmond. During their stay she and Bob entertained friends of theirs from Baltimore. Daughter, Sally, is now 3.

Nan Dickie Neil moved about a year ago to Ridgewood, New Jersey. She wrote the nicest letter a long time ago and we have vowed to visit when the weather gets warm.

A telephone chat with Mary Petty Johnston Bedell revealed that she hopes to get up this way before too long. Wood, Jr., had his fourth birthday in February and Reggie is about two years older.

Word from "Phoopy" Burroughs Livingston is that husband, Henry, realized a lifetime ambition when he served as switchman during the recent "unionitis" that affected the Boston and Maine employees. However, he was much relieved when he could return to his supervisory capacity in the yards near Andover, Massachusetts. All four of "Phoopy's" lively little Livingstons are rapidly conquering the art of ice skating. Watch for the May Issue of the Ladies' Home Journal in which appears a condensation of "Maria and the Captain" written by Phoopy's sister, Isabel Burroughs Dunn. The title story is an account of "Phoopy's" wedding during the war. Aside from literary license, it is a faithful recounting and all other incidents are based on actual happenings in the family. The book in its entirety will appear later and has been judged in some circles as having movie possibilities! "Phoopy" sees Bettie Itins Haskins, who lives in nearby Groton, from time to time.

"Parge" Woods Gillette's dream house in Detroit was due to be completed February 15... at long last for her growing family. Lou has been recalled into the Air Force and left March 1 for Arizona where he is a Flight Captain of a Jet Fighter Squadron.

Huber Hanes, Jr., husband of Janie Hopkins, was with Karl briefly during the war when they both had Naval duty in England. Janie has three children, Huber, III, 3½, Jane, 2, and Helen, 1, and they live in Winston-Salem, N. C. Janie is another of our golf enthusiasts.

The latest address for Rosemary Bjorge Johnson is Norfolk, Virginia. Her husband is a Naval Officer and a graduate of the Academy. They have two children, Susan Lee, 4, and Bruce, 2.

Elizabeth Conover teaches kindergarten in California. She lives with her mother at Long Beach. She has issued the most cordial invitation to any Briarites coming to her vicinity. From her own experience with smallfry, her happy smile seems incredible!

As previously mentioned, we go south on April 21, probably spending that night in or around Baltimore. We are considering side trips to Charlottesville and Lynchburg and are open to suggestions for stops along our route! Since there will be no one here as the June 1 deadlise approaches, all news should go to Adelaide who will write the next issue.

1941 REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 2719 Hampshire Avenue, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH DOUCETT (Mrs. John E. Neill) 1177 California Road, Tuckahee, New York.

Here's what I've managed to gather this time and it's very slim, but thanks to "Dowsit," "Meach," and "Chee Chee," and a report from the Alumnae Office via Doris Albray Bardusch, there is a little something. Dorothy White's engagement was announced to Mr. Edward Daniel Cummings in February. Mr. Cummings is an alumnus of Middlebury and Harvard School of Business and is associated with J. Walter Thompson Company. Do said Dottie's mother gave a tea on February 3, and plans are for a three o'clock wedding April 28.

Do also reported the arrival of her daughter, Deborah, July 15, 1950.

Betty Doucett Neill's second baby, Martha Ann, arrived September 8. Douce says Jack gifted her with a dishwasher and sewing machine at Christmas, so with dish washing time saved, she sewis like mad. She said Betsy Toucer Bennett reported our Lucy Lloyd is basking in the Florida sunshine at this writing—lucky girl!

Joan Myers Riese has moved, and is now living in Juckson Heights.

Meach was home in Garden City during January and saw a lot of B. J. McNarney Williams, who lives right next door, and says her offspring are angels. J. T. is a young man in nursery school and "The Dolly" is just that—she and B. J. speak a sort of Esperanto understood only by themselves. Meach has taken up tying trout flies very seriously (something that always fascinates me)—some to fish with and some to help out a friend who makes them in lots of 1000 for the tie clasp and cuff link trade. Meach is going to try to get back in June, depending upon how cooperative the grandmothers are about having small visitors. She has a new station wagon available, so maybe anyone on the way from Hudson, Mass. could hop a ride.

Chee Chee writes their three girls are now 3, 5, and 7 and how wonderful it is to have everyone at last mobile, so she and Colin can pack them in the car, not carrying anyone. She said they saw Mary James, when they were having cocktails with Happy James Wathen. Mary was in fine fettle, looking cute and Maryish, on her way to New York to sniff out a play and do TV work. Colin and Chee Chee are enjoying their new home of a year.

On my way to the post office I got a note from Ellie Damgard Firth. She's looking forward to reunion in June if nothing unforeseen happens. She'd seen Bette Fawcett Collier after Christmas in Ironton, Ohio. Bette and her lawyer husband have two children, Jimmy and Gretchen. She also is planning on June—so the group grows.

Hope to see a goodly gathering in June it ought to be a great event if we all appear. After all, ten years have whipped by since we were all together.

Class Secretary: Ruth Jaquot (Mrs. Rone B. Tempest, Jr.) Box 1020, Santa Rita, New Mexico.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA BEASLEY (Mrs. Richard Holzer) 219 N. Broad Street, Lancaster. Ohio.

Our farthest-flung correspondent this issue is Jeanne Sauyer Faggi, who writes from Pensione Annalena, Via Roma 34, Florence, Italy! John won a Fulbright, and Sawyer and the infants, Johnny, 6, and the new baby, Cynthia, followed him and are loving it. They expect to return to this country in July.

Just too late for the last issue, Helen "Slug" Sanford wrote, "Tve just ended a lovely six months of loafing by carelessly accepting a job. Am now engaged as secretary to the vice president of an advertising company. Probably a very temporary type of position because I am unused to this high-pressure, let's-work-overtime sort of stuff. All this time I had thought 'The Hucksters' was fiction. It's not!" No further word has come from this embattled front, but surely the one time prexy of Ain'ts and Asses would be able to hold her own, if not wind up as a V-P herself.

"Poose" Call Dabney writes from Richmond that she manages to see a number of Briarites quite often. Virginia McGuire Brent and Jack plus their four children, three girls and a son, live about three blocks away. Sally Jackson Mead lives just a block away. Her husband, a noted pianist, is getting ready for a concert with the Richmond Symphony Orchestra this spring.

Grace Bugg Muller-Thym has moved to Maryland now, but Nancy Goldbarth Glaser is still in Richmond, according to Poose, who saw her recently when Dr. Pannell spoke there. Nancy has two daughters, the older very pretty and resembling her mama.

Cynthia Abbott Botsford recently visited briefly in Richmond on the way back to New York from Florida. Poose says she still "looks divine" and so, according to their pictures, do her three children. She and Stephen are planning a trip to Paris this spring.

The Dabneys, plus young son, T. Todd, Jr., who is 6 and reading and writing to his mother's constant astonishment, spent a weekend with Douglas Woods Sprunt and Worth in January. They have a new house in Georgetown, "most attractive," and only 11½ feet wide, a measurement hard to believe once inside the house. Douggie is reported to be in the middle of a course of instruction at the Mellon Galleries, which will enable her to be a guide for school groups touring the place. Poose says Happy James Wathen recently moved to Washington with her family and was taking the course along with Douggie.

Virginia Duggins is working in a hospital in Washington, using an electroencephalogram, Poose reports. This machine, I believe, records brain waves—but Poose says "psych majors and many others whom we enticed into the psych lab senior year will know what it is. Duggins and I worked hard for a year, using that as our project, and I've never seen one in action yet!"

Diana Stont Allen writes that she "has heard from no one—seen no one—developed into the perfect hausfrau" pursuing daughers, Melissa and Helen. But she contradicts this by admitting to much League work in Memphis and adds, "I feel as if I'm straight out of a Hokinson cartoon, but it's all veneer: underneath, I'm still as shiftless as ever!"

Mimi Galloway Manire returned to Memphis just before Christmas after six months of visiting her parents in Trieste and traveling about the continent. Her father is chief of the ECA mission in Trieste.

Anne Barrett George writes from Austin that she and Orme sold their house and are renting a larger one at 115 W. 32nd Street. Little Claudia and Tog "are getting bigger and harder to handle but more fun all the time." Anne was in New York last fall and saw Sally Page Williams Crawford, who lives in Great Neck, L. I. "She looked grand—even younger than in our carefree days," Barrett said. I wish you all would stop talking like that—it hasn't been that long—or has it? Do you realize that next year is our Ten Year Reunion!

One of the high points of our news this issue is a wedding. Shirley Hauseman was married on December 30 to Alvin B. Nordhem and is now living in Albany, Oregon. Their honeymoon consisted of a leisurely 4,000 mile drive from Chicago through the south and southwest to the Willamette Valley. Al is selling farm machinery. They have an attractive apartment, Shirley writes, and have enjoyed skiing in the Cascades.

"Rufus" Pterson Fischer writes from Mineola, New York, that she is office manager for Ted's company, Fischer Industries Corporation, and usually gets to go on all business trips "and play secretary." They planned in March to go to Miami and Havana, combining business with the chance to see her family.

Carolyn Monteith Clarke has a son, Stephen-Janet Houstoun Davis has a daughter, after two sons, and both Dot Malone Yates and Grace Bugg Muller-Thym have a second daughter out of three offspring, according to Ann. I might add she got all this information on one normal-size postcard, plus the fact that Rene Mitchell Moore has a year-old daughter and a six year old son, and that she (Ann) is an ardent golfer but Babe Didrickson has no cause for anxiety as yet. A gentle reminder for all of you who haven't time to answer my cards with letters. Just see what can be done with ambition, a postcard, and a fine-nubbed pen?

I have sold a second short story to Charm. It is called "Reunion" and should be out in June or July. Equally exciting is the fact we are having a snowstorm today, our second this very dry winter, and such a rarity we must "explain" it to the kids. Thank you for your generous replies to my queries, and write again, won't you? Keep on including the pix! We love them.

The bulk of my blurb seems to fall into two categories this time—another upward surge in our birth rate, and new positions or titles for husbands. Dorothy Campbell Scribner is fortunate enough to have both at the same time. Her husband, Peter, is now publicity Director for the World Book Company, which they are both very pleased about. Dottie produced her fifth child, Sarah Louise, on January 7. This she believes "gives me the dubious distinction of being the most prolific of '43," but of course she had a head start. However, she is "delighted to know so many are having big families—I'd begun to feel a little indecent about my tribe . . . and you can tell Judy Snow Benoit for me that the first three are the hardest."

Dottie and her husband have also been busy with P. T. A. meetings and the Young Republicans Club which they helped organize last summer. Besides this she writes, "I had just enough education to squeeze into the local A. A. U. W. and this year I've been participating in their Foreign Affairs group."

Other recent offsprings include a new son for Barbara Bolles Miller, born December 7; a daughter on October 18 for Mary Law Taylor, named Clare (after me, no doubt, though this hasn't been officially confirmed by the parents); and a daughter for Nancy Pingree Drake, Ping's baby, Pamela, was born October 12 and I was fully informed in plenty of time for the last issue but in rereading can find no evidence of having passed along the word. Since then she has moved into her new hoose after a few run-of-themill difficulties, like drunken carpenters and unfulfilled orders. She wrote me that Val Jones Materne's new daughter's name is Sibyl, born December 13. Don't get confused, this is the same child Val had in the last issue but I had no details then. And as for the Siegling newcomer, also mentioned previously-it's a girl, Sara Bartlett Bowers, born October 3.

Long awaited word from Betty Potter Kinne Hillyer gave us the news that Barbara Wright Vetterlein, now living in North Carolina, has a baby girl. Betty Potter and her lawyer husband have just built a ranch-type house complete with ocean view in La Jolla, California. They moved in the first of the year and have spent every spare minute since then working with the 5500 bricks they ordered for their patio. She told me too that she had a card last summer from Sally Lerner David, while she and Alan were having a fling in Europe.

Janice Fitzgerald Wellons wrote me that Jimmie was alerted with the National Guard last August and inducted in September. They packed up their daughter, Jan, and spent about three months at Camp Rucker, Alahama. Now she is back at Fort Brage which is only about 48 miles from Smithfield where Janice is living with her parents until sometime in March when they get a house on the post. She has found people are already very reluctant to rent to service men and she has had her housing problems, but at least she is pleased with Jimmie's job as legal officer for Headquarters V. Janice had talked with Margaret Swindell Dickerson who was visiting in Wilson at Christmas time.

Jane Findlay Tate wrote that her husband has taken a position as I. B. M. Coordinator for Standard Vacuum Company and is being sent to Palembang, Sumatra, Indonesia! Janie says it's a winderful job with terrific possibilities. She writes, "we are in such a dither we can think of nothing but the great plunge we have just taken into the sea of life, as I would have said it writing for Miss Long's Freshman English," and I don't wonder. Charlie was to leave March 23, but unfortunately Jane has to wait five or six months until a house is built for them. One big asset is a six-months vacation every three years and "we can come back either via the west coast or via Europe, so we plan to get a trip to Europe, naturally."

Frances Gregg Petersmeyer's husband has been made a partner of the J. H. Whitney Company and Worth was recently dubbed Vice-President of the Earl Paint Company, a title I find carries considerably more weight when opening charge accounts.

Fay Martin Chandler's husband hasn't exactly made a change but is about to take a step—namely, hand in his Ph. D. Thesis at Harvard. In the meantime he is enjoying his work at M. I. T. and they have also enjoyed a trip back to Norfolk where Fay saw Byrd Smith Hunter. In Brookline she is still interested in the League of Women Voters and wrote me that she was preparing to lead another one of their discussions.

And to keep you up to date on all my roommates, Anne McJunkin Briber reports a series of visitors, the most welcome to her being sister Jane whom she had not seen for over a year. Frank seems to be traveling a lot, which reminds me that I hope to accompany my traveler to Texas shortly—a trip I am really looking forward to. Maybe I'll pick up some news on my trip—I am surely all out now.

(Editor's note: Oops! In the last issue we gave credit to the wrong "Ginny" for helping in Baltimore's benefit Fashion Show and tea. It should have been Ginny Lee Griffith Morton instead of Ginny Hall Teipel, who lives in Ohio. Our humble apologies!)

I am pleased to say that Dot Denny Sutton is all well now and looks marvelous!

The Broaduses (that's Anne Bowen Broadus and Joe) have been traveling again! This time they flew out to the coast and toured Los Angeles, Riverside and Palm Springs, and all this while other poor New Yorkers were fighting off the cold damp of December! I'm beginning to think Joe might be writing a book on Seeing the U. S.—or Resort Life can be Fun!

And speaking of traveling-Elaine Brimberg became Mrs. Keoneth Tynan on January 25 in London, England. Ken Tynan is, among other things, a critic (drama) on The Spectator, an actor, and the author of a book called "He That Plays the King." I shall quote from the jacket of his book: "Ken Tynan combines the flaunting exuberance of an infant with the drive and application of mature talent . . . With a degree in English Literature, Ken Tynan went down from Oxford in January, 1949, and since then has been pursuing his career as an independent theatrical producer. This has included seven months producing weekly repertory at Lichfield, and a production for The Company of Four of 'Man of the World'; these will be followed by a production of 'Othello' for the Arts Council of Great Britain." Haine has been very busy for the past year appearing in plays and movies in France, and radio and TV in Lingland. At this writing she is rehearsing for a BBC TV production of "Dinner at Fight."

A Christmas card from Marian Shanley Jacobs that came just too late for the last issue tells me that as of January 1 the Jacobs are living in Springfield, Illinois, where Bill will be rector of Christ Church. Her son was a year old on January 30.

Janet Staples, her date, my husband and I went skiing over Lincolns birthday weekend, and it looks as though we caught the only snow this season. As far as I can see every place has been buried in snow except the places that are meant to get it . . . very disconcerting. However, we had a good time in those short three days and got sun burned.

Mary Wbite Hollander was in town for a minute in February. They moved into their new house on March 1, but before moving in she was a pioneer woman stoking the furnace several times a day, doing the laundry in the bathtub, and cooking over a coal stove.

Sydney Holmes Bales is coming in town for lunch with me next week, which will be after this deadline. Next issue we will have news from Svd.

Brook Van de Water, aged four, was heard inviting his friends in for "hors d'oeuvres" while his parents (Mary-Churchill Walker Van de Water and Kenneth) were having company, too, I tell you—this younger set is something!

"Tee" Tift Porter was up in Baltimore in January for a physical check-up. Nothing is wrong, just the routine exam and some fun. RECENT ARRIVALS:

Not much news to relate this time, I'm afraid, so this letter will be a quickie.

Had a nice long letter from Hel Datis Wohlers, who is living in St. Louis, Michigan. Her husband, Herb, is a chemist and director of the Technical Department of the Michigan Chemical Corporation. They have two little blondes, Chad aged four and Lynn, nearly two. No redheads (yet, Hel says). Life sounds very gay out there, and the country must be lovely. We are all invited to stop in if we're passing that way.

A post card from El Gilliam Perry announced the arrival of Elizabeth, on February 14. What a wonderful valentine!

Deen Brugger Wetzig wrote that she and Paul are in New York City now, where he has another year or so of residency at New York Hospital. There are two small Wetzigs, Carl and Dobey, who keep Deen pretty busy. She was to see Barb Berstle Northrup soon after she wrote me. Barb's sister is having a baby and she was coming East for the event.

Had a wonderful visit with Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill a few weeks ago. She was spending a day or two in Baltimore en route home from visiting her sister, Martha, in New Jersey. It was so good to see her and to meet her daughter Kathryn, who is quite a young lady. We talked so much that I can scarcely remember anything to quote here. One item of importance I managed to hang on to was that Mary Herbert Taylor has a brand new baby girl. That makes one of each for them.

Harriet Wilcox's engagement was announced a short time ago. Some of you may have seen the very nice picture of her in the New York Times. She is engaged to David Gearhalt, a student at Union Theological Seminary,

A letter from Betty Heal3 Cutler brought me up to date on them. When first married, she and Gordon lived in Cincinnati but have now settled permanently in Newport News, Virginia. They have one son, Gordon, Jr., three years old.

Audrey Betts writes that she has become an honest-to-goodness Tarheel, and loves it. She is teaching riding at the Sedgefield Stables in Greensboro. She has her own horse, Maggie (bought from Mr. Bailey of S. B. C.) and a big black poodle named Jiggs. Audrey hears quite often from Lib Love Orth who is living in Boston at present while Charlie is going to Harvard Business School. They have their two boys with them, of course.

Edic Page Gill Breakell wrote that she would soon be going to Richmond as a delegate to a Junior League meeting, and would stay with Frances Bickers Pinnell. Hope some news will be forthcoming from that reunion. Edic Page and Stan are living in Roanoke and are house hunting.

Speaking of houses, we gals have just gone through the ordeal of having our house painted from top to bottom. What a mess it was for a solid month! But we are overjoyed with the results. A new outfit for spring does wonders for a person's (or a house's) morale.

Mary Kathryn and I talked to Becky Stokes while we were in Baltimore, She is working in a bank, and says she really likes it. Seems to be having quite a social whirl, too. We are planning to get together for a real visit some week end soon.

That's all for now-don't forget to write.

1946 REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: ARIANA JONES, 38 Wiggins Street, Princeton, New Jersey,

Fund Agent: RUTH HOUSTON, 695 S. McLean, Memphis, Tennessee.

It's spring again and time to think about reunion. It seems hard to believe that we are due for number five! While mulling over reunion, do think for a minute of your class secretary and send me a note. This letter may not be the usual length, but the fact that it has any length at all is mainly due to Jessie Strickland Elcock. Jessie reports that Nancy Pendleton Elcock was born on February 3—another ten pounder! The Elcocks now have quite a family, two girls and a boy. Little Walter and Jessie are intrigued with the new baby and think she is a dope not to like Coca Cola, Jessie is "Windy" to Walter's "Hopalong" and can hardly keep up with him with her heavy six shooter on one hip and a doll over her arm. Jessie also writes that they have had to move—more children, you know. They are still in Atlanta, however.

It's a son for Dorothy Corcoran Hartzer. He is Joseph, Jr., but referred to by his proud mother as Jeff.

Dottie Sue Caldwell was married on March 9 to Robert Crowell. Bob is an alumnus of Davidson. The engagement of Betsy Bowman and Rodman Townsend has been announced. They, too, plan to be married this spring. Betsy's fiance is a Harvard man and is with Eastern Airlines in New York.

Helen Graeff writes that things in Danville keep her busy in spite of the resolve she made when she left Union that she would never be that busy again. Helen gave an organ recital at Mount Vernon Methodist Church on February 2 which I am sure was a big success. Her program sounded very interesting. She writes that she is very pleased with the way her adult and youth choirs are building up.

The Alumnae Office has asked if anyone knows anything of or the whereabouts of Harriet Inge Fillmore, Anne Owens Mueller, Elizabeth Camlin Ward, Katy Riordan and Eleanor Sherman Sorenson, If you do, please tell me or the Alumnae Office. But please write me anyhow. Don't wait to become a "missing person."

Kay Veusey Goodwin is living near Camp Edwards, Mass, where her husband Dave is stationed. Mimi Powell Leonard and her husband have moved to Tyler, Texas where he will be at the Tuberculosis Hospital for further training as a chest surgeon.

Jackie Tappen's engagement to J. G. Kern, Jr. was announced in February. He is now a senior at Bucknell University. Ann Fiery's engagement to Richard Bryan of Cambridge, Mass. was announced in January. He is now working in Cleveland.

Polly Plummer spent a few weeks skiing in Aspen, Colorado in February. She hopes to be in Washington working, come spring.

Sally Melcher Jarvis has taken up teaching

Sunday School along with her first grade. Emilie Thornton is working at the Haver-ford Book Store.

I saw Betsy Dershuck in New York in February. Betsy finished the Barmore School in March and is now at home making plans for a June wedding to Bob Tyler, Betty Corddry is working for Norcross Greeting Card Company in New York.

Judy Easley was married on March 26 to Dayton Seymour Mak in Pohick Church, just outside of Washington. Judy and Dayton will live in Philadelphia.

Ruthie Garrett is in New York living with

Ann Higgins and working for Harper's Bazaar. Higgie is working for one of the air lines

The choruses from "MEDEA," set to music by the contemporary composer, Virgil Thomson, have been admired everywhere the Choir has presented them—in Washington, Richmond, Philadelphia and at local concerts. At the request of many students and recent alumnae the Choir has included several numbers from the Senior Shows of 1950 and 1951.

The Lasting Value of a Humanistic Education

by Helen Maud Cam

Professor of History at Harvard and Radeliffe

Miss Helen Maud Cam was the speaker for the forty-second annual Commencement. Miss Cam is the only woman to receive a full professorship on the Harvard Faculty.

T the end of four years of happiness and friendship A and the healthy stretching of one's mind in lovely surroundings, in contact with the mature minds of fine scholars and teachers, one may be forgiven if one feels a regret and reluctance to leave this blissful way of life. At least, that is what I felt in the summer of 1907 when I left my own London college and what, I gathered from his sympathy for me, my own father had felt in 1873 when he went down from Oxford. But in our nursery-for we had a nursery in my family, a world of our own in which we brought each other up—we had a saying, for which my youngest brother was responsible, which enshrined a profound philosophy of life: "Second helpings are never as good as first." The poet may say to the passing moment, "Verbleibe doch, du bist so schön!" and the dreamer may build up the fantasy of the boy who never grows up, but in real life arrested development is disease, not prettiness, and over against Barrie's Peter Pan stands his Sentimental Tommy, showing up the ugly and tragic consequences of protracting the stage of childhood and immaturity into the years of responsibility and reality.

We have had our four years. What have they done for us? And what shall we do with them? We are not to regard them as something finished and done with, to be laid away in a drawer and only fetched out on class-reunion days to be sentimentalized over, as "the happiest days of our life." The happiest days of our life! What a notion! In growing human beings the capacity for happiness should grow along with other capacities, and the pursuit of happiness is only justifiable as an end in life if happiness is seen as a by-product of that advance in the art of living which exercise of one's abilities and education of one's sensibilities by experience can bring. As the long-married lover sings:

"We marvel, drowned in love complete, How love so young could be so sweet."

GROWTH IS THE CONDITION OF LIFE

Growth means not only power to branch out, to bud and blossom and fruit; it means continuity. From the acorn to the oak tree there is no sudden break; from the raw freshman to the world-famous writer or public servant there is no sudden break. Which brings me back to the question: What has our college education done for us?

Some acquirements of those four years can be readily measured and weighed. Certain skills have an immediate money value, apart from what the acquiring of them has done to us. Many of the natural sciences are so readily applicable to the material needs of life that anyone will admit their practical usefulness. Physics, chemistry, biology, the medical sciences—there is no need to argue for their usefulness, and the same can be said, perhaps less assuredly, of economics, and the administrative sciences. But the value of the humanities is less tangible. What is the lasting value of a university education in the humanities?

When we leave college we go forward to the most various careers, and we cannot tell what life has in store for us. But there is no pursuit or occupation to which a college education is irrelevant. Not only those who mean to make scholarship their main concern (and I can assure you, as one who knows, that it is a rich and rewarding vocation) but those who look forward to a life of government service, of journalism, of social or political work, or nursing or medicine, of community service, or of service in the smallest and most intimate community of the home, will find that what they have learned in the university has a direct relation to their concern.

The most important thing one gets at college is not information but technique; one learns how to learn. Any honest student is more aware of her ignorance at the end of her four years than she was at the beginning. The world of learning has grown so much bigger for her that she sees herself smaller for it; like Socrates she knows that she knows nothing. But the tools have been put in her hands; she has been taught how to find out what she needs to know for doing the job, whatever it may be, that life is offering her. As she has learned how to attack a new subject, to collect the material for a theme, to organize her work, to consult books of reference and find out where are the key sources of information, so she can tackle any problem presented to her in a practical and workmanlike way even though she is new to it-whether it is organizing an expedition, or running a club, or planning a teaching course, or organizing her housework, or planning meals for a diabetic friend, or bringing a garden under cultivation. The unfamiliar problem is a stimulus and a challenge to the college woman. And this means not only that she should make a better job of such new ventures than the uneducated woman, but that she should get more fun out of it. Most of you are probably familiar with the fact that what makes a subject dull is trying to evade it. The difference between drudgery and rewarding work lies in the attitude of mind of the worker; effort can be highly enjoyable if you are convinced that it is worthwhile to put your back into it. Not only the new job but the very familiar job is interesting if the worker thinks it worthwhile to aim at perfection in doing it. George Herbert, calling on the Christian to work for the love of God with all his soul and all his strength, used a most domestic illustration:

"All can of Thee partake,
Nothing can be so mean,
That with this tincture 'for Thy sake'
Will not grow bright and clean.
A servant with this clause
Makes drudgery divine,
Who sweeps a room as for Thy laws
Makes that, and the action fine."

Such a pursuit of the perfection which college has taught us to recognize is, as Herbert says, the elixir, the precious stone that turns all to gold.

This business of mixing your brains with whatever you have to do goes a good deal further than making a good job of the task before you and getting fun out of doing it. And this is where the special value of a humanistic education comes in. Whatever your pursuit, you will have to do with human beings, and what a humanistic education does for one is to enlarge one's understanding of what people are, by studying what they have done and said and thought and felt: to quicken one's imagination by taking one far back into the past and recognizing the human qualities we know today alive in remote times and other surroundings; to enlarge our sympathies through the intellectual effort of grasping a point of view, a conviction, an ideal quite alien to our ways of thought; to give us the tolerance that comes from mastering the reasons that led good and honest men to take opposite sides on a burning issue; to educate our esthetic susceptibilities by teaching us to distinguish between shades of meaning and tones of feeling, between false sentiment and sincere emotion; to open our eyes and ears to the just appreciation of what men have done and are doing to communicate their sense of beauty through the arts. Mathematics and science carry us into the infinitely vast and the infinitely small, an endlessly fascinating pursuit; but even the biological and economic sciences see man as an abstracted or generalized figure. Each individual is for them an example of an impersonal law. But the humanities lead us straight to the unpredictable, unique thing-the individual personality; and the world we live in is a world of individuals and personalities, no one identical with any other; each a unique factor in the infinitely complex story of life. If we are going to be useful and valuable members of society, we must learn to put our brains into the neverending art of living with our fellow creatures and our fellow workers in whatever surroundings we may be working with them-whether in school, office, hospital, institution, church, or home. And not least to put our trains into the art of making a good marriage and the art of bringing up children, healthy in body and mind.

In studying the humanities we should have amassed experience which can be turned to rich account in all these undertakings. I am a great believer in novel reading as an enlargement of one's sympathetic imagination and as preparing us for new adventures with persons and things as yet unknown. Provided one relates what one reads to what one already knows about people and follows up the new and exciting idea, checking it by all other possible sources of information, a very great deal can be learned by reading novels. I believe that the development of the novel as a form of art is both a symptom of and a means to better understanding between members of various environments, geographical, racial, social, political, religious, helping the reader to realize the nature of problems that although they may never directly touch her own personal life, are yet her direct concern. And it is, I think, significant that novel writing is the one form of art in which by general consent women have achieved supreme distinction.

Women are interested in individuals, in personal character, in human relations. That is why they make good novelists, (as also good social workers, good secretaries, good teachers). Why, then, one may say should they study the humanities at college? Surely they can understand people by instinct; life itself is their best teacher.

I might cite the development in the last half-century of the whole science of psychology as evidence of our recognition that the handling of human problems is not a matter for instinctive impulse or amateur experiment. But I should prefer to follow another line of argument, although I am aware that I am taking risks in doing so. Having taught young men and young women for many years, I have come to believe that the natural tendency of the young man is to generalize and that of the young woman to particularize. The man tends to the abstract, the woman to the concrete; the one looks at a question in broad outline, the other sees more clearly the different elements that go to make it up. Each standpoint has its own strength and its own weakness, and the difference of the two approaches makes it all the more desirable that in every enterprise, to the utmost limits of practicability, men and women should work in partnership, each making good the other's deficiencies and complementing the other's capacities. That, incidentally, is the reason why I think that boys and girls should both of them be taught both by men and by women; and that is why I am convinced that women need education in the art of living and the science of human relations. The vivid consciousness of the individual personality and of the significance of a unique human situation can lead women by the very force of their sympathetic imagination to lese sight of the wider issues. They can spend their gifts and sympathies so lavishly on their immediate environment, in particular on their own families, that they forget the world about them and thereby not only deprive the world of their services but diminish their services to their homes. It is not good for children to think that they are the only thing in the universe. It is as good for them as for their mothers that they should know that she has interests outside their home. The fact that we are members of a larger society and that our every action affects many others besides those directly concerned means that we must keep that sense of proportion which is one of the faculties that a college education should have developed in us. We must use what Hamlet called "the large discourse, looking before and after, and not suffer that capability and God-like reason to fust in us unused." It is essentially the uneducated person who can isolate an incident or issue from its cause and consequences, refusing to look before and after. Some of you may remember the motto of E. M. Forster's novel Howard's End: "Only connect." It is an illustration of the impossibility of making any watertight generalization about the characteristics of men and women that in that novel it is the man who fails to generalize and the woman who sees the connection. He is quite unaware of the difference between the standards he is prepared to apply to the conduct of other persons and those which he applies to his own; he refuses to face the consequences of his own action—"That is not my responsibility."

I sometimes think that the greatest danger in the world today is irresponsibility—the refusal to face the consequences of one's actions or of one's failure to act. It is a mark of immaturity: the child saying, "It wasn't me," the individualist saying, "It's none of my business." It is, as I say, a mark of defective education, and it should be the hallmark of a humanistic education that it helps you to see life steadily and see it whole: not as a series of detached technical, industrial, scientific, commercial, political, or personal concerns, but as one large enterprise of infinitely varying aspects; an enterprise in which we are all our brothers' keepers; in which if one member suffers all the members suffer with him.

But the supreme value of a humanistic education should be that it does not accept any definition of man that fails to recognize what it is that makes him man-the knowledge of good and evil. Science is objective; it weighs and measures, it predicts and explains the nature of the physical universe. But better and worse are not scientific terms. As Charles Kingsley says, in a children's book from which my generation learned more than it was fully aware of, Science is a wonderful Madam How, but when it comes to asking what is the purpose of all these marvelous processes Science is dumb. She is only Madam How; she cannot be Lady Why. We cannot weigh and measure the value of love and wisdom and courage. It is by studying and appraising what men have made and felt and thought and seen that our sense of justice and worth, of beauty and fitness, can be aroused and developed and that we can find the values and standards by which to steer our course in life. Our studies may have given us the key to learning and the appetite for learning how to handle new tasks; they may have given us standards of thoroughness in accomplishing those tasks; they may have enlarged our imaginations and sympathies and thus helped us to live with and work with our fellow men, to make a success of our married life and the upbringing of our children; they may have given us a larger perspective; but we shall still not be able to see life whole unless we are prepared to say what matters most in lifewhat is its purpose. To the grateful sense of our rich common heritage from the past, to the consciousness of our common concern in the successes and failures, the happiness and the sufferings of our fellow men, we need to join a recognition of our common purpose of the worth of those ends towards which our common efforts should be directed, with all the tools that education and experience have put in our hands.

Manson Scholar 1951-1952

Nancy Hamel, Greensboro, North Carolina, was named as the winner of the Manson Memorial Alumnae Scholarship for the coming year. Announcement of the honor was made by Dean Mary J. Pearl at the forty-second annual commencement exercises.

Established by the alumnae in memory of the late N. C. Manson of Lynchburg who was for many years a member of the Board of Directors of the college, the scholarship is awarded "to an upperclass student of high academic standing who shows qualities of leadership and makes some real contribution to the student activities."

Nancy, who will be a senior at Sweet Briar next year, has been an outstanding student, winner of numerous academic honors. She has also served as a house president and this past year was chairman of the Orientation Committee and directed its program throughout the year.

Song leader of her class for three years, she is also a member of the Choir and of the Music Club. She was elected to membership in Tau Phi, upperclass honorary society, last fall, and is one of three representatives of her class on the Judicial Board of the Student Government Association for the coming year.

Commencement Vespers

by President Anne Gary Pannell

For those who were there and asked for a reprint, for the seniors who were too busy to attend and heard that they missed something very worthwhile, and for those of you who were unable to attend Reunion, we are printing Mrs. Pannell's vespers talk, given in the Dell on Sunday evening, June 3.

This evening I am taking my theme from Santayana's "O World, Thou Choosest Not The Better Part."

"It is not wisdom to be only wise,
And on the inward vision close the eyes,
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
Columbus found a world and had no chart,
Save one that faith deciphered in the skies.
To trust the soul's invisible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.
Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across a void of mystery and dread.
Bid, then, the tender light of faith to shine
By which alone the mortal heart is led Unto the thinking of the thought divine."

For you who leave us tomorrow, my great hope is that you will search increasingly for the understanding heart that you will be aware—aware of all that you owe to your homes and parents, their gentle nurture, aware of the gifts of education you have received, and of your duty in return to make a just return to society. May you be aware of the temptation of blindly stumbling down the ways of life and just begging safely through the days, without groping for the hands of others-without wondering why all was planned. May your eyes not be focused on the ground without seeking for light. Instead I hope your souls will sometime ache for flight. Please keep eager to do your share and to prepare yourself to do your part of the world's work thankfully—and to be aware. Do not avoid the pain of others—even when it stabs. Walk freely seeing both the honor and the stain of human life and grope to find other hands to help. May you be given the heart that desires and understands. Even when you are wounded by the struggle of life find the courage to fight for your beliefs. I would have you flooded with knowledge, drenched with light. Please keep eager to do your share and God-willing to be aware always.

Robert Louis Stevenson was praying this same prayer in another way in "The Celestial Surgeon."

"If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And showed no shining morning face;
If beams from happy eyes
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books, and my food, and summer rain
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain:—
Lord, thy most pointed pleasure take
And stag my spirit broad awake."

Go placidly amid the noise and the haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible, without surrender, be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even to the dull and the ignorant; they too have their story. Avoid loud and aggressive persons; they are vexations to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become bitter or vain, for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble, it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs, for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals, and everywhere life is full of heroism. Be yourself. Especially do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment, it is as perennial as the grass. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with dark imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be. And whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life, keep peace in your soul. With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be cheerful. Strive to be happy. Have an understanding heart.

As you depart from this campus and so close the door on one fleeting, but we hope, important chapter of your life, above everything else, I would wish that you take with you "an understanding heart."

"May Sorrow pass you by, yet as she passes
May her garments lightly brush you—
That you may be kind.
May failure pass you by, yet as she passes,
May her shadow lightly touch you—
That you may be humble.
May Loneliness pass you by, yet as she passes,
May her coldness lightly chill you—
That you may be friendly.
May Serenity pass you by, yet as she passes,
May her arrow lightly sting you—
That you may be tolerant.
And lo, my students, as down the years you journey
You will find the way to happiness—
An understanding beart."

A Piano for Sweet Briar House

SWEET BRIAR HOUSE is very proud of its latest acquisition—a beautiful antique Chickering rosewood square piano, the gift of the Payne family. Mary Norvell Payne Millner, '23, granddaughter of the original owners, wrote of her family and its connection with Sweet Briar as follows:

"Grandmother was born Elizabeth Allen Langhorne on December 20, 1841, in Montgomery County, Virginia. As a young girl, she spent a great deal of time in Lynchburg, Virginia, with her uncle, Daniel Allen Langhorne, who lived between 7th and 8th streets on Court Street (in the house that was 'Jenny's Tea Shop' when we were at Sweet Briar in the 1920's). There she took music lessons and practiced on this Chickering rosewood square piano.

"She married Capt, John Meem Payne in the first years of the War Between the States and lived in Lynchburg until the 1890's (I'm not sure what year) when they moved to 'Kelona' in Amherst, Virginia, just three miles from Sweet Briar. Mrs. Williams was one of her nearest neighbors and they were dear friends. She spent a winter with the Paynes at one time. When Mrs. Williams died my grandmother was sent for immediately. In her will, she left grandmother several thousand dollars. Sweet Briar girls used to hike over to the Paynes years ago and have tea and

THE EMILY H. DUTTON SCHOLARSHIP

Announcement was made at Commencement of a scholarship fund which is to be established in memory of Emily H. Dutton who was Dean at Sweet Briar from 1923 to 1939.

A joint faculty-alumnae group is working on the project. Miss Florence Robinson heads the faculty and Mrs. W. D. Perry (Emily Braswell, '29g) of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, is in charge of alumnae.

The first $1,000 has already been given. It is hoped that very soon we will have a fully endowed scholarship - a most fitting way to honor Miss Dutton, who gave much of her life to teaching and advising Sweet Briar girls.

cookies. My father, Mr. Daniel Allen Payne, was a member of the Board of Overseers at Sweet Briar for a number of years until his death in 1938. He and Mr. N. C. Manson were life-long friends. At the Founder's Day exercises in 1925 grandmother made a very informal address, speaking of the early history of Sweet Briar and her friendship with Mrs. Williams. She was 84 years old.

"Grandmother had five granddaughters and four of us attended Sweet Briar—Ellen Eskridge Sanders (Mrs. Walter Sanders, now living in Arlington), Elizabeth Langhorne Eskridge of Arlington, my sister, Elizabeth Langhorne Payne Carter (Mrs. Nelson Carter of Petersburg) and myself. My brother, John M. Payne, married Polly Langford of Evanston, Illinois, a graduate of Sweet Briar, and lives in Lynchburg.

"My mother was a life-long friend of both Mrs. Dew and Miss Meta Glass and we used to go swimming in Sweet Briar lake every summer.

"I have been married 26 years and lived away from Lynchburg that long, so my absence is not through lack of interest, but other circumstances. This piano episode, giving me a new contact with Sweet Briar, has given me untold pleasure and I am looking forward to a visit there soon."

WE POINT WITH PRIDE

Margaret Gordon, '44g, law student at the University of Virginia and member of the editorial board of the Virginia Law Review, became the first woman to be elected to the University's chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalism fraternity.

Mary Jane Eriksen, '51g, and Katharine Phinizy, '51g, were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa on June 4, just prior to the Commencement exercises. This brings to six the number of Phi Beta Kappa members in the class of 1951.

Mary Lizzie Burks Saltz, '30 (Mrs. J. Ed) of St. Petersburg, Florida, was awarded the Dolly Posey Grazier Award for 1950; an award made annually to the woman volunteer worker whose contribution to the youth is considered most significant.

Miss Lucas Writes From Paris

Dear Friends and Sweet Briar Alumnae:

I am writing this letter through the kindness of your Alumnae Office to send you my best wishes from overseas. Had I been in America to accept President Pannell's invitation to this year's June Commencement, I should have had the pleasure of seeing many of you and the opportunity of giving you a few of my impressions of the state of the nations as I have observed them this year.

Since leaving America last summer I have visited in France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium and England. And despite mounting crises and dire foreboding from all sides, I still hope that the international tensions will have abated sufficiently by next winter to permit me to carry out a study project in the Far East. Here in Europe one is poignantly aware of widespread fatigue and pessimism following the devastation of World War II. Yet this spring has, I think, seen a strengthening of the will to resist Communist aggression and a desperate hope that the American people will have the courage of their democratic convictions in the tremendous job of leadership now thrust upon them. Informed Europeans seem particularly confused by the reports which they read of racial antagonism in America and express grave concern lest our American "blind spot" render us incapable of working out a real modus vivendi with the peoples of Asia. In this connection I have been cheered to read recently of the opening of the American Academy of Asian Studies in San Francisco, a graduate center devoted to developing international understanding between the peoples of Asia and America. I hope that Sweet Briar graduates will be among the future students of that institution, for I believe such work to be of essential importance to world peace. I know that many of you are already at work in your communities to promote brotherhood between the colored and white citizens of our country; and recent developments in guaranteeing equal rights to all give hope that American democracy is moving slowly toward maturity. Since leaving Sweet Briar, I have received word from a number of you concerning your hope to enter graduate and professional work in the international field. Needless to say, nothing could please me more. But for those of you who may feel "tied down" to your respective communities, there is no doubt that the basic work for world peace is to be done right there!

I shall be spending the next several months in Scandinavia. For two or three weeks in Sweden, I shall be obliged to sit quite still, having a portrait painted for Sweet Briar by an artist whose work I particularly like. This piece will undoubtedly be her—and my—undoing. But you ladies of the class of 1950 have only your own wilful generosity to blame!

Best wishes to all of you—and a happy summer, wherever you are!

Director of Development Needed

The Development Committee of the Board of Overseers is interested in securing a Director of Development. The Committee prefers an alumna for the post, providing she has the requisite qualifications, and would appreciate learning of alumnae, capable of and interested in filling this important position.

Experience in fund raising, personnel, and public relations is desirable. The director will have an office at Sweet Briar, but will be expected to devote major time to travelling, organizing regional alumnae drives, and approaching potential donors and foundations.

Any suggestions or applications should be sent to Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown, Ashbourne, Harrods Creek, Kentucky, immediately. Mrs. Brown will also be glad to furnish further information.

Mr. Chester E. Tucker, president of the John Price Jones Company of New York City, who made a preliminary survey and plan of fund raising for Sweet Briar College in April, 1951, stated in his report that "The Director of Development, preferably an alumna of Sweet Briar, should serve as campaign director for the intensive periods and as executive officer of the Sweet Briar Fund.

"There is no existing pattern for the specifications of the type of woman needed for such a position at a college or university. The choices that have been made at other institutions are, for the most part, too recent to help to provide a basis for defining the qualifications of such a person.

"In all probability the candidate should be somewhere between 30 and 40—a woman of judgment and stability. An agreeable personality should, of course, be a requisite. Most of all, the woman should be an imaginative idealist. She should be capable of an infectious enthusiasm for what she is trying to do—an evangelist in the realm of ideas. It goes without saying that she should be able to win for herself the approval and respect of the faculty.

"Such a woman with all these qualities, and others, is probably rare. In view of the importance of her functions, it must be recognized that the rareness of the type only means that it may take time to find her."

ATTENTION ALUMNAE!

Please send names of possible Alumnae Council candidates to Sue Slaughter, 8 Pelham Place, Norfolk 7, Virginia, before October 15. The Nominating Committee will start work next fall to prepare a slate for the election to be held in June, 1952.

From the Ragged Mountains to the Golden Horn

by Dr. Meta Glass

THE unexpected never fails you. I was asked by the Chairman of their Board of Trustees to pay an extended visit to the American College for Girls in Istanbul. I wondered why and concluded that I would go and see why. Mrs. Pannell and Mr. Barker arranged for me to pay a short visit to the Junior Year Group in Paris on the way. I arranged to spend a week with one of my Navy nephews in Athens. Voilà. Nine weeks of delightful experiences.

Being alone I saw no point in thrashing about in late February in the Atlantic on a ship for eight days. I flew to Paris, thence to Brussels to get the right plane, to Istanbul, over to Athens and back, and finally from Istanbul back to New York. All was smooth except an hour out of New York City on the return. Going over I shared a seat with a lady from Lima—name unknown—and on my return I shared with a gentleman from Beirut—name unknown. They couldn't have been more different and that was entertaining.

The six days in Paris were memory-rousing, chilly, grey and interesting. I stayed again at Reid Hall, which I particularly enjoy, met many of the Junior Year Group daily and also at a special tea for students and teachers; had lunch with a group of professors from the Sorbonne, under whom the American students work. I lunched with some French women members of the French Federation of University Women, and again with the group of women known as the American Group, when a lady mayor told most entertainingly of her mayoral experiences. I came back with a more vivid picture of what the Junior Year in France means, and I told all I learned to the authorities at Sweet Briar.

The romantic sounding title is a hoax. The Golden Horn I did not see until two days before leaving and when I did it was Istanbul's least beautiful body of water, but it did lead to Eyüp where the sultans were girded with the sword (their coronation) and whence the view is extensive and worth the climbing. By the way, everybody in Turkey seems steps-unconscious. Dwellings are set fifty steps above the street. I went up and down sixty-five steps every time I went to my room. A beautiful garden, hidden behind an unpainted house, had five terraces, each some forty steps above the other. Lynchburg is a good place in which to grow up if one goes to Turkey.

The college is set up a steep winding drive above the shore of the Bosphorus, and when the drive ends the steps begin, or, if you have become really Turkish, you can use steps all the way. From its four-story stone buildings, handsome and sturdy, one sees the whole Asiatic shore beyond the enchanting blue water. Spring crept in, and pansies, poppies, larkspur, daisles began to decorate the edges of the walk. Horsechestnuts excell any we have in size of blossom. Judas trees are lovely and these do not know that they are deprived of their dogwood partners. No dogwood in Turkey. My poem up to this spring has been The Nightingale Unheard—but no longer. They can do everything anybody ever claimed they could, and more—and it was moonlight and they did not stop at all, nor did I wish them to.

The college was founded as a small school on the Asiatic side in 1871, grew and moved under the guidance of Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, a most unusual woman, and now is a unit in the Turkish Educational System. It has about 500 students, Turkish citizens but of Greek and Armenian ancestry as well as of Turkish. They wear saddle oxfords, white socks, plaid skirts, sweaters, one string of beads and wear their hair short and curled. I gather this costume is one international accomplishment in this divided world. There is a preparatory department with students as young as ten. I am an honorary member of the youngest class and have a Turkish flag made by one of them accompanied by a history of the flag in English, which she began to study in September, 1950.

The faculty is composed about equally of Turkish and American members with some English, French and German members. The college gives a liberal education and confers the A.B. and B.S. degrees, but when the graduates come to America to continue their studies they generally have to have at least one more undergraduate year before going on to graduate work.

Living is by dormitory units, some double and triple rooms, but many big rooms with as many as thirty girls in them. They seem to like it. I found their classes stimulating and their schedules considerably heavier than our students carry. They must be at home in two cultures and (Continued on page 11)

The Ames Greenhouse - At Last

by JANE BELCHER, Associate Professor of Biology

Of course, she wanted one for all of her twenty-five years here and never had one. And it's taken six years from the time of her retirement to build the first unit—but here it is. You people who so generously contributed $1,200 in 1945 may be disappointed at the modest size of the building, but remember that in 1945 there were shortages of materials, and after that there was inflation, and $1,200 doesn't go so far these days. We had to trim our plans to fit our purse, realizing that even a tiny greenhouse was better than none at all. At least we have a greenhouse, and it will have Miss Ames' name on it. The unit whose picture you see cost about $950, leaving $250 for equipping it. A few plants will be housed in it this summer, and in the fall it will really begin to function.

The chief trouble is that, like the teacher whose name it bears, it is far too modest. Although it is large enough to house plants used in general botany, and to permit a few students to have their own seed flats, it won't begin to accommodate an entire laboratory section at one time. We are still hoping to realize the dream we had in 1945 by adding two units to the present basic one, and also a potting shed.

May we take this opportunity to thank all of you who had a part in the building of the Ames Greenhouse and to extend to you a very special invitation to come and see it. And to those of you who didn't know about the plans earlier, we offer this opportunity to help add the other units we need so badly. Write "Greenhouse" on your check, so that it will be used for this purpose.

From the Ragged Mountains

Turkey being notably science-conscious at present, the government demands of them physical geography, physics, chemistry, physiology, botany and general biology. Of course the Turkish language, literature and history are taught in the Turkish language.

I walked the grounds alone, as I used to do at Sweet Briar, noting the things that have a way of catching a presidential eye.

When I left I felt much at home and permanently interested in the American College for Girls.

Of course I did sight-seeing: took a trip into the interior to Bursa and Yalova; went up the Bosphorus and looked the Black Sea in the face; took the boat to Büyükada and rode around the island in a surrey "with the fringe on top." I hobbled over the cobble stones in the Bazaars and attended the Orthodox Easter service, standing two hours and hearing the service seriatim in Turkish, Greek, Armenian, French, English and German, receiving a blue organdie bag with crimson and golden eggs in it from the Patriarch at the end of the service.

I learned to pronounce teshekür (thank you) and to jerk my head slightly backward with a cluck to say "no." I learned a lot about the young in Turkey and their education. Incidentally I attended the meeting of the American Board of Trustees in New York on my return.

The college had a spring vacation and I hopped over to Athens for a week and had a completely different time. I went to Navy and diplomatic festivities, had a party given me, motored to Patras and went by the Admiral's barge to Corfu and visited in the home of a Greek minister (breakfast alone in an enchanting garden), contributed in a typically Virginia way to the gaiety of a small party at the British Embassy and fittingly capped my many interesting visits and good times by being received by the Queen as I went to the plane. Of course you have heard how charming and intelligent she is and how concerned with the welfare of Greek women, especially of Greek girls. She is also very human. She must read American magazines because she wants to see an American kitchen and I have promised her mine to herself for a whole day if she will come to America.

Was not this an ideal way to spend one spring of my retirement? I recommend it to all of you when you reach yours.

Manager Needed for Boxwood Inn

The college is seeking a manager for the Boxwood Inn. If you know of anyone whom you would like to suggest for the position, please write to Mrs. Pannell immediately.

PEOPLE ARE PEOPLE, ESPECIALLY CHILDREN

by Catharine Offley Coleman, '42g Dean of St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Va.

IF YOU are interested in a twenty-four-hour-a-day job which can be filled with a vast variety of problems and rewards and which is never dull—if you want a chance to try your resourcefulness to the full—if you love teen-agers—if, if, if—well, try life in a girl's boarding school.

Are there problems to be met? Just try to take a nap. First thing you know it will be: "Is Miss Coleman sleeping? Miss Coleman (gentle voice); Miss Coleman (slightly louder); Miss Coleman (rather piercing); MISS COLE-MAN! (well-nigh stentorian tones)." By this time, thoughts of sleep vanish, and one mutters a slightly gutteral "yes." No answer, so louder "yeses" are forthcoming. Finally, still drowsy, one is forced to take action. What kind of problem is it? Maybe it turns out to be a permission for a month in advance, but as surely as one succumbs to temptation and "plays possum," the problem will have been a major one. Furthermore, there is one point which must always be kept in mind: anything is just as serious as it has become in a child's mind. To be sure the cause may be trivial but until the matter has been put in its proper perspective the effect is of consequence.

Teen-age troubles vary from the ridiculous to the farfrom sublime. Sometimes they want to know how to get rid of a persistent boy tactfully; at other times they don't want to know how to use tact at all, and one has to persist in teaching them. Then, as the periodicals remind us, there are the parents who push their children too hard. There is nothing sadder than the girl (or boy) who is trying to fulfill her parents' own unfulfilled ambitions. On the other hand are those parents who, engrossed in their own pursuits, pay too little attention to the needs of their young. With all that is being said about the results of feelings of insecurity in youth, there is little need for comment on the dangers incipient in such situations. Of course, all parents do not fall into these categories. There are those who, after driving out of the way to stop by the school, can still stand cheerfully back of the school administration when they find Suzie pulling onion plants and unable to leave the campus because of some misdemeanor, such as insisting on going to the room down the hall for food well after "lights out." At the same time, Suzie knows they love her and want her to fulfill her own potentialities. Although Suzie may not understand that "yes" can be the easiest answer but not the one which is for her own betterment and that it often takes more real love to say "no," given time she will develop that awareness which comes with increased love and respect.

Are boarding students problem-children? Very occasionally, yes; usually, no, if the term is one of opprobrium. Every child has difficulties from time to time; all of them do things you wish they wouldn't, and action must often be taken, but in one's heart, one knows that it's only to be expected. Certainly there are some whose difficulties are such that their removal from school has to be asked, but they are few and far between. When such cases emerge, however, it is necessary to remember that there is always hope of redemption, and that hope can be realized provided the approach of both home and school is constructive. The major trouble comes with problem-parents. There is nothing as frustrating as seeing needed guidance refused a child because of ancestral pride and the fear of stigma or owning-up to parental errors. In most cases, the very fact that the matter has been faced squarely means that it can be met. In a few cases, a change of locale is sometimes best both for the girl, who needs a truly fresh start in a school in which only the administration need know the facts of the case, and for the rest of the student body, who need to have the sin put in its proper place—always knowing that one can love the sinner but hate the sin.

Why are the majority of girls in boarding schools? Naturally the answers are varied, but by far the most common answer lies in the specialized college preparation, with small classes, emphasis on good study habits, and the possibilities of more personal and more individual attention. Basic skills often need stressing through remedial work in reading, arithmetic, or spelling. Students may be like the girl who flunked algebra because she could not add fast enough on her fingers and then rose to 85 after six weeks work in elementary arithmetic (the grades are cumulative and represent achievement to date rather than arithmetic averages. Remember that checkbooks and grocery bills have to be added too.) Still others may read the lesson over four times and still know neither the main idea nor the supporting details. Reading help is indicated. When a girl enters from a large high school and finds her "A" record a thing of the past and failures in the offing, she usually comes for advice on study habits, but such is not the infallible rule. There are always those for whom one has to seek. Some of them will find increased mischief a good cover for lack of academic know-how. In such cases, one's patience is often tried. After all, no one can teach the recalcitrant; it is necessary to make them want to learn first, and sometimes it almost seems a vicious circle. Fundamentally, education is a learning process, as we all know. Patience is a must for anyone in the education field, just as it is a must for parents. It takes patience to explain why a mother in a math problem can be four times her daughter's age only once in their mutual lives. Occasionally one can take all ages from one to one hundred and have the student eventually say, "Well, that may be true for your mother and for my mother and for the mother in the problem, but I am sure that, somewhere in the world, there's an exception." Is she stupid? No, but she certainly is literal.

Educating the young also demands honesty. It may be honesty in facing facts—from the facts of history to the facts of life. When one errs, that fact too must be faced. None of us is perfect. In positions of responsibility, as parents or as teachers, it is necessary to strive to set the best possible standards, but success with regard to every goal is not always forthcoming. If the mistake is laughable, one must laugh at oneself. At times we're all of us ridiculous, and often quite unconsciously. Over-worked phrases, such as "do you get the point?" may disrupt a class, especially if one is stressing the fact that Mohammedan conquests were based on a religion of the sword. Inspirational effect may be lost if one's chapel parable ropic happens to be parrots, and the climactic challenge "Don't be a parrot!" has been reached without regard for student surnames. But with the reminder that it is better to be laughing with others at oneself than to have all the laughter on the other side, it is possible to practice what one has often preached.

To return to the reasons for boarding school attendance brings up the matter of learning to live in a group. Respect for the property and rights of others becomes a must if the girl is to become an integral part of the community. At times she has to learn, as the Corinthians learned from Paul, that one has to sacrifice one's own desires for the good of the whole. Suzie may feel that boxes from home are to nourish her and her alone, whereas her roommate, almost inevitably of the always-starved variety, believes in sharing the wealth. Another time she may want the windows wide open and her roommate may want them half-open; the answer may lie in finding another roommate; more often it has to be a compromise. She may want to whisper half the night, while her roommate may agree with the administration that the nights are made for sleeping; again she must learn to adapt herself. Perhaps Suzie wants to go to a dance Commencement week-end. Hard though it is to say no to her, she must learn that if she can leave, so can others, thereby disrupting a most significant occasion. Most of the time Suzie understands, but inevitably there comes a time when she gripes. However, griping too is natural and healthy, provided it does not become an obsession. It may help Suzie improve (if she examines it constructively), and it may help the school as a whole improve, provided it is given attention. Such attention does not mean humoring Suzie, if, to the best of one's knowledge, she is wrong, but it does mean thinking it over in case the shoe is on the other foot.

Sometimes the choice of an independent school is based on the fact that, under our present constitutional interpretations, only there can religion be an integral part of the curriculum and life. Entering students are, all too often, very nearly religious illiterates. At first, the very mention of the words "God" or "love" may cause embarrassment. And yet a frank approach religiously can often solve problems which could never be unraveled otherwise. Objectivity (by no means disinterested nor unsympathetic) is one of the fortes of the school counselor, but it does stem from the fact that the advice concerns matters with which one is not personally involved. At times both the nature and the seriousness of the decision must come from sources outside one's own experience, and the answer must be the result of getting beyond oneself in prayer. In no case can infallibility be claimed, and there are times when the best procedure is to admit inadequacy and refer the matter to another.

It would be possible to go on and on about life in a girl's school. But what are the rewards? Seldom, if ever, is it financial; but there are other treasures. There is the reward which comes when results are attained. Of course, there have been and will be failures, for inevitably the goal which has been set is far beyond attainment and all soil is not good soil. However if a realistic approach has been taken, it is possible to recognize gains and to realize that we must always aim higher than the mark. Such results are seen as the whole is viewed with proper perspective. Of course, the parts are not perfect, but is man? What are the results? Higher academic achievement is one, but never forget social adjustment, awareness of others and of one's place in the scheme of things.

Such realization does come, but it is seldom permanent with no ups-and-downs with teen-agers. Of course they want to go to college and have careers in time, but today their chief concern is the Friday night movie (possibly with a date-it's easier on one's allowance and much more exciting) or the approaching Prom. Most of them like sports; a few loathe any form of exercise. The older ones like boys, and the younger ones prefer other forms of animal life. Weekdays they have difficulty keeping either themselves or their rooms in order, but when the Prom comes they're hard to recognize for they love to decorate and dress up. September may be a time of homesickness, but usually they are happy by October and bursting with exhuberance before Christmas. After Christmas comes the most trying time of the year, full of sadness and general griping. Then the spring brings gaiety with the peak May Day and tears over Commencement partings. A few work hard all of the time; most of them work hard some of the time; an occasional one does not work hard at all for a year and then is seen no more. At times they are inclined to be selfish, but when the time of the Crippled Children's or Elderly Ladies' party comes, they rally round to supply gifts at the last moment for those who were not on the first list sent when the party was planned. They put coke bottles on their walnut study tables and then collect the money to repair your car which they have pushed out of the garage to wash as a much-needed surprise (but without taking it out of gear). They complain about an hour of work and will spend three getting the remains of a garage fire cleaned. When dusting, they push the dirt into the hall in soite of repeated warnings, but if they see you cleaning nothing will do but that they take over. If a paper is to be written, it is put off for months, and then they can't understand why you put them in bed when they are trying to sit up all night to finish it.

Yes, the life is never dull, but one does stay young meeting the problems of the young. Failures are disheartening, but the rewards are great because the task is great when one is working to promote growth "in wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and man."

The Dora Neill Raymond Fund

by Douglas Woods Sprunt, '42g

It is with great pleasure that we announce the establishment of the Dora Neill Raymond Fund for the purchase of books for the Library at Sweet Briar. Mrs. Raymond's old students have chosen this way of showing their deep affection for her, and their lasting admiration of her as a scholar and teacher.

When we told Mrs. Raymond recently about the Fund she was very much touched and pleased, and said in her characteristic way that it would be nice to have some of them history books—but that we must have all the others too!

We are very proud and happy to give these books in her name, knowing that they will be used wisely through the years and help to teach as she taught—"to see life steadily and see it whole."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Douglas Woods Sprunt and her committee wrote to history majors and Texas girls who were at Sweet Briar while Mrs. Raymond was there. If there are others who would like to contribute to the Fund, we would appreciate your sending your contribution to the Alumnae Office.

ACADEMY AND SPECIAL

Class Secretary: MARGARET POTTS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams) 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Fund Agent: CLAUDINE GRIFFIN (Mrs. Grover C. Holcomb) 2514 Laburnum Avenue, S. W., Roanoke, Virginia.

It is bad policy, I hear, to start off with an apology, but I do feel that I owe one to you who were kind and prompt enough to answer my questionnaires for news for the April issue of this magazine. Alas! There was no news from this corner. About a week before the March deadline I had a hurry call to the farm at Shepherdstown, West Virginia, and there labor troubles, a sister's dislocated and broken wrist and other unexpected events and needs kept me for over two months.

Eventually things straightened out, as they nearly always do, and these past few weeks have been especially pleasant ones, for they have brought me in touch with a number of old Sweet Briar friends,

A few weeks ago I started down "The Valley" in company with a friend from Montreal, to whom I wanted to show a few of the choice spots of Virginia. We stopped first at Lexington, for a glimpse of V.M.L. and Washington and Lee, and then we took that beautiful drive over the mountains to Sweet Briar, where we spent the night at the Boxwood Inn—always my mecca when I am near enough. From Sweet Briar we went to Williamsburg to revel in the beauties of the restoration; then to Charlottesville, to see Monticello and the old part of "THE University"; and home by way of the Skyline Drive.

Of course I showed off Sweet Briar to my greatly impressed Canadian friend. Happily, we ran into a number of my campus friends the morning after our arrival and I was especially pleased when Margaret Schmidt, our Alomnae Secretary, who lives in Garden Cottage — the old Tea House — with her lovely little daughter, Rothie, showed us over the lower part of Sweet Briar House, now so delightfolly restored to its old atmosphere, with Daisy's harp and an old square piano back in place. I felt as if Miss Benedict might come through a doorway at any minute—and I had the unexpected pleasure of seeing her that very evening!

Upon reaching Williamsburg I telephoned

Terry Shaw McCordy, our former Alumnae Secretary, who greeted me warmly and asked us to her house that evening to meet Miss Benedict, who, also, was visiting Williamsburg. We spent a most enjoyable evening: Terry was her usual sparkling self; her husband, whom I had met only briefly at their wedding last fall, is very attractive and told us some interesting stories in connection with the restoration; and Miss Benedict, looking remarkably young and well, held us enthralled by her account of the beginnings of Sweet Briar and the struggle to keep the college going. (The Mary K. Benedict Scholarship and the Manson Memorial Scholarship are small tributes indeed to the foresight and gallant courage of Miss Benedict and Mr. Manson, who strove so hard to keep the college alive and headed in the right direction).

I rarely go to Sweet Briar by automobile that I don't slip over to Amherst to see some of my old friends there. This time f saw Mrs. Wills, whom all of you remember, I am sure, and her sister, Nell Dearborn Reed, Academy. I hope all of you read, in the April issue of this magazine, how Nell, single-handed, put on a couple of card parties and raised $30.00 for the Alumnae Fund. That certainly should inspire us to greater efforts.

Although we had little time in Charlottesville, I couldn't resist stopping by to see Patty Trangott Rixey, '48g, a former Sweet Briar roommate of my niece, "Pottsie," and one of my favorites among the younger Sweet Briar alumnae, Patty, who spent her junior year at St. Andrews and was graduated from Sweet Briar with honors, is now living in Charlottesville with her law-student husband, Jack Rixey, and their ten-months' old son. I was delighted to see that Patty, in spite of her husky, fine looking son, who looks as if he could really lead her around, is, herself, looking especially well. Evidently Sweet Briar prepares one to take on anything with ease.

Back in New York, I journeyed to Long Island to a small luncheon given at the Piping Rock Club by Islael Wood Holt, 19g, who was formerly on the Alumnae Council. I took one look at the first person introduced, a Mrs. Hudgens, and exclaimed, "Eleanor Furman!" Then my youth complex had a terrific jolt, for she asked, "And u ho are you?" But I had a nice warm feeling when, after I told her, she fell on my neckor rather, clasped me to her waist (I ani a scant five feet one.) Eleanor, who was at Sweet Briar with me, was first a sub-freshman, so I claim her partly for the Academy, and then a member of the class of 1914, although she left before graduating. She has had an interesting life in the last few years; her husband is Director of the Lawrence Rockefeller Foundation, which, as I understand it, supplies technical aid and know-how to South American countries, and Eleanor sometimes accompanies her husband on his trips to South America. Their home is now in New York and they have a married daughter and a son at Princeton.

Isabel Holt lives in a large and charming old frame house set in beautiful grounds near Brookville. Long Island. The original part of the house, which is very old indeed, contains the dining room, with its walls covered by very old and beautiful scenic wall paper. Her husband, a former governor of the state of West Virginia, is now chief counsel for the Union Carbide and Carbon Company. They have two daughters, Julia, Sweet Briar 1947g, who is married and has two children and lives at Charleston, West Virginia, and Isabel, who is now studying nursing at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York.

The following afternoon my husband and I were guests of Lily Wallace Mitchell and her husband, George Mitchell, at a tea dance, given by the Southern Society of New York. Lily, who is stunning looking and seemingly as young as when I first met her about fifteen years ago, has a thirteen year old son, George Jr., who is headed for St. Andrews School, Delaware, next fall and keeps his mother busy coaching him in Latin. Also, she has a grown-up step-daughter-petite, with lovely blonde hair-who with her "date" joined our party. The Mitchells have a most attractive house, an old one they remodeled several years ago, at Woodmere, Long Island; but Lily revisits her old home in Fredericksburg, Virginia, whenever she can. George, who is a friend of ours of many years standing, is a tea expert, and for some years has been in charge of the tea department of the General Foods Company.

One old Sweet Briar friend I missed this spring was Evelyn Williams Miles, at Sweet Briar with me the opening year. She wrote that she would be in New York in April to see her son off for Europe and suggested our getting together; but that was when I had to be in Shepherdstown. Evelyn lives in Arlington, Virginia, but gave me little news of herself and family, thinking, I suppose, to catch up when we should be together. It was good to hear from her again and I am hoping that we may be able to meet soon.

Recent news of Celia Webb is that she is Assistant Manager of the Bond Department of the First National Bank of Mobile, Alabama. Celia is a very loyal friend to Sweet Briar and I wish she had given more news of herself.

Margaret Davies McMillin is living at Lookout Mountain, Tennessee, a suburb of Chattanooga. Her husband is president of the Rossville Hosiery Mills, and they have two daughters, Peggy, now Mrs. John Kovacevich, whose husband is an officer in the Air Corps, and Patricia, a student at Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss. Their only son, I am sorry to report, was killed in action in the South Pacific during World War II. Margaret is greatly interested in her two grandchildren and her church work. She is a sustaining member of the Junior League and she loves to travel.

Kate Nicolson Sydnor not only answered my questionnaire but sent me a nice letter, also. Kate, who lives in Richmond, Virginia writes that her husband is president of the Sydnor Pump and Well Company and that he had rather design pumps and wells than eat when hungry. Their son, Garland, Jr., a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and now married, is associated with his father and is of the third generation in this family business. Her daughter, who left college in her sophomore year to be married during World War II, is now living on a strawberry ranch in California. She and her husband have three children, two little girls, aged five and three and a half, and a little boy one and a half. When Kate went to visit them at Christmas time she found this family most entrancing and the grandchildren quite rejuvenating.

Kate, who took a secretarial course after leaving Sweet Briar, has had to practice other talents. Her wifely duties have included being a carpenter's, plumber's, and electrician's assistant, for her husband loves to tinker. She says they have remodeled their 150 year old house eight times, and she hopes that the latest job is the last, for she now feels too old for any more confusion and plaster dust. I can't believe that anyone who writes with her sparkle and interest in life can be too old to tackle anything.

Among her many activities her church work comes first: she is in her eighth year as Dincesan Treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary, which involves handling the monies of 150 parish auxiliaries; she was president for two years of her parish branch of 500 women; and she is now Chairman of the Altar Guild. Her pet charity is the Retreat for the Sick Hospital, of which she is a member of the Board of Directors, the Finance Committee, and the Investigating Committee, which screens all charity cases. That she leads a full and useful life I guessed before I read all this, for several years ago she was one of those willing to serve as a Sub-Agent for the Sweet Briar Alumnae Fund. It takes a busy person to be able to find the time for one more job.

It was good to go back to Sweet Briar for the Alumnae Council meetings, Association meetings and Club Presidents' meeting; and then for Reunion activities and festivities. As time is too short for commencement news in these Notes, the October issue will carry a full account.

1910

Class Secretary: MARJORIE COUPER (Mrs. Chester Prince) 705 W. Ocean View Avenue, Norfolk 3, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Frances Murrell (Mrs. Everingham Rickards) North Shore Point. Algonquin Park, Norfolk, Virginia.

Another reunion at hand, and again our plans for attending had to be changed at the last minute. We were so disappointed.

Helen Schulte Tenney wrote a grand letter but it was too late for the April issue of the ALUMNAE News. She was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Edwin T. Herbig, Jr., in Madison, Wisconsin at the time but she spends the summers at her cottage on Penobscot Bay, near Rockland, Maine. Helen had three sons in World War II-one, Edward Cameron Tenney, a Harvard graduate and a First Lieutenant in the China, Burma, India theatre of war, lost his life and is buried in Arlington. She has five granddaughters and five grandsons. Helen says that the two years at Sweet Briar and the five years spent in China, ending in 1920, are the most treasured in her life. She met Alma Booth Taylor unexpectedly in Anking, China. Helen still enjoys writing and intends publishing some poetry and songs on Sweet Briar themes composed years after leaving Sweet Briar and sung to her children and grandchildren. Her clubs are English-Speaking Unions in New York and American Woman's Association in New York.

Louise Hooper Ewell had a wonderful motor trip to Florida this spring with her cousins—they visited all the lovely spots in Florida and en route enjoyed Savannah and Charleston, Frances Murrell Rickards is on a motor trip to Georgia with friends. They expect to return by the Great Smoky Mountain route. Frances has rented a cottage at Virginia Beach for August.

Eugenia Griffin Burnett sailed from New York June 16 on the S. S. de Grasse, with a party for a trip abroad, visiting the British Isles, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland, Italy and France, returning September 20. She saw Pattie Hobson Eaglesfield in April, in Richmond when she visited her brother, Judge Haskins Hobson.

On May 19 we had a lovely visit with Miss Benedict, in Williamsburg. Frances drove us up and before lunch and after lunch we chatted, visited and chatted some more! Louise Hooper Ewell, Anne Cumnock Miller and yours truly composed the crowd.

I expect to be home August, then as usual we go to the beautiful Carolina mountains for a month.

Class Secretary: Julia Beville (Mrs. Jonathan Yerkes) 2935 Grand Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida,

Fund Agent: GRACE CALLAN, (Mrs. William L. Bond) 1149 Ardsley Road, Schenectady, New York.

It is indeed good to have had word from some of the class of '14, for this is the last of the season's ALUMNAE NEWS. Good, too, to hear of the happy accomplishments of sons and daughters, and of the many grandchildren. I am sure in coming years Sweet Briar will claim its share of the "grands," as it has our daughters.

A long and most interesting letter from Mollie Blount Sledge, now living in Ada, Oklahoma. Moldie writes, "I have a big job as President of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Diocese of Oklahoma, and am now getting ready for our Spring Conference. My family consists of two sons, and two daughters. Our older daughter, Claire, is a doctor, and is taking a residency after practicing for two years. Our older son is married, and has a little girl, six, two little boys, one not even a week old. Mary Willis, next in line, lives in Boston, where her husband is finishing in June at the Harvard School of Design. Clement, our youngest, enters Yale Medical School next fall. Both Mary Willis and Clement are Phi Beta Kappa. My husband is an independent oil operator, and we love living in such a fascinating state." Thanks to Mollie for such a fine letter. Some day I shall send her some snapshots of Sara Cooper, Mollie and me a la middy blouses and pigtails, taken in the dell. These are rare reminders of Sweet Briar College in the good old days.

Rebecca Patton, always to be depended on for a word, writes, "My days are short on hours, and my activities mostly routine, I seem to be easy bait for work on committees, especially friends who say, 'Sorry, my husband will not let me." Rebecca also tells me she spent a wonderful three months in Philadelphia with Henrietta Washburn, who is deeply interested in all world problems.

Sallie Miller Bennett writes from Charleston, and says her chief activities are gardening, Garden Club and Historical Research on records of portraits of Colonial Sonth Carolina for the Colonial Dames, Sallie has four children, and two grandchildren.

Addie Ertin Des Portes savs, "I still have a fine husband, and three children. Lugene, Jr., a graduate of the University of North Carolina; William, a senior at Hampden-Sydney and a daughter, Ilia, a freshman at Longwood College,"

Alma Ercendrath Meissner, living in Milwaukee, has two daughters, and a son, and three grandchildren. One daughter, Doris, is an Occupational Therapist, and Paul, her son, is a graduate in Engineering, now studying law.

For my family news, My husband and I are settled in our beach home at Ponte Vedra. Our daughter arrived from Sweet Briar on June 5 for vacation time, Becky and her classmates and friends will keep us busy until September.

In August, our niece, Blair Burwell, Sweet Briar '47g, is to be married. So much gaiety is ahead for the young folks! Blair will live in Philadelphia with her doctor husband. In the meantime, I am doing Patriotic Service as Regional Director in the southern states for the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Lots of good wishes for a happy summer. Let's all get together at Sweet Briar next reunion time.

Fund Agent: ANNE SCHUTTI (Mrs. Leroy H, Nolt) 1301 Homestoad Lane, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Being class secretary can be either a thankless job or a delightful privilege depending upon the cooperation of the class. Right now I am enjoying a pleasant glow of gratification for the wonderful response to the thirty or more postcards I mailed to you. There have been 12 replies, some from 1915ers from whom I have heard nothing for years.

From Dorothy Taylor comes the exciting news that she was married November 11, 1950, to Charles E. Scherholz. She says, "I have acquired two lovely daughters and four wonderful grandchildren, one of whom was born on our wedding trip, so you can see I am a fast worker."

Anne Roberts Balfour writes that Margaret Daties McMillin has been her house guest. The youngest McMillin daughter, Patricia Anne, graduated from Gulf Park College, Long Beach, Mississippi on May 28. We are delighted to have news of Margaret.

Helen McCary Ballard had a delightful six weeks trip to Hawaii during January and February, going over on the Lurline and returning by air, She has two sons Perry and McCary, both married, and one granddaughter, Anne McCary Ballard. Helen would like to come to a class rennion so we will expect to see her at our fortieth in 1955!

Lel Red writes that her life is quiet but satisfactory, which is a pleasant note in these chaotic times.

Anna Wills Reed reports that both her sons are officers in the Air Force; Capt. William Reed was married April 14 to Mary Ellen Douglas of Cleveland, Ohio, at Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and Dr. Josiah F. Reed, Jr., is an interne at Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, June is basy with Dauphin Public Assistance and Ann is a student at Green Mountain Junior College in Vermont.

Helen Nicholson Schively writes, "the Schively's moved the first of January to Kosciusko, Mississippi, in the 'deep south' where we have built an awfully attractive new house, and where Yale is General Manager of a new bus body plant. That is quite a change from living always in Indiana, but much to my surprise, I am liking it very much and am charmed with the delightful people I have met. Sylvia is still in New York, working for Columbia Broadcasting and loving it, and Nick is in business in Lima, Ohio."

Marjorie DuShane Stedman tells me she is now a grandmother and plans to visit her year old grandson in Seattle soon. She is still having trouble with her back. She says, "Every time I get ont of my cast, into a brace, my back hreaks again so now I'm going to have to always wear a cast. Aside from looking like an elephant, I am fine, active still in church work and Woman's Club." Henrietta Wadsworth Blodgett has remarried after ten years of widowhood and now lives in North Carolina. Marje still keeps in touch with Louise Davis, Eugenia Hafner Gray, Dorris Jones, and Leona Gunther Zaegel, Rosalia Feder Sarbey spends her summers at Bay Village, Ohio, on the lake. Doring the winter she lives at Wickenburg, Arizona, and has a small mail order business in western jewelry. She lost her husband ten years ago. Her 19 year old daughter, Martha, is on scholarship and in the cooperative dormitory at the University of Arizona and is studying Journalism. Helen, aged 16, is a sophomore in High School.

Claire Erck Fletcher teaches singing and piano to pupils ranging from 4th grade elementary pupils to 45 years old and has two recitals in prospect. In their orange grove they are installing an irrigation system and hope it will "put them on easy street." We hope so, too. Her daughter is finishing her junior year at Florida University at Gainesville and will work in a Leesburg bank this summer. Her sister-in-law, Georgena Sellar Erck, my one-time roommate at Sweet Briar, plans to build near the Fletchers on a hilltop with a lovely view over another big lake.

Margaret Grant will leave July 18th for her frurth consecutive summer at Geneva with the Economic and Social Council of United Nations and will return in early November. Peggy will be working and Harry will be at summer school at Columbia "getting as much education under his belt as possible before the inevitable military service," Leslie and her husband are still living in Cambridge, Massachusetts,

A note from Anne Schutte Nolt tells me that she had Miss Cara Gascoigne as her guest about the middle of May. Miss Gascoigne, whom you will probably remember as our Physical Director at Sweet Briar, was in America for two months, brought here by the American Lacrosse Association, and has been coaching at Sweet Briar, Hood College, Swarthmore and Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore. She spent some time with Miss Ruth Howland and Miss Charlotte K. Hull who are fiving at Sweet Briar at present. Anne says that Miss Gascoigne is as delightful as ever and made a tremendous hit with her friends in Lancaster.

Your secretary is busier than ever and had to steal time from much needed housecleaning to write this.

Polly Bissell Ridler invited me to a Sweet Briar luncheon at her honse last month but unfortunately I was unable to go. The Wilmington group has a luncheon every month and usually there are about a dozen girls present. It is a very pleasant custom.

Faye Abraham Pethick has been spending the month of May in Sonthern Pines, North Carolina, but has rented a house in Madison, Connecticut, for the summer. Her daughter, Sylvia Pethick Maltby, has a new home in W'allingford, Connecticut. Mary Grace Pethick Robinson had a serions operation last fall but at last accounts had made a good recovery.

My sister, Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes, has recently been here for a short visit. She spent the winter at Lake Wales, Florida, Mary Pennypacker Davis is very busy at the Hill School, Pottstown, Pennsylvania, where her husband is a master. Hill School is having its centennial and there are many functions in which the faculty wives are involved. She and Faber will be leaving soon for the Catskill Mountains where they manage the Winnisook Club during the summer months.

Dorys McConnell Faile has built a new home at Southport, Connectient, Helen Pennock Jewitt is also living in Southport. She says, "We have been here about two years, We've always loved Southport so when Homer had to retire we came and bought an old house in the village where everything is within easy walking distance for him. We find living here just a sort perfect for us,"

Do send in your news, so we can continue to have a more lengthy report.

Class Secretary: Noni,

Fund Agent: RACHIL FORBUSH (Mrs. Jared Irwin Wood) 4931 Butterworth Street, Washington, D. C.

This is your Fund Agent broadcasting a Big Unabashed Brag about the graduates of the class of 1916, that brave little band of ten students who responded so handsomely to my 5, O. S. Only one letter remains unanswered, because the postman couldn't find Jean Stockdale at 901 Union Oil Building, Los Angeles. For all we know she may be yearning to hear from a Sweet Briar Fund Agent so if anyone knows a better address we will give her a chance to make our graduates 100% contributing. Special thanks go to those non-graduates who have been heard from also! We would be very happy to hear from the rest of you.

No one has really twisted my arm to act as Class Secretary but I can't have it on my conscience any longer that I have not shared your beautiful budgets of news and your choice comments on life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Being a practicing librarian, I'll now alphabetize and digest your recent pasts.

Banister, Margaret . . . Just phoned Ban to get the latest news. "No news, honey. Sante old job at the Pentagon," wearily quoth the head of "Women's Interests," Office of Public Information, Department of Defense. "What, no trips?" I queried wistfully, being bounded habitually, on all four sides, by the District of Columbia, myself, whilst Ban flys in all directions. "Oh well, yes," she admitted. "I am about to embark on a project that has been a gleam in my eye for quite a few years. Have just gotten permission to fly the heads of some thirty women's organizations on a tour of military training centers," Just a little six-day jaunt to Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Chicago, to Lackland Air Force Base in Texas, to the Infantry Center, Ft. Benning, Georgia, to the Marine Corps Recruit Depot on Parris Island, S. C., to the Wac Training Center, Ft. Lee, Virginia, and back to Washington to her "same old job." Ho and hum!

Bennett, Louise (Lord) . . . Connie Russell Chamberlain writes of her ex-roommate, "She's a very wonderful person." I agree. Anyone who dons cap and gown to receive an M. A. at Columbia, when her grandson is 15 months old, is something special. Louise's present roommate, Albert C. Lord, has recently bought a summer place on the Connecticut coast at Mason's Island, Mystic, only 11/2 miles from Connie's home in New Britain, where Louise's oldest son works for Connie's husband. It really sounds as if L. and C. are to live happily ever afterward.

Beye, Helen (Hamilton) . . . Do you remember how adorable she was in "The Rose of Plymouth" our freshman year? And do you know that she married soon after that, had six sons and one daughter and never once stopped being adorable? She writes, "Have six grandchildren, two more coming and they are a picnic." Helen is a widow now, has sold her big home and moved into a charming small one in River Forest, Illinois. For three years she has worked with teen-age groups of girls and is active in civic affairs in her home towns of Oak Park and River Forest. All this has not taken the bubble out of her unforgettable laugh.

Brown, Zalinda (Harrison) . . . Lynn wrote a dear note, mostly about my sister, Edith, her roommate, who died in 1944. Lynn and her husband were leaving Seattle December first for South America to stay in Chile the greater part of the time until May. She was homesick already for her four grandchildren.

Camp, Antoinette (Hagood) . . . "My news is 100% preparedness, since my son, Lt. Ben Hagood, is stationed at Ft. Jackson, S. C., and my daughter, Anne Mason Cooke Gilliam (S.B. '41) goes with her husband, Lt. W. L. Gilliam, Jr., to Navy Supply School at Bayonne, N. J. That leaves the two of us rattling around in a nice old house built in 1790, at Charleston, S. C. It was inherited by one Ellen Howison Christian and acquired from her by lucky us. Come down and see for yourself." It's on my list when I finally become a rambling wreck.

Howison, Ellen (Christian) . . . adds a P. S. to the above. "I go to Charleston at least once a year and see something of Antoinette. She is goodlooking as ever." Ellen and her husband are raising Angus cattle on their two farms of about 1000 acres at Deerfield, Virginia, in the western part of the state. She sounds like the old Ellen, completely natural and untrammeled.

McConnell, Dorys (Faile) . . . Dorys lost her husband three years ago and is trying to make a fresh start, spending six months of the year in Florida, where she has two children at the university. In the spring she returns to a little house she built recently at Fairfield, Connecticut. How about stopping in Washington for a Sweet Briar reunion some time

Minor, Grace . . , took time off from a full schedule to send a generous check and the news that she is teaching kindergarten in Kansas City, Missouri's public schools half a day and working in a psychological laboratory the other half day. We like to think that Sweet Briar may have a gentle influence on the next generation in K. C.

Pennypacker, Mary (Davis) . . . Her neatly typed letter was a boon to these old eyes. "Faber and I lead very busy but unspectacular lives here at Hill School (Pottstown, Pennsylvania). Our three boys have scattered. Bill, 24 years, graduated from Princeton last spring after two years in the service and is teaching at Webb School, Claremont, California. Dick, 22 years, graduated from Bowdoin in June and is in newspaper work in Meriden, Connecticut. He also had a year and a half in the service. Jim, 19, is a junior at Princeton." Let us swell in unison, with vicarious pride, over Penny's fine contribution to our man-power.
Patton, Felicia . . . "Rebecca and I are living at our old family home in Kentucky, delving in such small town affairs as Girl Scouts, League of Women Voters and various community welfare and church activities. We vary the routine with a skip-off now and then, such as a spree in New York next week." The old Patton putter-outers are up to their same tricks, bless 'em.

Rigg, Edna (Brown) . . . is getting ready for a new way of life with her husband's retirement this summer, after 36 years with Westinghouse. They are lucky to have a married son and daughter living near them in Pittsburgh. Edna was a busy grandma last summer when the stork dropped a boy at each of her children's homes. She is hopingas are Penny, Helen Beye and so many other parents-that the two young men in her family will not be called into the service a second time. We'll all be hoping with you.

Russell, Constance (Chamberlain) . . . "I start to count my blessings and get up to one. It is that my mind seems to be going before complete physical disintegration takes place. Such a condition is usually considered sad but I don't find it anything but a comfort. I can't concentrate or remember to do anything unpleasant!" Maybe she has something there! But how about a little news of Grandma Chamberlain before she completely breaks up?

Stout, Rebecca (Hoover) . . . Becky says she hasn't done a single noble thing. Doesn't belong to a club or a league or a guild and feels no urge. Just tends to her business, which is mostly her man, who has had two terrific heart attacks. "I still sew like mad, unto the third generation of babies-and make lovely hooked rugs (and I don't mean maybe) and do have a dreamy garden. Had tea several weeks ago with Sweet Briar's new president and liked her a lot. She didn't ask me what I'd done." Hush your fuss, Becky, darling. Who ever wanted you to do anything but be you.

Taliaferro, Lucy . . . A welcome check but, alas, no news.

Which brings us, slightly alphabetically, to Rachel Forbush (Wood). The good news with us is that my son graduated, with honors, from Walter Reed Hospital where you may remember he went, unexpectedly in September, instead of entering Middlebury College, His type of brain operation bars out combat duty but Middlebury still thinks he is a good risk so we are keeping our fingers crossed till September. We have celebrated his recovery pretty recklessly. He bought a 1941 Plymouth and is heading south and I bought a dream house. When this appears in printers ink, our new address will be 4931 Butterworth Street, Washington, D. C., a five minute drive from my entertaining job at Mt. Vernon Seminary. So easy to find, being straight out Massachusetts Avenue to Westmoreland Circle and 1/2 block right on Butterworth. Do make time to find it the next time you are in Washington. We are going to keep on believing that there will be a next time and that maybe there will even be a Washington. The class of '16 has now made up for the space it has not used in recent issues. Who wants to be Secretary? Confide in me or the Alumnae Office.

I am sorry I have not found the time to send out post cards for information about you all to print in the class letter. I had such a nice letter from Flizabeth I ggleston, which is hereby acknowledged with thanks, in which she told me that Carrie Sharpe Sanders' son was one of the first children stricken with the terrible bulbar type polio in the Wytheville epidemic last summer. He is undergoing treatment at Warm Springs, Georgia, now and they hope he will recover more and more from the severe damage to his ams and legs.

Elizabeth also suggested that if, and I quote, "all of us would send in news when we get it instead of waiting to have it extracted," I might be able to get more letters in the News.

So, won't you all please send me a post card or a letter and let me know what you and your families are doing.

My one bit of news is that Louise Hammond Skinner has taken a position in Miller and Rhoads in Richmond and is living here now. It certainly is grand having her so near.

My eldest son entered the service in June, the second one is at VMI and the three younger children are still here at home,

If everyhody will send me some news, I'll try and write a better letter for the first fall issue.

Class Secretary: Francis Kenney (Mrs. Carlos E. Lyon) 64 Sonthmoreland Place, Decatur, Illinois.

Fund Agent: HILLN BLISON (Mrs. Francis M. Comer) 325 Limestone Street, Maysville, Kentucky.

Time to have another chat and I am quite proud of the way you have come through with replies. Of the fifty-two class members for whom I have had addresses, only eleven have failed to respond during the '50-'51 year. I feel that gives us quite a good record. Of course I was an optimist and hoped for the maximum.

Sarah Sheffield Ramspeck wrote me February 13 from Charlotte, Amalie on St. Thomas Island, one of the Virgin Islands group. She sent no special news but spoke of leaving Atlanta in late summer last year, So I am wondering if that means a change of address or only a prolonged stay. I was away when her card arrived so couldn't include this word in my March letter sent from Florida.

An impressive and interesting note regarding Dorothy Wallace was relayed to me by Elmyra Pennypacker Yerkes, Last September Dorothy gave a talk before the American Chemical Society, at the symposium on Radioactive Waste Treatment and Problems, Her subject was "Units which are applicable for Measurement of Radioactivity in Water and or Sanitary and Industrial Wastes." It is inspiring to know that Dorothy not only has kept step with up-to-the-minute science but also has made valuable contributions to it. Aren't we really proud of her? As I wrote before, she is with the Health Physics Division of Argonne National Laboratory in Chicago.

Edna Sloan Sewell lives in Columbus, Ohio, She has a daughter, Janet, who has graduated from college and is an artist, Janet is also doing book reviews for "Design" magazine in Columbus. Edna spent the winter months in Florida

A most interesting note came from Nancy Hanna recently. For some time, she has been with the Bureau of Standards in Washington. Tiring of city life, ten years ago she bought a farm near Gaithersburg, Maryland, and started raising thoroughbred horses as a side interest. Last year she sold that farm and bought another near Ashburn, Virginia, Nancy has a super-busy life, the Bureau of Standards job taking about twelve hours of her day including commuting time, but she has become increasingly interested in her horses and hopes to "retire" on her farm one of these days. She promises to keep us informed from now on, even of the sale of a colt. That we would like!

News of our Paris, Texas, pair is that Katherine Armstrong Lawrence devotes much time as secretary of the city and county Community Chest, a work which she enjuys tremendously. Margaret High Norment's older son is in the Air Corps Reserve—the younger son is graduating fom Texas University about now.

In writing Madeline Watson Banks, I had dreamed up my own idea that her home town might be named for their combined families but she says "No." Waban, Massachusetts, doubtless is too long established for that to be possible but it was a nice idea, anyway. Madeline wrote of Eleanor Lynott Hackett's death which I reported to you earlier, Eleanor's and Madeline's husbands are devoted friends and the four had enjoyed a wonderful companionship. Madeline has three daughters and one son. Two daughters are married and there's a fine little grandson nearby for Madeline to cuddle. The second married daughter lives in Chicago and is on the waiting list for late summer. The "baby" son is in Amherst College. The family spends summers on Cape Cod which means welcome relaxation, Madeline said she and her husband visited Sweet Briar campus a year or so ago-a treat for both of them.

The former Margaret ("Peg") Turner Brown has only recently returned from a two year world tour, details of which I hope to secure from a friend to whom she referred me. You can probably realize how much I appreciate her stealing time to write me, when you read the following portions of a newspaper clipping which she enclosed:

"Two outstanding personalities, one in the field of service through the American Red Cross and the other in world travel and international trade, were linked by marriage when Mrs. Margaret ("Peg") Brown, former prominent clubwoman and Red Cross executive m Stockton, California, exchanged wedding yows May 8 with Mr. Christian August Kauffeld of Djakarta, Indonesia, and Amsterdam, Holland. The quiet nuptial rites were performed at seven in the evening in Trinity Episcopal Cathedral, Reno, Nevada.

"The former Mrs. Brown, widely known for her pleasing personality and knack for organization in Stockton circles, was formerly executive secretary for the San Joaquin County Chapter of the American Red Cross. Her position, which she assumed in 1943 and from which she retired two years ago, brought her into contact with a wide variety of social service work. Not only was she active in family case work and volunteer service in this city, but her attention was also centered on the conduct of the Junior Red Cross Camp in the Sierra. She was instrumental in the organization of the Mobile Blood Donor Unit and flight-line canteen at Stockton Field during World War II. The new Mrs. Kauffeld also assisted in the founding of the San Joaquin County Blood Service,

"Mrs, Kauffeld recently returned from a two-year world tour and visited in New York and Texas en route to the Pacific coast prior to her marriage. Mr. Kauffeld arrived in the United States early in May, from the Far East and Europe where he is engaged in international trade. Following their wedding rites Mr. and Mrs. Kauffeld began a honeymoon visiting interesting locales in California. They will return to the Far East during the summer and make their home in Singapore, British Malaya, They will first visit Mr. Kauffeld's family in Holland and France."

Helen Shepherd King lives in Lake Forest Illinois, and has two daughters. Barbara Ann is a graduate of Bennett Junior College at Millbrook, New York—was married last August to Bruce M. Macfarlane and lives in Lake Forest, Priscilla has been a student at Wheaton College, Norton, Massachusetts, and the family drove East for her June graduation.

Lucille Barrow Turner recently gave a folklore program in Washington. Among those present were guests from the British embassy and other notables.

No news of import from my niche, My real thanks to all of you who have written me and my best wishes always.

Alice Miller Bly and her husband, Neil, are enjoying their new stone ranch style house, just outside Winchester, Indiana. Several paw-paw groves through the woods are their special pride—more for the ornamental leaves than the fruit, she says. House guests also seem to be their specialty, as they had five when she was good enough to take time to answer the card.

Bernice Green Carper writes that she has now retired from teaching and being postmistress in her home town of Winfield, Iowa. After leaving Sweet Briar, she graduated from Iowa State University. She and her husband, Walter, visited Sweet Briar in October, 1948, and of course saw great changes.

Helen Manning, home from a vacation in Bermuda, writes that she has been on the staff of the Boys' Club of Trenton, N. J. for six years, teaching minor crafts and running a small library for five hundred boys. She also writes that Kate Roberts Jennings' son is President of the Princeton Triangle Club, and wrote this year's show. Helen's work certainly sounds interesting and worthwhile.

The Cincinnati Sweet Briar Club sponsored a hockey game in March, for the benefit of the S. B. Scholarship Fund. Don't know what the score was or what the gate receipts were, but the President of the club is Ruth Ulland Todd. Her daughter graduated from Sweet Briar last year. One son is a doctor and one enters college this fall.

Emily Moon Spilman leads an extremely busy life. Maybe you don't know that she was Virginia Mother for the Year in 1949. (Belated congratulations, Emily). She has been on the State Board of the Virginia Congress of P.T.A. for twenty years, and directs publicity for the Waynesboro Red Cross Blood Program. They have six children—two girls married, (six grandchildren) and two sons married this winter, and a boy and girl at home in school. Their interests are education, journalism, music and all the attending activities of bringing up six children. Emily expresses the hope of being at Sweet Briar for our reunion next year.

We are looking forward to seeing Gert Dally Massie, husband, and son, en route to the White Mountains, in July. Their daughter, Adrianne, is going back to Helen Mac's and Jeannette (Dan) Boone's camp, this summer—that beauty spot in North Carolina.

Saw Fitzallen Kendall Fearing recently in Scarsdale, New York, just as dear as ever.

Beulah Norris is again Alumnae Fund Chairman for next year—and Alice Babcock Simons is our Class Fund Chairman. 1922 has given them the support they deserve. Wa should be so proud of them for doing this work for Sweet Briar.

Thank you all for sending in news this year. Save a spot in your busy lives to answer the cards next year. I hope the summer will be a happy one for all of you.

Class Secretary: GERTRUDE GEER (Mrs. Clark L. Bassett) 77 Lochmoor Boulevard, Grosse Pointe Shores, Detroit 30, Michigan.

Fund Agent: Lydia Purcell (Mrs. Frederic Wilmer) 1921 Stuart Avenue, Richmond 20, Virginia,

Unforeseen things do happen! I am in Harper Hospital for an operation. I, the healthiest fifty-year-old in Detroit—and they tell me I'll be here ten days more. Want to hear about my operation: Of course you don't.

I'll tell you what I know of the two I know best in '23 first—Helen Richards Horn and Katharine (Bud) Weiser Ekelund.

Helen lives in Allentown, is married to Dean Robert Chisholm Horn of Muhlenberg College, and is still doing painting and designing. She has recently had a one-man show, published several children's books and designed several selling Christmas cards. Yes, she is talented as well as being one grand person.

"Bud" Weiser Ekelund has a travel-minded family—the doctor and three beautiful girls. "Bud" and the doctor spent last summer in Europe, one of the younger girls spent the spring vacation in Jamaica, and the other in Bermuda. The eldest daughter, Sally Skillman, has a handsome child, so "Bud" is happily a "grandmother."

Elizabeth Deane Valentine, daughter of Elizabeth Taylor Valentine, is among the candidates for the degree of bachelor of science in education from Wheelock College, on the Riverway, Boston, which prepares nursery school, kindergarten and primary grade teachers. She attended St. Catherine's School before entering Wheelock. This year at Wheelock she was president of her dormitory and president of the Dormitory Council. As a freshman, she was president of her class and was Student League Chairman of Assemblies in her sophomore year. She also belonged to the Dramatic Club and Athletic Association. What an outstanding record!

This is a most eventful two months of my life I think. First, this operation, then, our eldest son, Tom, was married the middle of June, then the next eldest (we have four sons) goes into the Aviation Cadets, then the two youngest go to camp which is usually for eight weeks each summer, and July 7 we sail for Europe.

Write me, please, so I won't have to write about myself next time. Best of luck to all of you.

Fund Agent: MARY RICH (Mrs. Robert E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

The chance of a life time to break into print and only a few of you took advantage of it. Your secretary is contemplating sending each of you a questionnaire which you can check and drop in the mail box on your way "to market." There should be one light moment about buying the groceries these days!

The questionnaire will be along the lines of "True or False"... like: I have-have not—fallen arches; 14 children; aphids on the roses;—oh, speaking of flowers, Mary Rich Robertson won a ribbon on the daffodils she entered in their local Garden Club show this spring. She was very apologetic about it, but I'm much impressed. Even the weeds give up at my type of nurture. Mary also says she and her husband will be in Culpeper, Virginia, in July, for the Horse Show and attendant festivities. They will visit Katherine Slanghter Thornton and her family, Katherine has a boy the same age as Mary's, nine years old, and another who is married and has recently been recalled to the Air Force.

How lucky many of you are to be near enough to see each other now and then. Living in the middle of the desert there seems to be no one out here in this land of cows, cactus and coyotes, remotely connected with Sweet Briar, Did I say write to me about yourselves? You may be as smug as you wish about how many other Sweet Briarites you see, too.

The last member of our class 1 talked to was Hellen Moury Fell. That was over a year ago in San Francisco where I was attending a Church Convention. We never did see each other as I was hemmed on all sides by The Clergy which was more confining than the telephone booth—a cubicle not conductive to much more than civil inanities after 25 years! Hellen's husband is head of a Travel Bureau in San Francisco.

Virginia Lewis Gregory is living in Globe, Arizona. She has taken up her singing again after 15 years. She and her husband are in business in Globe. Rebecca Snyder Garrison's oldest son was married in March to a girl from Rebecca's "home town."

Bern Hulburd Waln says she has "no news" because she has been working on Red Cross, had a sinus operation, been re-decorating and "very innocently had two teeth out" . . . I'll take the Woman's Auxiliary and the Missionary Barrel, anytime!

The only news from here is that our 14 year old son will soon be home from prep school. A large box delivered this morning was marked, ('Unpak Immedeateley" . . . (the glory he revels in does not stem from a proficiency in spelling.) I "un-pak-ed" and the stench was reminiscent of the Sweet Briar biology lab. One of three bottles of preserved rattle snake had broken and there was the little beastie-albeit dead-nestled cosily amidst a football helmet, 3 "Tee" shirts, a pair of shin guards and a contraption of straps, buckles, safety pins, paper clips and other doo-dads attached to a wire coat hanger. Don't ask me! I don't know what it is but if you'll subscribe at once to the S. B. Fund and bring the class up to the top, I'll find out and send the answer with your receipt.

Don't forget the Fund, and a letter to your secretary. There will be a column from here in the October issue if I have to write a sermon—so help me!

Class Secretary: EUGENIA GOODALL (Mrs. E. C. Ivey, Jr.) 3827 Boonsboro Road, Lynchburg, Virginia.

We have just heard of the death of Elizbeth Dibrell Smith, on April 28, 1951, and I know all of you will be distressed over that news.

We are also greatly shocked by the sudden death of Frances Burnett Mellen April 25, 1951. Frances maintained a keen interest in Sweet Briar, both through her participation in the activities of the Cleveland Alumnae Club, and through her daughter, Mary Anne, who is a junior at Sweet Briar and president of her class. We extend to Louis, Louis, Jr. and Mary Anne our deepest sympathy,

The wedding of Louise Gibbon Carmichael's daughter, Louise, to Tom Eshelman, of North Wilkesboro, North Carolina, took place on June 16. Temporarily they will live in San Antonio, Texas, where Tom is stationed with the Air Force.

Eleanor Miller Patterson wrote me that she had had a letter from Amy Williams Hunter telling her among other things, how much she had enjoyed reading about our 25th reunion but how distressed she was not to be able to recognize any of us in the picture. We must have gotten a little older looking! Eleanor's daughter, and namesake, is a junior at High School, and Brown, her son, a junior at the University of the South, Sewanee. Brown is President of the Betax, and also of the Pan-Hellenic at Sewanee. Last fall he was elected to O. D. R. and this spring to Phi Beta Kappa. We are thrilled for Eleanor and proud of Brown.

Mary Craighill Kinyoun is now living in the mountains near Hendersonville, North Carolina and loves it. She and a friend of hers, who is also a widow, built a house there last spring and moved in in June. Mary spent the winter in Terre Haute, Indiana.

Our daughter, Fleanor, graduated this June from Pine Manor. On the 19th of May I headed toward Wellesley. I stopped a few days in Laneaster with Sue Hager Rohrer, and on to Riverside, Connecticut, for a visit with Jo Snowdon Durbam. Then Beef and I drove up through the New England states and got back to Wellesley in time for graduation . . . and now I'm back home.

Never having been a shining star in any English classes during my school years, I don't know what the class of 1926 has let itself in for, by asking me to act as its class secretary—so—here goes. First let me thank you, one and all, for the grand response to my post cards.

Peg Poscy Brubaker writes she wasn't able to make our reunion. She is keeping busy with her two sons, working on drives, PTA and Cub Scouts. She had a grand talk with Dot McKee Abney while Dot was visiting her son at Franklin and Marshall.

Dot herself writes that her son, Hamp, has passed his physical for the Army, but is hoping he can continue with an accelerated course this summer at Franklin and Marshall College, enabling him to finish his college course next February. He had hoped to study law but that will have to wait as the Army seems to have other ideas. Her daughter, Barbara, who has just turned 17 and will be a senior at Winchester-Thorston next fall, entered a National French contest held at Pennsylvania College for Women and came off with first prize. Her medal will be sent from France. She was in her third year of French, How proud Dot must be!

Dottie Hamilton Davis, with her husband Allan, was on a Mediterranean cruise this winter. They sailed on the S. S. Independence which was making its maiden voyage. That sounds like a wee bit of heaven to me.

Ruth Abell Bear thinks her life is far from startling. I'm wondering how she finds time for everything. Besides keeping house for her husband who works for Bethlehem Steel—and the Boy Scouts—she has two children. Burnett, Jr., 18, and Andrena, 15—who must also take up a lot of her time. Still she finds time to work on numerous and assorted drives, is up to her ears in Girl Scouts, Health Council—is a board member of the Symphony Orchestra and has a Sunday School class to boot. Her son is a freshman at Cornell while her daughter is a sophomore at Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr.

Dottie Hamilton Davis and Allan had cocktails at Emilie Halsell Marston's, with Elinor Harned Arp and her husband. The Arp's were visiting their son. This all happened way back in November. Then Dot Keller Iliff and Seward, with Mrs. Keller, stopped by for a Sunday. Dot writes the "girls" and talked after they sent the "boys" to the farm, Dot and Seward moved back to Washington last September. Seward has gone back to active duty as a Colonel in the Army with Selective Service. Dot says that as Bamby is in 7th grade and Suzy is in 2nd she is active in both Junior High and Grade School PTA, She's also on the Mother's Committees of the Girl Scouts-Brownies. Also a lovely garden came with their house so she can indulge in her favorite hobby.

Ginny Lee Taylor Tinker had to miss our reunion. Her daughter, Joan, graduated from Pine Manor College at Wellesley, Massachusetts, at that time. She, her husband, Fred, and son, George, who is 16, spent that weekend with Kay Norris Kelley and her husband, Stillman. The Kelleys have sold their house in Massachusetts and are getting out of that state. When she sent her postal to me she wasn't sure just where they would settle.

Chock (Charlotte Alford MacVicar) is another who had to miss reunion, Her son, Donald, Jr., 21, graduated from Amherst College on June 10 and her daughter, Gail, 13, from the 8th grade on June 21. Don, Jr., was given a fellowship at Yale graduate school and wanted to go on there to work on his Master's degree but instead he reported June 20 with the Marines at Quantico. It's too bad Don, Jr., can't go on with his schooling. He hit upon an answer to a problem which has "long puzzled professional paleontologists: how to separate certain delicate, prehistoric fossils from the limestone in which they are embedded"-to quote direct from Time magazine of April 30, 1951. Their home, which they built 20 years ago has a small brook on one side and a larger one in back from which they actually catch trout. Last summer they took over the family summer home on Lake Champlain, bought a speed boat and had more fishing.

After 8 years of semi-country living outside Providence, Lois Peterson Wilson and her husband have moved to metropolitan New York. They had an apartment in New York City for 6 months, had a wonderful time but were very glad to find a house in Chatham. On a flying trip to Philadelphia she saw Helen Adams Thomson and her husband, Ross—also had a telephone chat with Betty Moure Rusk, Maybe Lois will have more news of them next time.

She was able to make reunion, as well as Margaret White Knobloch and Dot McKee Abney. Margaret writes that in February Helen Finch Halford and her husband, Cecil, visited her but not for long as they had to get back to England where their daughter, Helen Elida, was being presented at court in March. In April Margaret and her husband returned from a visit to Rock Island, Illinois. She says her nice big family keeps her busy as does V.N.A.—Garden Club—Red Cross and the church leagues.

Helen Dunleavy Mitchell took time out this spring for an annual visit to Phoenix, Arizona, with her husband. The weather was perfect and they had a delightful time. The Denver aluminae group had a most enjoyable visit from Ruth Howland and Charlotte Hull. At a luncheon in their honor at "The Top of the Park Lane Hotel" they were simply peppered with questions about Sweet Briar and a grand time was had by all.

Dot Bailey Hughes, Kitty Blonnt Andersen and Wanda Jenseh Harris attended reunion—how I wish I could have joined them! Kitty and Fred vacationed in Arizona this winter

Helen Finch Halford, '26, writes that she did not return for Reunion as she cannot claim to be a "bifocal alumna!"

Ď1

while Wanda and her family spent spring vacation in Wilmington, Delaware, followed by a weekend in Pittsburgh where they attended Don and Ruth Taylor Franklin's silver wedding anniversary. Dot's oldest boy, Kenny, is in advanced R.O.T.C. (air branch) and is assured of finishing college. After his stint in the Army he wants to study law. Bailey is also in the R.O.T.C.

Big news from Ellen Newell Bryan-her 17 year old Newell has been accepted at Sweet Briar for next year. After spending a day there last December with Edna Lee Gilchrist, she could talk of nowhere else and who can blame her. She is graduating from Washington Seminary in Atlanta this spring. When Ellen and Newell visited Edna they were returning from the White House Conference on Youth-Newell representing the Junior Red Cross and Ellen the Girl Scouts, Anne Maybank Cain is also very active in Girl Scout work in Columbia, S. C. Ellen had to miss reunion as her husband, Wright, had his 25th at Clemson, S. C. To quote Ellen "all Bryans Burlesque will be there." spent the rest of June at Sea Island.

Rebecca Ashcraft Warren has been in Atlanta, attending her son's, Claude McGinnis, graduation from Georgia Tech. Her daughter, Mary Lee McGinnis, is a freshman at Vanderbilt.

Three years ago Virginia Kirkland McCray moved from Dallas, Texas, to Glendale. Ohio, a suburb of Cincinnati. She keeps busy with church work, ping-pong, cards and badminton. Her two sons attend Princeton. Mary Kerr Burton from Lynchburg visited her in November and once more Sweet Briar was the main topic of conversation.

And now for myself-before my arm goes completely dead on me. I really have writer's cramp by now but it's been fun none-theless. After a year and a half of wondering where we would be we are finally moving to Cincinnati, Ohio. I haven't done much this while back except the usual church work and drives. I've been too confused walking around trunks and packing boxes, expecting to move somewhere each month. Lowell, Jr., 21, in, spite of his bad eyes, has been accepted by the Army but hopes he can finish his college before going into service. Fritz, 16, is wondering if he can finish high school before he's snapped up. In the meantime he's gotten a job in a men's clothing store, working after school and on Saturdays and buying all the clothes his wages will stand. So goes Youth, but how glorious it is-even in these hectic times. I was house hunting during reunion time, but thinking of you all and wishing I could have been among those present.

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: Daphne Bunting (Mrs. L. K. Blair) 42 Kenwood Avenue, Worcester 5, Massachusetts.

After so much bragging about ourselves, next year at this time after our 25th, we will probably be pretty obnoxious except to ourselves. Don't get cold feet! We've all aged the same number of years and you will be considered a traitor if you spend the next ten months in various salons regaining your youthful face and figure. All we want is what you already have, plenty of ZEST. If you don't want to admit that you graduated from college 25 years ago we will allow yon to, and forgive you for telling your friends that you were the Youngest Graduate.

The Hydes (Camilla Alsop) enjoyed a spring vacation at the Homestead and the Greenbrier before coming to New York to see Camilla, Jr., off on the Queen Elizabeth for a summer in Europe.

Laura Boynton Rawlings wants me to tell you that if, in your travels this summer, you are anywhere near Flint, Michigan, please call her. Since all three of their children will be away at school next year the Rawlings expect to be home most of the summer.

"Tabo" Brown Hood wrote from Pawleys Island where she was enjoying a vacation. She said she had seen Jane Gilmer Guthery recently and that they both became terribly enthused about The 25th. Sonny is still in college; they hope he can stay in Air R.O.T.C. and can finish at Carolina. Betsy, age ten, will go to camp and Mary Anne, 15, will be home for the summer

Daphne Bunting Blair and her sister, Dot, who lives in Toronto visited each other in the spring. The Blairs will spend the summer on their Island at Black Donald Mines, Ontario.

Louise Collins Schroeder's oldest boy graduated from High School in June and hopes to go to Nichols Junior College in the fall. Lou has been working for Coddingtons, Wholesale Rose and Gardenia growers, for some time.

After lo these many years, it was a treat to hear from Dorothy Conaghan Bennet who lives on Lake Erie near the Mentor Yacht Club where they are members and boat owners—hence sailing is their hobby. Her husband, Bill, is in the pre-fab, building business, Scott Homes, Inc. They have two children, Nancy, 18, who graduated from Mentor High this June, Valedictorian. She will go to the University of Michigan next fall. Their other child is a son, William John, III, who is 12.

Esther Dickinson Robbins and her family are spending the month of July at Twin Lakes in the Poconos. Robbie, their eldest is now a First Class Scout and will go to Scout Camp for a couple of weeks. Did you know that he has the distinction of having been born on Christmas Day?

We always look forward to hearing from Virginia Franke Davis at this time of year. They sold their Skaneateles Summer Theatre last fall and so have new fields to conquer. Walter will direct for the Sheridan Hotel chain, arena theatres in the Boston Copley-Plaza and Montreal Mount Royal hotels. Virginia will manage an attractive young group in their first producing venture, a summer season at the Nutmeg Playhouse, Brookfield Center, Connecticut.

Elizabeth Forsyth's life is full of adventure. Her most recent one taking her niece to New York, Washington, etc. "Greeno" (Margaret Green Runyon) is "Greeno" (Margaret Green Runyon) is doing a wonderful Real Estate business in Summit, N. J. Her eldest boy, John, graduated from High School this Jung and Bob has moved up into the bracket of being a senior.

The Arnolds (Claire Hanner) are braver than most. For Julie's 10th birthday they took seven little girls and Hall, now 2½, to the beach on a Houseparty. It was a terrific success particularly since there were no casualties. The Arnolds were going to Atlanta in June for a wedding. Claire was looking forward to seeing "Tootie" then. In March, at Vero Beach, Claire met a cousin of Jo Snowden Durham. What a small world it is!

We welcome Hilda Harpster in the news. It has been a long time since we have heard from her. She writes from Greensboro where she teaches at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. Mrs. Pannell was in Greensboro to speak at the Phi Beta Kappa initiation at the Woman's College. The Sweet Briar alumnae had a luncheon for her and I quote: "I was charmed with her and imagine the others felt the same. She is so sincerely interested in the welfare of Sweet Briar that I wish I had a few thousand dollars to drop into her lap."

Gwin Harris Tucker and her husband are taking a trip West this summer going through Colorado and Wyoming, enjoying various spots on their way to their destination, Los Angeles. Gwin asked if any of you lived thereabouts, so for those of you who do, Gwin is Mrs. Beverley Tucker, 1324 South Madison Street, San Angelo, Texas. Too bad she is not coming tast where it is more densely populated with the class of '27.

Your secretary almost had a glimpse of Sally Jamison in the spring when she came to New York to the Furniture Mart. She was all dated up but I was so pleased when she telephoned that I couldn't bear to hang up. Poor Sally must have a terrific bill.

On June 6 Mrs, Pannell spoke at the commencement exercises of The Girls Preparatory School in Chattanooga. The Streets (Ruth Lowrance) were pleased to have her as their house guest.

Have you heard the Big News concerning the Street family? Frances finished her junior year at S. B., came home, announced her engagement, and will be married August 22. Between June 20 and July 20, the Streets will be at Ponte Vedra, Florida.

"Tinka" Johnson Brehme wrote from Berkeley, California, that she had a S. B. meeting at her house in April: "not many, but fun.' Both Brehme children are at camp on Orcas Island.

"Tootie" Maybank Williams may come this way on a visit soon, We can hardly wait!

"Libbo" Matheus Wallace, besides being our very able chairman for our 25th is also an excellent on the spot reporter for '27.

"May Day was wonderful-indoors. The decorations were so perfect, it was good to use them twice-afternoon and for the ball. The Modern Dance instructor is wonderful, too. Dolly was Mary, Mary Ouite Contrary, and Peggy Hobbs (Maggie Leigh) was Jack in a Jack and Jill team, She turned cartwheels in falling down hill. Saw lots of folks-among them Edna Lee Gilchrist, Cornelia Wailes Wailes, and husbands, "Tab" Hazelu oo-l Whitaker's sister, Bebe Gilchrist Barnes, and Helen Mac." Libbo tells us the sad news of the death of Frances Burnett Mellen, '25g, Her daughter will be the Junior Class president next year, Dolly Wallace is one of her roommates.

Among the proud parents at the Taft Commencement this June were the Kellys (Mary Vizard) and the Finks (Elsie Morley) whose sons, Douglas and Peter respectively, were graduates.

Gretchen Orr Swift was on her way to visit Julie in Cincinnati when she wrote. Her other twin sister, Adele, and her family will move back to Boston soon. Did you know, before this, that Gretchen is a grandmother?

"Billy" Quisciberry Marks and her youngest son went to Texas in June to visit Billy's two brothers, Billy's other son is at camp in New Hampshire. The camp in Colorado, that the Marks and the Cranes were so devoted to, has been sold.

Plenty of news from Dreisbachs ("Jerry" Reynolds). But first a short review for you. Georgia, the eldest daughter went to Sweet Briar for two years and is now at the University of Indiana. She flew down to Sweet Briar for May Day to see her old friends and Jerry, her sister, who will be a sophomore next fall. Both girls are counselors at Dan and Helen Mac's camp. Jerry, Sr., and Bob spent their 25th wedding anniversary in Virginia.

The Durhams (Jo Snowden) had distinguished house guests recently—Eugenia Goodall Ivey and her husband. They had many destinations, among them, going to the Commencement exercises of their daughter, Eleanor, at Pine Manor and visiting Anne Newell Whatley at Presque Isle, Maine.

We send our sincere and deep sympathy to Connie Van Ness whose father passed away on May 14, after a short illness.

Peggy Williams Bayne reports that she, Gin Stephenson and Kitty Wilson Garnett have really decided to go to The 25th, As for Peggy's offspring, Margaret, 14, she is at Camp Alleghany and Charles, 11, will be home for the summer.

Virginia Wilson Robbins and her sister, Georgia, had a wonderful three weeks spree in Virginia. Starting from Scarsdale and Montclair they went to Cape Charles where they were joined by their mother and a friend. From Cape Charles they went over to Williamsburg for Garden Week, The weather was perfect and the gardens magnificent. It is the time to go to Williamsburg. They ran into Anne Shepberd Lewis whose husband has a fascinating antique shop.

This winds up the news for '27 until next October—when you positively most subscribe to the News for '51-'52 and thus get a blow-by-blow account of the preparations for our Twenty-fifth Reunion, If you have any ideas or helpful hints please send them to Mrs, H. A. W'allace, 327 Professional Building, Charleston, W'est Virginia.

Class Secretary and Fund Agent (for the last time): Katherine Lladbeater (Mrs. Howard Bloomer, Jr.) Shore Acres, Lorton, Virginia.

Well, girls, this news was gathered the hard way. A friend and I drove to Mexico this winter and before I left I went through our class cards and copied the addresses of members living along my route and no matter what time of day I passed through that town I insisted upon stopping and calling them up. By the time the trip was finished seven weeks later I had almost turned a good friend into an enemy. If she were driving she would do her best to avoid the cities in the vain hope that I wouldn't be able to call. And in some places I got no answer to my calls and in others I reaped a lot of interesting news.

Harriet Dunlap Towill of Augusta was definitely on the surprised side to hear my voice but like all Sweet Briar girls loves to hear from her classmates. She reported that she had had a Christmas card from Betty Prescott Balch and told me about her two daughters, Virginia and Becky, Virginia has been a freshman at Hollins this year and Becky, age 12, is still at home under Harriet's guiding eye.

Next locky break was finding Page Venable Parker at home and having a wonderful long chat with her, That was my first time in San Antonio and while it is a lovely city it showed itself off to its worst possible disadvantage to me. I was iced in there for three days. The second day when we tried to get out the Highway Patrol stopped us and asked if it were absolutely necessary for us to move and when we said no they told us every hospital in the vicinity was filled with accidents as a result of the ice-covered roads and please to get off them, But Page's warmth made things much better. She has two boys and two girls, in that order. Maxwell is 19, graduated from Episcopal High school last year and is at Rice Institute now. Scott is 15 and is concluding his second year at Episcopal High School. Page is 13 and is in school in San Antonio and Candes is 11, the youngest member of the family. Page tells me she occasionally sees Anne Beth Price Clark, who is in and out of San Antonio.

While in Mexico City I was conducted to the gardens of Xochimileo by a charming young man, Seaborn Brown, I am sure most of you remember his mother. She was Mary Louise Flournoy Brown and was in the class of 1931.

Of course while I was in Mexico City I saw Barbara Leuis Palmer, who looks just the same as she did in 1925 and again when I saw her at our twentieth reunion in 1948, I just don't see how these people manage not to change at all, I also met her very charming husband who has a delightful sense of humor. They made us feel like visiting firemen by offering to constitute themselves personal guides to any place in Mexico, Now that is quite an offer and one we did not feel we could impose to the extent of accepting. But their hospitality certainly made the warmth of our Mexican visit much more pleasant. And that was a warmth of the heart because even Mexico was suffering under unusual win-

My family are bored to death listening to me tell of my trip and when I see that glassy look come when I start, I quickly stop. With you I can't see the glassy look and I do want you to read to the finish of this, my last effort as Class Secretary, so that will suffice for Mexico.

Katherine Owens Price of Beaumont, Texas, didn't answer her phone, so I have nothing to report there.

In Houston I called the number listed under Sarah Dance Krook's name and the person who answered told me they had no idea who she was. Another blank.

A successful call to Virginia Hipple Baugher of Houston disclosed that she has two children; a son, John, III, who is 22 and a daughter, Virginia, who was married at midterm to Parke Smith and both of them are back at the University of Texas to complete their work

A call to Bonnie Mathews Wisdom in New Orleans found her out and I left a message that I had called. I hoped to call her back but there was so much to see and do in a short time that I never did get around to it again.

And now I am concluding with news of myself so that no one can say, "You worried us but never used yourself to fill space." My two boys, Howard, III, coming 14 this summer is at St. Stephens School, is a cotton blonde, and stamp collection is his hobby. Peter is 11 and a brunette, and is in the local school. Brad, my imposed upon husband, who looked after the boys while I trotted to Mexico this winter is editor and publisher of an Arlington newspaper; and my hobby is daffodils. I have entered three shows this spring and have been the very lucky winner of a number of "blues," Now won't one of you volunteer for this job? We need a class secretary and it is fun to hear from the various members

As this letter was about to be mailed to the Alumnae Office I received a letter from Hudson Huffard, the husband of Frances Coyner Huffard, telling me of a tragic automobile accident on April 7 in Alabama in which she was injured and resulted in her death in a Chattanooga hospital two weeks later. I know this will be distressing news to you all as it was to me.

1929

Class Secretary: ELLA PARR PHILLIPS (Mrs. Samuel J. Slate) 1435 Lexington Avenue, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA HODGSON (Mrs. R. C. Sutliff) 4733 24th Road, North, Arlington, Virginia.

I was very sad this June not to be able to get to Sweet Briar for our class reunion, but I do hope many of you attended.

After contending with virus infections and then the mumps (8 year old Sallie had them, not me) I found myself last week frantically facing a deadline with little news for you. I called all the 29ers I could reach: Jean Buchanan Bingham reported that she and her family were well but that she had not seen or heard from any of our classmates; Katie Coe was not in town; Sara McHenry Crouse had the Manhattan alumnae group for its last meeting but had to confess there were not many of our vintage attending; Kathryn Close works late but I finally got her and we had a pleasant chat. She told me she was associate editor of and a writer for Survey Magazine which she enjoys very much. On trips home to see her mother in Pittsburgh she said that she frequently saw Mary Copeland Sturgeon who is a busy housewife with three daughters.

I had dinner with a cousin from Wilmington recently who reported having seen Lib Lankford Miles and husband, John, at a recent cocktail party—both looking chipper. To my great surprise one of the other guests at the dinner (a girl I had known for some time) spoke up to say she also had gone to Sweet Briar—Isabel Lamb Wylie, class of 1930. She went to S. B. for two years then on to Cornell where she was graduated. Her husband, Max, is the author of a recent best seller titled "Go Home and Tell Your Mother." A small world, what?

A nice letter from Elizabeth Lewis Reed in Richmond about donations for books for the Sweet Briar Library as a testimonial to Dr. Raymond, This fund was announced at Reunion.

A telephone call several weeks ago from Mary Shelton Clark was a delightful surprise especially as she asked me to come down to see her off on a jaunt to Europe! She sailed on the Ille de France with her husband to be gone about two or three months. She and George planned to get a car and tour the continent. Envious—who, me?

A communique from Sally Callison Jamison (bless her! for she has been really swell about sending news items) said that Jo Tatman Mason took her daughter Joan to look over Sweet Briar and other points in Virginia on her spring vacation; Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins, with her husband, John, spent a few weeks at Pt. Clear, Alabama, golfing and sunning; Sally also said that Ruth Ferguson Smythe and Polly McDiarmid Serodino went to Chicago for an educational weekend with their children on their spring vacation and that she planned to join them but changed her plans to go to Charleston to see her sister, Jane Callison Smith. Her brother, Bill, has moved to Rye so I am looking forward to seeing Sally when she comes east to see him.

I am distressed to report that Polly McDiarmid Serodino's brother, Hugh, died this winter. Our most sincere sympathies.

One of the most pleasant things that has happened to me in a long time was having lunch recently with Julia Wilson. Our class and all Sweet Briarites can point with pride to her as a most successful business woman who has made a name for herself in a field usually thought of as exclusively masculine. Julia is a financial writer and editorial consultant. As such, her clients, investment companies in New York and Boston, get her to put life into their quarterly and annual reports in the hope that the shareholders will not only read them but will understand what they've read. She writes managements' letters to their stockholders as well as releases to the financial press. She also writes histories of big companies such as "A Story of Progress" for the Massachusetts Trust and her latest for Sylvania Electric Products, Inc. Julia works at home with her secretary—and such a home! A tastefully decorated and completely air conditioned apartment in New York's newest and swankiest—Manhattan House. She is going to Europe this summer for several months and as I left she was phoning an order for birthday presents to be sent to her nieces and nephews at the proper time even though Aunt Julie would be many miles away!

As this is my last effort in your behalf I know you will be as pleased as I am to have Mary Archer Bean Eppes take over for our class. Do give her a big sendoff by telling her all your news. Her address is: 2323 East Street, R.F.D. No. 1, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. I have enjoyed being your secretary these past two years and would like to thank very, very much all of you who have contributed. I am looking forward now to reading "Beanie's" letters!

By the time you read this a lot of you willhave news about each other that I can't share, for graduation will have come and gone and some of you will have been back to the Briar Patch, a treat I was not able to participate in this year. Maybe I can make it by '55, as some others have promised. Mary Lynn Carlson King, of whom I have seen a bit this year and whom I have enjoyed greatly, tells me that she and a lot of her chums from '31 went back for their "coming-of-age" reunion, and they sound like they had such a good time, I wish I could have gone along. Mary Lynn's son goes to Woodberry Forest and her second boy enters next year, so I feel that living here at Woodberry Forest is really paying wonderful dividends. She came to see us this Spring and paid a visit to our new house which is slowly taking shape near the school grounds. We have a beautiful woodsy spot which Mary Lynn combed for wildflowers, on which she impressed me as being a minor authority.

I treated myself to a trip to Richmond in April to hear the recital given by Miss Iren Marik for the Sweet Briar Alumnae. It was a beautiful performance in a beautiful setting. Mrs, Foster Witt (Isabel Luke) opened her home for it, and Ida Moore Taylor and I went together. Norvell Royer Orgain was officiating, and the list of all those I saw is practically inclusive of all Richmond Briarites. It was grand to see them all, everybody looking fresh and chic. Norvell has changed so little that I don't really believe she graduated with us these 21 years ago. Ida took me to her new house which is a little gem, and next day we had a grand catching-up lunch together. I enjoyed every bit of it so much that you will have to forgive me for going on so.

A real haul was accomplished for this letter, I feel, by the small post card bait I put out for Virginia Dey Chard whom I have not seen since her daughter, Virginia, Jr., was a few weeks old. Virginia and her husband, Colonel Chard, are in Japan, and she wrote me this about herself and her family:

"Bob left in March for Japan and 'Punky' (Virginia, Jr., age 20), Anne (age 12) and I waited until June when school was over.

"We had a perfectly wonderfol trip and especially for Anne it was equal to six months with a geography book. We left Petersburg by train for Seattle, then to San Francisco, sailing from there to Hawaii. We spent twenty-four hours in Honolulo and then went on to Pearl Harbor for another twenty-foor. The seen.ry was just beautiful, the weather perfect and so many interesting things to s.e. We arrived in Yokohama in July and are now living in Tokyo.

"We are very happy here. Bob is on duty at General Headquarters for the Far East Command and we really live in style. I have a beautiful home, all western style, four servants, a gardener and a chaoffeur. After the States without any permanent help, I hardly know what to do. Three of them speak English and now that I have learned to be lazy, we get along fine . . . Unless the "Reds" chase me oot sooner, we will be here until August of '51."

Telia Barksdale Bailey wrote me, at my insistence, this bit about herself: "I live a rather routine life, keep busy doing all my own housework, a doctor's (her husband's) bookkeeping and trying to rear one child in the proper manner. He is 8 years old and quite a boy."

I got a welcome little note from Carolyn Martindale Blouin who has gone with her husband to live in Maine. She has been there two years, but revealed little else except her promise to write more later,

I was shocked and grieved, as I am sure you all were, to hear of the death of Pearl Carroll after a long and terrible illness. I was especially cheered in Richmond to learn from Martha von Briesen that Miss Weaver is mending rapidly after her terrible automobile accident in Richmond last summer. Julia Sadler de Coligny who was with her and also gravely injured looked her old self at the Marik recital. Her recovery is remarkable.

By the time the deadline for the fall letter arrives, I will have pestered the rest of you 1930's to death for news, so stop being pestered and send me some voluntary offerings. I will love you for them.

Class Secretary: Elizabith S. Clark, 227 Boston Avenue, Lynchburg, Virginia, Fund Agent: Natalif Roberts (Mrs. Walter S. Foster) 2417 Lynchburg Avenue, N.W., Roanoke, Virginia,

Having greeted you each one personally a few weeks ago I am happy to report that out of thirty cards sent in those letters, I have had replies to ten which looks like a pretty good batting average. I also inherited some cards from Martha von Briesen and have seen a few folks here and there, so we are rich with items for this issue.

Last June, Virginia Cooke Rea came back to Sweet Briar for commencement, She had a very fine time and went home much refreshed and completely rejuvenated. On April 22, 1951, her eleven year old daughter, Ann became the proud possessor of a little sister, Jane. This is the most impressive statistic we have to offer for our twentieth reunion.

Since my erstwhile roommate, Virginia Quintard Bond saw fit to send cards to both Martha and me I have more news of her than I have had in ten years. In April Quinnie and her two sons, ages nine and eleven, visited her mother in Stamford and did New York in the best tourist fashion. Quinnie says she enjoyed it immensely-particularly Winner Take All, a TV show, on which she won a washing machine, She has been busy as usual with the Junior League Bargain Box, Dedham Woman's Exchange, Cub Scouts, PTA and all the other et ceteras demanded by two boys. The Bonds have taken a house at Fortune's Rock, Maine, for the month of July, and are looking forward to a grand time. The trip to S. B. for reunion faded like an old soldier with all that vacation in the offing, Also, father bear had a twenty-fifth reunion only seventy-five miles from home which of course has priority over a mere twentieth, six hundred miles away. Earlier in the spring, Mrs, Quintard was traveling through Virginia on her way home from Florida and stopped to see Natalie Roberts Foster in Roanoke. Natalie says she was looking fine and said she never gets tired. Maybe she could let us have her prescription. She was traveling with Alice Barrows Francisco's mother-in-law, I was so sorry to hear that Al and Steve had lost one of their children.

Speaking of Natalie, I spent a weekend with her at Nestle Brook in April. She and Walter have done wonders with the old house. It looks just right and the same old hospitality is there just like when we were in school. Nat came to commencement for part of the time, but she had a young sister graduating from William and Mary so wanted to go to Williamsburg before all was said and done

My other roommate, Jean Cole Anderson, put in an appearance on the morning of June 1. She visited me for that weekend and for a few days following. We commuted to the festivities. Jean has a daughter nearly sixteen and a son about twelve. I hadn't seen her for ten years and we had a lot of catching up to do.

Martha McBroom Shipman made it for reunion, and Sally Perry Darfield said she had aspirations in the direction of Sweet Briar but didn't get there. Last winter during the ice storm Sally drove or slid to Monongahela to visit Marion Murphy Munz. Marion has a darling five year old son, and Sally's is nine. She is a den mother which seems to be an occupational hazard of parenthood.

Marjorie Webb Maryanov and Evelyn Mullen joined os for reunion. It was nice to see them again. Evelyn is working in the University of Virginia Library which is very near by, but she does not get to Sweet Briar more often than some of you who live miles away. Marjorie has been having her house done over this spring. It sounds wonderful to me. I have been contemplating the idea myself and haven't yet made up my mind to wade into the attendant upheaval.

Mary Lynn Carlson King, Meta Moore Mc-Cotter and Cynthia Vanghn Price also came for commencement. Cynthia was very much looking forward to seeing Dottie Boyle Charles. She is one of the classmates listed as missing. I was glad to know she is in the land of the living and enjoyed seeing her, too. Cynthia has a darling little house in Greensboro and is very busy with house-keeping and church and club work.

Violet Andersen Groll says her daughter, Penny, is now in her first year high school at Packer Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn. She is on the honor roll, is president of her class and captain of the hockey team. Hope she comes to Sweet Briar. Sounds exactly like what the old school needs. Violet saw Gil Hilton Pritchard in Chicago last summer. She gave the visiting Grolls a wonderful tour of Chicago and suburbs. Gil looked very young and streamlined and Violet was surprised that Gil recognized her after all these years.

The class of '31 had to do without Westcott this commencement. I hope by now she has recuperated from her winter's trip to the British West Indies.

It was wonderful last June to have been in on the nineteenth reunion which was impromptu but loads of fun. It is too bad that the same crowd couldn't be back this year. I am fortunate to have been able to enjoy both. There are some advantages to being a local yokel. Jo Gibbs DuBois was unable to be back. Her seven year old Larry has been in bed with rheumatic fever since last September, but is getting along well, Hope he is continuing to improve and will not have any lasting effects. Jo said on her eard which was written in March that Polly Swift Calhoun had been very ill but was getting better, In early May, Polly wrote that she was involved in raising money for the library and getting the books catalogued, raising money for the Church and replanting Elm trees around the village that had been destroyed by the Dutch Elm disease, making dresses, planting a huge garden, running a private taxi for the Calhouns and loving every minute of it. (She did not mention having been sick. Guess she had not had time to think about it.)

Jane Bikle Lane heard Mrs. Lill speak at the Sweet Briar luncheon at Christmas and was inspired to go to the Friends Select School as Alumnae Representative. She says she did not snare any prospect but she did enjoy extolling her alma mater. She was planning (in March) to take a trip to Mobile and Biloxi in May.

Harriet Wilson McCaslin was another of the gals who was at Sweet Briar last June. It was awfully nice to see her again. She and her husband left on March 30 for a six weeks tour of South America. He was to give some lectures to other opthalmologists in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Sounds like a marvelous trip.

Helen Sim Mellen says that one of these days she is going to write a real letter (I'm walting) but at the moment she is entangled with the house, garden, and young Johnny. He has to be hauled here and there to Cubs. choir, dentist, swimming, etc. Hellie wants to know how you gals with large families manage. So do I.

Virginia Tabb Moore has a seventeen year old son graduating from St. Christopher's School in Richmond. He is entering The University (Virginia) in the fall and says he is going to take pre-med. She also has a fifteen year old daughter who keeps things humming. When I saw Virginia last June she did not look like the mother of anything near seventeen.

I was very glad to hear from Leland Barbee Hill after all these million years. Her husband is a professor at Dartmouth. I was quite surprised to learn that they had been living in Bethesda. Maryland, this winter while he was on leave to do a job for the State Department. Leland and the girls are going back to Hanover for the summer. Martha, age 11, has been in Washington with the family and Leland, age 15, has been at Northfield School for Girls.

Naomi Doty Stead wrote a nice long letter from Tucson. She says she would like very much to have gotten to Sweet Briar but couldn't make it. Her mother and father have been visiting her for seven weeks, so she will have to be satisfied not to come east this year. She is crazy about Tucson and loves living there. She gave me Rena Tyroler Fisher's address. She is on the list of the missing. It is good to find her again. She is living in Hebron, Ohio.

I hear tell through an old beau of hers that Helen Lawrence Vander Horst has moved to Chattanooga to live. The ministry travels almost as fast and far as the Army.

Nancy Worthington is busy getting ready to go back to Camp Alleghany. She spent the winter getting things lined up for the new season. She has been very busy and I have seen very little of her. We haven't had as many bridge games as usual the past winter.

Ella Williams Fauber and her family seem to be getting along fine. She is another local gal whom I see all too seldom. She has three very active boys who take about all her time and more. Her husband, who is an architect, has just received a commission to restore a very fine historic house in Ann Arundel County, Maryland. He is very much excited about it and will do a good job. He has done a lot of this sort of work having been with the reconstruction in Williamsburg for a while.

As for me, I have been up to my usual antics. Right now I am preparing to go to Short Hills, N. J., for a wedding and then to New York for a week. Then, when I get back my half day job at the Red Cross will become full time. The Home Service Director has resigned and I am stepping into the job vacated by the one who will take her place. It will cut down on my freedom, but will be better on the exchequer. While we are on the subject of prizes (ten paragraphs back) I have just won six gallons of paint in a contest put on by a local dealer. Now that I have the button I'll have to get the shirt. So it looks as though I'll be forced into redecorating. The six gallons will be a starter and it is fun to win something now and then.

One day not long ago about twenty-five Lynchburg alumnae went to Sweet Briar for lunch in the garden. Mrs, Pannell had lunch with us and showed us all over Sweet Briar House from the towers to the basement where her sons keep their electric train. Then we held election of officers and made plans for our activities next Fall. It was lots of fun and very inspiring. We turned over all sorts of new leaves. Martha von Briesen, Helen Mc-Mahon, and Gert Prior also joined us for lunch. Gert is Red Cross worker for Amherst County, so she and I have many conversations on the phone about our "problem children."

If everybody is as good about answering my future calls for help as they have been this time, I think I am going to enjoy my job tremendously. After I sent out my first batch of cards I watched the mails avidly to see what would be coming back. It is terribly exciting to hear from folks I haven't seen for so long. In the next issue I'll tell you more about who was at commencement, how they looked and what we did and said.

1932

Class Secretary: MARJORIE WARD (Mrs. George H. Cross, Jr.) 2204 West 11th Street, Wilmington 160, Delaware.

Fund Agent: MILDRED GIBBONS, 918 First National Bank Building, Tampa 2, Florida.

News is very sparse this time since only four people answered my cards. Please don't feel as Alice Weymonth McCord does that writing these replies sounds egotistical. We need the news desperately and can't possibly have a column for 1932 unless you tell me what you are doing.

Alice says that they still love their new home in Allendale, N. J., and are very civic minded. Her husband became a councilman in January and Alice is a Girl Scout Leader and works in the church guild, P.T.A., Hospital Auxiliary, Garden Club, etc. The McCords spent a long weekend in Washington in February.

Sue Burnett Davis writes that her son, Tread, is graduating from seventh grade this June and is as busy as any debutante. Sue is president of her Garden Club and has been working very hard on their Flower Show. Jane Hays Dowler is also on the go with her three children and running the Lodge in the summer. Jane hopes we can have lots of us back for our Twentieth Reunion next year.

A wonderful post card came from Theda Sherman Newlin in Tyrone, Pennsylvania. I am going to quote it in full: "Still leading a perfectly ordinary, but nevertheless exciting life, made so mostly by my family. My husband I married, thinking he was a lawyer, and discovered very fast he was that plus almost anything else I could imagine. We went to live in a 1780 farmhouse and he has been repairing and remodeling it (carpenter, plumber, electrician, stone mason, bricklayer) soon acquired a farm and then another (farmer, and that made me a farmer, too; along came the war and he became a sailorradar officer on an aircraft carrier-and I ran the farm and me a city gal). And now he is housebuilding for recreation. Add architect to the list of trades and professions. At various times along the way we added five children to the score. Susannah is 15 nowa sophomore in high school with all that involves-a blonde, almost as tall as her ma and still going. John is 13, dark-haired, a freshman, currently crazy about basketball. Ned, 11, is the one who gets the phone calls and treats the girls with scorn. Mary Melinda is eight with brown curls and a twinkle; and Katy, seven, has bangs, and those two keep life from being dull as none of the rest do. We moved from the old farmhouse into town a few years ago and live in a big house with a big yard where I look at the gardening possibilities, but raise nothing much but my and the neighbors' kids. I seem to be too busy for more than a few garden vegetableseither occupied indoors, or in outside activities brought on one way or another by the family-Girl Scout Council and regional Girl Scout Camp Board, grade school PTA, High School Parent-Teacher Forum, Community Recreation Association, Junior League, Church, and hospital work. A typical day has me going to a meeting to plan costumes for Brownies for the Girl Scout operetta, cheering a basketball game, getting one child to ballet class, one to Youth Center Council. two to Boy Scout meeting, three to choir practice, one to class play practice and five through their homework with maybe a few hours out for clinic duty. Sounds like I had 14 instead of only five-and I suspect this all makes me sound like something hopeless, but it's fun."

I only wish I had more like that grand card. Wardy and I finally stopped coughing enough for Ward to have his tonsils out and then have mumps. In the meantime I had an operation and came home from the hospital recently and am thoroughly bored with this business of convalescence.

Doesn't someone else want to take over this job for next year? It's fun and not too strenuous. Class Secretary: Doris Crane (Mrs. Samuel C. Loveland, Jr.) 331 Chester Avenue Moorestown, New Jersey.

Fund Agent: Geraldine Mallory, 169 East Clinton Avenue, Tenafly, New Jersey.

Anne Marvin, knowing how badly a class secretary feels when she has typed dozens of double post cards that fails to return, sent me a letter before the deadline. Also, an early card came from the Alumnae Office to let me know that Jean Van Horne Baber is to be your next year's secretary. I hope she can devise some new system and get more response. This is definitely a plea to all class members to let us know what you are doing.

Anne Marvin and her mother have sold their home (which they built in 1931, and which many of their Sweet Briar friends will remember with pleasure). The Marvins are building a smaller one-story house nearer town. It will be on Dairy Road in Charlottesville. They still want their friends to look them up as there will always be a spare b.d and a warm welcome. Anne and her mother will be in their present home until September 1, and then in a tent or something until their new house is built. Anne's address will remain the same. I'm sure we all wish them much happiness in their new home.

Margaret and Mary Imbrie motored down to Sweet Briar for Reunion. Jean will probably be able to get some late news from them about our classmates and alma mater.

Our inimitable Mary Kate Patton Bromfield returned her eard pronto. I would like yon to read the whole paragraph in Mary Kate's own words: "Life with us is very busy and full-as it seems to be for everyone these days. We moved into our new house in Loudonville, just outside of Albany last fall, spent the usual busy winter with Innior League work, P. T. A., etc., plus all the things there are to do at home, and keeping up with my daughters' school and extra-curricular activities. Betsy is thirteen and Susan almost eleven; Bill, four and a half, starts kindergarten in the fall, Our League had a Follies in April, in which this old gal kicked her heels, and was also Publ'city Chairman. In early March, Bing and I drave to Pinchurst for a week of golf, stopping at the Inn for a night on the way down. We had a very nice visit with the Barkers the next morning, in fact we practically couldn't tear ourselves away. The campus was lovely to us, coming from practically the height of winter up here, and I was amazed at all the new building going on."

Betty Workman Wright started to answer me on the card I sent but ended by continuing on note paper and I wish I could type it all off for you. Today, however, is one of my fuflest and I shall report that Betty has two children: a boy, nine, and a girl, four. Betty's mother lives with her and helps a lot with the children, so Betty was just about to start working at the Public Library when her letter arrived, Jack will go to camp this summer and Betty Lou could not plan beyond her approaching birthday when she planned to use the new wading pool her daddy had sent. Betty also relates that Helen Laurence Vander Horst has moved to Chattanooga. Helen's liusband is the new minister at St, Paul's Episcopal Church, Betty attended the Sweet Briar tea in December and enjoyed hearing the youngsters now in school talk about it, She adds, "My! How things have changed."

I would like to go on about self but have to shop for boat and sitters here at home. Sam, the two older boys, and I are going down on a sloop we keep at Georgetown, Maryland. It's not big enough for the four children and their parents to live on in peace so we divide forces. Now that I know what a Class Secretary has to do to get some news I'm afraid I will be as faithful as Anne Marvin and you will have to hear news of the Lovelands from now until I can no longer hold a pen. Happy vacation to you all, my sincere thanks to all those who answered, and my best wishes to Jeane Van Horne Baber, your new Class Secretary.

Fund Agent: MARTHA LOU LEMMON (Mrs. W. Frederick Stohlman) 11 Edgehill Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

You will all be as terribly sorry as I was to hear that in the spring Miles and Lucille Bond Pendleton lost their five year old son, Frank. I am sure you all join me in deepest sympathy to the Pendletons. I am sorry that I cannot give you any details.

About June 1 Marjorie Lasar Hurd moved to a new home in St. Louis, If you follow the reading suggestions given in this column, you trotted over to your public library last October, procured the August issue of American Home, and read all about the grand outdoor fireplace and terrace the Hurds built (title: "$100.00 and an Idea"). The new home must be very nice to make it worthwhile to leave all that fine handiwork behind! Marj says that her children will go to camp and she will spend the summer settling the new abode. "We have an active S. B. Club here at last—meet quite regularly and raised some money selling candles. See Jane Forder Stribling and "Cabby" Mitchell Ravenscroft frequently."

Helen Hanson Bamford and family are fine after a seige for Billy—chicken pox followed by scarlet fever. No one else caught either so Helen considers herself very lucky.

Bonnie Wood Stookey: "After a hideous winter of virus infections for the two boys, we are having a fine spring. Our small garden is flourishing. We have just bought a house in Cotuit on Cape Cod. It is an all year-round house, but we will use it only for our vacations. It is right on the water and we are all thrilled to have it. Now to furnish it comfortably but so it won't be too much work. Hope to have lots of plastics, no curtains and no rugs, David, Jeffrey, Don, and I were thrilled to see Talat Rasul (the Indian student) off on the Queen Mary in April. Banks McPherson Harper was in N.Y.C. recently and came out for a brief visit. She is now a decorator in addition to being mother of three daughters. The Westchester S. B. Club met here May 23, P. T. A. treasurer's job and usual round of chores occupy me."

Marie LePine spent November through April in Florida and says it was cold. She spent May scurrying about getting ready for the "Gipson Gang" (Madeleine's children), whom she expects to have by 2's, 3's, 4's, and 5's all summer. She says that when last heard from Mary Evelyn Wood Littrell was in bed, Lib Gray was in Mexico, and Marie Lange Gaskell was doing Social Service work.

Ruth M3crs Pleasants attended the June Council Meting at S. B. and enjoyed seeing former classmates. She and Cliff had a week in New York in April. They saw Chuck and Lib Schener Maxwell several times and talked to Cecil Birdscy Fuessle on the phone. Cecil now lives in Annandale on Hudson. The Pleasants will go to the beach for a week before Eddie, 10, leaves for the summer at Camp Youahuaka at Linville, N. C. Emily, 7, will be at home with swimming lessons and pienicking.

Eleanor Cooke Esterly is very busy taking children to Brownies, music lessons, dancing, choir practice, and the like. She has moved to a bigger house and is happy to be able to spread out a bit. "I see Betty Carter Clark frequently as she lives close by. Our S. B. Club of Southern California has had a most successful second year. There are quite a lot of us out here and it is nice to get together."

Betty Howe Dunker puts the last seven years in a nutshell-during the war she worked part time at a hospital while her daughter had school hours. Her husband was in service in the Navy. "In July, 1947, I returned to Children's Hospital School of Nursing and completed my training which I had started in '33 and which I had interrupted after 11/2 years in order to be married, Now I am a Registered Nurse of Massachusetts and am doing private duty nursing around Falmouth on Cape Cod, Since graduating in August, 1949, I have very much enjoyed the opportunity of being mother once again to Charlotte." Betty says her parents took care of Charlotte during the two years she had to live at the hospital as a student nurse. They are now living with her parents, and she says it is very nice to be "at home."

Mary Pringle has been unusually busy this year. The school where she teaches is just four years old and she has been with it from the beginning in charge of the Nursery School. She has two assistants to help handle the thirty-six 3 and 4 year olds. She says that this is too large to be ideal but that she loves it nevertheless. The other thing consuming her time is studying. She is in her second year at the University of Pittsburgh working for her Master's Degree in Education. She has another six hours ahead of her, Mary has avoided any summer courses because she likes vacations. This year she and Amy Davies are planning to drive to the West Coast. The rest of Mary's time is taken with being secretary of the Nursery School Teachers' Group, on the Pulnit Committee of her church, Chairman of the Sweet Briar Rummage Sale, playing a bit of bridge and doing some gardening. Mary extends a warm invitation to all of you to drop in to see her when you visit Pittsburgh.

Eleanor Alcott Bromley claims that the winter spurted by in a fine white cloud of snow and all of a sudden it was summer. When she wrote she was whipped down from what we call "curb-breaking" her three and a half year old son-teaching him to stay on the front sidewalk so that he may play in the front yard as well as the back without adult supervision. Eleanor has accepted the Presidency of her P.T.A. for next year, but she is now taking a slightly dim view of the matter for no one told her how much time it would take to get people to be on the Board and to get things going. "I never heard so many different ways of saying 'no'." Otherwise everything is fine in their household. They are planning on three we ks at Lake o'Bays in Canada in the middle of the summer and will take Chips as well as Ann along with them this time.

Mary Hutchinson Gordon visited her family near here for a week this spring. She and her four children spent a day with us. We had a marvelous time but all too short. Mary will probably be back here for a while in August. For the first time all four children will be away at camp simultaneously. So she feels she should take a trip although the thought of staying home and listening to the silence is tempting. Mary and Elliott had a grand month in Florida in the early spring. Molly, 10, is going to camp Waukella at Conway, N. H.; the boys, 14, 12, and 7, go to Camp Wanaweta on Cape Cod.

Dot Hussey Rockaway and family went to Culver to Jack's 25th reunion early in June and had a marvelous time, July 5 they will be off to Catawba Island near Port Clinton, Ohio, for two weeks of swimming and fun—that is Dot and the two boys; Jack will spend that time at National Guard Camp at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin. Dot says that between the Guard and the Scout activities, Jack is tied up constantly. However, Dot doesn't find time dragging on her hands, for she has a cat, a dog, a garden, and a large group of Cub Scouts. Her Den just took a most ambitious trip—went by train from Cincinnati to Middletown and went through a steel mill.

We expect a visit from Dot and the boys during their sojourn in Northern Ohio. Two weeks at Lake o'Bays with the Bromleys is being keenly anticipated by all-the children have planned so many things that we may have to stay a month to accomplish them all. At this point Sally thinks that boys get to do everything-her brothers will spend a week in June with their Scout Troop at Mackinac Island, where they will be afforded many fine privileges. As soon as they return they will be singing in a Choir at Belle Isle-part of Detroit's elaborate 250th Birthday Celebration. Dave was a color bearer representing his Scout Troop in the Army Day Parade, However, she had the pleasure (?) of being one of the first swimmers of the season to brave Lake St. Clair on Memorial Day, We hope to get Nancy Russell Carter and family over here for a visit this summer. Any of the rest of you coming this way? Be sure to come to see us. Hope to hear from the rest of you very 500n.

From Jane Bryant Hurlbert comes news of a new offspring, Susan Elizabeth, born March 29th, a second girl and fourth child. Jane writes that Stuart is 12, Cynthia 10, and Richard is $6\frac{1}{2}$, so that they already have quite a crew of potential baby sitters for their new member.

Judy HalliBurton Burnett writes that she and her family have had their annual spring holiday at their cottage at Wrightsville Beach, and that she sets Louise Wood Koonce there often. She hopes that any Briarites who visit the beach this summer will call her. Judy also writes of a new enterprise—she and two friends have recently opened a shop—a maternity and children's shop, in the shopping center that her husband owns. She says that they are all novices, but that they have had lots of fun, and have been doing quite well.

Roberta Cope Gerlach is very busy getting settled in a brand new house in Needham—a yellow Cape Cod house with black blinds. She is also busily planting a brand new garden.

A note from Sallie Flint von Kann says that she has nothing very new to report. They have been in Washington, D. C., for three years, in an apartment, (writes Sallie with an exclamation mark), and her husband has a new assignment which seems to mean two years more. Sallie has been very busy this past winter being president of a P. T. A. group, working with the League of Women Voters, Cub Scouts, and an Army Association that welcomes new comers. The von Kanns have two children, "Curt, a rugged $8\frac{1}{2}$ and Lisa, a rugged $3\frac{1}{2}$."

I saw Cynthia Harbison Heye and Betty Myers Harding in New York in January when we had luncheon together. Had a wonderful visit, and it seemed like old times. None of us could quite believe that it is over fifteen years since we graduated. What really makes me feel my age is the recent Mother and Daughter baseball game that I participated in at Mary Lou's school, The condition of my muscles the next day made me realize how the years have sped!

Ruth and I feel that we are really in luck to have heard from so many of you through the questionnaires that you returned to Lillian. We can't possibly print all of them in this or any one issue so we are going to spread them out,

The most interesting and newest news we have is about Elizabeth Chapman Lacey. She and her husband, Harry, have restored an old Manor house in Hopedale, Massachusetts. They have named it "Harel Honse" using parts of their two names. At this lovely place they run a mail order business of decorative accessories which is advertised in several national magazines. They operate their own factory where they make their own requirements, Besides spending approximately 15 hours a day at this business they give lectures for charity on Interior Decoration, Antiques, Art, etc. Their one little girl aged $4\frac{1}{2}$ is also named Harel.

Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist and her husband were here in April to visit Lib Morton Forsyth. Lib is the new president of the Lynchburg Junior League and in that capacity went to the National meeting in Houston in May. The meeting was at the Shamrock Hotel and Elizabeth Diggs Orr, Lib's cousin was also there, Liz Tomlin Jewell came to Lynchburg to visit her two sisters in April and expects to come back to go to the beach with them in July. Liz has three boys, Dickie, 6, Jay, 5, and Jimmy, 4.

quick trip to New York in April to see Peyton's sister and brother-in-law sail for France.

Fran Baker Owen and a Charlottesville friend have gone into the Interior Decorating business in Fran's home near Baltimore.

Nancy Parsons Jones stopped in New York on her way to Atlanta in November and saw Aline Stump Fisher. She says that "Stumpy's" house is spotless and very attractive and she has become very domestic in spite of keeping on with her job. Nancy also tells of Virginia Rutty Austice living in Rochester and having two children, Beverly, 9, and Terry, 4.

We were very sorry to hear that Polly Rich lost her father in January. Our deepest sympathy goes to her, Polly saw Marq Powell Doty and her four children in their new house just after Christmas. A two weeks' crui e in the West Indies in March was part of Polly's vacation which she says was a wonderful trip. She plans to spend the other two weeks on the Cape with her family. Polly had a little sister graduating from Wellesley this year, so didn't get down for reunion.

Marylina Stokes Fulton and her husband, Jim, and two children have moved back to her home at Kewanee, Illinois. Her husband has been alerted for active duty and by the time you read this he may have gone.

That's all for now, but Ruth and I promise to go over all your wonderful answers this summer . . . probably while the Thomassons are at Sweet Briar again, and send you lots of news in October.

My answers from you gals were wonderful this time—and from all parts of the country, so I'll jost dive in.

Moselle Worsley Fletcher says her life is very routine: a little League work, a little golf, and a lot of nursing. To amplify the last, she describes for us her family—"Emily (blonde, big, heautiful and 7 years old); Lamar (brunette, petite, not so beautiful but cute as pie, age 2), into everything and keeps us all jumping; husband, Qoigg (brown hair, big, handsome—in case he reads this in print) is busy practicing the art of surgery; and Moselle is just as you remember her except for a few extra pounds and gray hairs."

Fritz Cordes Hoffman reports year-old news, her daughter, frances f-loise, born July, 1950, and making a family of two girls and a boy. She said she had had a brief stop-over visit from Dot Benzinger Reed last spring, Fritz says that they (I presume she and frank, without benefit of children) did have a brief week in Bermuda in March that was wonderful, but that otherwise her activities are like the rest of ours.

Jane Kent Titus, from Binghamton, which I never get used to, says she had a brief return to her Richmond recently. She had talked to To Sutton McCandlish in Fairfax (two youngsters), and Anne Walker Newton who lives on a farm nearby (three youngsters). Jane reports that Ida Todman Pierce has moved to Williamsburg, where her husband has a job at Fort Fustis. Jane had also seen Julia Gray Saunders Michaux who was on her way to Florida with her husband for a medical meeting; and says she sees Marie Gaffney Barry from Scranton often. Jane, too, had just gotten home from 10 lovely days in Bermoda -seems to be the "thing to do." She has two boys, 5 and 7, and "at long last a daughter-3 months!" I knew if I hit one of those Virginia gals I'd hear news of all!

Pollyanna Shotuell Holloway says she doesn't see the gang at all. She and I keep in touch with each other vaguely through my sister, who also lives in Baton Rouge. Shotwell has one youngster promised to Sweet Briar and one to Sewanee so far. I had a card from Betty Hopper Turner, whom I hadn't heard from in ages. She has four children: John, 5½, Alec, 3, Stephen, 2, and Martha, 4 months, and a doctor husband. She seems to stay busy at home, but says someday there will be time for outside activities.

Marge Thaden Davis says that besides taking care of her two girls, she is Treasurer of the local (New Castle) League of Women Voters, with plenty of work involved. She was hoping to make the May Westchester meeting of the Sweet Briar Club. A note from Janet Macfarlan Bergmann sounds as if she were plenty busy with the presidency of the New Jersey Swe.t Briar Club. She said that Adele Letcher Harvey had just had a siege of measles which included herself. When on a brief visit to Salem, Massachusetts, Janet also heard first-hand of Sue Gibson Davenport, who had had her fourth child two days before. Steve is rector of the Episcopal church there, and they live in an old Salem house, Besides Sweet Briar Club, Janet is also into Girl Scouts, P. T. A. and church work. Busy girls, we have!

Dolly Nicholson Tate says that her main news is her serving on the Alumnae Council "which is a thrill and privilege!" They meet three times a year, and Dolly says it is an organization which "seems mighty nebulous 'til you've seen it in action. I wish you could tell all our readers how important it is and how anxious we are to serve them well and help the college, too." She says her family is fine and the farm in South Carolina keeps them hopping back and forth, That's all for now; and have a wonderful summer, all of you.

The response to our penny post card barrage has been most gratifying, but we lost money on some of you gals who didn't return the cards full of news of you and yours. Cynthia and I are determined to make good our promise—namely, to get news of every member of our class some time during our stint as secretaries. So, please cooperate!

Cynthia, Karl and her three youngsters dropped by to see Jim and me recently on their way back to Connecticut from a visit to Richmond, and she brought me more news of the Richmond group than I had managed to snare on my more frequent visits there. Cynthia saw Clara Call Frazier and Bill, who are now the dance experts of Richmond having embarked on a long Arthur Murray dance course. She also visited Mary Petty Johnston Bedell and Wood in their lovely new home where Cynthia was fascinated by two built-in 15-gallon fish tanks complete with indirect lighting and two generations of guppies, Lida Kepner Short also has a new home in Richmond, with a separate room for television. "Phoopy" Burroughs Livingston was in Richmond, too, with her children-just in time for the publication of sister Isabelle's book, "Maria and the Captain," Cynthia also journeyed to Charlottesville to see Mary (Frath) Gregg Elliott, who also boasts a new home, with literally acres of closets—a gracious home, ideal for Virginia climate, and surrounded by a most distinguished collection of azaleas of every hoe and color imaginable. "Frath" has three children—Jeff, 12, Gregg, 41/2, and Richard, almost 2. We are happy to report the arrival of Melinda Wallace Williams, fourth child and third daughter of Carrington and Emory Gill Williams, who was born on May 3, 1951.

Cynthia's husband, Karl, is in politics! He won the election as district representative on the Stamford City Council and, as Cynthia puts it, is the lone Republican in a d.n of Democrats.

Estelle Sinclaire Farrar sailed in May on the Liberte for two months in Europe with her mother and father, Fred flew over in June to join them and they will return in July on the Nieuw Amsterdam. Isn't that a perfect vacation?

Jackie Sexton Daley wrote from Belmont, California, that church activities take most of her time, being the wife of the rector, but she finds time for the A.A.U.W. which has an active branch in their county. She is also busy with Mike, 8; Chris, 6; and Browyn, their little one year old daughter. Jackie sees Mike and Coralie Kahn Ferro occasionally, the last time being at the Zoo. At the same time they also ran into Anna Shinn Leonard and her brood.

A most welcome and interesting letter came from Margaret Woodward Thomas, who now lives in Huntsville, Alabama, where her husband practices law. After Margaret left Sweet Briar, she took a secretarial course in Detroit, and upon graduation from the secretarial school was employed by the General Motors Corporation, finally becoming personal secretary for the General Manager of the Chevrolet Motor Division. In 1944 she married John Thomas, who had been stationed in Detroit at one time with the Army, and now she keeps her shorthand speed by doubling as secretary in her husband's law office.

Beth Thomas Mason sent word (a little belatedly) of her fourth child, third daughter, Mary Claiborne Mason, who was born last November in Seattle. Her family keeps her busy, but she is advisor to the Senior Girl Scout Cabinet of Seattle-King County, and works with the Young Adults at the Y.W. C.A. Drue Mathews, assistant to Dean Dutton our last year at Sweet Briar, is a staff member of the Young Adult Department there. Beth was looking forward to a visit to Bluefield during the month of June.

"Boots" Vanderbilt Brown is still confused as to whether she belongs to the Class of '40 or to '39. We claim her anyway. "Boots" has just been elected President of Pine Cobble School P.T.A. in Williamstown, Massachusetts, where her son, Jonathan, is in second grade and daughter, Julie, will enter the kindergarten in the Fall. "Boots" issued an urgent invitation to any Sweet Briar "gals" traveling through New England this summer to stop by and enjoy a view of the Berkshire Hills from their porch.

Kay Hodge tossed a bouquet in the direction of the ALUMNAE NEWS by saving how much she enjoyed reading about our classmates in the NEWS since most of her friends are too busy with their own responsibilities to write and give her first-hand information. (Editor's note: Write to us, and settle your correspondence worries!) Kay gave me news of C. P. Neel Mahoney who will soon be moving into her new Colonial Williamsburg home, designed by her husband. C. P. has two sons, ages 61/2 and 1. Kay, herself, had just returned from a seven-week holiday in Jamaica with an English girl she had met in Europe in 1949. Kay also went to Nassau where she ran into Dottie Campbell O'Connor and her husband. Small world! On her way back to Kentucky she visited Mariana Bush King in Avon Park, Florida, and Jane Bush Long in Augusta and Anne McCarthy Cheek in Gainesville, Georgia, Margaret Dowell Cochran was in Washington for several weeks in May visiting her family, and one day she, Betty Lee Kopper, Flo Merrill Pilkinton, and I got together for lunch. Conversation was thick and fast about who was doing what and who had seen whom. Betty's husband, Sam Kopper, is Deputy Director of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs in the State Department in Washington, and they have three children—Betty, 8; Sam, Jr., 5; and Dick, 4. Between State Department functions and her three active children Betty says her days are full up to the brim. Margaret gave me news of Jane Baker Grant who is in London with her Navy husband, Helen Taylor visited Clara MacRae Causey in Alexandria during May. Much to my disappointment I didn't get to see Helen, but Clara assures me that she will be back from time to time since her family plans to settle in Alexandria. They returned from China recently, and Helen, I understand, is going to do some special work at Bellevue Hospital in New York for a while.

A card from Nida Tomlin Watts who was vacationing in Fort Landerdale, Florida, where she said she ran into (literally) "Edge" Cardamone O'Donnell, M. K. Warren Griggs (Mrs. John W., II) responded nobly to our card appeal with the news that she was recently in Washington and had she only known I was there, too, she would have given me a call. Please do, anybody who comes through. I'd love to see you. M. K. is married to a lawyer who practices in Hackensack, N. J., and is also a Deputy Attorney General of the State of New Jersey. M. K. has one son aged 2½ and two step-children, a daughter 15½ and a boy 14.

The biggest news Mona Spurlock Fite had to report was that her husband was promoted to full colonel in January and in February was made Base Commander of Carswell A.F.B, "All I am doing," she writes, "is basking in reflected glory as honorary president of the Officers' Wives Club." She says they have nice quarters on the base well filled with three girls, a collie and a boxer pup, but she wishes they would be stationed somewhere close to Virginia so that she could see everyone again. I don't know how many people she would see. From a glance at the class list she'd find our class scattered all over the country.

Ruth Mealand is now working for the Shaker Heights Board of Education and also attending graduate school for work with preschool aged children. Prior to this she worked for United Air Lines and later the Cleveland Institute of Art where she was registrar. A newcomer to Wilmington, Delaware, is Marjorie Stock Clemens, who hopes that now she is closer to Virginia she will be able to return to Sweet Briar some time soon. Marjorie has two children, Joe Stan, 7½, and Mary Lee, 2½.

Sarah Mayo Sohn sent news not only of herself but of some other members of our class-a most welcome card. Sarah's husband has been working for the United Nations for the past year, but will return in the Fall to Harvard where he will again teach at the Law School, "perhaps," says Sarah, "for the rest of our lives." His book, "Cases on World Law," was published last March. Sarah's other news: Janetta Smith is working 'at our embassy in Paris; Ruth Collins Henry is still in London, expecting to be moved; and Ethel James Milburn flew to the States in January from Hong Kong for the birth of her daughter, Susan Dennis Milburn, on February 13, and hopes to go back to China to join her husband in June. That card was written some time ago, so I don't know what the situation is now about returning to China.

After chasing Jane Furniss Simpson around the world for months, I find out that she is living down in Smithfield, Virginia, home of my favorite food. Jane and her husband returned last December after 2½ years in Japan, Delk is a Lt. Colonel in the Air Force and is attending Armed Forces Staff School in Norfolk. They have one son, Delk, Jr., age 714.

Our class is making news! Not only do we have Anne Burr in television, but Irene Vongebr Vincent writes that she is working on a book which is scheduled to be published in the fall. In the summer of 1948 she made a trip to the "Thousand Buddha Caves" at the extreme west of China, near the Turkestan border. These caves are rock-cut chapels, some 460 of them, beautifully frescoed and were begun in the fifth century A.D. She took a lot of pictures of the frescoes and sculptures; the former are most important for the study of Chinese art, and these are being published with an explanatory text and account of her trip. What with the involved research and writing connected with this, plus looking after her three daughters and a garden which grows California-sized weeds, she finds that days, weeks, and even months fly by without her knowing quite what has happened. Irene's work sounds fascinating and I know we all wish her much luck.

Clara invited me to see Anne on television one Sunday night this spring, and we were most impressed with her performance, and thought she looked quite chipper. Anne followed it up with a card saying that she had recovered from an illness which had put her in the hospital and out of 'Detective Story' on Broadway. After eight or nine months' convalescence, two of which she spent in the Virgin Islands, and the rest with her family in Old Lyme, Connecticut, she has returned to New York and radio and television. She moaned that she never sees anyone from SBC and wishes that she would. She is in the phone book, she says, so give her a call.

Hortense Powell Cooper also extends an invitation to come to Shelbyville, Tennessee, "the heart of the horse country," she writes, although I am sure our Virginia and Kentucky friends will have something to say about that! Hortense is carrying on her interest in the U. N., where she worked for four years, by participating in an International Forum group in Nashville. But she has been traveling, too, to California last fall and to Florida during the winter.

Kathleen Ward Allen has been spending this year in the mid-west where her husband has been doing graduate work at the University of Illinois. He has just received an assistant professorship at Syracure University so they will go there in July. She amazed me by writing that she has been taking a course in men's tailoring and decided to make her husband a suit! "The slacks are beautiful, and the sports jacket is taking shape now!" Isn't that terrific?

The predominant news this time seems to be about people buying or building new houses. Anne Thomas Smith has just bought and "done over" a house in Charleston, S. C., right on the water, which they hope will be cool during the summer. She has two little girls, names and ages not given. Another new daughter is that of Clara Sasseer Chandler, Barbara Bell Chandler, who arrived with the Easter Bunny.

Although we had heard rumors of Muriel Barrow's marriage, she finally confirmed it. She is now married to James F. Neall and living in South Hamilton, Massachusetts. In clo e proximity are "Phoopy", "Ivy" (who have a new daughter, Beverly), and Sue Gibson Davenport.

More new houses—I loyd and Connie Cleary Foster are in the throes of building a new home out in Ponca City, Oklahoma. According to Connie's description it sounds interesting, having a lot of glass and a circular fireplace.

Another baby to report is Jonathan Runkle W'ells who arrived on March 5, 1951. "Columbus" writes that he has quite reddish hair and an excellent pair of lungs. Robin, who is four, was very excited about his new brother and spent the first night the baby was home getting up to feed him each time—"a big help," says "Columbus."

My faithful correspondent from Chattanooga, Mildred Moon Montague, sent me a beautiful newspaper picture of Betty Mead Smartt Johnson and her three handsome children. Smeadie is still as beautiful and youthful as ever. Mildred and Bill flew up to New York in the spring and saw "Mickie" Mitchell Gillis and Tell and Fred Farrar. Mildred wrote that her Sweet Brian boxwood froze and died during the February cold, so she wrote to Mag Schmidt, who put her in touch with the Sunnyside Boxwood Farms at Amherst which sent her a beautiful one for a dollar which is now flourishing. All of this just in case your boxwood has given up the ghost. Mildred and her family are planning to spend two weeks at St. Simon's, Georgia, this summer,

We have a few missing alumnae in case any of you know their addresses: Polly Wyckoff Gustafson, Kathleen Asbury Aycock, Audree Bochm Katzenberg, Joan Boye Waddill, and Elizabeth Calicard Gaede. If you know their whereabouts, notify the Alumnae Office.

The Washington Sweet Briar Club put on a rousing benefit in the spring. They bought out one performance of Strange Bedfellows (what a title) by the Alexandria Little Theatre, and cleared almost $300.00. The play was excellent and everyone had a wonderful time. Diana Greene Helfrich is president of the Little Theatre, which is how we got into this project. Incidentally, Washington is hoping to have a local scholarship for SBC starting next year.

Cynthia does the next episode—so send news to her by August 15, Cheerio!

there when we arrived, and our prayers were not in vain. A wonderful representation from Birmingham—in the persons of Franny Baldwin Whitaker, Queen "Tish" (Laetitia Serbels Frothingham), and Ruth Hemphill DuBuys, and taxi service was furnished at the end of the line by Peg Tomlin Graves. Others present were: Betsy Tower Bennett, Anne Dewey Guerin, Lillian Breedlove White, Helen Littleton Hauslein, Martha Jean Brooks Miller, Maxine Robison, Wilma Cavett Bird and Barbara Holman Whiteomb.

We could hardly wait to don our campus oxfords and start giggling, "Shurl" and I left two new wee ones in charge of the fathers. "Shurl" had another son, Robert Hayes, on March 2, and I, another daughter, Diana DeVore, on March 28, so it was a real holiday for us!

Another new addition was Evie Cantey Marion's daughter, Margaret, born the end of March also,

Pat Sorenson Ackard was in Cincinnati for her brother's wedding in May. We had a grand gab-fest one afternoon. She made me feel very housebound by her reports of busy days doing good works in Denver. She and Eunie Foss Sneed see a great deal of each other, Eunie and her family have just moved into a new home and are busy getting settled.

Betty Doucett Neill sent along regrets of not being able to attend because of moving into a new house also.

Our class now has a new secretary—none other than Lillian Breedluse White. So do send your news to her, Her address: Mrs. J. Logan White, 1416 Olive Street, Coatesville, Pennsylvania.

Thanks to all of you for responding sn generously to my scribbled cards this time. Now that most of us are frantically preparing for summer jaunts and vacations, take heart from the card sent by Polly Peyton Turner's mother, who said Polly took the twins and drove alone across the continent last fall to sail for Hawaii to join Carol,

I sometimes think, looking at the all-butobliterated address lists I have, we must be the motingest class of alumnae from Sweet Briar! Frannie Boynton Drake writes with joy that they are returning to St. Paul and she is looking forward to seeing the Brown twins and Swede again. She says Sandy, seven, and Eleanor, five, are worried there may be no bubble gum in St. Paul.

Jane Taylor Lowell writes they expect to move from Silver Springs, Maryland, to El Paso, Texas, in November; I'm looking forward to getting to see her then, as we shop there. The Lowells have a new daughter, Susan Deborah, born February 3. Bobby is 6 and Joan is 4½.

Jeanne Buzhy Runkle has bought a house in Glen Burnie, Maryland. They have two children, Dayton, two, and Chuck, nine months.

Eric and Betty Hanger Jones are living in Philadelphia. They have been living with Eric's mother in Chestnut Hill, waiting for their house to be completed, more than six months behind schedule! They have a sailboat with a cruising auxiliary and expect to spend all the time they can afloat this summer.

Anne Hauslein Potterfield and Tom are moving to Charleston, West Virginia, in July, where Tom will practice. Sudie Clark Hanger and Bill went to Miami, Havana, and Nassau in May, leaving the four little Hangers at home with Mrs. Hanger for a very busy time!

Daphne Withington Adams says Willard hopes to have his E.D. in August from Teachers College, Columbia. They plan to stay on at Shanks Village another year, as he has accepted a teaching post at the college. She saw Dougie Woods Sprunt at the New York flower show. Daphne worked with Nelson Rockefeller's International Basic Economy Corporation until February.

Toppin Wheat Crowell obtained her nursing degree and was married all in the same week last fall. She passed her state exams with high honors, according to Barbara Ripley Furniss, and is now working part time in Charlottesville and keeps busy the rest of the time with music lessons, keeping house, and being a faculty wife for a handsome husband, who teaches at the University.

A fascinating long letter from Eleanor Ringer who leaves Sweet Briar this year to go to Cornell to start work on her Ph.D. in theatre and drama! Her family has now moved to New York and visiting there at Christmas she saw Lisa Rauschenbusch and Mr. Michael briefly, and reports that at Sweet Briar the biggest news is new faculty houses between Redtop and the Meadow.

Phyllis Sherman Barnes wrote that Eddie Syska Peltier's husband, Paul, was to return to active service May 15. I herewith apologize publicly to Phyllis for betraying her old nickname to her mother-in-law on my post card. Henceforth, Madame, I become formal. She is busy with their daughter, Betsy, and League for Service work.

A future May Queen was born to Lucy Call Dabney May 3 in Richmond, Emory Gill

Craig, Jr. and Chip Allen, sons of Christine Headley Allen, '42.

Williams had one the same day, and they had adjoining rooms at the hospital, according to Eugie Burnett Affel, who wrote while visiting in Richmond. Her son, Charlie, 3½, was to have his tonsils and adenoids removed while in Richmond. Eugie has another 16 months old. She says she and Herman have bought the house in Philadelphia which they have rented the last three years. Herman is a physicist, working with the research division of Philco.

Anne McVeigh Chamberlain went to Italy last year and visited Della Read, who is with the American consulate in Florence. Dr. Sanford was there, too, on a Fulbright. Anne is going to Massachusetts to their summer home for the summer, and said she hopes to see Nan Taylor Smith, who is building a home in New Canaan, Connecticut.

Maudie Headley Allen now lives in Birmingham. Their two sons are Craig, Jr., 4, and Chip, 1½. Tish Seibels Frothingham and Lillian Foulkes Taylor have moved into lovely new homes in Birmingham.

Just too late for the last issue, Cynthia Abbot Botsford wrote she'd seen Dougie and Worth Sprunt, up for a matinee of Guys and Dolls and a weekend at the Waldorf. Debbie Woods Davis and Bill had been vacationing in Bermuda. Cynthia has three children, Peter, 6, Kathy 3½, and the baby, Andrew. Steve is connected with the business side of the New Yorker. They have been redecorating their house all winter (four stories) but Cynthia did get down to Jacksonville, Florida, to visit Leslie Herrick Danford. She also stopped in Richmond and saw Poose and Sally Jackson Mead.

Barbara Bull Peake and her husband and son, Christopher, and daughter, Alison, were in New York for a month this spring between diplomatic posts. They are now in Oslo.

After a peaceful time in a big house in South Hadley, Massachusetts, Barbara Ripley Furniss and her husband planned to return in June to Yale for the last year of graduate work. Todd had been teaching English at Mount Holyoke and Barbara had an interesting job in the Reading Clinic. After rather absent-mindedly collecting French poodles (the real thing) you can imagine their horror to discover they are about No. 245 on the list for Quonset huts in New Haven!

Have a grand summer and write and tell all about it!

This months' News bits seem more than usually heterogeneous, so I think I won't tax my ingenuity to drum up those far-fetched links this time, but just take it as it comes.

At least I can group the new offsprings together, especially since they belong to roommates, namely Page Ruth Foster and Harriet Pullen Phillips, and my own roommate Fay Martin Chandler, Harriett's arrived first-March 6, in the person of Mary Virginia Phillips, who has pleased her parents immensely and absolutely fascinated her older sister, Eleanor. On the other hand, Page has two boys, the latest being Page Nelson Foster, tipping the scales at eight pounds, three ounces, on May 2. Meantime, Page and Jim decided against the carriage house I thought they were going to buy, and have settled in an apartment for the time being. Fay also produced on May 2 but did not go along with the others in having what she already had, but provided her two daughters with a brother, Alfred DuPont Chandler, III.

I had a nice letter from Betty Schmcisser Nelson, mostly about Baltimore, but, she was sorry to say, of little help to my plea for Sweet Briar news. However, she had recently taken a trip down the Skyline Drive ending up at Sweet Briar where she and Whitey stayed at the Inn. She was delighted to find the horse show in progress and amazed to hear so many Faculty members unhesitatingly calling her by name. Betty said she felt as if she hadn't been away for more than a brief weekend.

Another recent campus visitor was Elsie McCarthy Sampson when she went home to Amherst for a spring visit. She told me she saw Miss Weaver, who seems much better now after all her trouble resulting from an auto accident, Also Roselle Faulconer Scales wrote me of seeing Miss Weaver on her return visit to Amherst. Roselle and Joe have moved to Goochland, Virginia, where Joe is working for the soil conservation service. They have a hefty two year old daughter who keeps Roselle well occupied.

I suppose, and hope, you all read Lulu Salowsky Anderson's '44 report in the last issue, in which she outscooped me on our Elaine Brimberg, now Mrs. Kenneth Tynan as of January. Periodically I have tried to catch up with Ellie and now finally, thanks to Lulu, I find she "has been very busy for the past year appearing in plays and movies in France, and radio and TV in England" under the stage name of Elaine Dundy, For lots of information regarding her apparently illustrious and talented husband, I refer you to Lulu's last article, and for more, I quote from one in the May Harpers Bazaar: drama critic and boy wonder of the English theatre, he was one of the conspicuous figures ar Oxford. Cadaverous and lanky with pale long hair he was an undergraduate whirlwind of precocious naughtiness and real achievement. Since graduating to London he has produced scores of professional shows. . . . Tynan himself will be the Player king in Alec Guiness' Hamlet this summer. He was recently married to Elaine Dundy, a young American actress."

A card from Posy Hazard Potter tells of a three-week trip to visit her sister in Arizona—a pleasant excursion except for aches and pains suffered from falling off a horse the first day. Posy has her hands full with her traveling husband and her two year old, Al, "who is a devil," but hopes to soon see Marjory Shugart Dennehy, who is now in Annapolis with Rod, two kids and a dog.

I also heard from Elizabeth Shepherd Scott, whose latest is that they have bought a new and spacious house and hope they have moved for life. Shep had been to Washington for the christening of Ralph Coolidge Mulligan, II, the latest for "Diddy" Christian Mulligan and born last December. She also plans her annual summer vacation at Rehoboth Beach.

Our Texas trip was on a tight schedule and did not allow the social departures I had hoped for having once gotten into all those states I'd never seen before, and given a chance to pick up with all those Briarites I never expected to see again. However, a dinner time happened to fall conveniently at Lexington, so Worth and I bummed same off Logan and "Snookie" Campbell Shearer. It was a most delightful detour in proverbial Kentucky style, and also I finally met their lively red-headed daughter. And then I was lucky enough to hit Chattanooga at the cocktail hour which we happily spent with Alice Ldua ds Davenport, after practically burning out the new company car to ascend the beautiful but steep Lookout Mountain. Up there on the heights Hedy has a lovely home, an attractive husband, a swell brood, and believe it or not a terrific southern accent, all of which I enjoyed thoroughly. In the fabulous Houston, Ruth Longmire Wagner took me on a sight seeing tour of the city, ending with a pleasant chat over a coke in her new home.

And while I seem to be mostly on the subject of me, I'll add a bit more to take care of your many most polite requests to include something of my own news. Actually there isn't much to say or I probably would have already. I have been working at the local cerebral palsy clinic for the Junior League, am serving on the Board of the Visiting Norse Association and also am a member of committee on Health Education at the YWCA, plus doodling in some church guild activities. I have just finished a somewhat casual half semester at art school, and have gotten a good start on another delightful Utica summer of antique hunting, tennis, golf and canoeing, Tough, eh? (I keep an eye out for interesting, well payed jobs but fortunately there haven't been any in evidence so far.) Hope you all have an enjoyable summer, too.

Class Secretary: PATRICIA WHITAKER (Mrs. John S. Waters) Bellona and Clark Avenues, Lutherville, Maryland,

Fund Agent: ALICE LANCASTER (Mrs. Pier pont Buck) 5013-34th Road, North, Arlington, Virginia, Haven't Lulu's letters been grand. She really deserves all our thanks. Long ago at our fifth reunion I made a rash promise to Lulu that I'd be glad to take over the class letter when she had her fill. Well, my promise caught up with me and here I am. Alice Lancaster Buck sent a gold mine of news in response to a frantic plea. She and Pete welcomed Dorothea Dutcher Buck on December 27, making the score even-one girl and one boy. Alice reports that Helen Crump Cutler and Jack, plus son and daughter have returned from Japan and are living in Alexandria. Anne Woods Guzzardi, husband and son. Peter, are leaving soon for Indonesia for a two-year stay. Wood's husband is with the State Department, Alice had a nice visit with Lucile Christmas Brewster in December. Christmas was visiting her family. She and Bill were in the October, 1950, edition of the magazine, Living, Get a back copy and look them up. Paulette Long Taggart and Gunnar have returned from Texas and are back in Winchester, Massachusetts. Frances Hester Dornette's husband, Bill, is thinking of practicing in Lynchburg. They have a brand new son.

Beverly Holleman Richard has moved to Albuquerque, New Mexico. Reports from Pat Patton MacMannis state that she is recuperating from a strange virus infection and is taking handfuls of vitamin pills every day.

Jane Rice McPherson, husband, Tommy, and baby, Heath-r, are moving to Atlanta, Tommy will practice pediatrics there. Jane was in Atlanta apartment hunting and found one that sounds marveloos. It is just two blocks from Catherine Tift Porter's home. Jane sa'd that Tee's home is very lovely. She is looking forward to renewing friendships with our Georgia contingent, Ricey reported a very nice weekend in Philadelphia with Anne Moore Remington, Louise Konsberg Noll, and Evie Pretlon Ormiston, Ivie was visiting her family and came down to Philadelphia to meet the group. She is still living in Saskatchewan and is picking up a Canad an accent. Evie has two girls, Annie-a boy, and Weezie-a girl. Jane also tells me that Sloan Hawkins is bosy at her job of secretary of Admission at Newcombe College in New Orleans.

The Richmond news is that Betty Maury Valentine and husband are still building their new home and hope to move in soon. Ricey saw Carlisle Morrisett Branch through a window of her lovely home. She was fighting a bont of measles with her two boys. Grace Woodward is working at the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond.

Florence Loveland Swanbeck and Ray, plus two boys and a baby girl are finally returning from the Panama Canal Zone and are to be stationed in New London, Connecticut, Millie Littleford Camm writes with pride of her adopted son, Scott. Millie and her husband are living in Fort Thomas, Kentucky. Uncle Sam has put the finger on Bill and he reported for duty July 1. "Here we go again," says Millie. She sees Nancy Eagles O'Bannon in Louisville quite often. Nancy and her husband are building a house. Millie tells me that Betty Van Dusen Chavet is managing the Junior League gift shop in Omaha.

Barbara Duncombe Lang also came through with a newsy letter, full of typical "Duncombisms," Mr. and Mrs. Duncombe really hit the jackpot for grandparenthood during a 32 day period. On April 4, Marion Duncombe Hadley presented a boy, then on April 11, Dunc came through with a second daughter, Lindsey Bishop, and on May 6, Fritzie Duncombe Lynch produced a girl. Dunc says all mothers and babies are doing well and grandparents are slowly recovering from nervous prostration. She says she saw a ridiculous movie short on prospective fathers and one of the gentlemen of the cast was none other than West Woodbridge! Why, Helen Cantes Woodbridge, have you been hiding a matinee idol from us? The Langs have had a terrific year rejuvenating a house and rejuvenating themselves after all sorts of illnesses. Dune's husband seems to be able to do anything with plaster, paint, hammer and nails. She modestly tells me that they have done a sensational job in redecorating their home. She also reports rather glowingly on her two daughters. As for their illnesses, they are all "recovered and fat and sassy and disgustingly healthy now," Dune says that Sterling Nettles Murray and husband have moved to a small town in Ohio and have bought a house.

Catherine Tift Porter reports that Atlanta had a very cold winter. The shrubs and flowers were killed but not the germs that affected her family. Tee says her baby, Patty, is a lamb and that the first girl is beginning to act like a human being,

Alice Johnson Fessenden is home from Venezuela for a 2 month vacation. She has her three children with her—2 girls, and a boy born in December. Tee says that Betty Haverty Smith has bought a large home—5 bedrooms and 4½ baths. Doesn't that sound wonderful?

Tee and Jimmy had a nice trip to White Sulphur Springs in March. They are going to Daytona Beach, Florida, for the month of July. Tee's mother and father have bought a home there.

Ginny Griffith Morton had a bad experience with her younger child. Little Sally had pneomonia and was hospitalized for ten days, However she has recovered nicely.

We have just gone through a tonsilectomy, and if any one ever says it's a snap I shall quickly change her mind. Two weeks of torture is the way I look at it.. Our little Kathy is getting fatter and fatter and fatter!!

Thanks for your news . . , send me more as I can use every bit you send me. Have a wonderful summer soaking up vitamins to battle next winter.

It's June so let's begin with weddings. On March 9 Dorothy Sue Caldwell was married to Andrew MacInnis Crowell, Junior, in their garden under a big banyan tree. Dorothy Cortoran Hartzer and Joe drove down from Jacksonville for the wedding and Carroll Cone Cozart and Betsy Bowman were bridesmaids. On April 28 Betsy Bowman married Rodman Townsend with Carroll Cone Cozart as one of her attendants. Sounds like a big spring of weddings for Carroll. Betsy and her husband will live in New York.

Catherine Smart Grier and Louise Crau ford Mcorefield just missed each other in the Charlotte hospital with Louise's son, Charles Henry III, arriving on March 30 and Catherine's son, Joseph Williamson, III, arriving on April 8. The Moorefields have just bought a new house not far from the Griers so Catherine and Lou will be wheeling the babies together this summer. Eleanor Myers Cole and her family plan a trip to Charlotte this summer. Little Lulu Cole is growing by leaps and bounds and keeps El stepping. El writes that Harriet Inge Fillmore is living in Hawaii where her husband has something to do with sugar.

"Cholly" Jones Bendall will be moving to Danville soon where Bob will take over his father's pharmacy business. Bob graduated in June from the Pharmacy School of the Medical College of Virginia. "Cholly" says Edwina (Wheats) Young Call is now living in Richmond. Martha Titterington Reid lives in Albion, Michigan, and has just built a new house. She has two daughters, Christie and Lois.

It's number three for Charlotte Sprunt Murchison and it's a boy! Char's two daughters are thrilled to have a brother and Mary Frere has renamed all her dolls "Brother." Char saw Babs Hood Sprunt who stopped by on her way back from Palm Beach this winter. Babs writes that her husband is on a several months trip to Europe but that she will be on the New York dock to meet him early in July. Betty Anne Gaines Myer visited her cousin in Memphis this spring and saw Babs and Louis Wilbourn. B. A. reports that Anne Stuckle is temporarily living back in Asheville after working in New York for some time. Louise Wilbourn is in the real estate business and recently sold her first house. Mary Vinton is doing interior decorating in Memphis, Barbara Warner writes that she has been beavering over the Junior League Follies. Bobby worked on everything from publicity and program to acting in the show itself.

Jo Thomas Collins writes that they have just completed their fifth move in three years but believe that they are now settled in the house they bought in Jackson, Mississippi. Jo's second child, Josephine Elizabeth, arrived on January 23 just ten days before Lee Stevens Gravely's daughter, Susan. Jo has seen Martha Witherspoon Brannan several times this winter. The Brannans are in Birmingham where Carl is taking some advanced medical training but they expect to move to Jackson soon.

Polly Vendeventer sent news of the Norfolk contingent. Rosemary Ashby Dashiell's husband is back in the Navy. Rosie is living at Virginia Beach until Dave returns from the Mediterranean some time this summer. Jean Pollard Kline is living in Seattle where Bob is stationed. Noma (Candy) Greene is working for Reynolds Tobacco Company and drives a little yellow coupe with Camel Cigarettes on either side. Naturally most of Norfolk is now smoking Camels. Polly and her mother drove south this winter and visited Marjorie Christian Schley in Savannah and Helen Murchison Lane and Dorothy (Tody) Corcoran Hartzer in Jacksonville, P.V. says young Edward Lane has the real Murchison sparkle and that Jeff Hartzer is darling. She only saw his profile since he was taking a nap so she missed the navy blue eyes and smiles, P.V. is back in Norfolk living at the beach and working for an insurance firm.

I still like Princeton very much and often see "Brac" Preston, who also lives here and works at ETS. Recently all the Sweet Briarites in Princeton got together to see some marvelous colored slides of the SB campus. I sailed on the Queen Elizabeth on June 7 for a trip abroad. We are renting a car and driving around in England and Scotland. I also plan to visit the French family with whom I lived several years ago. Since the sailing date was so near 1 just couldn't make it to reunion. I hope that '46 was well represented and that you all had a wonderful time. Please do write me all about it.

Class Secretary: Cynthia Bemiss (Mrs. W. Alexander Stuart, Jr.) Rosedale, Virginia. Fun.l Agent: Maria Tucker, 2521 Fairmount Boulevard, Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Sally Bailey, we sincerely regret the discontinuance of your delightful letters and will remember, with thanks, the years you wrote for us.

Having just come back from Richmond, I'll begin there. Peggy Robertson Christian and Punky are home from the tobacco market for the summer. Peggy had recently heard from Linda McKoy Gould who lives in Locust Valley, L. I., and has a daughter named Catherine Cassard Gould.

Stu McGuire Gilliam was in Richmond for a few days with her five month old daughter, Mary Stuart. Mac teaches at VMI.

Ginna Walker Christian and her seven month old son are living in Richmond until Andy finishes USMC Basic School in Quantico.

Maria Gregory Tabb is the proud mother of a son, Cabell Mayo Tabb, Jr., born on February 27. She had just heard from Anne Marsball Whitley who was busy traveling from Vienna to Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and NW France. She hopes to be back in the states by midsummer.

Judith Burnett Halsey has a one and a half year old daughter who keeps Judy busy with her new-found talent for talking. The Halseys have moved into a new house with four bedrooms and asked me to say that all Briarites are very welcome. Judy also said that Anne Jackson Ragland has two daughters and is living in Boston where Stuart is an intern. Anne is coming to Richmond for the summer. Couldn't get in touch with Nan Hart Stone.

A wonderful letter came from Eleanor Bosworth. She said that next year she will be Assistant Dean of Women at Southwestern. She sees a good deal of Evie White Berry who "has two darling children—a son and a daughter. Jean Hazlehurst Cone is back in Memphis and has a baby girl, Charlotte. Inez Rosamond keeps me company in the teaching profession by being head of the Spanish Department at East High School. Betty Hochn Beacon is living in Memphis and fast catching on to being a good housekeeper . . . Marv McDuffie Redmond is still in Columbus where Lee is practicing law. Sara Bryan Glascock has had her second boy. Margaret Munnerlyn is still teaching in Jacksonville."

Joan McCoy has a government job in Birmingham and owns a heifer calf and an acre of cotton to boot.

Marguerite de Lustrac Labouret has a daughter, Celiane, born February 23.

Shirley Levis Johnson is living in Chicago and is kept very busy by young Anne who was a year old in June. She said that Ginger Barron Summer is living in New Orleans where her husband teaches at Tulane. Shirley also said that Jean Old, Margie Redfern and Martha Smith spent spring vacation in Havana and that they saw Connie Clevenger Berg in Florida. Connie has a nine month old daughter, Tina, and her husband, Chris, is in the winter vegetable business.

Isabel Zulick Rhoads was married in January and has just moved back to Orwigsburg because her husband, Wayne, is in the Navy on a destroyer. She said that Jane Warner Creekmote has a son, is a choir director and has a thirty minute radio program in Arkansas. Alice Reese Edens and Joe are living in Mexico and have two daughters, Alice and Elizabe.h D. Zu also said that Mary Anne Kennedy has just announced her engagement to Samuel T. Moore, Jr. The date of the wedding is undecided. Alice Gearhart married Bill Stinson in June and is living in Frederick, Maryland, where he is an engineer.

A letter from Stu McGuire Gilliam just arrived. She had just been to Staunton to see Maria Tucker who is temporarily taking over sister Lile's house and three children. Stu said Maria was as merry as ever. Kay Fitzgerald Booker is now living in Charlottesville where Lewis is a medical student. Their next move will be to Lakeside Hospital in Cleveland.

Sally Bailey told me of Margaret Ellen White's marriage to James Martin Van Buren on the third of March. Jim was recalled to active service in the Navy, reporting May 7. He is now stationed at the Naval Hospital at St. Albans, L. I., on the staff, and Margaret joined him there the latter part of June.

Another letter just received—from Irish Munter Derr. She writes, "Patsy was born on Saint Patrick's Day in 1948, and Robin (Phaon III) on October 3, 1949; my 1950 baby was a boxer puppy (sixteen times as much trouble as a baby, believe me!), and this is the 1950 model." William Christopher was born May 24. "Would love to settle down in one spot long enough to breathe—so far we've toured Pensacola, Norfolk, Puerto Rico, San Francisco, another brief jog in Norfolk, and now we're waiting for new orders. The Navy is a mite hectic these days!

. . Did you know that Ginger Barron Summer had a little girl in 1949, a redhead named Kathy? Lloyd is back in the Navy."

Zan and I are still cattle farmers and have a fine little year old son, William Alexander III (Sandy). And this, I think, takes care of any news I have gathered. Please, dear people, write me a letter.

Class Secretary: AUDREY LAHMAN (Mrs. Robert Rosselot) 2801 Quebec Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

As I sat down to write this letter, I suddenly remembered that it was Lantern Night at Sweet Briar. It certainly seems like a short three years since we were singing "Just one day more . . . "

By this time you've probably heard of Ann Samford Upchurch's twins. However, I was delighted when she sent me a picture of them at six months. (They were born June 26. 1950). Their names are Katherine and Virginia, but they are called Kathy and Ginger. Sammy and her husband are in the process of building a house in Birmingham, and hope to be settled there by fall.

Sammy reports having seen Betty Johnson Ragland in Raleigh. She has a little Betty, who will be a year old June 28. Betty and her husband are building a house in Chorlotte, Sammy was also in Jacksonville last fall and talked to "Beezie" DeVore Towers, They were also in the process of moving into their new house. (The emphasis in my class letters seems to be shifting from engagements, weddings, and babies, to engagements, weddings, babies, and houses).

Martha Davis writes that she is still in Atlanta and constantly on the go with Junior League work at the Speech School for the deaf and other odd jobs. At the time she wrote her letter, Mary Humphries Hood and her Marine husband, Jack, were living near Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Judy Blakey is now Mrs. Rockwell Brown, and lives in St. Louis.

Jane Taylor was married to Bill Ix on May 12 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Nan Steptoe was married June 16 to Stan McKinley in Charles Town, West Virginia. "Weezie" Lloyd is now working at the Department of State. She has an apartment in Georgetown, and plans to start working on an M. A. soon, "Kax" likewise is at the State Department and lives in Georgetown. By coincidence, she is in the same division as my husband, so we have an even more convenient means of communication than the telephone.

As for new babies, Ken and Lee Estill Caghill have a son, Kenneth, Jr., born April 8. Steve and Janie Leach Cromwell are the very proud parents of a baby girl, Phyllis Mackenzie, born May 7,

Don't forget to write. I'm so glad for every letter, not only for the column, but from a personal standpoint. Please look us up whenever you come to Washington. We'd love to see you all again.

We had a grand time reunioning with Bertie Pew, Pat Brown, Emilie Thornton, Sally Melcher Jarvis, Judy Easley Mak, Anne - Barrett Holmes Bryan, Rosie Holmes, and Margaret Long. It was so nice to meet Judy's and Ann-Barrett's husbands, and Margaret's fiance, Caroline and Coleman are now living in Richmond, coincidentally, in Ann Doar Jones' former apartment, just above Eugenia Ellis

Several '49ers are getting really settled. Anne Doar Jones and Fritzie Duncombe Lynch have bought lovely homes, and Cal and Louise Skinner Davis have broken ground for their home in Richmond. Class Secretary: LACY SKINNIR (Mrs. Robert N. Eckardt) Sunset Lane, Rye, New York. Fund Agent: DIANA DENT, Old Church Road, Greenwich, Connecticut.

"It's spring again, and birds on the wing again, start to sing again a new melody, 'No comprehensives-'." Nevertheless, the class of '50 has not been idle this spring. There are, as usual, some newcomers to the field of domesticity, some just on the verge of it, and others are exercising their talents in the business world-Oh, yes, and Fran Cone and Mary Rose Crisp enjny just being "at home"!

Received a hasty dispatch from Elsie Landram. Since she departed from Sweet Briar, she has found time to see Europe, graduate from the University of Texas, and marry Mr. Tom Layton of Atlanta, They are living in New Orleans where he is attached to the insurance business.

Nell Lee Greening Covington and her broker husband are living in Tampa, They said their vows on December 29, and among the bridesmaids were such familiar names as Barbara Austin, "B. G." Elmore, and Fran Cone. "B. A." (Austin) is working in a bank in Rome, Georgia, and "B. G." has been teaching grammar school, as has Bonnie Loyd who is now making her home in Jacksonville, Florida.

Further word from the South has it that Lougenia Stallings who left Sweet Briar at the end of Freshman year, was graduated in June (1950) from the University of Alabama and is now in New Orleans interning in laboratory technology at the Charity Hospital. Down in Palm Beach, "Dotsie" Wood has been teaching school, but expects to arrive in New York some time in May with the intent of either working or going to school.

Speaking of Dotsie, Sally Lea is reportedly working in Baltimore for the draft board, interviewing draftees. Hm! No wonder there are such eager army-bound youths down Baltimore way! While Sally is interviewing for the armed services, several others from the class are also involved with them, only on a slightly different level. On March 31, Cynthia Ellis was married in Shrewsbury, N. J., to Capt. George Warren "Dusty" Dunn, III, U.S.A.F. Until the Air Force decides to the contrary, they will live in Wilmington. Seen at the wedding demurely sipping champagne were Rita Murray and "Bebe" Gee. Bebe, during the week, commutes to New York where she is employed in the publicity department of the Ethyl Corporation. On top of that, she also takes first aid, advertising, and junior league courses, Goodness, and she's such a little Returning to the armed services (which seems to be the cry these days), in April Lola Steele announced her engagement to 2nd. Lt. Wilson Eliot Driver Shepherd, U.S.M.C.R., a graduate of V. M. I. They plan a summer wedding, as does "Grem" Fisher, whose engagement to John M. Hanford, Jr., was asnnunced at Christmas time. Their wedding is set for June 23. Grem writes that they will make their home at Westminster School for boys where John teaches Spanish.

Also on the engaged list, as of April 22, is Peachey Lillard. I don't know what the Yale Drama school has offered her, but their Law school has yielded one William Perry Manning, Jr., of Philadelphia who graduates in June.

Kay Leroy will be married some time this summer to Wally Wing (formerly of W. & L.) and Frances Adams and Billy Shippen said their vows on June 13.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Peter D. Geer (Genevieve Hammel) on the arrival of a son, Christopher Cornwall Geer, on March 25.

Lucy Kreusler writes that she is doing graduate work in sociology at the University of Virginia and enjoying it immensely. Mary Dame Stubbs has gone rustic on us. She has been teaching fourth grade in a trailer heated by a wooden stove. It seems the Front Royal school burned down a year ago.

Annie Peyton has a job on the Washington Evening Star, does hospital work one night a week, and teaches Sunday School to boot. Mary Virginia Roberts was in New York for her spring vacation and told me over the phone that she will be graduated from St.

Louis' Washington University this June. Also out in St. Louis, Elise Habenicht is engrossed in the art of how to become an efficient secretary. Back in New York, Katie Gibbs found that Nan Nelson and Marion Holmes were quite efficient, and therefore they hath been thrust out into the world to make good on their own. Also in New York, Marianne Delacorte has taken a position with the Dell Publishing Company.

"Jo" Gulick w.ites that she has been studying piano and attending "Mrs. Gulick's school of home economics," while down in Huntington Anne McNeer is lending her talents to the Blue Cross Insurance Co. Kitty Barker has temporarily shifted her belongings from Bristol to a New York apartment. She's currently working for a T. V. Co.

With deep regret, I report the death of Reginald Shaw, husband of Dorothy Montague Shaw. He was killed the end of January in an automobile accident in Tulsa, Oklahoma. I am sure the entire class joins with me when I express my deepest sympathy for Dottie and her young son.

Here's a bit of late news, but still of interest I'm sure. Elizabeth White sailed for Liverpool in June, 1950, on the Parthia together with a Tri Delt sorority sister from Cornell, where she graduated last June. The two toured England and Scotland, going as far north as Aberdeen and Inverness, where there are very few tourists. They traveled to France and crossed Switzerland into Germany and Austria, where they visited relatives of Chris', Beth's traveling companion. After returning to Switzerland, Beth went on to Italy, where she met a cousin who had just landed in Naples and the two flew to Athens to visit other relatives with the diplomatic corps over there. While in Greece, they took trips to Crete and Turkey, They motored from Paris, where Bob. her cousin, was called for an ECA conference, through central Europe to Italy again and sailed home through Gibraltar with stops in Spain and Lisbon, arriving home in mid-

It's about time I rounded off this letter, but I have no more material so instead I shall present a word-image of a slightly moon-like face, distorted with rage because she receives no news. Need I say more?
